

The Deseret weekly

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints

TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

THE

DESERET WEEKLY

Pioneer Publication of the Rocky Mountain Region.

ESTABLISHED JUNE, 1850.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS.

VOL. XLV.—June to December, 1892.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH:
PUBLISHED BY THE DESERET NEWS PUBLISHING CO.
1892.

INDEX.

	PAGE
Anti-Option Bill.....	50
Admiral "The Just".....	78
Admiral, The Meaning of.....	125
Animals, Memory In.....	95
Atlantic, Gossip from the.....	85
At Its Old Business.....	187
An Unwarrantable Attack.....	161
Arizona Territorial Conference.....	162
Arizona, Meeting In.....	164
Always at It.....	174
Anarchists, No Sympathy For.....	200
Anarchy, What Is.....	260
Anarchy, What Is.....	260
Alabama, A Spirit of.....	204
Alabama, The Election In.....	204
Aristocrats Snubbed, Brutal.....	253
Ascending Figures.....	263
American Flag, An Ancient.....	264
American Flag, Insulted.....	264
Americans In Europe.....	290
Approximate Numerical Equalities of the Sex.....	400
Atlantic, To Cross the—In 72 Hours.....	328
Act in the Living Present.....	328
Abnormal Breathing.....	342
Assessment of Bank Property, Legal Opinions on the Another Scheme.....	852
Ashley Valley.....	863
Adding Horrors to Horrors.....	863
And Cholera Preventions and their Effect.....	863
Arnold, Sir Edward.....	425
Annoyed Press, The.....	459
As to Ourselves.....	459
Awful Condition, A.....	492
Amid Eternal Ice.....	648
Asking for Too Much.....	553
Aspirin Science.....	585
An Author in a Dilemma.....	585
Amplified of the Campaign.....	882
Admirable Slot Invention, A.....	789
Alarming Report, An.....	689
As to Dramas.....	689
Armed Peace Abroad.....	645
An Interpreter's Experience.....	667
A Viking Bold.....	661
Australian Ballot.....	208, 618
A Voice from the People.....	624
A Question Answered.....	717
Amazons in War.....	726
A Question of Air.....	740
Another Horn of the Dilemma.....	747
Agile Kanna.....	746
Almost at the Bottom.....	784
After Rare Books.....	800
All for the Best.....	815
Brown, Arthur, Interviewed.....	5
Butler's Book.....	8
Be These Mistakes.....	44
Bores, of Towns.....	47
Halfacre a Man of Mark.....	58
Better Bear Defeat in Silence.....	77
Harris, Andrew, Divorce Suit.....	94
Best Sugar Industry.....	184, 206, 721
Beaver City, At.....	197
Best Elder States Conference.....	215, 721
Bear Adventure.....	235
Barbarism, A Relic of.....	235
British Parliament.....	235
British Foreign Trade Declining.....	235
British Flag, Assault to the.....	397
British Mission.....	417
British Primaries.....	417
Borden, Lizzie, Charge With Murdering her Parents.....	427
Borden, Lizzie, Case.....	427
B. Y. College, The.....	271, 339
Room for Beaver.....	758
Book of Mormon.....	771

	PAGE
Builders, Lesson for Dishonest.....	810
Brussels, What is Doing at.....	816
Bending the Twig.....	827
Bear Lake Conference.....	279, 280
Hannock Conference.....	308,
Hutler's, John, Resignation.....	381
Rigger Bid, A.....	464
Behring Has Heard from, The.....	86
Brewery Development.....	464
Baskin, Mayor, Makes an Appointment without.....	319
Brevity is Best.....	528
Business on hand, The.....	529
Business on the Sails.....	693
Blizzard in Western Wyoming.....	549
Bismarck's Pertinacity.....	552
Boutlers Agitator, A.....	582
Bankruptcy Law Needed, A.....	588
Ball of the Ballots.....	590
Before the Battle.....	632
Breakers ahead.....	649
Big Money for Trotters.....	618
Board of Education, The..... 29, 98, 126, 158, 192, 222, 255, 288, 317, 351, 383, 416, 447, 463, 511, 542,
674, 697, 640, 671, 702, 738, 787,	831
Best Sheep for Utah.....	739
Common Enemy, The.....	6
Convention of 1880, The.....	7
Conciliatory Policy the Best.....	11
Cord, A.....	24
Chicago, Situation In.....	18
Convention and the Campaign.....	45
Czar's Tyranny.....	49
Cleveland Climbing.....	49
Coming Struggle.....	62
Carriage, a Voice from.....	65
Cour d' Alene Riots.....	119
Clute's Shortage.....	120
Cornegie.....	130
Coming Issue, The.....	132
Country in Danger, Our.....	139
Contrivance, an Effective.....	137
Constitutional Amendments.....	137
Congress Proceed, Let the.....	137
Carcass, A Girdling.....	189
Census Job, Proposed.....	141
Crematory, The Proposed.....	200
Crime, The Increase of.....	203
Contradicted Call, A.....	208
Canon Lloyd on Betting.....	228
Cool Headed Woman, A.....	265
Comparative Criminality of the Sexes.....	293
Catch, Plaintful.....	305
California Boundaries.....	311
Center Street Guard, The.....	323
Collapse of the Senation.....	354
Colored Vote, To Limit the.....	360
Curtis, Geo. William.....	362
Coke Region, A.....	394
Canada, Excellence In.....	407
Crimes, Nurseries of.....	424
Clay, Rev. B. F.....	460
Carelessness, Evils of.....	485
Cumbersome and Costly Scheme.....	485
Coyote, A Plea for the.....	492
Cotton Field, The.....	600
Court Proceedings.....	604
Conference, The.....	620
Care and Resolution Needed.....	625
Catching Octopus.....	635
Confidential, The.....	655
Cannon, David Hoegland.....	661
Cyclone in Mauritius.....	675
Calcutta, Pauperism In.....	678
Care of the Ark.....	678
Columbus Day.....	499
	677

	PAGE.
Columbus, In Memoriam.....	695
Columbus, Attacking.....	698
Columbian Portraits.....	595
Columbus.....	828
Crooked Jos.....	708
Commission to the Front, The.....	647
Cord, A.....	661
Condon's Will.....	611
Complication Possible, A.....	612
Cabinet, A Word as to the.....	716
Complaint from Japan.....	718
Chamber of Commerce, To the.....	720
Concerning the Comet.....	741
Chicago and St. Louis Enterprise.....	748
Carroll of Robbery.....	780
Capturing a Kitten.....	781
Court Proceedings.....	802
Constitutionality of It, The.....	810
Correction, A Slight.....	810
College Youth, The.....	812
Contrast, By Way of.....	813
Coal Combine.....	825, 772
Coal Criminally, The.....	774
Coal Resources of Utah.....	725
Coalville Too asle Case.....	778
Coalville has a Newspaper.....	828
Conference Notice.....	884, 420, 451
Campaign Tactics.....	330
Campaign, The.....	659
County Officials, What will they Do.....	207
County, Shall We Bond the.....	261
County Bond Election.....	280
County Bond Election.....	293
County, Is the, Safe.....	353
County Superintendent, Election of.....	359
County Teachers.....	602
County Superintendent of Schools.....	628
County Assessment Rolls, The.....	312
Capital and Labor.....	278, 297, 247
Change Demanded, A.....	248
Change Needed, A.....	270
Change Must be Met.....	299
Chinese Exclusion Bill.....	172, 301
Chinese and the Exclusion Law.....	395
Chinese Will Not Go.....	462
Cour d'Alene Riots.....	138, 148, 182
Chicago, Hot Weather In.....	203
Chicago as a Seat of Learning.....	208
Chicago Tragedy.....	397
Chicago Great Day.....	690
Chicago Satisfied.....	264
Colorado, Political Activity in.....	184
Colorado, The Situation In.....	204
Colorado Politics.....	423
City Council—23, 60, 91, 124, 155, 187, 220, 251, 283, 315, 347, 373, 411, 442, 475, 508, 540, 571, 605, 638, 669, 699, 781, 778, 796, 829
City Ordinance, An Absurd.....	152, 236
City Taxation, The Rate of.....	152
City and County Building Corner Stone Laid.....	218
City Council's Work.....	459
City Council Work Objected to.....	619
City Council and the Mayor.....	827
Christianity, Modern.....	169
Christianity, A Singular Sort of.....	326
Christianity, A Question of.....	366
Christianity and Court.....	381
Christian Conversion and Doctrine.....	384
Congress, Utah Matters In.....	79
Congress and the Presidential Electors.....	108
Congress, Liquor In.....	264
Congress Adjourns.....	287
Congressmen Intoxicated.....	205
Congressional Appropriations.....	269
Church and State.....	102
Church University.....	208
Church Bull.....	362, 365
Church Personal Property Decision.....	711
Church Cases, Decision in the.....	678
Catholic Church and Emigration.....	128
Catholic Aggressiveness.....	484
Catholicism in the East.....	488
Catholicism.....	503
Cholera Spreading.....	72, 104
Cholera, Asiatic, Remarks About.....	206
Cholera Moving Westward.....	234

	PAGE.
Cholera, Precaution Against.....	277
Cholera, Assistants to.....	294
Cholera Increasing.....	828
Cholera, The.....	338, 368, 401, 437, 471, 499
Cholera At The Doors of the Nation.....	361
Cholera Inoculation.....	423
Cholera in the Country.....	425
Cholera Cure, A.....	459
Cholera, How It Affects Prices.....	486
Cholera Freaks.....	499
Cholera in a New Light.....	581
Dillon Sidney.....	7
Dangers of Science.....	49
Defeat Follows Them.....	72
Denver "News" Bolt, The.....	76
Disintegration, Signs of.....	170
Disintegrative Force, A.....	184
Dilke, Sir Charles.....	201
Duelling, A New System of.....	208
Drink Demon Encouraged, The.....	277
Deputies, Faint-hearted.....	277
Dramatic Incidents in Social Life.....	278
Delegate, Our.....	294
Depths of the Sea, The.....	322
Daily Nuisance, A.....	324
Deism and Philosophy.....	343
Dehomer, Life In.....	353
Drowned While Bathing.....	378
Disaster, on the Verge of.....	492
Diaz President of Mexico.....	482
Disorderly Meeting, A.....	488
Duty and a Pleasure, A.....	490
Drowned While Bathing.....	496
Dallons, The Last of The.....	525
Deseret Sunday School Union.....	533
Differences There Must Needs Be.....	581
Distinguished Even Among Journalists.....	597
Death-bed Incident, A.....	592
Dry September, A.....	594
Denver & Rio Grande Strike.....	608
Dramatic and Lyric.....	749
Displeasing the Negro Vote.....	757
Dangerous Pair, A.....	758
Desecrating Soldiers' Graves.....	768
Demonstrative Journalism.....	689
Dream of Wealth, A.....	701
Desirable as Emigrants.....	704
Debate Between Rawlins and Cannon.....	658, 644
Dangers of the Deep.....	648
Destroying National Relief.....	615
Dwarf Tribes South of Mount Atlas.....	629
Deacon Case, The.....	716
Deliverer Wanted, A.....	718
Dark Continent Mania.....	775
Drugs, Danger of.....	809
DEATHS.—White, Parker, Thomas, Gibbitts, Pui- pher, Thornley.....	82
Roca, Groo, Huffaker, Siowell, Smart, Al- blon, Pascoe, Smith.....	64
De Moraes, Marquis.....	78
Corbitt, Hicks, Miller, Lindsey, Olive, Fitzgerald, Penrose, McKensie, Owen, Black- burn.....	96
Wilkes, Holland, Halland, Burton, Lin- ton.....	128
Wales, Tondreen, Watson, Marchant, Sirlins, Lowry, Pratt, Simons, Wright.....	160
Watson, Hall, Langton, Wilcott, Shells, Davey, Wilder, Screason, Terby, Whitaker, Twitcheil, Smith, Kinnersley, Smith, Henderson, Goutman.....	256
Miller, Dame.....	288
Lomax, Cushing, Richards, Robinson, Simpson, Parsons, Stowell.....	320
Scorgie, Fuller, Eager, Price.....	352
Schluter, Wiseman, Wignall, Irvine, Wag- staff, Armstrong, Shirling, Pratt, Rhoner, Hil- ton.....	384
Levell, Duffin, Rigby, Rasmussen, John- son, Chatterton, Edwards, Pickett, Swan.....	416
Syme, Cutler, Clayton, Wells, Harding, McGregor, Kleinman, Woodli, Larsen Farnes, Scott, Taylor, Morrill, Walters.....	448
Weiler, Smith, Manning, Roberts.....	480
Burbridge, Stoddart.....	512

PAGE.	PAGE.
Riding, Shewee, Freckleton, Reinsmar, Johnson, Bacon, Peterson, Schupbach, Papworth, Walker, Hunter, Martin, Smith.....	574
Maxwell, Baguley, Thackeray.....	576
Evans, Cummings, Sermon, Peck, Stowe, Wilson, Smith, Walker, Davis, Ellsworth.....	608
Stewart, Gorringer, Fullmer.....	672
Jacobs, Alston, Taylor, Johannesen, Olsen, Scroggie.....	640
Rees, Katz, Morela, Turnbull, Smith, Wood, King, Van Dyke, Kimber, Brinton, Morris, Harnes, James, Lewis.....	704
Arthur, Raybould, Stoddard, Pickering, Taylor, Larsen.....	768
Bowen, Jorgeson, Walker, Mellor, Arnold, Jones, Alder, Harris, Peterson, Paxman, Packard, Jorgenson.....	800
Dahlgren, Matheson, Engberg, Gabbott, Bruneage, Stewart.....	882
Death of Elizabeth C. Whitmore.....	789
Death of Emmons Blaine.....	713
Death of Moah L. Shurtliff.....	76
Death of Willis D. Johnson.....	250
Death of Dr. John F. Weld.....	276
Death of Sarah D. Payne.....	302
Death of C. M. Harrocks.....	312
Death of Sister M. N. Allred.....	314
Death of Peter W. Conover.....	453
Death of Almira Laud.....	480
Death of James W. Burbridge.....	480
Death of Kenan.....	491
Death of Elder Adolph Haag.....	497
Death of Otto Chipman.....	508
Death of Tennyson.....	525
Death of Lucy M. Smith.....	544
Death of Rev. Eather N. F. Hoellan.....	549
Death of Bishop Funk.....	640
Death of John B. Smith.....	675
Death of James Caldwell.....	702
Death of Susan B. Young.....	722
Death of Ellen W. Winder.....	655
Death of Susie E. Jacobs.....	611
Death of Bishop Robert Dalnes.....	753
Death of Mrs. Agnes J. Davis.....	768
Death of E. Plenson.....	792
Death of Robert Parry.....	792
Death of Hon. S. N. Fenn.....	805
Democratic Wigwag.....	2
Democratic National Convention.....	21, 35, 143
Democratic Ratification.....	93
Democratic Convention, The.....	557, 569
Democrats Sweep the Deck.....	585
Democracy, Social, in Germany.....	169
Discourse by President Willford Woodruff.....	583
Discourse by President George Q. Cannon.....	257, 385, 449, 545, 617, 801
Discourse by President Joseph F. Smith.....	239, 697
Discourse by Apostle Franklin D. Richards.....	705
Discourse by Apostle Francis M. Lyman.....	737
Discourse by Apostle Heber J. Grant.....	769
Education, Sex in.....	10
Education, of Girls.....	576
Error Corrected, An.....	74
Est Approaching, The.....	88
Enemy in Disguise, An.....	103
Encounter with a Bear.....	116
English Elections, Women in.....	143
England, The Situation in.....	178
England, Politics in.....	326
Emery Stake Conference.....	279
Eight Hour Bill, The.....	292
Educational Ideas.....	302
Election Difficulty, An.....	323
European Gold Conspiracy? Is There a.....	361
Election of School Trustees.....	396
Extraordinary Movement, An.....	422
Epidemic in 1848, The.....	423
Epidemic Spreading, The.....	424
Escaped from Quarantine.....	426
Europe, Financial Panic Imminent in.....	431
Europe, Reciprocity in.....	425
East Tennessee Conference.....	512
Election of School Trustees.....	558
Escape Instinct.....	574
Electoral Vote, The.....	582
Ended Without Trouble.....	689
Emery Stake Conference.....	702
Elder Haag's Death.....	652
Electoral Vote, The.....	683
Electoral College, The.....	609
Ex-Congressman Thomas Fitch.....	816
Ending a Career with Failure.....	745
Election Returns.....	751
End of a Celebrated Case.....	783
Ex-Editor's Saturday Talk, An.....	781, 816
England, Letter from.....	809
Famine, Status of the Russian.....	18
Flowing Wells in Utah.....	6
Floods, Destructive.....	51
Fish, in Relation to.....	71
France, Anti-Jewish Feeling in.....	75
French Anarchists, The.....	75
Foreign Labor Question.....	77
Funny Affair, A.....	103
Frick, Pinkerton and Sheridan.....	173
Frick's Life, A Black On Mr.....	175
Frick, The Attempt On.....	202
Frick, Henry Clay.....	206
Fruit, About Preserving.....	256
Families, Decrease in.....	293
Farmers, A Few Words to.....	298
Fatal Defects of a Story.....	200
Fruit as a Medicine.....	344
Frenzied Populace, A.....	384
Faith in the Operations of God.....	384
Fire Island Drama, The.....	400
Future Sight, The.....	400
Fire Island, All Well on.....	423
Full Blast Again.....	430
For Town and Country.....	455
Fuel, A New Kind of.....	469
Filth in Farming Districts.....	479
Famous Traveler's Widow, A.....	490
Female Pugilist, A.....	485
First University, The.....	508
Famous Old Novels.....	504
Freight Discriminations.....	528
Firmness is Wanted.....	530
Forests and Rainfall.....	537
Fine Foon, A.....	537
Famous Victory.....	521
Far North, The.....	581
French in Dahomey.....	614
Freight Rates.....	625
Funeral of Mrs. Harbord.....	627
Finland in Relation to Crime.....	459
False Report, A.....	742
Fire District Cut Down.....	750
Furious Storm, A.....	758
Fortcoming Message, The.....	776
Fight With a Panther.....	780
Failure in Education.....	804
Graphic Sketch, A.....	5
Gladstone's Campaign.....	46
Gladstone's Falling.....	72
Gold Exports.....	78
Glass Works for Utah.....	82
Governor on the Situation, The.....	104
Going Down With Its Party.....	108
Granite Ward Conference.....	214
Gerrymander Must Go, The.....	234
Great Cure, The.....	266
Glided Vice.....	292
Garfield Beach, The Danger at.....	324
Great S. L. Railroad.....	327, 332
Give the Windbag a Show.....	329
Gladstone Mr., on Silver.....	399
"Globe-Democrat", some Blunders of.....	430
Gilmore, Patrick Barfield.....	464
Gold, Not Paid in.....	472
Gold, Where Does It Go to.....	482
God and Man.....	478
God Still Moving Abroad.....	333
Great Land Case, A.....	486
"Green Goods".....	489
Give Him a Back Seat.....	530
God's Will Be Done.....	553
Great Men, Two.....	589
Garbage Ordinance, The.....	558, 598

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Getting Around the Law.....	687	Indian Woman, Fate of an.....	47
Great Decision, A.....	689	Interesting Find, An.....	72
Going to the Bear.....	647	Industrial Revolt, An.....	74
Gas Stock Sale, The.....	615	Indian Mission.....	101
Governor's Report, The.....	614	In a Bad Way.....	103
Gratitudes due.....	613	Insomnia.....	128
Give Us a Chance.....	613	Is It a Trust.....	299
German Persecution of "Heretics".....	712	Improvement of Your Thoroughfare.....	272
Gentle Remarks, A few.....	718	Important to Voters.....	411
Genius in the Colored Race.....	719	It's Best to be Just.....	325
German Crisis.....	757	Important Suit, An.....	327
Goal Still Unattained, A.....	757	Investigation Required, An.....	331
Green, Sister Amlra.....	772	International Repitals.....	333
Gould, Jay, is No More.....	777	Irrigation, What It Has Done.....	423
Gould Will.....	805	India, Silver In.....	427
Grand County Election.....	787	Illit's, Dr., Predicament.....	431
Garner's Interesting Expedition.....	810	Insuperable Nuisance, An.....	432
Gravity Sewer System, The.....	818	Intolerant Discrimination.....	441
German Armament, The.....	823	Illit's, Dr., Error.....	463
Hatch, Presl, Illness of.....	10	Independent Candidate, An.....	528
Hill, David Bennett.....	46	Irish Home Rule.....	541
Hooey by Heat.....	47	Important to School Trustees.....	561
How a Young Man Succeeded.....	170	Interesting Relic, An.....	555
Homicides in 1890.....	171	Indiana Conference.....	590
He "Ought to be Asamed".....	174	Injany Revived, The.....	593
Hunting the Pictureque.....	239	Iowa Conference.....	596
Health Dept., Salt Lake.....	299	Iron in Southern Utah.....	599
Historical Reminiscences.....	277	India Ter. Conference.....	648
Horrocks, Catharine M. Sletel.....	300	It's Feble but Bull Kicks.....	547
Hypocrite or a Martyr.....	311	In Woman's Sphere.....	633, 638
Harrison's, Presl, Proclamation.....	330	Important Stuff by Chief Justice Zane.....	619
Home Industry, Against.....	356	Isis Case, The.....	614
Hawalian Colony, The.....	355	Impudent at Least.....	714
Historical Times.....	397	Items from Chester.....	750
Health of Salt Lake, The.....	400	Information as to Utah.....	735
Historical Homestead, An.....	420	Idaho, Politics in.....	829
Howard, Cardinal, Dead.....	432	Idaho Test Oath, The.....	843, 535, 618
Hypocrite, Falsifier and Traitor.....	454	Idaho, The Real Issue In.....	395
Hamburg, The Plague Stricken.....	455	Idaho Injany Obliterated.....	527
Hill's Predicament.....	458	Irvine, Trial of.....	532, 570, 592
He Could Not Come In.....	458	Irvine Acquitted.....	591
Horse Talk.....	489	Jersey Cow, Improving the.....	9
He Arises to Explain.....	529	July in Salt Lake for Eighteen Years.....	72
He Saved Walseley.....	536	Justice Demanded, Only.....	103
Haag's, Elder Adolph, Letter.....	565	Jews from Rums, Emigration of.....	178
Hughes, Deputy Watermaster, Shortage.....	572	Just Stake.....	225
Hirsch, Baron, as a Journalist.....	589	Johnson's Island.....	264
Homely Yawn, the Usual.....	634	Jordan River, The.....	452, 495
Happy Selection.....	634	Jews, Marriage Among the.....	435
How we are Injured.....	645	Just Stake Conference.....	531
How Spongers are Made.....	659	June Field to Retire.....	743
How Silver Stands.....	812	Jefferson, Mr.....	755
Harty's Bishop, Bonds.....	708	"Knocked Out by a Trick,".....	75
How They Take It.....	712	Kansas, Prosperity In.....	76
Honors of War, The.....	717	Kearl as, Obstructionist.....	76
Hurrying Through Life.....	718	Kearl Case, the.....	162
Hammer-Head Snake.....	768	King, of Tennessee, the Case of.....	299
Holy Sepulchre, The.....	774	Kanss Stake Conference.....	419
He Wants to Know.....	777	Kentucky Conference.....	567
Healthfulness of Utah Climate.....	795	Kendall's Calculations.....	591
He Must be Mistaken.....	816	Literature, Public Taste In.....	10
Hardy, Mr., Explains.....	821	Lost and Won.....	9
He Pulled Through.....	832	Long and Good Rain, A.....	51
Home Rule, Opposition to.....	63	Logic and Liberality.....	78
Home Rule Bill.....	107, 169, 129	Lost Its Grip.....	75
Home Rule Bill, Debate on the.....	135	Legitimate Fruits.....	182
Home Rule for Cuba.....	173	Liquor and Law.....	194
Home Rule and Ballot.....	422	Latter-day Saints College, The.....	108
Homestead, The Battle at.....	105	Law and Order Agitation.....	204
Homestead Riots.....	108, 145, 179, 218, 240	Law and Order Movement.....	228
Homestead War and Pinkert n.....	172	Liquor Traffic, a Scheme to Settle the.....	229
Homestead Trouble, What It Suggests.....	198	Local Signs of the Times.....	295
Homestead Arair, Thoughts on the.....	267	Lehigh Valley Strike, The.....	305, 279, 322
Homestead Trouble Again.....	270	London, Shopping In.....	328
Harrison's, President, Letter.....	338	Long Distance Reading.....	395
Harrison's, Mrs., Illness.....	422	Little Grand Valley.....	445
Harrison, Mrs., Dying.....	588	Let Them Furnish the Proof.....	495
Harrison, Mrs., Gone.....	590	Letters of Acceptance.....	491
Harrison, Mrs., Death of.....	594	Let the Pole Alone.....	552
Harrison, President.....	710	Looking Backward.....	666
Harrison's Message.....	751-755	Literary Champion Wanted, A.....	581
Illinois, in Northern.....	43	Life in the Lake.....	548
Illinois, Education in.....	334
Ireland, Campaigning in.....	48

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Lesson of Homestead.....	777	Mortality Statement.....	869, 806
Loud Advertising Posters.....	777	Mr. Withers' Dress Coat.....	583
Let us Have Glamour.....	782	Milwaukee Fire, The.....	623
Land Decision, A.....	792	Marlborough's Death.....	710
Logic of It, The.....	784	Mythology, Use of the.....	711
Logan, News from.....	818	Mercier, The Case of.....	712
Labor in Puritan Days.....	199	Modern Affairs of Honor.....	742
Labor Situation, A Mixed.....	324	Metebrie Shower.....	744
Labor Strike, A Peculiar.....	360	Monetary Conference.....	758
Labor Day.....	805	Morgan Stake Conference.....	721
Labor Problem.....	395	Millard, Items from.....	806
Labor Strike.....	425	Mirage, Lured by a.....	824
Labor League, The.....	820
Liberal Defeat.....	26	Newspaper as a Detective.....	7
Liberal Police Force.....	24, 59, 67, 98	Not that Kind of a Man.....	8
Liberal Methods, Sample of.....	49	"No Compromise".....	8
Liberal Conference.....	142, 163, 172	National Convention.....	61
Liberal Bolster.....	141	Needs no Public Encouragement.....	61
Liberal Juggery.....	180	Narrow Escape.....	135
Liberal Corruption, The Rules of.....	169	Not Properly Endorsed.....	143
Liberal Disease.....	169	Norway, Political Struggle in.....	177
Liberal Progress.....	231	Norway's Alternative.....	202
Liberal Council, What Next Will It Do.....	487	Nearing Desperation.....	245
Liberal Convention.....	562	New Zealand, Letter from.....	245
Liberal Wrong Doing.....	563	New Zealand, A Word from.....	263
Liberal Party, History of the.....	597	New Zealand, Letter from.....	294
Liberalism Discomfited.....	46	New England Murder, A.....	267
Liberalism.....	228	Not Puritan.....	326
Liberalism, Decay of.....	276	New York, the Heat in.....	282
		New York, 150 Years Ago.....	837
Mormon People.....	1	Newspapers in Persia.....	308
Mexican Settler.....	4	Nation's Sympathy, A.....	424
Mexican Colonists, For.....	721	Niagara Harnessed.....	493
Mexican Mission Conference.....	408, 787	New Zealand, Letter from.....	494
Missionaries Assailed in Chile.....	12	North Carolina Conference.....	588
Missionaries Mobbed in the South.....	282	New Industry, A.....	562
Maceer's, Dr., Lectures.....	14, 33	National Woman's Relief Society, the.....	554
Mormon Agent, Not a.....	46	Not the Utah War.....	552
Mormon Energy and Thrift.....	181	Nansen's Polar Ship.....	586
Mad Monarch, The.....	51	No Need to Starve.....	591
Maricopa Stake Conference.....	80	New Lights in London.....	694
Money, Coin.....	98	Normal Sunday School.....	694
Mexico, Information from.....	102	Notes.....	534, 587, 680, 698, 767, 799, 807, 827
Mexico, The Republic of.....	107	Needed Reform, A.....	846
Mexico, Letter from.....	441	New Mineral Treasure, A.....	860
Melbourne, Depression in.....	134	New School of Actors.....	851
Myrtford and Statehood.....	143	New Orleans Strike, The.....	664
Mining Congress, The.....	174	North Alabama Conference.....	625
More Excellent Way.....	198	No Excellence Without Labor.....	616
Malad Stake, The.....	82, 209	No Dallying.....	613
Men and Women.....	215	Norwegian Governor, A.....	708
Mars, the Planet.....	230	Needed Amendment.....	710
Mars.....	305	Not Exactly Appropriate.....	719
Mars at the Nearest Point to the Earth Today.....	287	News Items, Western.....	727
Montana Legislator Arrested.....	234	National Weakness, A.....	740
Moran's Eight Hour Ordinance.....	254	No, Sir.....	747
Married Women, Disqualifications of.....	264	Not all Sunshine.....	759
Missionary Work, Up-Hill.....	267	Navajo Reservation, The.....	792
More Violence.....	279	New York Only Incidental.....	816
Morgan Stake Conference.....	291
Mining troubles in the South.....	300	Old Age Denuded of Its Terrors.....	88
Mysterious Picture, A.....	325	Old Folk's Day.....	88
Mayor, A Socialistic.....	328	On Our Honor.....	185
McCluskey, The New Constitution.....	328	Onyx Discovery, The.....	141
McDonald and Hill Freed.....	341	Organized Labor, Mistakes of.....	164
Minute Men Discharged.....	395	Organized Labor and Politics.....	196
Make a Wise Choice.....	400	Omaha Convention, Incidents of the.....	175
Miracles and their Uses.....	410	"Out of Its Own Mouth" Again.....	286
Morgan City and County.....	419	Ought to be Stopped.....	260
Mojo Rule and Home Rule.....	421	Ought to be Removed.....	282
Mormon and Home Rule.....	422	Ocean Race, A.....	325
Magnificent Programme.....	469	Opportunity Suggestions.....	337
Marshall, The New.....	468	Ogden Bond Election, The.....	433
Manuscript Found, A.....	464	Ogden Possibilities.....	282
Martindale by Apache.....	453	Ogden Items.....	305, 729, 751
Maricopa Stake Conference.....	512	Ownership of Aerolites, The.....	553
Murderous Apaches.....	823, 595, 779	Open Letter, As Who Will Stay.....	580
Murder, The.....	532	One Officeholder Who Will Stay.....	583
Mower Law Constitutional, The.....	538	Only a Beginning.....	648
Marland County Items.....	564	Old Mormon Cemetery, A.....	759
Maybrick Case, The.....	584	Ordinance Revision.....	749
Middle Tennessee Conference.....	600	"One of These Little Ones".....	783
Mississippi Conference.....	681	Obloin in Utah, A.....	773
Monument for Reflection, A.....	686	Official Success Once More.....	812
Memorial Services.....	690
Merely a Duty Done.....	646	Prospecting, Faint On.....	7

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Presidential Electors.....	10	Political Matters, Not Reference to.....	177
Princely Practices.....	10	Political Excesses.....	199
Pearly Polar Expedition.....	14	Political Pendulum.....	301
Pinkertonism, What Is.....	5	Political Work, A Valuable.....	824
Plain Case, A.....	8	Political Education.....	298
Powers' Allocated Defeat.....	9	Political Situation.....	359
Powers Want Some Money.....	123	Political Murder, An Alleged.....	498
Parowan Stake Conference.....	48	Political Hate.....	582
Police Circles, Rottemness in.....	47	Political Wisdom.....	646
Polkman Convicted, A' Blackmailing.....	47	Political Prophecy.....	21
Prehilarior People, A.....	64	Politics, Expediency in.....	45
Pleasant Home.....	73	Politics, Fatal.....	325
Premature Pyrotechnics.....	87	Politics in England.....	376
Patriotic Order Boycotted.....	128	Paving a Ward, The.....	396
Pinkerton Evil, The.....	132	Paving Question.....	363
Prepared for Conflict.....	173	Paving Trouble.....	653
Presbyterianism in the United States.....	178	People's Party, Position of.....	72
Pioneer Day Anniversary.....	178	People's Party Convention.....	83
Party Without Principle, A.....	195	People's Party.....	151
Popular Effort, A.....	200	Priesthood Meeting.....	129, 253, 510, 689, 798
Perils of Travel, The.....	200	Presidential Electors, The Choosing of.....	78
Proper Motives.....	201	Presidential Electors and Congress.....	178
Protection, A Proper Kind of.....	204	Presidential Election.....	493, 659
Paupers and Criminals.....	208	Presidential Religions.....	711
Parowan Stake.....	220	Prohibition Convention.....	80
Pitiable and Contemptible.....	234	Prohibition, Does It Prohibit.....	330
Peculiar Case, A.....	235	Prohibition Party.....	261
Prophecy, Fulfillment of.....	236	Provo School Census.....	294
Provo School Census.....	254	Provo Points.....	376
"Personal Liberty".....	289
Potato Crop, The.....	303	Ratification and Disappointment.....	23
Pathways Through Life.....	321	Russian Affairs.....	53
Plagues from the Standpoint of Prophecy, The.....	321	Russian Religious Persecution.....	173
Palpable Blunder, A.....	327	Retrospection and Moral, A.....	52
Proposed Profit Sharing.....	332	Review of the Contest.....	52
Parsons, U. B. Marshal.....	341	Ravachol to Die.....	45
President Who Openly Violated the Law, A.....	344	Ravachol Executed.....	143
Profit Sharing Plan, The.....	344	Religion, A New Departure in.....	76
Pole Trouble, That.....	346	Record Is Ready, The.....	76
Prize Fights, Ancient.....	397	Revolutionary Sentiments.....	104
Plague Prospect, The.....	416	Race War, The.....	119
Perilous Effects of Cheap Fiction.....	427	Records, More from the.....	176
Peculiar Controversy, A.....	428	Ridiculous Test, A.....	202
Party Government on Trial.....	432	Rabbit Plague, A.....	202
Politician, Why She Is a.....	456	Reading Coal Combine, The.....	206
Practice vs. Profession.....	493	Reward for It.....	281
Pacheco, At Columbus.....	256	Russian Enroschment, Renewal of.....	235
Potato, Legends About the.....	256	Robber Met His Match, A.....	286
Parker's Col, Lecture.....	260	Refuted Itself Once More.....	268
Prompt Action Wanted.....	261	Russian Aggressiveness.....	268
Famir Unpleasantness, The.....	268	Race Conflict Development.....	268
Pleasure Hunting.....	271	Royal Proclamation, A.....	294
Parker, Col., Lecture on the Child.....	238	Retaliation, Is It.....	297
Pope, General John.....	403	Revival.....	297
Primary Fair at Neph.....	409	Revival Meeting.....	420
Panguitch Stake Conference.....	512	Religious Revival.....	327
Parowan Stake Conference.....	512	Russell's, Edward Lecture.....	333
People Will Choose, The.....	524	Reform of Humanity, The.....	348
Proper but not Practicable.....	524	Reason for It, The.....	359
Point of View, The.....	529	Real Question at Issue.....	398
Pacific Cable Wanted.....	544	Rabbi, on the "Revival," A.....	426
Protestant Episcopal Council.....	551	Reservation to be Opened, A.....	430
Prisoners' Inventive Ingenuity.....	558	Roman Catholicism, Reform in.....	431
Powers of County Courts.....	591	Rectifying a Wrong.....	532
Place for Fruit Growing, The.....	592	Read the Scriptures.....	543
Professors in Politics.....	651	Russia, Another Famine in.....	550
Pennsylvania Conference.....	654	Rascally Business.....	594
Prize Essays.....	662	Result, The.....	595
Professor Allen's Position.....	610	Roll of Honor, A.....	602
Provo Letter.....	627, 726, 754, 758, 803	Religious Congress.....	694
Perhaps the Law Might Help.....	712	Return of a Reminiscence.....	698
Palestine, Railroad Building in.....	714	Running Chicago Down.....	650
People's Party, The.....	715	Resolutions to J. H. Parnass.....	792
Panama Scandal.....	741	Rainmaker, The.....	788
Poary to Try It Again.....	742	Reform, A Needed.....	810
Prisoner's Statement, A.....	766	Rome Redivivus, Ancient.....	811
Pinkerton, The.....	785	Robbery Is Rife.....	816
Peculiar Case, A.....	774	Rode Over Niagara on Blondin's Back.....	832
Panguitch Stake Conference.....	788	Republican Candidate for Vice President.....	11
Payson, Items from.....	806	Republican Demonstration.....	30
Parkhurst Sensation.....	811	Republican National Committee, Chairman.....	38
Pentateuch, The Genuineness of the.....	818	Republican Convention, The.....	438
Protecting High Buildings.....	819	Republican Adversement, The.....	617
Political Straws.....	10	Reciprocity, The Knights of.....	48
Political Conventions.....	50
Political Conundrums.....	88

	PAGE.
Reciprocity, Progress of.....	492
Railroad Property.....	246
Railroad War Imminent.....	456
Railroad to Morgan County, A.....	486
Railroad Traction.....	487
Railroad Commission Sustained.....	488
Railroad Disasters at Home and Abroad.....	488
Railroad in Trouble.....	488
Railroad Accidents.....	488
Religious Sunday Services—25, 67, 89, 121, 153, 185, 217, 249, 281, 313, 345, 377, 408, 505, 538, 600, 664, 682, 760, 792.....	825
Reframed Elders.....
John R. Booth, Robert Duke, James Smith Nelson, T. P. Coleman, B. Heerjes.....	43
Carl Hansen, James Cook.....	50
Moreno England, A. M. Porter, James M. Campbell.....	120
Richard Williams, H. E. Booth, J. J. Ben- nett.....	152
Henry Moyle, John Trimble.....	184
Brigham Johnson, Nephi Edwards.....	246
H. M. Rawlins, Frank F. Merrill.....	278
John D. Williams, Joshua P. Bean.....	312
John Middleton, J. G. Webster.....	371
Thomas H. Gardner, W. A. Walker, J. B. Grosbeck.....	407
M. W. Dalton.....	480
M. Borgeson, Frederick Dietele, P. H. Peters.....	612
S. K. McMurdie, Thos. F. Welch, Thos. C. Stanford.....	644
Joe. B. Stack, James Paxton.....	567
A. C. Sorenson, E. H. Anderson, David Stoker.....	599
Geo. T. Mumford, R. A. Jones, Jos. B. Grosbeck, S. S. Hammond.....	628
Timothy Metc, James H. Anderson.....	672
Wm. Salter, Geo. Bangiola, Albert F. Haycock.....	708
John Pearson, Geo. A. Whitehead, James C. Lambert, Daniel Moss, Hugh J. Cannon.....	724
O. C. Dunford, Peter M. Folkman, Harry A. Bramwell, Joseph Seeley.....	751
Race in Education.....	10
Spread the Fact Widely.....	49
Sanction, This.....	49
Southern Silver Half Dollar.....	50
Stevenson, A. E.....	52
School Book Convention.....	56
Settlement in Distress.....	73
Small's, Sam. Name.....	77
Sacred Buildings.....	77
Scandinavian Mission, The.....	82
Stanley, the Explorer, in London.....	88
Shooting Stars.....	93
South Carolina.....	100
Slow, Something About.....	138
Sailor Lake.....	139
Society, A. Fraternity.....	154
Sex, Color and Alienism in the South.....	173
San Francisco and G. S. L. Railway.....	175
Schools and Armies.....	178
Salutary Check.....	200
Spile, More Petty.....	201
Street Sprinkling Tax, The.....	205
Straight Blander.....	207
St. Mark's Hospital, Corner Stone Laid.....	211
Showing Himself Up.....	228
Smacks of Humberg.....	229
"Salaried Horses".....	229
Smith, Lot, in Life and Death.....	230
School Law Discrepancies.....	231
Speaker on Veracity.....	233
Summer School, The.....	242
Serbs and the Attorney, The.....	248
Secret Societies, Benefit and.....	301
Sewerage Question, The.....	261
Summer School.....	273
Sanitary Situation, The.....	275
Sacrifice.....	283
Sanpete Stake Conference.....	291, 721
Storage-Battery Street Cars.....	292
San Francisco and S. L. Railway.....	294
Significant Incident, A.....	294

	PAGE.
Slaughtering Bee.....	294
Salt Lake Dispatch, Another Sample.....	298
Star Valley, News from.....	320
Sorry Situation, A.....	331
Stupendous Work, A.....	344
Bears, Br. Mr., Exonerated.....	354
Sea Sickness, A New Remedy for.....	360
Salt Lake Conference.....	371
Bad Story, A.....	376
September Weather.....	376
San Juan Stake Conference.....	376
Sanitary Question, The.....	394
Speck of Trouble, A.....	397
Sonora, Mexico.....	409
Scandinavian Mission.....	598, 418
Scout, Eight Hour Day in.....	425
Sanitary Ordinance, The.....	428
Society as it is.....	428
Shoemakers of History.....	429
Souvenir Coins, The.....	432
Scandinavian Conference.....	440
Sanitary Inspection.....	455
Spirit of Man, The.....	484
Subsidy a Failure.....	486
Spain, A Credit to.....	490
Speed the Parting.....	490
Searchers of Genealogy.....	532, 499
Sewerage Nuisance, The.....	499
Spirit of Man.....	499
Bad Incident, A.....	499
St. Joseph Stake Conference.....	515
Semi-Annual Conference.....	515
South Carolina Conference.....	523
Stanley, Trying to Overthrow.....	527
Stake Conferences.....	535
Suicide Clubs.....	552
Still They Come.....	554
Salt Lovers Abroad.....	557
Sensational Murder Cases.....	557
Seventh Quorum of Elders.....	567
Some Royal Bon-Vivants.....	575
Sweet Milk.....	575
Serious Situation, A.....	585
Six Million Dollars on His Word.....	787
"Sun" Shines Askant, The.....	759
Samoa Mission.....	778
Social Progress.....	778
Speed the Work.....	779
Some Sense in This.....	782
Snowflake Stake Conference.....	788
San Juan Stake Conference.....	788
Snow Storm, A.....	808
Sensors, A Hint for Would-be.....	812
Squibbles, Is the Truth But a.....	814
Salvation Army, The.....	816
Students' Society.....	817
Shot By a Mob.....	817
Silver Prospect.....	12
Silver Controversy.....	162
Silver Hill at the Front.....	188
Silver in the Treasury.....	171
Silver the Talk of the Nation.....	201
Silver Conference, The International.....	398, 492, 764
Silver, Mr. Gustave on.....	399
Silver in India.....	427
Silver Statue of Justice.....	485
Silver, As to.....	554
Silver Flute, The.....	680
Silver Question.....	780
Sugar Beet.....	780
Sugar Prospect, Lehi.....	806
Sunday Pastime.....	13
Sunday School Jubilee.....	117
Sunday Order, The Lessons of.....	132
Sunday Saloons, The.....	134
Sunday School Union.....	273, 474, 564, 681, 724
Sunday School Superintendents.....	291
Sunday is here.....	612
Sunday School Union.....	188
St. George Stake Conference.....	24, 419
St. George Jensen.....	86
St. George Temple Notice.....	875
Statehood, A Bill for.....	207, 808
Statehood, The Cry of.....	553
Statehood Again, As to.....	588
Strikes at the Antipodes.....	262

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Strikes in the United States	268	Utah Agricultural College	53
Strikes, An Explanation of Prevailing	362	Utah and the Mormons	109
Salt Lake, June Weather in	85	Utah Weather for June	171
Salt Lake, July Weather in	261	Utah Weather for July	207
Salt Lake State Conference	298, 371	Utah World's Fair Bill	201
Salt Lake, The Health of	371	Utah Stake Conference	661
Salt Lake Railway	433	Utah Election	744
Salt Lake Shippers, Take Courage	624	Unfair Treatment of Opponents	12
Salt Lake Prosperity	315	University of Utah	45, 311
Salt Lake Chinatown	708	University Interests	74
State and Federal Rights	183	United States, Color, Sex and Nativity in	88
State Street Paving	170	U. P. Telegraphers	233
State Attorney General, A Lady for	171	United Labor and National Guard	295
State Constabularies, Disciplined	301	U. S., The Students and Soldiers of the	358
States, Names of the	335	Utah, Honor to	333
		Utah at the World's Fair	357
Tuscarora Defeated	67	Utah Women, Advice to	396
Truth, Let The, Come Out	76	Utah Commisison, The Trick	467
Testimony of the Fact	77	Use for Old Paper	585
Transaction, Not an Honorable	78	U. S. Supreme Court, An Important Case for the	550
Twenty-ninth School District, The	104	Unwilling World, An	558
Temple Notices	123	Unpopular Statesmen	744
Thrilling Experiences, A	178	Utah Stake Conference	850
Temperance Mass Meeting	183	Unknownable, Speculating on the	811
Trick of the Trade	205
Terrestrial Disturbances	206	Venice	660
Terrible Commerce Destroyer, That	206	Viking Bold, A	661
Tooele Stake Conference	210	Valuable specimens	631
Temperance	215	Vexed Question, That	778
Taxpayers, Address to	221	Vile Imposition, A	778
Truth Condensed	232	Venison Supply, The	782
Tomato Seed	234	Very Impressionable	785
Trifle, A Remarkable	250	Values, Decline in	380
Transatlantic Passage	295	Venezuelan Question The	421
True Church, Which is the	286	Vile But Common Habit, A	420
Tennessee Situation, The	300	Virginia Conference	448
Tennessee War, The	309	Valedictory	484
Tennessees, Latest Outbreak in	285	Volcano Activity	178
Tobacco	314	Veto was Right, That	232
Tennessee Mining Trouble	326	Valuable Train, A	288
Tooele Stake Academy	342
Teacher the Cause of It, The	353	Wigwam Disaster, The	9
Trust to be Investigated, A Huge	360	Wigwam Incidents, Those	51
Taxes, A Proposed Increase of	361	Work, A Very Useful	11
Tax Rates, The	421, 497	West, Bishop, Using the Bogus Address Again	12
Transcontinental Association	424	West Sermon	59
Taylor, President John, Life of	428	Wealth of the Nation	24
Temple Notices	453	Weber Stake Academy	63
Tax, Protest Against the Added	458	Wool Market	75
Tax Rates, to Test the	458	Wait Awhile	154
Territorial Fair	498	Woman Meets an Emergency, A	186
Talmage, Dr., Discoveries by	532	What Is False?	142
Territorial Fair, the	523	Washington, Irrigation in	144
Treason Against the State	531	Washington, George, on Religious Liberty	170
Tabernacle Choir, The	561	World's Fair, Ancient America at the	171
To Bring the Moon Close to Us	567	World's Fair Bill	212
Trouble in Scandinavia	584	Wool Growers' Meeting	190
Typical Defamer, A	644	Wool Markets	333
The Sign Can't Fail	644	Wool Trade	197, 365
That Dollar Fare to Chicago	644	Wool Convention, Interstate	344
To Restrict Emigration	649	Wasatch Stake Conference	254
Tooele Stake Conference	635	Worlds, Are the Inhabited?	270
True Date of the Discovery	627	Walking by Faith	298
Twenty-five Years Ago	713	Wales, Earthquake in	391
Tilting at Windmills	718	Wild Man, An Alleged	380
Thanksgiving Story, A	725	Workers at a Disadvantage, The	332
Thorough Sweep, A	714	World's Fair Dedication Ceremonies	334
Tabiti, Letter from	738	World's Fair, Utah at the	359
Thanksgiving Day	740	World's Fair, School Teachers at the	359
Tornado in Deseret	766	Whittier, John Greenleaf	393
Take Things Moderately	777	Where Lies the Consistency?	399
Trouble Among Our Neighbors	782	Woman Reformer, A Noted	425
Too Much Smoke	783	Workmen and the World's Fair	429
Trying to Influence the Conference	784	Writing Paper Advancing in Price	472
Texas, Church Influence in	815	West Virginia Conference	483
Train Wrecked on the U. P. Ry.	820	What's in a Name	491
		Wonderful If True	493
Useful Pamphlet, A	685	Walking on the Water	502
Unfortunate Hamburg	649	What a Queen Cannot Do	503
Unostentatious Funerals	650	Wandering Jew, The	523
Utah's Fair Building	670	Work and Winds	526
Utah's Part in the Fair	714	Why not be Decent	529
Utah Commission	73, 79, 132, 139, 161, 195, 457, 465, 482, 486	We are Passing Along	529
Utah Weather and Crops	12	Wine Glass Incident	544
Utah, In Southern	97	With Intent to Deceive	550
		Word of Explanation	555

INDEX.

(x)

	PAGE.		PAGE.
Who shall Succeed Tennyson	557	Waterway Wanted A	713
What are We Coming to In Fiction	559	Word as to the Cabinet	713
World's Fair, L. Co. Assn. of Women	564	What is Money?	720
World Moves, The	587	William's Will	720
What will the Harvest Be	587	Western News Items. 496, 536, 505, 629, 657, 755, 789, 821	821
Wealth from Real Estate	685	Weighty Political Factor	745
Worse than Ever	685	Weather for December	799
Women Voting for President	687	What are We Here For?	592
"Wildcat" Currency Scare, The	608, 675	Weber Stake Conference	182, 593
We Live and Learn	651	Woman's Sphere, In	601, 761, 793, 826
Wasatch Stake Conference	652	Word as to Health, A	805
Work in California, The	654	Y. L. M. L. A. Conference	809
Wreck of Roumania	628

THE DESERT WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION.

ESTABLISHED TRUTH AND LIBERTY. JUNE, 1850.

NO. 1.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, JUNE 25, 1892.

VOL. XLV.

THE MORMON PEOPLE.

The following statement from the Utah Delegate to Congress appeared in the Pittsburg, Pa., Dupatch June 12th:

"From the first the Mormons have contended that they were not understood by the world, that neither their religion nor their conduct was investigated by those not of them, but that judgment was passed and execution issued upon an ex parte statement of the case.

"It was known that Mormons believed in and practiced polygamy, and as the Christianity and the civilization of the age were both opposed to plural marriage, what we term enlightened mankind turned against the Mormons without taking the trouble to inquire as to the extent of the so called evil or to ask what manner of people these Mormons were outside of their marital practices. It was assumed that all Mormons were polygamists, that the women were of the offensive class, that the Oriental harem was the prototype of our homes, that immorality was prevalent and sanctified by religion, and that the cornerstone of our faith was lust.

Yet, as a matter of fact, polygamy was practiced by such a small percentage of the people as to make it little more than an incident in a great community numbering 200,000 souls. The Mormon homes are and always have been as pure as the homes of other people; Mormon wives are as virtuous and modest and Mormon men as careful of the marital vows and obligations as the wives and husbands in any other Christian society.

THE PUBLIC NOT INFORMED.

Proof that the American people are deplorably and inexhaustibly ignorant concerning our community is furnished in the recent savage assault upon President Eliot, of Harvard University. Dr. Eliot did not applaud or justify polygamy; he did not even speak tolerantly of it. On the contrary, his address was in the nature of a congratulation to the country and to the Mormons themselves that polygamy had been discontinued. He did, however, say a good word to and for the Mormons, not on account of their polygamy—which no sane man should charge him with approving—but because of those spiritual and material virtues of the Mormons of which ordinary people have so persistently refused to learn.

HOW PRESIDENT ELIOT REASONED.

The doctor saw in Utah pretty and prosperous cities and thriving towns; he saw stately business blocks and magnificent residences; he met men and women who were in no respect inferior to the educated and cultured people with whom he is in the habit of associating elsewhere; in short, he saw that a vigorous young American commonwealth had sprung up in the wilderness of a few years ago, and he very naturally concluded that what he saw could not have been achieved by a depraved and immoral people. It takes earnestness and integrity, honesty and devotion, brains and brawn and withal a sincerity of purpose to accomplish what a generation has brought forth in Utah. President Eliot knew this and he is broad enough to recognize these virtues, courageous enough to acknowledge them and mainly enough to commend and applaud them.

It has been asserted among other things that the Mormons are largely foreign born and are alien in sentiment. It is sufficient answer to this that the founders of the Church were New Englanders, most of the early leaders being of Puritan stock. The successive census reports prove that the percentage of foreign born population is lower in Utah than in many of the older States. The community is essentially American in birth and none the less so in sentiment, training and education.

MORMON PATRIOTISM.

Within a few hours of the arrival of the pioneers in the Salt Lake Valley, Brigham Young and a few of his handful of followers climbed a lofty mountain overlooking the site of the present Salt Lake City and erecting a flag-staff thereon, swung to the breeze the Stars and Stripes. That mountain has since been known as Ensign Peak. The flag of the Mormons always has been the flag of the American Union. It has waved continuously over all that broad land since the July day in 1847 when it was taken from the box in which it had been carefully transported over a thousand miles of trackless wilderness and raised in an enemy's country. The national holidays and events inspiring enthusiasm in American breasts have been celebrated in Utah as elsewhere throughout the land, the common-ative bonfires burning as brightly, the cannon roaring as merrily, the addresses breathing as deep patriotism and the masses "enthusing" and applauding as heartily and sincerely as in Massachusetts or Virginia.

All this talk which has been dinned into the ears of the American people for the third of a century to the effect that the Mormons are aliens and wanting in patriotism is malicious slander, which has been disproven every day, though the evidence has been rejected by many professing patriots.

THEIR BELIEF IN THE CONSTITUTION.

The Constitution of the United States has been the boast of Mormons always, and you will hear from the pulpits and in the lowliest cottage the confident expression of belief that the greatest of human enactments is an instrument inspired by the Almighty. Indeed, it is the patriotic belief religiously held that it is a part of the mission of the Saints to preserve inviolate that sacred instrument and protect it, by force of arms, if need be, against desecration.

Brigham Young was an American through and through. His ambition was to build a commonwealth which would excite the admiration and command the respect of the nation. He laid the foundation in Americanism, and built thereon to the time of his death. The structure, so cleverly designed and with which he made such remarkable progress, has been carried forward upon the original plan largely under the inspiration of the founder. The Utah commonwealth, which is no longer a Mormon commonwealth, as some still insist is the case, is destined to become the foremost, the grandest and altogether the best in the great interior West. And this will be so because of the honesty, the devotion, the religious sincerity and the broad Americanism in which the foundation was laid and on which the edifice is being erected. Recent events will accelerate the growth and development, and in my opinion strengthen and improve the structure.

POLYGAMY HAS GONE.

The Mormons, having withstood for half a century an almost universally antagonistic sentiment, have seen the unwisdom of longer continuing the contest and have gracefully yielded. They have forbidden plural marriages and given obedience to laws which they thought were unconstitutional, but which they now respect, since the authority to interpret and decide has upheld them.

Polygamy could no more be resuscitated in Utah than could slavery in the South. The Mormons have accepted the decree of the great arbiters to which all must bow, the law and popular sentiment, and, having placed themselves in their civil capacity in harmony with their fellows, the commonwealth which they founded and in which all the good people of Utah, without regard to creed or party, are proud of membership, will go forward with mighty strides.

The antagonistic elements, which clashed so furiously during the long contest and which had a more or less injurious effect upon the State, are fast disappearing, the former opponents coming together and working harmoniously in the building of the great State upon which all our hearts are set.

ON PROSPECTING.

Many of your readers know but little as to the manner in which gold, silver and other metals are discovered—by whom, with what anxiety, privations and hardships, and the different classes of men that follow prospecting—how they live, year after year, with hope deferred. Most of the old prospectors are bachelors, men who have been "disappointed in love." Many went to California and had their ups and downs, making and losing money and never having enough to satisfy them or retire on. Some took to gambling to help them along in their eagerness to gain wealth. Loss was the consequence. Drink followed to drown sorrow. The mines in Nevada held out inducements for the prospector; hence he would go there and purchase some bacon, flour, yeast powders, sugar and coffee, a frying pan, coffee pot, and sometimes a camp kettle, these constituting the outfit. With pick and shovel and a few blankets he would take to the hills, and sleep where night overtook him, little thinking or caring about the rattlesnakes, tarantulas, scorpion and centipede, which were often found in close proximity to the bed. Indeed, many a man has found the "rattler" in his blankets in the morning. Nothing daunted, he took his meal and packed his horse, or burrow, or if he had neither, packed himself, and went along whistling or humming a low tune, with his eyes upon the ground, looking for rock that looks likely to contain gold, silver, or lead—often stopping to examine the country, to see what the formation is and where is the most probable place for mineral to be found. For days, months and years this labor is pursued with the same care, diligence and hope. Years pass on, letters ceasing to reach his friends so often, "the girl" gets tired of waiting and marries some one else. Some kind friend writes him; the letter finds him after a long time. He swears never to trust another woman. He finds a mine, goes to the nearest city, sells, sometimes goes to California, into the States and may take a trip to the old world, and have "a good time" while the money lasts. When this is all gone he returns, to find that mines have been discovered in many other States and Territories and with his former good luck he can get a stake from any of the old miners to go prospecting. Having found it once he can find it again, they will say. But alas! the country has changed; there are now many prospectors where there were few before. He is getting older, and frequently feels discouraged. He settles down in a cabin and goes to work on a prospect. Here he toils alone, eats alone, and gets so sour with the world that he wants to be in solitude. I know of one who was disappointed in love who has lived in the same cabin for fifteen years. This cabin is fourteen feet long by twelve wide. He has lately added some improvements thereto; he put in a window where hitherto he had only a chinking out. He is perfection in neatness; with him it is "a place for everything and everything in its proper place. The last time I was there he had eleven boxes nailed up to put things in, besides four shelves to stand things in. Bottles of all kinds, cans of all sizes, adorn the shelves, and woe to the man who moves one! He will let anyone wipe the dishes but never wash any. You must see that you put the cloth in the place where you found it, or incur his displeasure.

It is a sight to be in the evening at a cabin of the miners and prospectors when they come in from work, to see with what eagerness every piece of rock that has a sign of mineral in it is scanned, turned over and discussed. The magnifying glass is brought out, and the questions asked, "How much is there in the vein in sight—how deep?" One would think, by the looks and action, that they never had seen one before. When these men get into a cabin they are "good livers," and in most cases cleanly. Sunday is washing and mending day. They are well read and posted on almost all topics of the day. All take a lively interest in politics. The majority of them follow "Bob" Ingersoll and read the "Truth Seeker." They are kind-hearted, full of charity, and generous to a fault, hopeful and brave. Gloom is only for a time; fear they never have; they discover the mines that benefit their fellow man, but seldom get much benefit out of them for themselves. They get much blame through the middle man, who is the swindler if there is wrong-doing. These middle-men are in almost every mining camp. They take a bond from the prospector for a nominal sum. If there is anything crooked or any roguery going on, the middleman does it, and often the miner gets the censure. The prospector's daily life is this. He usually rises early, eats his breakfast, takes a can of water, a pick, and sometimes a little lunch. He starts out on the hill or mountain, looking for something he never lost, but something he must find. He looks as closely as anyone would for a lost diamond, for that rock containing mineral. This once found, he begins to scour around for the ledge. Many times this rock is a long way from where the ledge is located. This is his daily, weekly, monthly and yearly life.

The city dude prospector must not be overlooked, for he cuts quite a figure cut here. He comes with a new wagon, carriage, tackboard, and in some instances a livery team, with "boots" on the horses, a case of eggs in the buggy, and plenty of provision—canned goods principally. He has plenty of new tools, a new tent, portable cooking stove, powder and fuse, bedding enough for a camp meeting, feather pillows, and in one case (he being an only son) his mother gave him a feather bed. He, of course, parts his hair down the middle, and has a tooth brush with him. A new pair of miner's boots adorns his feet; he wears a very "brimmy" hat and a woollen shirt. I saw one young man with a sky-blue necktie over a dirty woollen shirt.

The old form of clothing looks funny, but can be worn, out here. The amateur prospector brings a few bottles of acids, a blow pipe, a box of cigars, chewing tobacco and a large store of cigarettes. When the cigarettes and the eggs are gone he receives word that he is "wanted in the city!"

This camp is working now on eight mines, all looking well; and if there was a railroad there would be many more working. The cry would be "Give us more cars," as it is—"Give us a railroad."

H. J. FAUST.

SPRING CREEK, June 5, 1892.

THE DEMOCRATIC WIGWAM.

The great structure in which the Democratic National Convention is to be held is one of those feats of rapid building for which the Lake City is noted. Perhaps in no other place would so great a task have been undertaken as a pledge to have it completed and properly appointed within so short a time. The nature of the case was such that hurried work had to be done, and this and other circumstances combined to make Chicago the point for holding the convention, although previous to the meeting of the national committees of the two parties it had made no bid to them nor they to it, for the reason that it already had the World's Fair and that was considered honor and prominence enough for at least one decade.

The manner in which the consummation named was brought about is told in an interesting manner by a recent number of the Chicago Tribune. While admitting that the reason for the choice of that city by some of the committee may have been the fact that it has such great railway and hotel facilities, and that long experience had fully qualified it for the satisfactory entertainment of any number of guests, it is still claimed that the primal reason was because greatness is thrust upon some cities just as it is upon some men, and Chicago is a conspicuous instance of the former. It is also stated as a fact that the National Convention felt that a candidate placed in nomination there would start off in the race with a peculiar prestige, a certain indefinable and favoring influence which no other city could impart.

"St. Louis hoodooed" us in 1888," said one, and he expressed the views of many. In 1884 Grover Cleveland had been nominated at Chicago, and it was against the wishes of nearly one-half of the committee that St. Louis was selected in 1888. "We don't want to take any more risks. We're going to to win, and we want every advantage possible to secure." This was the position of a majority of the committee, and although Milwaukee, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City, Omaha, and other cities made a gallant fight for it, and Chicago did what she could to help along to realization the aspirations of her neighboring city on the lake, the latter city was chosen.

It had been a hot fight. Milwaukee's supporters, more persistent than any others, stuck by her to the last. Fourteen ballots were taken. On the first Chicago had one, Milwaukee 8, Kansas City 13. That was the highest vote Missouri's second city received. On the eighth ballot Indianapolis received 22, and on the eleventh Milwaukee received the same number.

future; visions of the campaign that had begun the day the convention ended its labors, nor did it end till the grand victory of November—reflections such as these could only result one way—on the fifteenth ballot Chicago received twenty-seven votes and was declared the winner.

But the local Democracy, now that it had its prize, did not know what to do with it. The old Exposition building, famous for its national conventions and especially notable as the place in which was named the successful standard bearer in 1884, as well as the defeated knight from Bar Harbor in that same eventful year, had been ordered razed to the ground, and its destruction would be complete before convention time.

But the convention was coming and ing the Auditorium would result in providing 8,000 seats. All the other cities had agreed to furnish sittings for no less than 15,000. The Auditorium was declared out of the question. So the committee of arrangements determined to build a hall for the special accommodation of the convention which would seat not less than 20,000 people. To more effectively carry forward the great undertaking, the committee of arrangements appointed two other committees, finance and building.

The next great consideration was raising the necessary money and doing it without loss of time, it being estimated that $50,000 would be required altogether. With the building complete and equipped, it was considered, and reasonably, that the sales of tickets would return the expenses of the con-

INTERIOR OF THE WIGWAG.

There were 50 votes in the committee, 26 necessary to a choice. There was a deadlock, and no way to open it seemed at hand. Then Brice, Carlisle, Gorman and Henri Watterson got together to talk over the situation. The result of the conference was a telegram from Chairman Brice to Potter Palmer:

"What will Chicago do for the convention, if it comes to you?"

Potter Palmer consulted with a few of the leading hotel men and wired back to Mr. Brice:

"Will do as well as we did in 1884."

That settled it. Visions of the generous entertainment accorded the delegates in that year, so memorable to Democracy, so full of promise for its had to be arranged for. Potter Palmer called together a number of prominent Democrats, and the result was the appointment of a committee of arrangements, with Judge John P. Altgeld as chairman; James C. Strain, secretary, and A. F. Seeburger, treasurer.

The committee located its headquarters at No. 25 Palmer House, and here Secretary Strain is to be found, looking after a thousand and one details of the approaching convention. The committee was nonplussed, at the outset, to know what to do for a hall. The Auditorium was considered, but that would not do. A Chicago convention means that not less than 20,000 people demand accommodation. An estimated expenditure in remodel-vention itself and more. It should be understood at this point, that when the Chicago committee concluded terms with the other, the arrangement was that the former were to provide for seating 15,000 persons, including the delegates; but since the building has been under way, the plans have been changed somewhat and a gallery with a capacity of 5000 persons has been put in; all this room goes to the local committee, and if the convention should last as long as that at Minneapolis—that is, four days—with every seat sold every day at more or less "fancy" prices, it can easily be seen that the chances are much better for a surplus than a deficiency.

The building committee energetically took hold of the gigantic task of erecting in time for the convention a building so large, so well arranged, and capable of sustaining, as well as accommodating, such a vast concourse of people. The site on Michigan boulevard, just north of Battery D, between Madison and Washington streets, was engaged for the purpose. In the person of A. M. Allen, architect and contractor, a young man full of vim and spirit, was found a man of ideas of the right sort and the ability to execute them. His plans were adopted and his figures accepted and he was authorized to complete the work so that June 21 the convention hall should be in complete readiness for the convention. Nearly 200 men have been employed, one way and another, on the building.

The Wigwam, which promises to be historic for its connection with the success and growth of the Democratic party, has a frontage on Michigan avenue of 456 feet. Its depth is 250 feet, or a total ground size of 114,000 square feet. The building will be 60 feet high, well lighted and ventilated. The interior is one vast amphitheater. The area or pit will be seated with 840 arm-chairs, and here the delegates will sit. They will face the west or Michigan avenue side. Directly in front of the chair will sit the official stenographers, and flanking the chair on either side will be the press representatives, 175 on each side—351 in all. Directly there will be 19,400 chairs in the wigwam and fifty boxes. The cost of the building, exclusive of decorating and lighting, will be $23,500.

The recent flurry which "downed" the centre pole of the Wigwam has necessitated some changes, and these were of course made after our accompanying pictures were drawn. They were not, however, so extensive as to materially change the general appearance inside, or at all outside, the front elevation being as here given. The pole has been kept out of the reconstruction, and in its place are several others distributed around in such manner as to render everything perfectly safe, which the building, as a whole, is now pronounced to be by the committee in charge.

SOME OF THOSE WHO WILL BE THERE.

"There will be more clubs in attendance upon the convention than ever before graced a national convention," says the Times. "Boies clubs from Iowa and Gray clubs from Indiana, Hill clubs from New York and Cleveland clubs from all over the country will vie with each other in the work of creating enthusiasm for their respective idols. All the arrangements are not as yet completed for the reception of delegates and visitors, but this much is settled—the superb Democratic Marching Club of Chicago, with its incomparable leader

I say further, designedly, for four months in a Mexican prison awaiting trial is a punishment of itself. Considering the magnitude of the offense committed, that of murder connected with a genuine rebellion, the fewness of the culprits who are to pay the penalty occasions some surprise. But the submission of the rebellious was so entire, and the success of the authorities in catching the offenders so complete, that the government could afford to be magnanimous toward these not really guilty of murder. Four of the five were sentenced by the district judge to capital punishment, the other to thirteen years and four months at hard labor; the other forty-one were declared exonerated by their early submission to the State authority. But the sentence must be confirmed by the Supreme Tribunal of Justice of the State before they will be allowed to return to their homes.

The funny part of the whole affair was the catching of the rebels. First a few were apprehended and after preliminary examination were released on their own recognizance. The example of these, together with the proclamation, induced some more to surrender who were, in like manner, released. Then the large majority mustered courage from the leniency apparently shown, and surrendered in a body; then those who had been released were gathered up, and the victory was complete.

In a few weeks the great scarcity of provisions in this neighborhood will be at an end, for a tolerably fair harvest of wheat is assured, unless it should rain so much and so continuously as to ruin it.

The eldest son of our Bishop, Wm. D. Johnson, Jr., is the sufferer from the strange freak of a coyote. The young man is about twenty-one years of age, and being used to roughing it, like almost all country-raised "Mormon" boys, entertaining no fear of the traditional coward of all cowards, the coyote, makes his bed on the ground wherever night overtakes him. On the evening of the 3rd inst., while on a trip on horseback on the range, after stock, while sleeping in the same bed with his companions, he was rudely and painfully awakened by the viselike grip of the fangs of a coyote fastened on his chin, the upper fang biting through his lip. A groan that escaped him in his struggle with the brute awakened his companions, who were obliged, though both of them well-built young men, to exert all their united strength, which broke the coyote's jaws before they could make it release its hold. With great presence of mind they held in such a way that no blood was drawn on either of the other two, except a very small place on the thumb of one of them, until the sufferer himself cut the animal's throat, they never losing their hold on its jaws. This done, the sufferer fainted, and is at writing, in a precarious condition. The poison in the animal's bite was so strong that the almost invisible mark on the thumb mentioned above, immediately stiffened it, and it remained so for some hours. One of the young men had the curiosity to examine and dissect the dead coyote afterwards, by daylight. He found no outward sign of rabies in eyes or mouth and absolutely nothing back of the chair will be seats for 300 special guests, and rising above these will be private boxes two tiers high. Surrounding the pit or arena seats will gradually rise in amphitheatrical form to the walls. There will be 12,000 seats, divided into four sections and divided by broad, commodious aisles. Encircling the entire interior, the upper tier of private boxes on the west forming a portion of it, will be the immense gallery. This is fourteen feet high at the front and rises to eighteen feet in the rear. The delegates will enter the hall through doors opening from Michigan avenue into passage ways on either side of the platform, leading to aisles which surround the pit. The main entrances will be at the end of the building. On both the north and south ends of the building will be broad walks leading to the rear and at the rear corners will be thirty-two foot stairways leading to the interior. The entrances to the gallery will be independent.

THE EXTERIOR VIEW.

A large room directly under the platform in the rear of the chairman's desk will be fitted up for the use of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies, and at both ends will be commodious rooms, one for the use of the Western Associated Press, the other for the United Press. Altogether and drill master, Captain James H. Farrell, will meet and escort all clubs that come to the convention to their respective hotels.

"The marching club is now a brigade 700 strong, and as many of the clubs are likely to arrive simultaneously, the "brigade" will doubtless have to be divided in order to meet and greet them all. But none knows better than Captain Farrell how to accomplish the desired results and give to the visiting organizations a taste of real Chicago hospitality. Several clubs already have notified Captain Farrell of their intention to be present, and the handsome appearance of the local club, headed by a band, escorting the visitors to their temporary homes, promises to be one of the features of the convention not the least interesting."

A MEXICAN LETTER.

It was conjectured at the time of the revolt in January last, in our neighboring town of La Ascension, that swift and certain would be the vengeance of the ruling party on the rebels, but all who so expected have seen it delayed for once four months, and now only five of the forty-six arraigned are singled out to receive further punishment.

except a few cottonwood leaves in the animal's stomach. The recovery of the young man is topped and prayed for by our whole community.

We have had general good health in our colony for some time past.

EDMUNDO.
COLONY DIAZ, Chihuahua, Mex.,
June 4, 1892.

ARTHUR BROWN INTERVIEWED.

The following extract is from an interview by a representative of the Ireald with Arthur Brown, of this city:

"Nice time; busy time; my share of it. Got interviews with nearly all the delegates; saw all of the credential committee—except five or six. All favored except Cleveland of Nevada, and possibly Idaho and Montana, though from the first favored the plan feeling both delegations. The outcome was all owing to the rush. The convention was made with patience to hear from the credential committee and only ten minutes were devoted to Utah, and it was a very close vote. We had the organization already and all that Goodwin and Allen could do was to whisper their half vote for Harrison. I had been put on the national committee by the unanimous assent from our side, but at the last moment Goodwin came to us and said that if I was left he would make a fight. They said should name any man except McFie and myself and they would accept him. I named Salisbury; thought it was the best man we had."

"How did Goodwin get on the committee to await on Harrison?"

"Cannon did that when Goodwin was out of the hall. We held out the olive branch all the time, but I thought it a mistake, as they wouldn't accept it in the spirit it was offered."

"Did the report that you favored line work against you?"

"As long as I was there I didn't say for Blaine or Harrison, either. I went to the Indiana headquarters where I asked me if we were for Harrison. We said that we were for Utah if they said they would help us and we did, as did Maine and Michigan. Here I have some special friends. I used to take any part or parcel as to candidates. It was understood at Frank Cannon would vote for Blaine and Salisbury for Harrison. Then it was seen that Harrison could not nominate the two votes of the delegation were cast for him. The day part that Goodwin and Allen had the convention was to whisper that they voted their half votes for Harrison, and the only possible thing it seems to be is the impression it will be at home."

"Why did you yield your right to a place on the national committee?"

"Because the contestants abandoned my claim they had to a separate organization and I thought that being out of a man as good as myself was better than taking any risk however slight. I want to unite the party if I can and if I am in the way want to get down and out."

"What were the general results of the convention?"

"They all talked good-naturedly and the anti-Harrison people bore their defeat calmly—they are the men who do their fighting before and in the convention and not after it is over. We'll go into the campaign with a united front with a good show to win."

"Did you hear any expressions as to the Democratic candidate?"

"Many of the Republicans seemed to think that if we nominated Harrison that the Democrats wouldn't nominate Cleveland and that if we named Blaine they would. There is, however, a good strong feeling among the Democrats for Cleveland."

As the reporter got up to leave, Mr. Brown with the most plastic elegance, assured him that they had always offered the olive branch to the people who hated and vilified them, and as they did down there they will do here. "All we ask of them is to come in and help build up the party. They will do it sooner or later and the best of them will before fail." Most of them are hangers back on personal jealousy and hate."

WHAT IS PINKERTONISM?

SENATOR PALMER of Illinois, while campaigning for his present place, acquired much of his popularity from the vigorous anti-Pinkerton speeches he delivered. During the great railroad strike in New York a few years ago Pinkertonism entered largely into it, and Governor Hill, by his open hostility to it, gained some popularity with the working classes. Congress has taken up the subject, and its workings and methods have been for some time subjects of investigation. Massachusetts has at present an anti-Pinkerton bill under consideration. Several States have already adopted measures of an anti-Pinkerton character.

Pinkertonism is the term usually applied to the system of hiring private watchmen and policemen during strikes by the owners of railroads, factories and such corporations. It derived its name from Allan Pinkerton, of Chicago, who established a detective agency in that city in 1852. He also established a corps of private watchmen which in time became a semi-organized police-force. In times of labor troubles his men were in especial demand. The sheriffs of counties and the chiefs of police owing to political entanglements could not, it was claimed, render effective service in opposing organized labor.

During the great strikes in the coal and iron regions of Pennsylvania Pinkerton was given charge of the property. He organized a regular police force there, bringing the material from Chicago. He succeeded in enforcing the will of his employers. It being largely by his aid that all the English speaking workmen were forced to leave, and that their places were filled by Italian, Hungarian and Slavonic laborers. After this Pinkerton was called to other States where labor troubles existed. But others took up the private police system and practiced in the same way. However, the name Pinkertonism, became attached to the system, and now it applies to the write of any person using police or executive powers without being a constituted officer of the State or town in which he serves.

Allan Pinkerton was born in Glasgow, Scotland in 1819. He was son of a police sergeant. At the age of 21 he became identified with the Chartist movement, and after the Birmingham riots fled the country, arriving in America about 1842. He drifted to the town of Dundee, Illinois, where he started a copper shop. In 1852 he moved to Chicago and entered on his police work. After that period he was closely identified with the criminal history of the Mississippi valley and Atlantic States. He lost five men in trying to capture Jesse James. He established agencies in New York, Philadelphia, New Orleans, St. Louis and Denver. He died in 1884, but the business still goes on, conducted by his two sons William and Robert. They are immensely wealthy and, being more aggressive than their father, they are not so popular as he was.

Allan Pinkerton was not an educated man, nor was he even a good talker. He worked some very heavy cases. One of his peculiarities was that he would never engage on any case where rewards were offered. His plan was that he should be employed by some responsible person at a stipulated salary per day or week, and would not even promise success. He agreed to do the best he could, and he generally gave satisfaction.

Pinkertonism ought to be abolished. Its existence is a confession of weakness and inefficiency on the part of the regularly constituted authorities under the law.

A GRAPHIC SKETCH.

The following is quoted from an article that appeared in the Ogden Post (non-Mormon):

"Of all the cheeky political frauds that have been inflicted upon the west, Powers is the chief. In a speech at the Knutsford hotel, Salt Lake, just before starting to Chicago, he said: 'The fight we are about to make is a partisan one, but it is a fight for American principles against the Asiatic.'"

"How long * * * is this Territory to be afflicted with this blatherskite, this man whose daily conversation is a studied insult to thousands of ladies and little children living in this Territory?"

"The very fact that this defamer of the Mormon people, by wholesale and without any discrimination; this vandal who attacks the homes, the wives, the children of thousands of Mormon gentlemen who have never been in polygamy and whose wives and little ones are as dear to them as life itself, is allowed to daily traverse the streets of Salt Lake, without being molested, goes to prove that the Mormon people are a peaceable people."

"The Post knows of plenty of Democrats, who are not Mormons, who would kill him for a like offense. And then to think of a lot of * * * following this man Powers around from place to place, applauding this defamer of character, and in order to attract a gaping crowd dressing up a few ward strikers in Navajo blankets with eagle feathers plastered on their heads, the outfit being accompanied by a brass band."

"What is the object, the purpose of this street walking and talking freak? Why, the Salt Lake Tribune has blown this fellow up so full of wind that he imagines he is a great man; that he is a leader; that he has cowed the Mormons and now proposes to wear the scalp of the Democrats at his belt."

THE DESERET WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED BY
THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY,
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, $2.50
Per Volume, of Twenty-five Numbers, . . . 1.50
IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. PENROSE, EDITOR.

Saturday, . . . June 25, 1892

THE TUSCARORAS DEFEATED.

It will be seen from our report of proceedings in the Third District court today, that Judge Zane has overruled Justice of the Peace Lockrie's learned(?) decision, and sustained the demurrer of the Democrats against the Tuscaroras complaint. That is to say, the "Liberal" outfit is knocked out, and their game is played without scoring a point. "Coming events cast their shadows before," and the sham savages will start for Chicago under a cloud.

The whole Tuscarora arrangement is a bit of senseless display, and a bold attempt to secure by assumption and impudence a position to which it has not a vestige of substantial right. The Lockrie nonsense was one scene in a miserable farce, without even the merit of wit or anything to provoke even a hearty laugh, except the folly and the airs of the actors who tried to pose as real players with fudge as a real play.

Boss Powers has made a fizzle of this piece of clap-trap, and his striped umbrella show is likely to meet with similar success. The learned opinion of "Chief Justice" Lockrie would have done for a cloud for each cigar store Sagamore on his way to Chicago, if a competent court had not knocked a hole through it so big that not even enough is left of it to lean on or tie to.

The question is now, will the overruled Justice bring a libel action against Judge Zane for thus deprecating his judicial abilities and exposing him to the ridicule of the public?

SCHOOL ELECTIONS.

The question has been asked "When do the school elections take place?" and a reply has been requested through the DESERET NEWS.

Under the statute approved March 10, 1892, three school trustees are to be elected in each school district in the Territory, except in cities of the first and second class, on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November in 1892. These are to serve for one year. On the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, 1893, and biennially thereafter, three trustees are to be elected in each school district with the exception named, who are to hold their office for two years. The registered voters only are to vote at these elections. Notices are to be posted as usual by the trustees, and the elections are to be conducted as under the provisions of the former school law. The present trustees will hold office until the new trustees are elected and qualified.

THE COMMON ENEMY.

WHAT the Park City Record says does not matter a great deal, but when its utterances are copied by more important papers they may perhaps be considered as likely to carry some weight; that is why we clip from it the following paragraph reprinted by a morning paper as a knock down argument:

"If there is one thing more than another that shows how firmly Mormons are still bound together and that all this talk about division on party lines is a shallow subterfuge, it is the glee exhibited by every paper of Mormon extraction, whether Republican or Democratic, at every report of adversity with which the Liberal Republicans meet in their struggle to secure seats in the National convention. It is amusing to see the vehemence with which the Mormons assert the movement is bona fide, and then give themselves the lie direct by a combined shout of pleasure when the Liberals meet with an apparent reverse. Try as they will they cannot hide their spots, and the people outside of Utah will find it out sooner or later."

Now if this pleasure when the "Liberals" meet with a reverse as apparent as that at Minneapolis, is proof that the "Mormon" Republicans and Democrats are "firmly bound" together, how is it that "Gentile" Republicans and Democrats of the most pronounced character are equally delighted at the same result? Every true Republican and every real Democrat in this Territory is glad when the common enemy meets with a reverse. For what is called "Liberalism" here is the enemy of both Republicanism and Democracy.

It is the incongruous element in the Utah organism. There will be no permanent health in the body politic until it is purged out. Whatever good purpose some people may think it has served is accomplished, and it is now nothing but an evil, without use and without excuse. It is merely an obstruction. It blocks the way of the Republicans, it tries to beat down the Democrats. It slanders the one party and vilifies the other. It is unscrupulous, untruthful, malignant and without a spark of generosity or a particle of magnanimity. Rule or ruin is the policy, and nothing but its destruction will secure peace to Utah and that progress which her friends desire.

The only fault that can reasonably be found with the "Mormon" in reference to their political divisions is that it runs to too great extreme in some places. It ought to be conducted without bitterness and carried on without that exaggeration or misrepresentation which has marked its way in certain localities. "Mormons" ought to be sufficiently "bound together" on general principles of fairness, honor and brotherhood, as to discuss political issues in kindness and justice to each other. When they impute motives to opponents that do not exist, and dive into the domain of intention which they cannot understand, they violate their religious principles and obligations and expose themselves to severe criticism from all fair-minded people.

What the "Liberal" papers may say about their sincerity does not count. Everybody whose opinion is worth anything knows that those papers are only lying. They are not merely mistaken in what they say. They wilfully and purposely lie, in malice and wrath. But it will only hasten the doom of "Liberalism," which is bound to go down and that speedily.

Every decent Democrat and every respectable Republican remaining within its ranks ought to come out, now, while it can be done without discredit, and "be separate and touch not the unclean thing." Utah needs sound Republicans and sincere Democrats to work for her political redemption, each on their own party lines, but having in view the common welfare. "Liberalism" is antagonistic to both parties, and it is only natural and right that they should exhibit a common "glee" when the vicious thing receives a vital blow.

STATUS OF THE RUSSIAN FAMINE

THE present status of the Russian famine exhibits a striking feature. The State department, at Washington, is in possession of information to the effect that the famine is practically ended. The Russian government has issued a ukase authorizing the free exportation of maize. A similar authorization is expected to be announced by the 1st of July in relation to all other grain except rye. The result is a drop in prices throughout the empire of from 80 to 100 per cent.

This situation has brought the fact to light that while gaunt hunger and consequent grim death were stalking through wide districts of country, speculators were hoarding up vast quantities of grain, which are now being uncovered. It is the old story of "man's inhumanity."

It appears from these developments that there was scarcely any need for famine in Russia. If there had been a humane distribution of breadstuffs, but Russia is largely afflicted with a class of financial vultures with which every country, this included, is more or less afflicted. They are heartless creatures who make the misery and misfortune of their fellowmen their choicest opportunities for self-seeking. If the speculative hoarders had offered their produce at a moderate price to the benevolent who interested themselves and expended their means for the relief of their starving people, the time of scarcity might have been bridged in the afflicted districts without much suffering or loss of life.

In the contemplation of this subject as it stands, no small degree of satisfaction can be derived from the declension in the prices of Russian grain, not only because it will ameliorate the condition of the people of the famine districts, but also because it will largely deprive the stony-hearted speculators of the immense profits they expected would accrue to them from the unfortunate situation of a large proportion of their fellow-creatures.

Another notable incident connected with the famine in Russia is the sailing, on Saturday last, of an American ship from Brooklyn with a cargo of food for the Russian sufferers. According to the information about the boards of grain in that country, this seems like "taking coals to Newcastle." Instead of shipping, would it not be as cheap and feasible for philanthropic Americans to subscribe money to the relief fund and let their agents take it to Russia and there buy bread at the present reduced prices from Russian speculators with which to feed their famishing countrymen?

THE CONVENTION OF 1860.

Now that the agony is over at Minneapolis, the politicians and statesmen of the Republican party are settling down to effective campaign work. On the other hand the agony is just commencing on the part of the Democrats, and for the next ten days surmise, conjecture and opinion will be rife. The names of Cleveland, Gorman, Carlisle, Whitney, Palmer, Boies and Gray will be talked of as old acquaintances, or long lost friends once more restored.

Any reference to a National Democratic Convention, naturally takes one back to the eventful period of 1860. In that year two conventions were held. The first assembled at Charleston, S. C. April 23rd. Every State then in the Union was represented. Slavery was the issue of the time. The question of extending and protecting it in the Territories gave rise to irreconcilable dissensions. The delegations from seven Southern States withdrew. After fifty-seven ineffectual ballots to adopt a platform, the convention adjourned to meet at Baltimore on June 18th.

Meantime the National Republican Convention met on May 18th, at Chicago, and nominated Abraham Lincoln and Hannibal Hamlin on a platform calling for the preservation of the Union, State control of State affairs, reprobation of slaveholder's administration, slavery not warranted by the Constitution in the Territories, condemnation of the "Kansas-Nebraska act," and the admission of Kansas as a free State.

The allusion to Kansas was definite enough on the part of the Republicans. It was the peculiar situation in that Territory which caused dissensions among the Democrats. When the adjourned Charleston Convention re-assembled at Baltimore on June 18th, the Northern Democrats decided on definite action in relation to slavery. It was finally agreed on by them that the United States Supreme Court should be the arbiter on all issues arising out of slavery, and Stephen A. Douglass and B. Fitzpatrick were the nominees. The latter declined, and the National Committee substituted H. V. Johnson.

The Southern Democrats would accept neither the platform nor the candidates of their Northern brothers, and seemed to hold a convention of their own at Richmond, where John C. Breckenridge and Joseph Lane were nominated. A platform was adopted by the seceders who called themselves Constitutional Democrats demanding the right to take slaves into the Territories, and to protect them there, also characterizing States obstructing the fugitive slave law as revolutionary.

In the subsequent election thirty-three States participated, the total electoral vote was 308. Lincoln carried seventeen States, giving 180 electoral votes, and a popular vote of 1,865,852. Breckenridge carried eleven States giving seventy-two electoral votes with a popular vote of 845,768. Douglas carried only two States, giving twelve electoral votes, but his popular vote was 1,375,157. The "American" candidate, Bell, carried three States, giving thirty-nine electoral votes, and a popular vote of 559,581.

This election well illustrates the anomaly of what is known as the Electoral College. Douglas who had a popular vote of over 1,375,000 got only two States and twelve electors, while Breckenridge who had only 845,000 of a popular vote got 11 States and 72 electors. Bell who had a popular vote of 559,581 got three States and 39 electors. These figures show that the Democratic party with its 1,375,600 vote for Douglas did not, as a party, intend to disrupt the Union. The Breckenridge adherents can no more be called Democrats than were the Henry Clay Whigs who voted the Seceders' ticket.

SIDNEY DILLION.

A FEW days ago we made some comments upon the death of Sidney Dillon, but were unable, in the absence of data, to present any details connected with his career. The following brief sketch from the Chicago Mail is quite interesting:

"Recognizing the almost destitute condition of his father's finances young Dillon at the immature age of seven determined that he would be a burden to his progenitors no longer; as he since expressed it, 'I wanted to strike out for myself.'

"Leaving the paternal roof he sought and obtained work on an eastern branch then being built, of the Mohawk & Hudson road, between Albany and Schenectady. The road is now known as the New York Central.

"His first duty was to carry water to the laborers building the road and for his services he received the sum of $1 per week and his meals.

"Frugality being his chief inheritance he managed to lay aside the greater part of his earnings in order to carry out a compact made with himself that 'one day I will start for myself and I will become richer than any squire I know.'

"Forty-eight years ago he determined to marry, and on a visit to Amherst, Mass., he met a young and brilliant woman, a member of one of the village's most respected families. To his wife Mr. Dillon owed a great part of his success. She did not come to him with any large dowry, but brought him a wife's love and encouragement.

"When quite a young man Mr. Dillon came to New York city. He still devoted his attention to carrying out railroad contracts. It can safely be said that few men in this country have undertaken larger contracts. It was he who built the Fourth Avenue Improvement tunnel from the Grand Central depot to Harlem, New York city. This enterprise was completed at a cost of $7,000,000.

At the small village of Promontory, seventy-five miles west of Ogden, Mr. Dillon in 1869 assisted in laying the last rail on the Union Pacific railroad. From its inception he has been connected with the road. When Horace F. Clark died, in 1874, Mr. Dillon was unanimously elected the executive chief of the road, he was instrumental in building, and held this position for the ensuing ten years.

His family consists of two married daughters and a number of grandchildren. Ex-Judge John F. Dillon, attorney for Jay Gould, is his nephew."

THE NEWSPAPER AS A DETECTIVE

NEW YORK CITY has a case that in some respects resembles that of the notorious Carlisle W. Harris, the medical student who was convicted of murdering his young wife a few months ago. The evidence obtained against Harris was principally through reporters, and the present case is entirely in the hands of New York World reporters.

It appears that a few weeks ago the wife of Dr. R. W. Buchanan, a prominent physician of New York City, died under rather peculiar circumstances. Two reputable physicians certified that the cause of death was cerebral hemorrhage. Soon after it was ascertained that Dr. Buchanan married another woman. The reporters got scent of what promised to be a sensational affair. They soon discovered that the woman whom the doctor married was a wife from whom he was divorced some years previously. It was also learned that the dead wife was once the keeper of a house of ill-repute in Newark, New Jersey. Further disclosures revealed the fact that Buchanan, a married man, was in the habit of frequenting the Newark house, and finally succeeded in marrying the landlady, after procuring a divorce from his wife. The Newark woman had a large fortune amassed in her objectionable calling. Before marrying the doctor had her make a will, bequeathing her fortune to him in case of death. After her decease he remarried his first wife.

On the 6th inst. the body of the Newark woman was exhumed, and an autopsy held by prominent physicians under the direction of the district attorney. The brain was found to be free from all signs of disease, thus disproving the cerebral hemorrhage cause of death. By the advice of the examining physician, Dr. Buchanan was arrested, and remanded to await the result of the chemical analysis of the stomach. The supposition is that the woman's death was caused by poisoning.

THE TUSCS' DEFEATED.

THE final decision of Judge Zane in the case of the Tuscacoras was a death blow to their impudent attempt to gain some recognition of their bogus organization. It was the ringing down of the curtain over the silly farce in which Justice Lochrie assumed so peculiar a part.

It is difficult to determine which actor cut the most ridiculous figure—Powers, Hiles, Newton, Lochrie or Duke. If it can be determined who wrote the plot, that is, who made out the complaint and pleadings in the case, the question will be settled as to which made the worst exhibition of himself.

Hiles declared in court that the pleader did not know how to plead. Newton's name appears on the papers, but it is said he claims that Powers made them out and he signed them. Powers, it is understood, lays the blame on Hiles. Hiles would scarcely proclaim in court that he was ignorant himself of the rules of pleading.

It is a very pretty quarrel, and may develop some more libel suits, or at any rate the exhibition of bad blood, the issue of which might be beneficial to some of the Tuscororas before they start for Chicago, particularly if the stories of the amount of fire-water and kindred liquors already provided for the trip are in any degree authentic. The Tuscs depart with a bad defeat as an men.

A PLAIN CASE.

The interview with Mr. John Morgan which will be found in our issue of today, explains the true inwardness of the Utah situation at Minneapolis. It was just as we understood but additional details are given which make the matter very plain.

The pretended satisfaction with which the defeated "Liberals" regard the result is not very creditable to their good sense. Their veracity is always questionable. But they ought to be shrewd enough if not truthful enough to make at least an appearance of consistency. What they really obtained was an empty honor, the mere shadow of the substance which fell to the lot of the regular Republicans. If there had been any intention to give the "Liberals" real recognition they would have had the national committeeman. This place being given to the Republicans settles the question as to which party is recognized in national affairs.

The including of C. C. Goodwin in the Tribune in the committee to inform President Harrison of his renomination, it will be seen, was a courtesy extended by the regular delegates, Messrs. Salisbury and Cannon. We regard it as a mistake, because it will not be appreciated in its true spirit, and will be misrepresented by the very persons whom it was intended to please.

There is now only one course for consistent men in this Territory calling themselves Republicans to take. That is to drop local factional disputes and unite under the recognized Republican organization. If the men sent to Minneapolis by the "Liberals" organization act in good faith on their return, they will advise this and be followed by all the decent men that belong to it. The lower elements, which are nothing if not anti-Mormon and malignant, can go their way and fight the wind, and live on the carcass of dead feuds as long as they can hold out. What they may do will not count in the sum of Utah's future affairs.

NOT THAT KIND A MAN.

The following is self-explanatory:
Editor Deseret News:

"A man calling himself 'Charles Ellis,' and saying that he had been lecturing through Utah and in Salt Lake Theatre, has been in Leadville, Colorado, recently denouncing the Mormons. Do you know if he was the Charles Ellis who has been so long fighting the Liberal party?"

CITIZEN.

The person to whom our correspondent refers is not Mr. Charles Ellis who is so well known to the public on account of the lectures he has delivered here and in other parts of Utah, on local subjects. It is fair to presume, however, that, for some reason at present unexplainable, the man at Leadville personated the gentleman with whose name the Utah public is so familiar. This presumption is based on the fact that no other person named Ellis except the latter has delivered lectures in this city. We have information as to the identity of the perpetrator of this mean deception, who circulated, while in Leadville, a large amount of absurd anti-"Mormon" slander. We are in possession of information to the effect that his name is E. C. Ellis, and that he is employed as an agent for an eastern firm which deals extensively in patent medicines.

The following is a description of him, furnished by Messrs. J. R. Stephen and H. J. Benson, of Leadville, both of whom heard him tell his anti-"Mormon" tale: "He has a short goatee; will weigh between 175 and 180 pounds; has one or two fingers off one hand—think it is the right; is full faced; has gray hair and beard; has two front teeth out."

We presume that our correspondent will be satisfied, from the foregoing, that the Leadville fraud is a very different kind of a man from the Charles Ellis who has struck so many telling stalwart blows for justice in behalf of the majority of the people of Utah.

BUTLER'S BOOK.

GENERAL BENJAMIN F. BUTLER in his recent work, "Butler's Book," gives a graphic account of the Democratic conventions of 1860. He was a delegate from Massachusetts to the Charleston convention, which was predated over by Caleb Cushing. He says:

"Having become satisfied that there was danger of an attempt to sever the union of the States upon the slavery question, I sedulously devoted myself to an endeavor to keep the peace, and keep the Democratic party together, because I looked to that as the only source of safety to the Union. Upon the slavery question Mr. Douglas was the leader of that part of the convention which advocated the principle known as 'squatter sovereignty,' that is, the right of a people who settle in any part of the territory of the United States, to organize themselves under such laws precisely as they choose to enact, and then to be admitted into the Union without being subjected by Congress to any conditions or any provision as to freedom or slavery in their stead."

Gen. Butler did not fully endorse the "squatter sovereignty" idea. He believed that the time had come when another slave State could not enter the Union under any conditions. He also believed that Congress should retain power of admission over new States. The committee on resolutions of the Charleston convention consisted of thirty three members, of whom Gen. Butler was one. Sixteen of these favored the Douglas platform. Sixteen others were in favor of leaving the question of slavery as a State institution to be decided by the Supreme Court. Butler did not favor either. The decision of the "Dred Scott" case illustrated what the result would be should that court be made arbiter. It "satisfied neither party, and was derided by one and trampled upon by the other."

Here Butler endeavored to act the part of compromiser. He introduced a resolution, which was the exact platform of the Cincinnati National Democratic convention of 1859, and on which Buchanan was elected.

The result was that these reports were presented to the convention, one a Douglas platform, another anti-Douglas, and a third the Cincinnati platform pure and simple. Each of the sixteen members on both sides spoke in favor of their respective platforms, and finally the doughty general, got the floor to speak for his minority report of one. To his surprise he carried the convention, and with the exception of South Carolina his resolutions were adopted. This caused the Carolina delegation to secede, leaving the hall in body. The convention then adjourned for dinner, on reassembling balking began. Butler voted seven times for Douglas, and on the eighth ballot voted for Jefferson Davis, and continued to do so on 58 subsequent ballots when the convention resolved to adjourn, and meet again at Baltimore on June 18.

The "Squatter Sovereignty" platform came up again at Baltimore, then Caleb Cushing, who was presiding, vacated the chair and withdrew from the Convention. Several Southern delegates also withdrew; even Butler himself left. Finally Douglas got the nomination, and the seceders organized a Convention of their own.

"NO COMPROMISE."

Just before his departure for Chicago last night, the head of the "Liberal" party announced that, like the Spartan youth going to war, he would return with his shield or upon it. Of course this is not the exact language of the "hoax;" his time has been too much absorbed by the stricter commonplaces and more practical affairs of life to admit of reading up on the classics; but he gave expression to an idea conveying as much, only, in his case, it sounded a great deal more like sheer buncombe than the declaration of a determined and courageous man. "There would be no compromise accepted," he also said. Very well.

If we are not mistaken, similar language was used by the head of the other wing of the "Liberal" party, when he also was contemplating a political pilgrimage east. There must be no half loaf in the matter—it was worse than no bread, because involving a sacrifice of principle. And yet, as the sequel shows, he and his colleagues on that errand were very awfully glad to go in at the rear entrance of the convention when it was half over, take such seats as they could find, receive no other recognition than their half vote each, obtain no mention in the official record, and finally be ignored altogether by the National Committee, the little honor that was subsequently bestowed upon the gentleman particularly spoken of being the generous gift of his two successful opponents.

POWERS ANTICIPATES DEFEAT.

THE Tuscarora bogus Democrats left last night for Chicago. O. W. Powers, the leader of the "Liberal" alleged Republicans as well as the sham Democracy, made a farewell speech at the depot, immediately before the departure of the train. He came down from the lofty perch of exultation from which he had, up to date, enunciated windy prognostications of a Tuscarora victory at the national convention. Last night he spoke in a tone which indicated anticipated defeat. He uttered these ominous words:

"I do not promise you that we shall be victorious, but I do promise you that our colors shall not be trailed in the dust, and there will be no compromise."

It is too close to the contesting point now for the leader of the "Liberal" Republicans and Democrats to reiterate the promises of victory which he has heretofore held out to the Tuscarora wing of the compound party of which he is the chief. This was well enough when he sniffed the "smell of battle from afar." As the scene of conflict is approached, dependency takes the place of boasting. We believe and trust his forebodings are well-grounded.

LOST AND WON.

THE New York World took a pretty high flight during the Minneapolis convention, by having as its special correspondents Thomas C. Platt, of New York, and John C. New, of Indiana. The former was the leader of the Blaine forces and the latter headed the administration column. Mr. Platt telegraphed as late as Thursday that the nomination of Blaine was absolutely assured, while Mr. New announced that the President was actually safe and certain of re-nomination. The World now announces that, while it is greatly obliged to the New Yorker for his promptness, his lack of accuracy was such as would make his further employment by that paper out of the question; while the other it says that when he is ready to step out of consular affairs and partisan politics, he can take a steady job on the Gotham luminary. The defection of one and the exultation of the other over this outcome must be considerable, both men being party leaders and independently wealthy.

THE WIGWAM DISASTER.

THE tender, free of charge, to the Democratic party by Minneapolis of the grand hall in which the Republican convention was held, assuring at the same time accommodations for 100,000 guests, is magnanimous to a degree; yet, notwithstanding the undoubted good feelings and generosity which prompted the offer, it is not likely to be accepted or even thought of, for several reasons. One of these is, that such acceptance would emphasize yesterday's disaster at Chicago, an account of which appeared in the telegraphic columns of the NEWS. The great centipede, ninety feet high, which supports the canvas roof of the Wigwam, fell with a crash, and inflicted considerable injury, the event causing no little dismay, not because of what was but what it is feared may be done before the angry winds prevailing so extensively of late have subsided. Those at a distance and some not so far away will be inclined to regard it as a dangerous place to get into, the incident referred to giving it the appearance of having been hastily constructed and making it therefore correspondingly flimsy. An adjournment to Minneapolis or elsewhere would thus, of course, be a partial if not full admission of all this.

Again, the Democratic party would start into its Presidential campaign handicapped with a contretemps from the beginning, and the time of the press and orators, that should be spent upon the discussion of national issues, would be too much taken up extricating themselves from the web of ridicule which the Republicans would surely weave about their opponents because of the misfortune. Even in this light, it would not do at all.

Another consideration is the immense loss of money, labor and prestige which a removal of the convention would entail. The Wigwam is a temporary structure designed for this occasion only, and everything invested in it would be a dead loss; while the changes that would be required not only as to transportation for delegates, visitors and others, but otherwise, with the trouble involved would be considerably increased and aggravated by the very brief time in which it must all be done. This phase of the case alone, if there were no others, will be sufficient.

IMPROVING THE JERSEY COW.

PERHAPS many of our Utah agriculturists and cattle breeders may take an interest in the following circular:

"At a meeting of the board of directors of the American Jersey Cattle Club, held May 4, 1892, it was directed that fifty prizes of $25 each should be offered for acceptable essays on Jersey cattle. This competition is to be governed by the following rules:

"1. Subject, Jersey Cattle.—Anything pertaining to their history, value, usefulness, care, treatment, peculiarities of product, etc. It is desired that these essays shall cover as far as possible all the points on which present owners, intending buyers, persons who do not but who could profitably keep Jerseys, consumers of milk, butter, etc., would naturally desire information.

"2. Size.—No essay shall contain less than 600 nor more than 900 words.

"3. Time.—All essays must be submitted on or before September 1, 1892. They may be sent earlier, and the committee request as prompt attention as is practicable.

"4. Conditions.—All essays submitted are to be the property of the American Jersey Cattle Club, regardless of prizes. No essay will be awarded a prize unless it is considered by the committee to merit publication.

"5. Competitors.—Forty of the prizes are open to competition by men. Ten of the prizes are open to competition by women, and, in view of the great interest taken in Jersey cattle by women it is confidently expected that many will submit valuable essays.

"6. Awards.—Prizes will be awarded and paid within sixty days after contest closes.

"7. Committee.—Well-known gentlemen will act as judges in this competition.

"8. Suggestions to New Writers.—Write plainly and only on one side of the paper. Write simply, just as you would talk. Don't criticize or attack other breeds. There is more of value to be said about the Jersey than can be put in any one essay. Don't try to cover too many points, take one part of the subject and make it complete. If you wish to write more, put it in another essay. Competitors may submit as many essays as they choose.

"Should you desire circulars for your friends, they will be sent on application. "Address all communications on this subject to the American Jersey Cattle Club, No. 11 Broa way, New York, N. Y. Yours truly,

R. A. SIMLEY, President."

It appears that the club above referred to makes a special study of the Jersey, and is doing everything practicable to improve the breed, and to instruct the public on the proper care and treatment of that valuable little animal.

AN ILLOGICAL THEORY.

SOME men noted for learning and who are credited with being unusually intelligent, sometimes express ideas that are conspicuous for self-evident absurdity. It appears that Dr. Briggs, the noted non-conformist Presbyterian, who has created a great flutter of late among the clergy and ranks of that denomination, has been sitting himself illogically, by laying down an incongruous proposition. According to the dispatches, he gave, in the course of a lecture, delivered at Syracuse, N. Y., expression to the following:

"Let it be distinctly understood that there can be no unity without diversity. A great many people confound unity with uniformity and in attempting to force uniformity really create a division. Unity demands variety, and in uniformity there can be none, therefore no unity."

The first sentence amounts to stating that there cannot be similarity without distinction; no unity without a difference.

In reference to the latter sentence of the statement, the Doctor holds, on account of unity and uniformity being confounded—the difference between the two conditions is very slight—a division is created by an attempt to enforce uniformity. The absurdity of this idea is apparent. The fact that one party seeks to enforce uniformity shows that the division existed previous to the attempted enforcement. The effort to enforce is based on the existence of a division.

"Unity," says the Doctor, "demands variety." If he means that he can be united with his co-religionists while holding views which they repudiate, his idea of harmony may be unique, but they are not consistent.

Some of the views which this noted Presbyterian non-conformist entertains, and wherein he differs from the great body of his brethren, are, in our view, harmonious with revealed truth. This is especially the case in respect to his opinions in reference to opportunities for salvation in the future life. They are uniform with revealed truth enunciated in the Scriptures. According to the logic of his theory in regard to harmony of religious thought, however, if he held views opposed to scriptural doctrines, there could still exist a united condition between his conceptions of truth and the expressions of the Bible. His reasoning is decidedly tortuous. His own situation as a non-conformist is a flat contradiction of the theory he announced at Syracuse.

SEX IN EDUCATION.

RECENTLY the University of St. Andrews in Scotland opened its doors to women absolutely on the same conditions as to men. This step has been widely commented on, and for the most part favorably. An eminent scientist named Sir James Crichton Browne has, however, taken exception, and characterizes it as a downward or retrogressive movement of a disastrous nature. In a lecture recently before the London Medical Society he endeavored to show that women were physically unfitted to enter the lists in the higher walks of education. His main contention was that the female brain is lighter than that of the male, that its specific gravity is also less, and that in the male the blood supply is chiefly directed to the promotion of intellectual, volition and ideality, while in the female it is directed to the portions of the system concerned in the sensory functions.

A prominent medical man in this country promulgated a theory of a similar character a few years ago, and stated that if we were to have highly intellectual and university educated women, it would be at the expense of the physical and mental characteristics which are now esteemed woman's greatest charms.

PUBLIC TASTE IN LITERATURE.

THE St. Louis Public Library contained on July 1, 1891, about 80,000 volumes. The circulation for the year ending with the date mentioned showed a home issue of 122,000 volumes, and a library reading room issue of 78,000, making a total issue of nearly 200,000 volumes. Of the home issue nearly 53 per cent. of the volumes were fiction, and only 37 per cent. philosophy. The total number of philosophical works taken home for use was 694, and consulted in the library 791. These figures prove that St. Louis is not a city of philosophers. In theology it is not much better. Only 1 per cent. of the books taken home were theological, and of these consulted in the library about 2 per cent. were of the same class. History runs up to about 7 per cent., and juvenile literature about 25 per cent.

The statistics pertaining to the St. Louis public library will apply mostly to the average library in all American cities. Fiction is the chief mental food of the present time. Even of the books consulted in the library 18 per cent. were fiction, while only 14 per cent. were cyclopedias, magazines and books of reference. And yet with all this voracity for fiction St. Louis has not produced a novelist, except Mr. McCulloch of the Globe-Democrat. His letters about Utah can perhaps be classed as fiction.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

A GOOD way to acquire an idea of the steady growth of the United States is to take a retrospective glance at Presidential elections. The Electoral College this year consists of 444 votes. The Constitution provides that the number of Presidential electors from each State shall be equal to the number of Representatives and Senators from the State in Congress. Under the recent apportionment the aggregate number of Senators is 85, and Representatives 359, which will compose the next Congress, making a total of 444. In the political conventions of both the Democrat and Republican parties the usual basis of representation is two delegates for each elector. Though Territories are not represented in the Electoral College, yet they are in the conventions.

At the first election in 1789 the total electoral vote was 73. In 1792 it was 135, in 1796, 133, and the same in 1800. It kept on steadily increasing until 1834, when it numbered 401 votes, and the same in 1838. This year it has increased by 43. Six new States have been admitted since 1834, which, in addition to the increase in congressional districts, through the new apportionment, accounts for the augmentation. Benjamin Harrison in 1888 carried twenty States, with an electoral vote of 233. They were as follows: California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin. The vote for these states this year will aggregate about 249. Grover Cleveland carried 18 states with an electoral vote of 168. Fifteen of these are known as the solid south, while three others, Connecticut, New Jersey and West Virginia, are more or less doubtful. The popular vote for Cleveland aggregated 5,536,524, for Harrison 5,441,923, thus showing a majority of nearly 100,000 for the beaten candidate. This illustrates the anomaly of the electoral college.

The constitution provides that each state shall select its own electors in whatever way it chooses. The 12th amendment to the constitution provides for the method of casting this electoral vote. Electors have been chosen in the past in various ways, but latterly the system of electing by the vote of the people at large from each state has prevailed. Hence the popular majority in a State decides the issue, no matter how the Congressional districts may go. It is possible for a State to elect a Democratic Congressman next November out of a total of fourteen, and yet that State may have fourteen Republican electors in the next college.

An issue has just been decided before the Supreme Court of Michigan on the very point. The legislature of that State passed a law providing for the election of presidential electors by Congressional districts, and dividing the State into two districts for the Senatorial electors. The constitutionality of this law had been questioned by the chiefs of the Republican party, and they asked for a decision in the matter. That court affirmed the constitutionality of the law, according to a dispatch in last evening's News.

PRINCELY PRACTICE.

In the southern part of India is a State or division called Travancore, which is presided over by a maharajah, equivalent to a governor of one of our States, except that the former's power is not so restricted and he subjects himself to a custom which could never obtain here. This consists of being "weighed in the balances" (literally) every year, about the beginning of June, and his weight in gold is then distributed among his loyal subjects who have assembled about the palace gates. It is a fair presumption that there are not many absentees on such occasions, and that those who can't come are generally represented. This performance has recently been repeated and is chronicled as a success. Doubtless.

We can thus see how greatly it is to the people's interest to keep the sovereign in good condition throughout the year and in extra good order about weighing time—a state of things mutually beneficial.

POLITICAL STRAWS.

THE genuine Republicans will ratify the Presidential ticket nominated at Minneapolis, at the Theatre tonight. There is a suggestive feature connected with the announcement of the gathering. In the list of speakers who will address the meeting are the names of two gentlemen who have heretofore traipsed with the "Liberal" faction. If this fact signifies anything, it means that they have wisely concluded to conform to the inevitable—renounce local factionalism and join with the national party, represented in Utah by the "straights." The fact that such men as Secretary Selie and Mr. E. W. Tallack have come to this conclusion, signifies that numbers of others who have been holding aloof have reached the same determination. Let the good work go forward in its relation to both the great national parties.

ILLNESS OF PRESIDENT HATCH.

THE friends of President Abraham Hatch, of Heber City, Wasatch County, will regret to learn that, on last Sunday morning, he was seized with a dangerous illness. The Wasatch Wave states that the complaint resembled Asiatic cholera. The symptoms were nausea, accompanied by severe cramping of the back and limbs. The paper from which this information is gleaned is dated the 14th inst. On that day Brother Hatch was, although still confined to his room, recovering. The exciting cause of the attack is supposed to have been overwork. He had been overwhelmed with business of late, and had applied himself to it from early morning till late at night. We hope soon to hear of his regaining his usual health.

A VERY USEFUL WORK.

In the educational movement in politics now in progress throughout this Territory, we know of no more useful work than the little book recently issued from the press under the title of "The Practical Politician." It gives a succinct account of the foundation and principles of the great political parties of the country and fairly defines their differences. This is not done in a party spirit, but with a view to convey the very information that many new students in politics desire. Present issues and also past disputes between the parties are treated of. A list of the chief officers of the nation, from the beginning down to the present, forms a useful feature of the work. The manner of electing the President, Vice President, Senators and Representatives is clearly described. And the closing part of the book is devoted to a narration of the organization of parties in Utah, and a review of the local political situation. It is written in good style and the book is neatly bound. All the political clubs in the Territory should secure it, and our young people, particularly, will find it a profitable book to read. It is written by Mr. S. A. Kenner. We recommend it to everybody interested in the subjects of which it treats.

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

WHELEW REID, the Republican party candidate for vice-President, was born in Ohio in 1837. He graduated from the Miami University in 1856, and in that year made speeches in support of the new Republican party and its nominee for President, John C. Fremont. He began life as editor of the Xenia (O.) News, and in this capacity soon made himself felt. In 1860 he pronounced for Lincoln in preference to Chase for the Presidency. Lincoln during the campaign visited New York, and on his return west met Reid at Columbus, Ohio. Both proceeded to Xenia, where Reid introduced Lincoln to his townsmen, and ever since the former has been a prominent figure in Republican party politics. He wrote for several Ohio papers, and finally became city editor of the Cincinnati Gazette. At the breaking out of the war he went to the front as correspondent for that paper, and soon acquired a national celebrity.

Mr. Reid's success as war correspondent under the nom de plume of "Agate" brought him offers from other papers. The Gazette people learning of this gave him a proprietary interest in the paper, which became the foundation of his immense fortune. In 1862 he went to Washington and corresponded for the Gazette and also for the New York Tribune. Here he became acquainted with Horace Greeley and a warm friendship sprang up between them.

At the close of the war Mr. Reid engaged in cotton planting in Louisiana. In 1866 he published a work entitled "After the War." In 1868 he published another work entitled "Ohio in the War." This latter is accorded a high place in the literature of the civil war period. During the imprisonment of Andrew Johnson he was Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, and in this capacity added new laurels to his fame as a journalist and historian.

While in Washington this time Horace Greeley induced Mr. Reid to accept a position as editorial writer on the New York Tribune. From writer he soon became managing editor, succeeding John Russell Young in that place. In 1872 Horace Greeley died, and Mr. Reid then became chief editor and principal owner of the Tribune, which was at the time, perhaps, the best newspaper property on the Atlantic seaboard. He soon became classed as a millionaire in wealth.

In 1880 Mr. Reid was a Blaine supporter, but after Garfield became the nominee the latter was warmly supported by the Tribune. In 1884 Mr. Reid again espoused the cause of Blaine, and fought for him all through the campaign. In 1888 he supported Harrison, and had the satisfaction of seeing his political idol come out triumphant.

Mr. Reid never held any public office until appointed minister to France by President Harrison in March, 1889. He had been offered places by both Hayes and Garfield, but declined. It should be stated, however, that he was elected a regent of the University of New York in 1878, by the State legislature. As minister to France he succeeded in securing the admission of American pork into that country, from which it had been excluded for years.

In 1881 Mr. Reid married the daughter of D.O. Mills, the Californian millionaire. In 1888 he purchased the Villard mansion, on Madison avenue, New York, for $400,000, though its original cost was $1,000,000. He also has a magnificent country estate outside of New York city. He is well known as a society man, an after dinner orator, and a natural born politician. He acted for years as president of the Lotus club, of New York, a 400 organization of the most azure tint.

A CONCILIATORY POLICY THE BEST

The Republican ratification meeting held in the Theatre last night was large and enthusiastic. Its object, according to the statement of one of the speakers, was two-fold. The meeting was not only convened to ratify the Presidential ticket nominated by the Minneapolis Convention, but also to endorse and emphasize the action of the same body in its recognition of the division in this Territory on national party lines. The National Committee and the Convention have decided, by recognition, that the non-"Liberal" Republicans are the only members of the party in this Territory, and it was therefore fitting that this act should be ratified in connection with the enthusiastic endorsement of the selection of Benjamin Harrison and Whiteley Reid as candidates for the support of all good Republicans at the election in November.

The complexion of last night's meeting indicated strongly that many who have heretofore divided on mere local issues, will soon wheel into line with the national party. It is logically impossible to see how those of them who wish to be identified with Republicanism can do otherwise. By remaining disconnected with the national division's they simply maintain a position of self-alienation and repudiate an action taken by the representatives of the party at large, and they can have neither lot nor part with the great organization.

It appears that the factionalist delegation to Minneapolis was thoroughly convinced that this was the situation, while the convention was in progress. Reliable statements to that effect have already appeared in this journal. They have been of such a character and from such sources as to be beyond the reach of successful refutation. It has also appeared that the real Republican delegation met this recognition of the status in the only consistent disposition that could be exhibited—the spirit of conciliation. Steps were taken in the interests of peace, that the way might be opened for an understanding to be reached upon local differences, which have kept men apart who ought to operate in union.

We do not believe that any other course than that inaugurated by the regular Republican delegation to Minneapolis will be conducive to the rapid and healthy growth of the national political division—with reference to either of the two great parties. Political utterances of "regulars" with reference to factionists ought to be temperate and conciliatory. They should be free, as was almost entirely the case with the speakers of last night's gathering, from the spirit of coercion. Anything in the shape even of an implied threat at once arouses the antagonism of the persons against whom it may be directed, and the effect is to retard the amalgamation of party forces.

There is one feature of the proceedings in the Minneapolis convention which was significant. It ought to have due weight in this Territory. That body signified that the party as a whole is opposed to the existence of political distinctions on religious lines. The convention had an excellent opportunity to assert itself in that regard so far as the "Mormons" are concerned. The statements of the "Liberal" delegates were of such a character that one of the gentlemen belonging to the regular representation from Utah was, by the natural course of the proceedings, impelled to make the declaration that he was a "Mormon." That great body, representative of the Republican party, showed that it did not consider that the religious position of the gentleman was a matter that affected his political status. He was entitled to sit with the convention on his political merits. This fairness and justice ought to have weight with the class who have been agitating the old threadbare anti-"Mormon" question. Nationally it has no existence in either of the great parties. Local conditions must necessarily conform to the consistent disposition of the national political organizations. The growth in that direction will perhaps be gradual, but each progressive step of the parties as a whole necessarily gives it a fresh and irresistible impetus. Let the good work go on.

UTAH WEATHER AND CROPS.

MR. SALISBURY'S Utah weather and crop report for the week ending Monday, June 13th, 1892, says that the growth of corn, vegetables, grain and grass was seriously retarded by cool weather. There were slight frosts in exposed localities on the 4th and 5th which did not, however, cause any considerable damage. There was hail at several points on the 10th. Strawberries are ripening and other fruits doing well.

The following rainfall was reported for the week mentioned: Smithfield 87 inches, Farrington 30, Lake Park 30, Salt Lake 34, Soldier's Summit 14, Randolph a small shower, Provo 36, Mt. Pleasant light snow, Richfield a trace of snow and the same at Beaver.

At Levan the week was very changeable in temperature, varying from the freezing point up into the seventies. Still, grain is doing well, and irrigation is the order of the day. At Richfield the week has not been beneficial to vegetation. It was too hot, windy and dry. The first ripe strawberries of the season were in market during the week. At Beaver vegetables were much retarded by frosts, but grain and fruit are doing well. At Parowan tender vegetation was somewhat damaged on the fourth by frost, but on the whole the week offered fairly growing weather. At Paragonah on the ninth, frost slightly injured lucern and grain. There was hail on the tenth. At Farmington the week was rather cold for corn and vegetables. Lucern cutting began.

MISSIONARIES ASSAULTED IN CHINA

THE steamer "Gaelic" which arrived in San Francisco on the 11th inst. brought Hong Kong news up to May 18th, and Yokohama advices to May 28. The Shanghai papers contain details of outrages on Church of England missionaries in Fukien. In many parts of China an intense anti-foreign feeling prevails. Publications inflaming the people against missionaries and other foreign residents and travelers are being scattered broadcast. It is said that even the better classes are encouraging the crusade.

The San Francisco Chronicle reproduces the reports of the riots and outrages from the Chinese papers. On April 27th, the house occupied by the members of the Church of England mission in Chingho was attacked by a mob headed by a leading local military officer. The inmates, among whom were three ladies, were with difficulty rescued. The Emperor's proclamation guaranteeing protection, which was posted in front of the building, was torn down, the house wrecked, and loud yells of disgust given vent to because the inmates escaped alive.

A little mission hospital and dispensary in the city of Kienning was also attacked. The doctor in charge, a man named Egg, escaped almost miraculously. It is said that this riot was brought about by the foremost literary man of the place.

In other parts of China a regular boycott is practised towards foreigners.

Natives will not sell them food nor drink, nor can they obtain shelter of any kind. Where the foreigners succeed in obtaining shelter the natives do not dispossess them, but take the tiles off the roof, and leave the occupants exposed to the weather. The North China Daily News anticipates a general outbreak against foreigners all over the country.

UNFAIR TREATMENT OF OPPONENTS

WE have heretofore taken occasion to point out the unfair treatment accorded by some of the partisan journals of the Territory toward their political opponents. The excuse generally put forward in extenuation of this species of injustice is that "everything is fair in politics." Those who act upon such a contemptible motto are not likely to be straight in other respects. Honest treatment is two-fold in its operation—it is every man's duty to accord it and every man's right to receive it. This should be recognized in politics as in every other department of affairs.

The disingenuous partisan practice to which we refer consists principally in the misconstruction of the statements of an opponent, causing him to appear to have said what was evidently foreign to his intention. As an instance, attempts have been made to show that one of the Republican delegates to the Minneapolis convention cast reflections upon the "Mormon" community, so far as relates to their past history. Superficial people—especially those who have great faith in whatever appears in type—might be misled by such tortuous constructions. When they are examined, however, in the light of circumstances which called forth the expressions thus twisted from the intent of the gentleman who uttered them, their true character stands out conspicuously.

In fighting before the committees in seats in the convention, the "Liberal" factionists resorted to the old worn-out anti-"Mormon" tactics. They raked up the ashes of the dead past. They had piles of books containing sermons delivered in the early times of the settlement of this region. These were copiously quoted. But they had not the remotest reference to present conditions and issues. The expressions quoted belonged to the ancient history of the Territory, and had as much reference to the present status of Utah as the sayings of leading men of colonial times would have to the present condition of the American nation.

When the regular delegate from Utah obtained, on the floor of the convention, recognition from Chairman McKinley, he could not know that the same courtesy would not be also accorded to a delegate of the "Liberal" faction.

If the latter had been permitted to follow, it goes without saying that he would have rebashed the stale and stalemate stuff he had inflicted upon the committee. This being the case the regular delegate shaped his speech so as to break the force of the trash alluded to. The gentleman consequently spoke to the expectation that quotations would be read by his opponent from statements made in the long ago. He showed that the opposing delegates were "back numbers," and, referring to the fact of their resurrectoring old sermons, stated ironically that they were living in the past and uninformed on the conditions of the present. Incidentally he said that they did not know Brigham Young was dead. To claim that there was any intention on his part to cast a reflection upon the memory of that great man is an absurdity upon its face. Yet such an intimation has been made. A construction of that character is manifestly unjust.

'DEATH OF EMMONS BLAINE.

A DISPATCH received this afternoon states that Emmons Blaine, son of Ex-Secretary Blaine, died at Chicago today, from blood-poisoning, caused by an affection of the bowels. This distinguished family has, of late, met with a notable series of misfortunes. The heart of the nation will go out in sympathy to the distinguished statesman and his family on account of this new affliction.

SILVER PROSPECT.

THE prospect for silver seems brightening. For the week ending June 11, Bradstreet's has the following in relation to that metal:

"In the first half of the present week silver prices were firm to steady on a light demand, and in the last few days the market had a sharp advance, followed by an equally rapid reaction, attended by increased activity. The quotation for the bars rose from 88½c to 91c, per ounce, the London figures moving from 40½d. to 41½d., the reaction carrying the price to 90c, and 41¼d. respectively. Some fairly large foreign orders for silver were executed in this market, and the movement is explained as being due to heavy purchases of India exchange by banking concerns in London with East Indian connections. Speculation in bullion certificates was more active, the quotations following those for commercial bars. In London, bars sold on the 10th inst. for 41½d. and in New York for 89½ cents per ounce. Bullion certificates sold on the same date for 89½ cents.

USING THE BOGUS BISHOP WEST SERMON.

WE learned yesterday afternoon, over the wires, that Powers and his gang were using, for campaign purposes at Chicago, the notorious "Bishop West Red Hot Address." Accepting this as a fact, we are not now in a position to refute the doctrine of total depravity in special individual cases. We were not prepared for proof that even Powers was so lost to every principle of manhood and justice as to resort to such unmitigated villainy in order to attain an object. Yet we credited him with ability to stoop as low for that purpose as any man of whom we ever had any knowledge.

In resorting to this base subterfuge, the Tuscarora trickster relies upon the impracticability of his political opponents covering his slimy trail in endeavoring to break the force of the calumny he is spreading. He trusts to shortness of time to counteract the effect of his work, hoping thus to gain a point. Were it otherwise the "Bishop West" business would prove a boomerang that would rebound upon him and his motley crowd. The very means by which he is seeking to carry a point can be used to exhibit his own boundless rascality, and the perfidy of the leading workers of the clique with which he is connected.

The so-called "Bishop West Red Hot Address" was first published in the Salt Lake Tribune of March 15, 1884. It purported to have been delivered by a "Mormon" Bishop named West, in the little town of Juab, in the obscure portion of this Territory. This obscure hamlet was evidently selected as the scene of the delivery of the alleged sermon in order to prevent the too early discovery of the fraud, as it was intended that Governor Murray should take copies of the Tribune containing it east with him on a trip to Washington to secure anti-"Mormon" legislation by which he would have obtained the power to fill every office in the Territory by appointment.

The address recommended the assassination of those who opposed the "Mormon" community. One of the objects of the wrath of Bishop West was Governor or Eli H. Murray. The speaker told his audience that it was their duty to seize His Excellency, and tread him down until his bowels gushed out upon the streets, and that those who should succeed him should be similarly treated if they did not comport themselves properly toward the Saints.

This clumsy and diabolical forgery was quickly and easily exposed. There was not at the time, neither had their been for many years, any bishop in the "Mormon" Church named West. There was no meeting held at Juab on the day on which the Tribune said the address was delivered. No address of that kind was delivered at any time or place in the whole history of the community.

When the Salt Lake Tribune was confronted with the proofs of its perfidy, it said that it had been deceived by one of its friends who had supplied it with the manufactured report. On a subsequent occasion that paper used this language in reference to the scandalous forgery:

"The case of the 'Red Hot Address' has been cited, which was corrected as soon as the managers of this journal found they had been imposed upon."

This bogus sermon—evidently manufactured in the office of the Salt Lake Tribune—was circulated over the United States, and especially in the South, where numbers of missionaries were laboring. It so influenced the minds of the populace of Lewis Co., Tennessee, that in that part of the country an armed and masked mob broke into a house where a number of Elders were preparing to hold divine service and cruelly murdered four persons—two Elders from Utah (Brothers Gibbs and Berry)—and two young men who were residents of the locality. Mrs. Condon, wife of the proprietor of the house where the bloody tragedy occurred, was also shot and maimed for life.

It appears that the murder of four innocent men and the wounding and maiming for life of an unoffending woman was not enough villainy for this manufactured, fiendishly concocted "Red Hot Address" to produce. The forgery must be resurrected and do additional service for those who depend upon the re-usage of lies for purposes of attack and defense. Perfidious Powers knows that the Bishop West address was bogus, and its use at Chicago for campaign purposes shows that he is ambitious to fully duplicate in Utah the scandalous record he made in Michigan.

Some of the features of the Utah contest at Chicago seem to be a sort of parallel to incidents that occurred during the contest at Minneapolis. The editor of the paper which furnished to the world the vile concoction now known as the "Bogus Red Hot Address," with unblushing effrontery stated to a committee that if the "Mormons" had not been afraid to attack him he would have been killed because of his opposition to them. He knew when he made the slanderous statement that it was as false as the "Bishop West Address," which was manufactured to prejudice the nation against the "Mormon" people for political purposes. It would be the crowning act of injustice in his anti-"Mormon" career were he now to defend the present use by perfidious powers of the Tribune bogus sermon.

One would suppose that every "Liberal" having the slightest degree of self respect would withdraw forever from a party which has recourse to such infamous methods to accomplish its ends.

FLOWING WELLS IN UTAH.

BULLETIN 193, of the Eleventh Census, is devoted entirely to artesian wells for irrigation in the States and Territories forming the western half of the United States, including the Dakotas, Kansas, Nebraska and Texas. The total number of artesian wells in this area in June, 1890, was 5097. The average depth 210 feet, average cost per well $245, average discharge 54 gallons per minute; 50 per cent. used for irrigation, average area for each well 13 acres, total irrigated area 52,000 acres.

California comes first with 3210 wells, and Utah second with 2524. In this Territory small flowing wells are found in the lower part of Cache valley, in Cache county, and along the Malad Valley, in Box Elder county. Along the eastern shore of the Great Salt Lake, in the western and Weber County, in Davis County, along the southern shore of the Lake into Tooele County, and in the neighborhood of Grantsville large numbers of flowing wells exist. They are found also in the counties of Utah, Juab, Sevier, Sanpete, Millard and Salt Lake.

In most if not all these localities the tubing or casing of the well passes through alternations of clay, sand and gravel, the two last named layers being usually filled with water, which from the basin-like structures of the beds, is under pressure sufficient to bring it to or above the surface of the center of the valley. The well consists of a pipe from 1.25 to 4 inches in diameter forced down to the water-bearing strata, a distance of 100 to 150 feet. The lower end of the pipe is perforated for the purpose of admitting the water, which is usually clear, cool, palatable, and suited for domestic uses. It is found occasionally heavily impregnated with mineral, and in some cases salty. Comparatively few wells are used for irrigation in the broad sense, that is, for field crops, but a great majority of those not near houses or barns are in pastures or meadows occasionally used for pasturage.

Deep drilling, that is, beyond 400 or 500 feet, so far as has been ascertained, has been unsuccessful in obtaining fresh water. With increased depth the water is liable to be brackish or even heavily charged with saline matter. In some of the wells along the eastern shore of Salt Lake inflammable gas has been found, and a small amount of petroleum has been reported.

THE SITUATION IN CHICAGO.

AMID the clouds of uncertainty and speculation which the Associated Press causes us to see as prevailing in the neighborhood of the great Wigwam, there appears the form and outline of one tangible conclusion—President Cleveland will be the next candidate of his party. This is an outcome that now amounts to more than mere surmise or speculation; it is the natural result of the law of addition.

An article in yesterday's News showed that Mr. Cleveland, in addition to the guaranteed solid vote of Illinois, needed but that of Ohio (46) and Indiana (30), to bring him to the winning post; at this writing the former is assured, and indications strongly favor the latter doing likewise. But there are a number of other States from which the delegates are instructed, but with certain discretionary power; it is known that many of these, otherwise directed by their constituents, are for Cleveland; and when it becomes evident that he is to be the candidate these will undoubtedly avail themselves of their unwritten privileges by falling in with the procession, thus making the majority more nearly three-fourths than two-thirds.

The Vice-Presidential situation is unchanged, except that a new possibility in the person of Governor Peck, of Wisconsin, has appeared upon the scene.

SUNDAY PASTIME.

As a general proposition there is no fault to be found with the game of baseball, or any other athletic game per se. The only, or at least the principal, trouble is that such sports are sometimes permitted to encroach upon time which should be devoted to other objects, and this course followed upwards in the disregard of proper conditions, rightful times and appropriate places.

For two or three years past, the game of ball has been played in or near this city on the Sabbath day; the example has become contagious and has spread to other localities, the law in the case being completely set aside if even thought of. The first offense of the kind, we believe, was prosecuted and a light fine imposed, but it must have been a decidedly half-hearted proceeding for it has so far had but one practical effect—that spoken of above, of increasing and spreading the practice.

The spectacle of a public game of any kind is immoral in itself, and has a demoralizing effect, in that it lessens the respect for the day and gradually extinguishes it altogether, this applying not only to participants but spectators as well, and it draws away those who otherwise might engage in more commendable exercises or in proper rest. It is all wrong and ought to be stopped.

PEARY'S POLAR EXPEDITION.

The latest Polar expedition was that of Lieut. Robert E. Peary, which sailed on the steamer "Kite" from Brooklyn on the 6th of June last year. The novelty of the case was the presence of the lieutenant's wife, who constituted one of the party, she being the first white woman to undertake the perils and hardships of the Arctic latitudes. Besides her there were a full crew and the members of the North Greenland Exploring Expedition of the Academy of Sciences. These were all landed on the east shore of McCormick's bay, only some 700 miles from the Pole (it being latitude 77 deg. and 45 min.) on July 27 following. The lieutenant and his party all disembarked at this point and built themselves a house to live in, as a sort of nucleus for further movements, and the "Kite," bearing its crew and the Academy party, returned home, leaving the explorers with sixteen months the provisions and seven tons of coal, besides plenty of kerosene and alcohol.

There are generally two phases to an Arctic expedition, and this one was no exception to the rule; they consist of the expedition proper, followed within a more or less limited time by a relief expedition. The latter phase of the Peary exploit is to leave Philadelphia on Saturday next on the steamship "Mirand" for St. Johns, N. F., from which point the "Kite" will sail on July 22, bound for the point where the lieutenant was left.

An item of general interest concerning the party comes from Philadelphia, in a dispatch dated the 18th, and published in the New York World of the following day. It says that a man giving the name of S. B. Brandt had reached that city from New York a day or so before claiming to have recently arrived on the steamship "Grenada," which had just finished a trip to Greenland. Brandt said that thirty days ago the ship was ice-bound in the Arctic regions and while there smoke was discovered some distance away. The captain of the "Grenada" with one of his officers sledged to the point and upon returning said it was inhabited by Lieut. Peary and his party of explorers. All were well. Mrs. Peary had left for Denmark three months before on a whaling vessel. The naval pay officer says Brandt seemingly told a straightforward story and was thoroughly conversant with polar geography.

We suppose these "dashes for the Pole" will go on in the future as they have in the past, and, in the absence of some presently unknown agency of science or nature, or Providence, will result similarly—the objective point will not be reached and some if not all of those who undertake the task will fall by the way and be seen no more with mortal eyes.

DR. MAESER'S LECTURE.

My Brethren and Sisters:—As last evening, so to-night, I trust I shall have the assistance of your faith and prayers to guide me in my remarks.

First, grading: As already stated in a previous lecture, there are three (or more, as the circumstances of school may require) departments in the Sunday school, a primary, an intermediate and a theological. These departments consist of pupils arranged in the main according to some standard of classification. The process of finding out the proper place for each pupil, and arranging the whole work of the Sunday school in such a way as to enable the pupils to progress by a logical succession of studies to become familiar with the plan of salvation—is called grading. This part of the work corresponds with the design of the architect, the principles of a lawgiver, the plans of a statesman, and constitutes the master piece of teaching. The way the grading is done shows either a master-hand or a bungling man. It calls for the exercise of wisdom, discernment and experience on the part of the superintendent and his assistants, and should be undertaken only with the consultation of the respective teachers, for no one has a monopoly of truth. And every superintendent as well as principal of any school, or any vice-ruler, should always endeavor to avail himself of the best counsel and advice obtainable from every source. There is still another motive or reason why the superintendent should consult with his associates, i. e., no superintendent is immortal; he is not placed there forever; and his aim should be to train his associates to conduct and qualify them for the same work which he is now called upon to perform. Give them a chance to express their views, interchange ideas, so that at any time he should be called to another vocation or duty, or be temporarily absent, there will be found those in the school prepared to go right on in the same line understandingly and intelligently.

Second. This means also establishes a confidence and love in the superintendent by his co-workers for his wisdom and good judgment in recognizing their services. Anything favoring arbitrary or despotic rule always counteracts the best efforts made, though such disposition of authority may mean well.

If once started right one half of the success of the work is secured, but if serious mistakes are made in starting the whole work may be spoiled.

Third. Some superintendents have attempted to grade exclusively according to age, while some, disregarding all conditions of age, considered only mental attainments, and others again left it to the choice of the pupils. These modes of procedure having proved unsatisfactory, however, in many cases, some superintendents have given up bothering themselves any longer on this point and let things shape themselves as best they could. This last named course has led in many cases to a very deplorable state of confusion, dissatisfaction, insufficiency, and threatens the decay of the whole school.

The greatest care and good judgment should be used in grading, and a love for learning instead of a distaste should be cultivated. The geographical, social, intellectual, moral and spiritual conditions of our communities are subject to such varieties as make it impossible to formulate a universal standard of grading applicable to all schools; that is impossible. You cannot make a shoe to fit all feet, but a few suggestions may not come amiss, in order to guide our co-laborers in this all-important part of their work. It is suggested, therefore, that every new pupil, on entering, should be referred to the head teacher of the department to which his age would naturally assign him—to the primary about to the age of 10; to the intermediate to the age of 16 about, and older ones to the theological. But this may be subject to a great many modifications, especially between the ages of 10, 12 and 14 years. Their previous preparation may have advanced them to enter a higher department than their age would naturally suggest, or, on the other hand, their want of any kind of previous training may necessitate their being assigned to a lower grade.

The head teacher of the respective departments should find out of the new comers if they are capable of entering into one of the existing classes in his department. It is the head teacher of the respective departments—not the superintendents—business to find out the capabilities of the "new comers," whether they are able to enter this department or go to some other. One, two or three leading questions will suffice to form an idea of the ability of such pupils; this is left to the good judgment of the head teacher. The student should then be registered accordingly.

Here another important matter presents itself to my mind. There should always be a teacher at the door to welcome the students on Sunday morning, to give them a kindly welcome, a "good morning," a "How are you and the folks?" etc., so all who enter feel welcome and at home, not as is often the case with strangers entering Sunday school, left to themselves entirely—not recognized at all.

There are two kinds of children we have to deal with in Sunday school, i. e., one kind that grows up in an atmosphere of love, tenderness, where kind words, gentle and tender care and loving hands are always seen and heard. Their nature shows it by their sweet smile and ways. It is natural for such to captivate the teacher, ingratiate themselves into the good wishes and graces of all. But there is another class of children, and in their behalf I plead before you teachers and superintendents—I have seen them by the hundreds; this class are starving for love, for a kind word, a loving expression. The atmosphere in which they have grown up is cold, chilly—many times unpleasant. There is no one at home who gives them a kind word. These are like the flowers that grow up in the cellar, where the rays of sunlight never smile on them. No wonder they lack the sweet smile, gentle ways and bright countenances and heads of those who grew up under that paternal love of God's sunlight. These starving children are the ones that need our care, our love, our devotion. But too often it is the case we heap the love upon those who are "running over with it."

The moment we take charge of a class we are as messengers from our heavenly Father—as His representatives—and we have the mission of an angel to perform. If we see persons starving for food, we give them food. If they are destitute we give them clothing. Why not give that food of love and clothing of gentleness to those who need it? It is our mission. It is the children that need our kind attention even more than the subject.

In case of the necessity of a transfer to a higher or lower department the pupils should be referred to the superintendent, with the necessary recommendation. In case of pupils of more advanced age, but not prepared to enter a high department, special classes with work suitable to their comprehension should be organized. Whatever changes between pupils of classes in our department may be deemed advisable by the head teacher, should be made by him directly, but transfers from one department into another should not be made except upon the authority of the superintendent.

The head teachers and superintendents should meet a few moments before school convenes to perform any work, make necessary assignments on any work that will help improve the school and advance the pupils. This should be our aim and study. This is necessitated because the material we have to deal with is like a living humanity and intelligence, constantly changing. Like the clouds of heaven we look upon them now, and in five minutes they put on a different form—continually changing as they travel. So the young intelligences before us, they constantly need new ideas—ways of explanation, and different ways of dealing with them. Be prepared for every emergency.

In taking up a book, or reading, we should read one line, or to a stop—one sentence which expresses an idea—never pass on until every point is understood, then take up another sentence and explain everything, and so on, asking questions and drawing out the ideas from the minds of the pupils. They will then understand as they read, and will remember the ideas expressed in what they read.

The grading of the work itself throughout all the departments for either one term or for the whole school year should be sketched out by the superintendent and then discussed and adopted by the faculty of all the teachers before beginning of the work, so that every teacher understands the work required of him for at least the next three months. Every teacher should work to advance his department, as these several operations are but the parts of the great whole.

THE INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT.

This department constitutes generally the main body of the school, and is composed of the greatest variety of pupils, both in age as well as in capacity. These children are in a transition period and at a time of their life when animal spirits are overflowing without sufficient development of judgment to control them. Especially is this the case with the boys, while the girls at this stage of development are generally quicker in learning, and causing inexperienced teachers to become unjust by bestowing unjust praise on one side and blame on the other, when they should consider that they have to deal in such instances with a mere natural phenomenon. The personal influence of the teacher substituting many other contrivances for the maintenance of discipline is for these above stated reasons more essential in this department than anywhere else in the Sunday schools. The "Guide" has wisely recommended a division of this department into Nos. 1 and 2, the first one of which might be called with great propriety a preparatory department, as it is designed to prepare for the work in No. 2.

There should be no break in the gradation of the work from the primary department into this one, although a different set of teachers is now in charge. The separate class work constitutes here the main feature of the programme, as we have to deal with rapidly-developing individualities that need our ever watchful guidance. Hence the organization of large classes must be avoided now, and about ten should be the greatest number of pupils in one class in order to give the teacher a chance to bestow close attention to every individual student.

Although, as in the Primary department, oral teaching should be the prominent feature, there is to be introduced now occasionally the reading of passages, paragraphs and verses. Whenever resorted to, however, care must be taken that no more than one sentence be read at a time. Every sentence expresses an idea, which should be brought out by questions either from one of the pupils or from the teacher, that the spirit of legitimate inquiry be cultivated. There are two kinds of spirits causing to ask questions; one is the spirit of inquiry, seeking after truth, illustrated by the people coming to the apostles and asking, "Ye men and brethren, what shall we do to be saved?" That spirit is the one to be encouraged and cultivated. The other is the spirit of inquisitiveness, shown by the Pharisees asking Christ if it was right to pay taxes to Caesar; that spirit must be rebuked whenever it makes its appearance.

Whenever incidents from sacred, profane, or natural history are introduced in Sunday school, it should always be for the purpose of illustrating some principle of Divine truth. The mere knowledge of events, facts, names, or dates, without some application, is of no value whatever.

Text Books.—While it is not designed that the pupils of the primary department should use any text books, except the little picture charts, as auxiliaries to the large charts in front of the whole class, the pupils of the intermediate department No. 1, or preparatory department can use the little works of the Bible Stories, Book of Mormon Stories, Faith Promoting Series, and selections from the historical parts of the New Testament, Sunday school Leaflets, Doctrine and Covenants, Voice of Warning and the Story of the Book of Mormon to great advantage, with the proviso that they are read here in the manner above alluded to, and that only one subject at each recitation is taken through, reviewed, repeated in the pupils' own language, and the moral illustrated by it thoroughly impressed upon the mind of the children. Partial use of the Leaflets in this department illustrated.

Intermediate Department, No. 2.—This section of the intermediate grade should constitute the real intermediate department and comprise the finishing course in Sunday school work for the children of school age. It should, therefore, be the design of the superintendent and of his associates to furnish the pupils in this department the opportunity of obtaining not only a thorough theoretical knowledge of the history, principles and ordinances of the Gospel, but also, and that is the more important part, a living and practical testimony of its truth. From here the greater portion of the pupils enter into the practical duties, of vicissitudes and responsibilities of life, which, in order to meet them, require a substantial preparation. The examination of pupils for their qualification to enter here should be as thorough as practicable, in order to raise gradually the standard of the whole department. Only well qualified teachers should be selected for the work to be performed here, and the studies not only selected with great care but also arranged and graded corresponding to the standard of the department.

Children should be drilled in hunting chapters and verses in the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants and other Church works by the teacher. Asking, for instance, the students to find the 15th chapter of St. Mark—"Where is it? Who has it?" The 24th chapter of Matthew—"Where is it to be found? Who has it?" etc. This will cultivate a habit of close observation, and ability in hunting passages and telling where they are to be found.

It would not be expedient in most communities to lay out plans for the whole year in this department, inasmuch as, especially in Sunday schools in the country, many pupils are prevented from attending all the year round. A course for one term should be made as complete, therefore, as possible.

There should be a Bible class in this department for the purpose of training the pupils in finding passages and becoming acquainted with the general outline or arrangement of the Bible, and of the Book of Mormon, with some instruction on Bible and Book of Mormon geography, with references to maps. (Here the speaker illustrated the way to conduct the several classes on leaflets, treating the ordinances of the Gospel and the orders of the Priesthood, classes in the Compendium and Church works, etc.) Each recitation in each of these classes should close with the bearing of testimony by one of the pupils. The subject for next Sunday's recitation should always be given at the close and pupils be encouraged to prepare and ask questions on the given subjects. Prolonged questioning is not as to be encouraged. The head teacher of this department had better have no class to teach, but keep going around among all the classes of his department. The temptation of falling into speculative theories is already making its appearance more or less among pupils and teachers in this department, and must be guarded against with much watchfulness on the part of the head teacher.

The subject of Dr. Maaser's lecture last evening was "The Theological Department," and the speaker said:

I trust, my brethren and sisters, that as on the former occasions, so I will tonight have the benefit of your faith and prayers, for your sake as well as my own, that what is spoken may meet the approbation of our Heavenly Father, and that what is received may be strengthened by the Spirit of the living God.

The subject for this coming evening is the Theological Department. This department generally comprises two classes: one for members of the Priesthood and one for ladies; it is in reality normal classes for religious workers in Sunday schools and the various orders of the Gospel. I wish to forcibly impress upon the minds of my hearers the fact that the theological classes are intended to be normal classes, for religious instruction in the various features of the Gospel: Sunday schools, primaries, mutual improvement associations, religious classes, missionaries at home and abroad in all branches of the ministry. This broad conception has not been understood by many of our theological classes which have been engaged thus far in more theoretical dissertations, expoundings and discussion of principles, doctrines, and scripture.

A normal course implies not only theoretical but also practical training. The former, as already stated, has received a partial recognition, but the latter has scarcely been thought of. Many of our lady theological classes have never looked upon their classes as a normal theological class, but rather as an advanced class of the intermediate department, while the truth is the ladies should fix their minds upon this point as well as the brethren, in order to prepare themselves for their portion of the ministry. Are not these sisters expected to labor in the Primary, Y. L. M. I. A., as teachers in the Sunday schools, as instructors in our religion classes? Of course; and all this work requires preparation in a certain amount of normal training until this whole people become a people of teachers and trainers, which will be but the beginning of making us what we ought to be—the wisest, the best, the purest people on the face of the earth. We have but commenced. It makes no difference how high the mountain top we have to climb—no difference how close to the foot of that mountain we may now be; we have got to climb to that mountain top step by step, rising altitude after altitude, until this people come up to the summit, where they may all commune with Jehovah as Moses did. There was a time when Moses mournfully exclaimed, "Would to God that all Israel were prophet;" but that same Israel remained at the foot of the mountain and were stricken with fear and fled when God's majesty revealed itself to Moses. But the day has now come when we have got to rise upon the mountain height to commune with our Father in Heaven, and we have to teach these things to our young.

The "Guide" furnishes us a suggestive outline of some theoretical work before a theological class, to which I may be permitted to add some additional suggestions, as follows:

After about half an hour has been spent in the course suggested in the "Guide," each of the two named classes of this department should take up the consideration of the work of some of the above named branches of the latter day work and have some one previously appointed for the purpose make some opening remarks on the subject, followed by questions and additional remarks by members of the class. Person should be appointed from the class to speak on a given subject for the following Sunday. After he has finished speaking, bringing to bear all references from Church and historical data, and fully explaining the meaning and bearing of each quotation on the subject, then questions should be asked, as some perhaps may have different ideas and suggestions to offer. These questions and remarks should come under "additional remarks" heading. But we have here to be very careful, extremely careful, that there should be no debating; because God's Holy Spirit is never in such proceedings.

It should be understood by every one entering the class as a member that he is expected to respond willingly to any call made upon him by the superintendent of the Sunday school to act as substitute for an absent teacher. I wish to illustrate this by an incident. In my visits to a certain Sunday school I found six teachers absent and the classes left to take care of themselves. I asked the superintendent if there was a theological class. "Oh, yes, we have a beautiful class—they are doing fine, they are doing a fine work." "Why don't you call on some of the members of that class as teachers? The children are playing and some are doing nothing. One of the most dangerous things a child can do is 'nothing.' This must be guarded against." "Well, Brother Maaser," said the superintendent, "they won't leave their theological class—they are so interested they won't come for me, for love or money." Said I, "Would you give me permission to go and speak my mind to them?" "Oh, certainly, that is what we expect of you." I went, listened to the very interesting exercise—questions and answers and points upon the "Sermon on the Mount." The teacher was well informed and handled the subject in an excellent manner. The class numbered about fifty young men and women. After he got through the exercise the teacher asked me to speak upon the subject in hand. "Thank you," I said, "but you will pardon me—I would like to say something else." So I said: "My brethren and sisters of the theological class—I have listened with interest to the exercise this morning. But I come here to show you some principles which you seem to be neglecting. Thus far you have fulfilled not yet one-half of the object you came here for. Here you are sitting Sunday after Sunday, being instructed—what for? Preparing yourselves for active work in the Kingdom of God—for any calling made upon you? But your superintendent tells me that you will not respond to his request to teach the children who are without teachers. "I don't care," I said, "how much of the Gospel you learn, if you fail to respond to the call of your teacher your learning is a failure. As long as you are unwilling to respond to those in authority, I care not how much learning you may have on the theory of the Kingdom of God, it will not weigh much before the Lord. You have not learned the first letter of the alphabet of the Kingdom of God—obedience to the call of the servants of God. Let us be faithful in small things first and we may be worthy to respond to greater things. If the superintendent needs a teacher, you should consider yourselves honored with the privilege of responding. Always manifest your willingness to respond. You will be the gainers by so doing. You will gain the confidence of the children and be strengthened in the Gospel.

This will illustrate the mission of the Theological Class.

If now comes one into the class, let it be understood that they are willing to respond to any call made upon them by the superintendent. This is what they are there for. All should enter that class with the spirit to do good—to labor when they may be wanted. If this were the case, we would not hear of so many sad cases, so many branches and associations dying out; we would see more young men in Sunday school. Members of this class should take turns in visiting the different classes in school, also other schools, to become acquainted with the workings of the same, and if called upon they will then be efficient to respond. Each member should make it a point to take a practical interest in all the various theological organizations of our Church and obtain a thorough knowledge of their operations, in order to qualify himself to become a practical worker, which is one of the objects and aims of a theological class in our Sunday schools.

Our Sunday schools have been established by divine inspiration, by the word of God. It is a sacred, it is a holy work. It may be somewhat inefficient, and may be compared with the small ditch made to receive the water from the mountains, as it runs; it is distributed in the garden until it reaches every tree and shrub in the garden. But sometimes a heavy flood comes, and these ditches are too small to contain the water, and it comes rushing along, overflowing the ditches and destruction sweeps along with it. Therefore greater precautions have to be made to forestall such a calamity. This is coming upon us now. There was a time when our Sunday schools were sufficient, and they would be now if parents would have given their support to them, if teachers had been prompt and obedient, and at their posts. But today we are under different circumstances. There is a flood of infidelity, of evil influence, crowding upon us, bearing heavily upon the youth from every side. It is a mighty flood, and the Sunday schools alone can not avert the dreadful results that may follow. From Monday morning to Friday night, thirty hours in the week, these children are in a dangerous influence, in many instances one that is opposed to our faith. The teachers may be efficient, and with the respect of their pupils—their word is law; and all the time they are devoting to Sunday school is from three quarters to one hour one day in the week, where the children receive special training. It is not sufficient to counterbalance the other influence working against the progress of the Kingdom of God; hence, religion classes, young men's mutual improvement associations, primaries, etc., have been established throughout Zion. But it is the Sunday schools that we look to as the central point—the focus—of all this great work. It is from the Sunday schools from which ramify the different workers of the Church. It is here we train the officers for the Y. M. M. I. A. primaries, relief societies and religious classes. The Sunday schools are established in every Bishop's ward and are doing a noble work. God bless the Sunday schools; and in them we should train and drill the young for the various departments of the priesthood.

Another important feature in the programme of proceedings is a drill in the handling of the various text books and charts throughout all the departments of a Sunday school. One member of the class, appointed by successive rotation, should be appointed for each Sunday, to give about a ten minute exercise or explanation on one of the text books. We must give opportunity to the members of the Theological class to become trained in all the duties of the superintendent, so that at a moment's notice any of their number could take charge of the school and go on with it. Let the members of this class take charge of a class, and then listen and make suggestions, and in a little while all who are interested may become teachers, for teachers we need badly now; and in the class persons appointed to speak should be thorough, and all points well considered. Questions should be encouraged. A quarter of an hour, perhaps, alternating with the preceding suggestion, may be profitably spent in disposing of at least one of the questions on theological subjects handed in by members approved of and assigned by the committee to some other member to answer.

The Faith-promoting series are splendid to read.

Wild speculation theories and deep questions not understood should be discouraged; but legitimate questions that will do good should be encouraged. There is plenty to learn without going into subjects on which we have but little light and which, if understood, would do us but little good. We should never soar away in the clouds upon speculation, but always sail close to shore where we know we are safe and have a sound bottom to rest upon. Leave philosophizing alone.

In the consideration of questions that may be asked, a committee should be appointed to consider them, and allow only those to be taken that are proper. Where questions arise which the class cannot answer, the teacher should at once say: "Brethren and sisters, let us put this aside; drop it here; don't argue upon it, etc." Debating does but little good and "a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still."

The most important work in our Sunday schools is perhaps the "Compendium;" for it is a collection of all subjects contained in all the Church work. It should be used as a text book, a work of reference; from its adoption a great amount of good may be obtained. Lectures can be given up very well and give all a chance to express his or her mind. Quoting passages without an application is of little value; it must have an application to be of value; and the application given by the speaker may cause inquiry in the minds of others, and shortly all will become interested and desire to speak. This is the principle upon which a theological class should be conducted.

My brethren and sisters, it is somewhat with trepidation that I arise before you this evening to speak on the subject assigned me, inasmuch as the nature of these subjects will compel me to come down to specific points, referring to individual courses and labors; and some of us, among whom I am one of the foremost, will have to take this right home to ourselves.

The first subject is: "The Officers of a Sunday School." All the officers of a Sunday school constitute a faculty, that is, a homogeneous body of instructors combined for a common purpose and agreed upon the pursuits of certain methods to attain those ends. Although each one has his separate work to do, they all must keep elbow feeling, as it were, with one another—like the members of an orchestra each playing a different instrument, but each must keep time and key with the rest. Somewhat similar it is with the members constituting either the faculty of a Sunday or a day school. None of them can afford to strike out for himself regardless of the nature, work and methods of his co-laborers in the other classes. Now, as in a choir or orchestra, it becomes necessary for some one to give the keynote, or beat time, so it is necessary for such a faculty of teachers conducting a Sunday school to have some one lead out—give the keynote; that person is the superintendent. He occupies the most important position in the whole school, and the old proverb is to some extent applicable to this case, i.e., that "a herd of lions commanded by a lamb is easier to be beaten than a body of lambs commanded by a lion." This means a body of lambs commanded by a lion will be more successful than a body of lions commanded by a lamb. So it is with the Sunday school. Give me a body of inefficient teachers, but directed and presided over by a very efficient superintendent, and in nine cases out of ten that Sunday school will be a success. But place in a Sunday school a number of very efficient teachers, presided over and conducted by a superintendent who does not understand or perform his work efficiently, and there is great danger that that Sunday school will go down. Hence the duties and characteristics of a superintendent, and the nature of his work must be thoroughly understood, by him at least. He is to find out and select teachers in consultation with the Bishopric. Many superintendents are satisfied with any volunteer, but it is his privilege, his duty, it is a portion of his mission, to look around in his ward for the very best material that can be found, and labor with those selected, to persuade them, influence them by prayer, by faith, and by all legitimate means and induce them to come and be active and energetic. A good superintendent will exercise such a magnetic influence, as it were, in his Sunday school that will reach far beyond the walls of the building where the school is held; it is felt far beyond the day the school assembles. It is felt throughout the whole ward. It places him in communion with the best material—the most desirable one—within reach, and by the cultivation of the Spirit of the Lord influences them to come to school and assist him in that God-blessed and divine work. He is to study the interests of the school in regard to influence, finances and efficiency. The interest of the school with him must be foremost. In all his other work there is no holier and nobler work than the training of the young and rising generation—even the missionary who goes to the nations of the earth for two or three years and possibly succeeds in bringing a few to the knowledge of the truth; still, the labor in a Sunday school are far beyond, in their results, that of such a missionary. Therefore the general efficiency and development of the school should be centered upon the mind of the superintendent. Also the financial condition. All these matters should be familiar to him.

These are but a few of the duties and opportunities the superintendent has to do and perform. The Spirit of the Lord will suggest many means and ways for the good of the school. But above all things there must be before him constantly written in his mind's eye, in letters of gold, that great and important principle of all teaching, that "we can never give what we ourselves do not possess." He must keep this maxim before him. Whatever he desires his teacher to do, and to be, whatever he desires his pupils to do and become he himself must set the example. He must be reliable in all things; he must be at his post. He is the captain of the ship. He may not attend to all the detail work himself, for he is not a wise ruler that divides and splits up his energies and wastes them in the exercise of detail work; but he gives directions, has a guiding hand over all the school. This is his duty; it is the duty of his appointees to do the detail work. He calls into regulation all associated with him. He must be punctual, for he is a poor leader who suffers others to walk before him. He should be the first at the school house (excepting perhaps the janitor), see that all things are in readiness by the proper time, and if possible he should be the last one to leave the room. He should be left free to perform his duty and not called to other duties away from the school. There is no other work nearly so important as this, and he should never neglect it. He should set an example for his scholars to follow, for this is the great lever that moves the hearts of the children. He should plan out courses for a term or more, and all classes should work to it; and as he gets more experience he may lay plans for the future of the school. He must be thoroughly familiar with the school in all its ramifications. It is not the place of the superintendent to go and build fires, carry coal, etc., when others are around; he has enough to do in directing the whole school. It is a mistake to do these things. A leader teaches others how to do things right. He should cultivate the spirit of public responsibility and public duty. He should call boys to act as deacons, to do all little errands and have them where he can put his hands on them at a moment's notice. Where the superintendent does all the little work in the Sunday school there is not order. Some one is not doing his duty. Some one does not understand his duty. Where there is confusion in the school, somebody is neglecting his duty. And all should be taught their duty and fulfill it. The deacons should keep order. If any one whispers in the room or makes a noise, it is the duty of that deacon to go to such person and ask him to be still. It is his duty; he is acting within the province of his calling; he is acting in the range of his Priesthood. He should understand public responsibility. The superintendent should also divide his work among his assistants. If the superintendent is busy, one of the assistants should take up the labor of general supervision and go on with it in the meantime; for whatever I have said of the duties of the superintendent also applies to the assistant superintendents. They must be at their post ready to do as the superintendent may wish. If any teacher or officer is absent a legitimate excuse in writing should be requested, to take the place of their presence.

The superintendent should always have a kind word, an encouraging look for his teachers and scholars, for they are extremely sensitive. They should visit the classes and exhort all to be diligent, suggest ideas and encourage the children. They should tell the children how glad they are to see them at school, how well they have recited their lesson, or read, or how well they spoke, etc. "Now, sister or brother, you have done splendidly; I was delighted with the way you conducted that exercise or the way you spoke or read, or what it may be. That person will do better next time." Everyone likes a little encouragement, a kind word, a gentle smile, a "know that's right," "you are doing well," and so on. This is the duty of the superintendent and assistants.

The "Guide" furnishes excellent suggestions regarding the duties of this officer, and to those instructions I simply wish to add. In reading minutes, only about three out of ten persons read them as they should be. There is no need to be too loud; good reading lies not alone in the strength of the voice, but rather in the execution of distinct consonants rather than the vowels. Many, in reading, seem to pronounce all vowels. A secretary should read steadily aloud, speaking every syllable distinctly and clearly, the prefixes as well as the affixes, the last syllable as well as the first.

Again, the secretary should always attach his signature to the recorded minutes. Never neglect this, because in time to come we may want to know who is responsible for the things contained in those minutes.

The librarians of today are doing excellent work. They should classify their books, keep them in proper order, have little boys and girls to distribute them to the different classes and return them to the librarian. He should study his duty, keep posted in regard to the books needed and suggest to the superintendent any needs in his department. He should be able to give any information concerning library matters. At the teachers' meeting he should always make a report of the condition and needs of his department.

Our singing in the Sunday school is one of the most pleasing features. We have leaders, generally, today, who take a pride in their work, and sing among the schools is progressing finely. I do not feel competent to criticize in this department.

The head teachers hold the key to their department, and should study and be thoroughly posted in regard to all going on in the class. He should suggest this change or that addition, "This girl is capable of entering a higher department; or that boy is not capable of remaining in this class, etc." In making corrections of the other teachers, he should always do it privately, never before the pupils. He should have brief meetings with his fellow teachers to talk over the needs of his department.

There are three characteristics which every religious instructor should possess, and in the proportion as he lacks in any one, two or more of these, his efficiency is impaired. First he must have a knowledge of the subject which he is to deal with. Not alone the bare subject, but a great many others which have a bearing and which may arise. His range of vision must reach farther than the one he is presenting. He must be like the man selling apples—have a large assortment from which to select; then he will have something for all the students. The second characteristic is sincerity. Sincerity comes from the heart. Fine rhetoric, choice words, beautiful figures of speech and oily language cannot be a substitute for sincerity. It must have the true, genuine ring of the metal in it; and no one understands it quicker and has a keener sense of sincerity than innocent little children. Instinctively they feel that that kind word either comes from the heart, or from the lips merely. There is something tells them if it is not genuine. The genuine teacher speaks to the heart and never misses the responsive chord. He always brings the hammer down fairly on the nail—it is the heart that speaks. There is a law that every kind of spirit hegets only its own kind, speaks only to its kind. If you were to go in the shop of an instrument maker, there might be many kinds of instruments hanging on the wall and around in the room; you strike a note, say of a violin; there may be ever so many other instruments ready to receive a touch, but the responsive chord comes only from the violin and reverberates the sound of that instrument, while the rest of the instruments are perfectly silent. This is a physical law, and it is the same in the spiritual world. If you are sincere in what you say to those beautiful intelligences before you, you will strike a responsive chord in their hearts and it will reverberate the sound to the enlivening to action. Their innocent and pure vibrations will respond to the sincerity of your immortal soul.

The example of a religious teacher should be consistent and always on the increase for good. He cannot get up an example for the occasion. It must be every day in the week, month, year. He cannot put on a sanctimonious face and speak with an oily tongue today, and tomorrow commit some deed unworthy of a teacher. His example should bear out every word he speaks—it is far reaching in its results. It may be impressed upon the little mind for eternity; therefore, it should be the best and noblest possible to set before the young.

It is a glorious purpose the Sunday school missionaries have undertaken. They go forth among the Sunday schools, carrying the experience they gain from time to time and give other schools the benefit of it. They go as teachers, offering suggestions, giving encouragement and teaching principles. They should not be too exact and lay the "plummet to the line." Their momentum sometimes carries them beyond the bounds of good judgment and wisdom, but it is for the want of experience. They should always be faithful to their appointments. If they accept of an appointment they should do it with their power to fulfill it. Everything else must bend to it. Disappointment must be out of the question. Never disappoint children; always do as you agree with them. Gain their confidence as missionaries; and when they hear of a missionary coming to visit their schools they have such confidence. Don't break this confidence, but strengthen it. This is the kind of man a missionary should be—true to his promise. When they go in a Sunday school they should walk right up to the stand and report themselves as missionaries, find out all they can about the school and give encouragement. Never find fault.

The Teachers' meetings are a very important feature of the schools. They should be held regularly whether weekly, semi-weekly or monthly, as the circumstances of the school may demand. At these meetings a strict roll call should be had and any absent teacher should have his written excuse. There should always be three reports expected from every teacher at such meetings and I have classified them under three "B's."

First—I would expect a report on the Statistics of the class, how many present, how many absent, how many newcomers and how many left school.

Second—The Studies pursued, the plan laid out, how it is working, whether too hard or too easy, whether more or less can be given; any suggestions regarding text books or the way of using them, whether you would recommend a change of books or not, etc.

Third—Students—how they deport themselves, whether refractory, whether any are capable of going into higher grades or deposed to lower.

Concerning these three items every teacher should report. Also any other business for the good of the school.

All officers—secretary, librarian, treasurer—all should make reports of the condition of their respective departments. Each officer should be made to feel the responsibility of his position, for on it depends to some extent the progress of the school. This every worker should have in view.

I have seen some Stake superintendents consider themselves like registration officers, keeping statistics, records and reports. True, this is a very important part of their work, but the smaller part by half. It can not be neglected. The giving and keeping of correct statistics is very important and every school should do it, so general reports may be made up at the end of each year from which to compare the progress with previous years.

The superintendent of the Stake should continually keep in rapport with the Sunday schools throughout the Stake either by personal consultations, visits, or correspondence, by calling Stake conferences reviews and jubilees; but the most important of the duties of the Stake Superintendency is the appointment, training and instruction of the Sunday school missionaries, who are their representatives to the schools. The Superintendency of the Stake cannot visit every school as often as would be desirable, and these missionaries should be trained for that purpose. They should give these missionaries instructions and say: "Brethren, you are expected to lay this or that matter before the schools you visit, until we meet again to give reports," and by any other suggestion the Spirit of the Lord may suggest. All things should be done in our Sunday schools by love, kindness and common consent.

There should be no force, no compulsion. It should be done by the power of love and light that shines from the presence of God, and we should reflect that light upon the schools we visit, and make its influence felt, as does the full moon at night reflect the light of the glorious sun upon the earth. So must be that love that we show and reflect—it should be the reflex of our Eternal Father. This is the kind of love we should bring with us to the children of the Sunday schools, and then God will accept our labors and multiply them to the good of the young and rising generation. That we may do this and have our influence felt from one Sunday to another, until we learn to thank God and praise His holy name that He has found us worthy to be counted as laborers in His vineyard, is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

It was announced that as Dr. Macer's lectures contain so many excellent instructions, the regular Stake Sunday School Union would be postponed for one month.

The Doctor said: Again tonight, my brethren and sisters, I earnestly solicit an interest in your faith and prayers to guide me in my remarks, for the subject assigned me this evening to speak on constitutes the main feature of all the Sunday school work, the whole basis upon which it is grounded, the focus around which it works, the ground plan according to which the work is to be conducted. I therefore desire the assistance of the Spirit of the living God, even more than on any previous evening during this course of lectures, that I may say no superfluous word, or advance one wrong idea, or express myself in any way undecided or vague.

A normal training means a training of a long time—many days, weeks, months, even years—of hard and incessant labor. It is even impossible to speak upon it in its fulness in the lectures of this week, but I have merely sketched out some of the leading items and features of the work to aid my fellow laborers in their noble work and added to these suggestions the Spirit of the Lord, day in and day out, month after month and from year to year in this sacred work, and you will do a mighty work.

A Sunday school is a very complex organization, its constituent parts differing in sex, age, disposition, intellectuality, habits and a variety of other influences, all of which have to be directed, harmonized and controlled by a general system of procedure that at the same time studies the necessity of cultivating the sound development of the individuality of the pupils. In order to accomplish this in some measure various considerations have to be kept in view by the superintendent and his associates.

1. Conditions: There are localities where Sunday schools are the best patronized in summer on account of their scattered condition, making it extremely difficult for many children to come to Sunday school in winter, while others have their best season in winter, their children being scattered in summer time in the mountains and on ranches, which circumstance must be taken cognizance of by the superintendent, and his plans be shaped accordingly for the advantage of the greatest number, not neglecting, however, the duties toward those pupils that are more favorably situated.

2. The material on hand in the shape of rooms, furniture and utensils, maps, books and charts constitute a very important factor in his planning out the work for the year. If several large and commodious apartments are at the disposal of the superintendent, the labors of the Sunday school are materially facilitated in regard to the various classifications; but where the rooms are few and inadequate to accommodate the children, the problem for the superintendent to solve becomes a correspondingly difficult one.

Where these accommodations of large rooms, good libraries, proper furniture, etc., are wanting, it takes considerable study and contrivance for the superintendent to plan out the best course. And especially is this the case in many of our country schools, where the room, perhaps, is small, the children crowded together and there are many obstacles to work against. In such cases, if the superintendent does not have good judgment and make the most of every available material within his reach, that school is very apt to taper out. The children will get weary, the teachers discouraged. The school has but little attraction, and there is a falling off.

Furniture also plays an important part in the matter of discipline. Little children in some of our schools have to sit on high benches, their feet hanging down and their little legs soon get tired and they get weary. There are no rests for their backs, and many teachers and superintendents commence scolding these poor little children for not keeping quiet when it is almost impossible under such unfavorable circumstances. Instead of being scolded, they should rather draw out our sympathy towards them. The stove is also a very dangerous neighbor to many of our children. In some places it is too warm in the room; while at other places it is too cold. The superintendent should have this remedied by the deacons attending to the matter. These are a few of the drawbacks met with in Sunday schools, and the superintendent will have to draw on his ability and ingenuity to adopt devices for the improvement of his schools.

The condition of the maps and books is a subject of earnest watchcare for the librarian on account of example. The janitorial department in regard to ventilation and temperature should be studied. Maps and books should be kept clean, whole, and in their proper places. Too often is it the case that the maps are torn, dirty and in a wretched condition, books with backs off, pages gone and the material for teaching correspondingly bad. I would rather have no maps at all than such as are above described, for the example it sets before the children. The condition of the room should be neat and orderly, floor clean and devoid of litter, desks dusted and everything orderly, clean and inviting even to the angels. The librarian should have his books classified and properly put away—not thrown out of sight—but laid carefully in their proper place.

In regard to order in the schoolroom there should be, as already stated, a body of young deacons appointed and assigned certain duties to perform in keeping the house clean, maintaining order, attending to fires, seeing if anything is wanted in any of the classes, so nothing may destroy the harmony of feeling that should characterize a Sunday School. A log hut or a tent kept clean and everything in order is more acceptable to God and more inviting to the angels than a palace or marble halls if disorderly kept; and if these young deacons are properly trained, there will be but little difficulty in the future in keeping our places of worship clean and having order and harmony in our public assemblies. It is in the Sunday School where these things should be learned.

The superintendent should be at school, as stated, on time and if he cannot attend, one of his assistants should take up the labor and see that everything is in order.

3. After all these preparatory items of the Sunday School have received due consideration, the superintendent has to turn his attention to the matter of the Sunday school itself, the nature of the work to be performed there, its classification, its gradation, and its appointment in regard to teachers, text books, and methods of treating it. This requires much labor and thought, large experience and extensive acquaintance with the work in question, and the superintendent should have the plan of the entire exercise for that day before him; he should learn what is needed in this department, what mistakes are to be corrected in that, what changes in the others. He should know if the classes are progressing nicely, whether there is any dissatisfaction in any department, and give counsel and encouragement to all.

Closely connected with this is the appointment of teachers. The difficulties here are far more greater than in any other schools. In district schools, seminaries, etc., every teacher has to undergo a certain examination, which shows his qualification for teaching, but it is different in Sunday schools, for the superintendent has to take what material he can get. The only qualification many a teacher has is in the willingness to do the best he can. "God bless you for your willingness and good spirit," and other superintendents will often have to be up under any inconvenience, exercise patience and cultivate the Spirit of the Almighty. He should not be satisfied, however, with what is given him, but should labor and in the ward, find out the best material and work with the ward authorities until he obtains that person or those persons.

In regard to pupils. The chief incentive, the key to the attendance in Sunday schools, is in the expression of "I will" from the child. We must get their voluntary attendance, their desire to attend, make the school so they not only want to come, but that they long to come, that they are hungry and thirsty for the Sunday school. This can only be done by kindness, love and having the proper spirit running through the discipline of the school. The discipline is the climate of the school; the spirit there breathed is the atmosphere. If there is the spirit of kindness, gentleness, love, devotion, peace and order breathed within that sacred organization—if this is the atmosphere, there will be a desire to attend. Everything impure will be discountenanced, and the attraction will reach far beyond the confines of that schoolroom. It will make itself felt through those same children by every fireside in that ward where these children come from; it will exert an influence in the whole community for good.

We cannot live in a district but what our system partakes of the atmosphere there found, whether unhealthy or pure. If pure, it will build up our blood, cleanse our whole system, invigorate our being, make our voice clear, our eyes bright, our cheeks aglow with health. But if this atmosphere have material fumes wafted to us, our system will be vitiated and disease will follow. This same law prevails in the spiritual and intellectual and moral world. Place children in the atmosphere of love, truth, gentleness and moral attainments, and they will be sweet, lovely, gentle, good and far from doing anything evil. It will beam forth from their very countenances.

There are several characteristics to be observed in every Sunday school which will form a very arid criterion of its efficiency. Punctuality and regularity are two of the main levers. Every teacher and officer should be at his post at the proper time.

Example is what they will learn from. If you want anything done, set the example. If you want them to attain anything, give them the example. Talking will not do it, scolding will not accomplish it; example alone will secure it. Teachers should remember to be punctual, on hand and prepared. Learn to establish confidence in the little ones, and they will do anything for you. It is the most glorious and powerful characteristic of any man or woman; wealth cannot be compared with it. You may leave your children fortunes of wealth as an inheritance, but they are but beggars if they have no good standard of example to follow; but leave them poor in wealth but rich in good, noble example, and impress it upon them by the spirit of honor and truth, and you can depend upon their future. This is greater than fortune. Your example wields a power for good or evil, for the weal or woe of those among whom you mingle.

The order and conduct of children should be studied also. There must be order in and out of school, before, during and after school. These are five propositions which should be observed. Orderly coming, orderly while in, orderly while they pass out, and orderly around and about the grounds. If the children rush out and commence making noises, tell them this spot is holy, a sacred spot; it has been dedicated to the worship of the Lord, and upon it you should act sacredly. If they learn these things in Sunday schools there will be little trouble in years to come in having order in all our public meetings. Around and in our sacred edifice nothing but a holy and sacred spirit and atmosphere should prevail. Scolding is not a good thing to do; but speak kindly and use that potent influence for gentleness and love; but scolding arouses feelings of anger, contempt and hate. The spirit used always begets its own kind.

Courtesy is another essential, good manners and respectful treatment. Teach the children to reverence sacred places by doing it yourselves. Teach them to take their hats off just before entering a place of worship and not replace it on their heads until they are out of the door. Teach them to respect and bow to their teachers and the aged wherever they meet them. These may seem small things, but our lives are made up of such little things. If you must teach from books, then use them in the right way; but example is the golden guide; books are merely the scaffolding, methods and plans, aside of which we build the structure, and after we complete it we remove the scaffolding and the building remains solid and firm. In our Sunday schools we are cultivating the immortal soul of the rising generation, training our sons and daughters in the truths of God, and preparing them for the mighty future.

Our Sunday schools need support from the parents and ward authorities. They should encourage their children to be at school in time to get their lessons, to be all that the teachers are trying to make them; for next to parents are the teachers. The public must assist with means and in whatever way is necessary. Our schools will then be what we aim they should be. Parents should ask their children how their teacher is, how they are getting along, and encourage them to always be prepared—no do as some I know, allow their children to go and be taught month in and month out and never so much as know who their teacher is, what he is, or what progress their children are making. They will attend closely to their cattle, and if one of them is put in a pasture or is herded, the man will soon find out the feed in the pasture and the kind of treatment his precious cow receives; but too often they allow their children to drift and do for themselves in these matters, until often it is far too late to do the good they might have done when the children were younger. No parent should allow any teacher to work upon the hearts of his children without knowing what he is doing. We all have to work, we all should work for the good of the community. If we have to make a few sacrifices, all right; we know not how far reaching good may be the result thereof. The ward authorities should stand by the superintendent and teachers, support them with all their energy and power and by their faith and prayers. There is no greater and holier work, even in going to the nations of the earth to convert those in darkness, than that of training innocent and lovely children.

Teachers, between themselves, should cultivate love and good feeling; all desirous for the progress of the school; should sustain and help one another, and counsel with each other and the superintendent. If he is not what he should be, try and help him to be better. Strengthen his hands. None here on the earth are perfect; heaven is the place of perfect being. Let all be educators among the youth, and all understand that one great principle of teaching is that what he desires others to do he himself must do, that when he gets too high to be taught—when he knows it all—he is past the standard of teaching and should be released. Self-sufficiency is a dangerous thing, and a person having this is not fit for a teacher. There are some who are pedants—regular fossilized, stereotyped, petrified pedants—who walk in the old groove and can be taught nothing. Like the tree that fails to put forth any new shoots when spring comes, it is past bearing, it is dead and is no longer worthy to live; cut it down and give place for a live, active one. So is the teacher who is beyond progression, who has fossilized ways and grooves he should be replaced by one who is pliable. Also we should avoid criticism. Speak good when you find it right, but don't criticize unless it is in the kindest spirit and it is received in the same spirit; rather than censure my brethren and sisters to injury, I would have my tongue cut from my mouth. Instead of finding fault, bid them God-speed upon their efforts, but don't stand in the way of others doing good; don't do it.

There are other drawbacks to the Sunday schools. Interference of quarterly stake relief society and young men's conferences, private funerals, etc., during which time the schools are broken up, the children left to do as they please. Sunday schools should be held regularly. There should be no interference. It is wrong. It breaks into children's progress and learning.

As in the morning, a "welcome" should be given to the children, so at the close of school the children should leave with a good, happy feeling; after the exercises are over, the books put away nicely and orderly, the students quiet, the house orderly, the sacrament dishes arranged as they should be; then closing services should be exceedingly pleasant, and children should leave with a "sweet taste in their mouths." All teachers are now with their classes, the choir in its place, the superintendent and assistants on the stand and everything quiet, and there is a spirit of gentleness, of peace, good-will, a heavenly influence, a reverential spirit; now the choir renders a lively, yet gentle, sweet, appropriate song, one that is soothing and expressive of joy and peace—words suited to the beautiful tune; then comes the benediction, a short, succinct and model prayer of one or two moments at the longest. Now the superintendent arises and taps the bell, only once gently, not harshly, and the teacher of section one, with his pupils, are still. At the second tap of the bell they arise quietly, and at the third the students arise, the organist commences playing some appropriate march, the children begin to get step with the music quietly, and now they march, two by two, to the door, where they bow to their teacher. Everything is orderly, quiet and gentle. As soon as out they march away quietly, no yelling nor screaming, but they leave the house and grounds orderly. In this way one class after another goes out marching to the music, and they carry with them that sweet influence, that kindly feeling and breath among those of their associates. In this way a hallowed feeling grows up, children love to go to school. Its influence is felt, and the schools and meetings of the future will be better, the influence stronger, and we will do more good than ever before.

Perhaps there may be some in your class who are determined not to abide by what you say; they may pass out with a yell, a sneer or a mumbling remark; watch them as they leave the building and offer up a silent prayer to God—"God bless those dear little ones—Bless Johnny, he is wild; rough; I wonder what will become of him; he goes home and receives no kind word of welcome, no smile; what dangers his immortal soul is exposed to—he is left to cultivate himself or go without. Father, is there no help for him? Will you not let angels guard him or protect him from evil? Bless all these children, that they may grow up in Thy fear and grace." And don't you think our Father will listen to that prayer?

I close my remarks tonight with this testimony of my own experience, that God has rescued many a one from unavoidable destruction in answer to my prayers that I have sent up concerning some of these. I have learned more of the characteristics of my students in watching them after they left the room and got on the playground than for weeks before me in the class room. I have prayed many hundreds of times for God to guard this or that one safely from destruction and He has done it; He will do it for you. I know this is the truth. I have witnessed it myself. Yes, you will feel that sweet influence of an answered prayer many times if you do this. I have had them come to me and thank me for my intercession with God. They have blessed me, and I testify to you tonight that it will come back to you as bread cast upon the waters to return after many days; and oh! how sweet that bread has tasted! It will be so with you; and that each one of you may find out for yourselves how sweet it is, is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

(To be Continued.)

EXPEDIENCY IN POLITICS.

EUGENE FIELD in the Chicago News prepared two articles in anticipation of the result at Minneapolis. It could not, of course, be foretold who the nominee would be, but in case Harrison triumphed, the following was prepared and ready for insertion the moment the announcement would be made:

"THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEE

"The careful observer is not surprised at the result of the balloting for the Presidential candidate at Minneapolis. It has been evident for some time that the business interests of the country—and they are paramount interests—demanded an intermeddling of and a continuance in the practice of the conservative policy of the national administration. The sentiment evoked by the erroneous impression that Mr. Blaine might, in certain contingencies, consent to become the party's standard-bearer—this sentiment did credit to the thousands who properly admire the transcendent genius of that veteran statesman. But—and wisely, we think—sentiment gave way to calmer, more deliberate and grave considerations. Reason demanded loyalty to that prudent leader who has conducted the republic through four years of unprecedented national prosperity, conserving its financial and commercial interests, conducting a patriotic and just foreign policy, enforcing respect abroad and inspiring a feeling of security at home. The prospect of a perpetuation of the Republican administration was never more brilliant than at this time, etc., etc."

In case the announcement should be made that Blaine was the victor, the following was set up and held ready for use:

"THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEE.

"The careful observer is not surprised at the result of the balloting for the Presidential candidate at Minneapolis. It has been evident for some time that no promise considerations would be suffered to stand in the way of that enthusiasm which the mere mention of the name of James G. Blaine evokes universally. President Harrison's quiet, uneventful administration has prepared the country for that succession of patriotic and brilliant features which will characterize his successor's term in office. The convention did wisely, we think, in answering the country's demand for the recognition of that statesman who for twelve years has held the first place in the hearts and in the eyes of his countrymen. His candidacy will awaken an enthusiasm unparalleled in history; from Maine to California, from the forests of Minnesota to the everglades of Florida, shall sweep a vast tidal wave of rejoicing. And only this white-plumed knight this Bayard sans peur et sans reproche, this Nestor among statesmen, this idol of his countrymen, shall be raised, as it were, by acclamation, to the highest station of honor in this glorious land of ours."

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 20.—The Democratic Presidential ticket for 1892 will be Cleveland and Gray, or at least this is the general impression among the leading men of all factions at midnight tonight.

The anti-Cleveland people won the first victory of the convention. W. C. Owens, delegate at large from Kentucky, was selected by the National committee as temporary chairman of the convention. The victory, however, extends only to the membership of the National committee, and it is insisted by the Cleveland people to be no indication relative to the strength of the Cleveland and Hill factions among the delegates. In order to correct promptly any misrepresentations as to the substantial the leaders of the ex-President's cause announce tonight that although defeated in the committee, they will carry the fight into the convention and endeavor to defeat Owens for temporary chairman by placing an avowed Cleveland man in nomination. To Hon. Henry Watterson and the astute diplomacy which he displayed, is credited the preliminary victory of the anti-Cleveland element. Owens pretty well understood the dispute about the expediency of nominating the ex-President in view of the factional difficulties in New York, and although he maintained a discreet silence since his name has been discussed in connection with the temporary chairmanship, it is not denied that he is an opponent of Cleveland. The other claim made is that he will wield the gavel with an impartiality that will call for the approval of all sections. The Hon. William L. Wilson of West Virginia, one of the valiant leaders of tariff reform in the House of Representatives, is understood to be the man upon whom the Cleveland people place hopes.

ANTI-CLEVELAND VICTORY,

In the main, however, the events of the day have been such as to add hope to the Cleveland movement. Illinois has decided to cast forty-eight votes for him. Indiana, too, retires ex-Governor Gray, and will cast its votes for Cleveland. Of course all the other leaders declare that Indiana's change of front means that Gray will come in as a Vice-Presidential candidate and back in the favor of the Cleveland hosts.

Another knight errant, who has proudly worn the garments of a great political possibility, removed his regalia tonight and assumes a modest place among the truest Cleveland lieutenants. For the first time since the opening of the fray Gorman has avowed his belief in the nomination of Cleveland, and while he speaks portentously of the danger of such a result he waives from his ambition that has haunted his movements for the last three days and declares that no friends of his shall enter his name in the race.

"I do not think Cleveland's nomination advisable," said Gorman, "but as the matter stands it seems inevitable." But there are two men who stand undaunted, side by side with Governor Cleveland in the race for presidential honors, and few have the temerity to challenge the sincerity of their position. Senator Hill of New York, with the seventy-two votes of New York behind him, and Governor Boies of Iowa, secure in the fealty of twenty-six devoted supporters, are still indomitable factors in the presidential conflict.

A TAMMANY NOTICE.

Tammany tonight issued the following official notice:

"Rooms of the New York State delegation, Chicago.—In reply to inquiries addressed to us by delegates from States instructed to vote for Grover Cleveland, the delegates from New York with a deep sense of responsibility to the Democracy of the United States are constrained to make the answer that in our best judgment Cleveland's nomination would imperil the success of the party and would expose it to the loss of the electoral vote of the State."

It is true that there are many rumors that Tammany is exerting seductive wiles on the favorite sons of other States to hold secure their wavering forces in the hope that Tammany will at last come West with seventy-two votes for Palmer, Morrison, Carlisle or Gray. But the Tammany leaders still outwardly profess allegiance to the cause of Hill, and the gradual conviction is forcing itself upon every mind that the nomination of Cleveland will meet an eloquent protest from New York.

NEW YORK, June 20.—The World will say editorially tomorrow: "The New York delegation to Chicago tied itself with a resolution to support Senator Hill as long as he should be a candidate, but is simply holding the delegation together as a means of beating Cleveland. The defeat of Cleveland has long been seen to be wholly improbable. It is now known to be wholly impossible. Why should the New York delegation lend itself to any effort to thwart the wish of the Democracy of the nation to defeat the one New Yorker who can be nominated? This is not Democratic; it is not good politics. The claim that Cleveland cannot carry New York is ill-founded. He can carry it if any Democrat can."

CHICAGO, June 21.—The opening of convention day finds the clouds of political dissension clearing away. It does not require the divine gift of prophecy to predict the nomination of Grover Cleveland on the first ballot. Indeed, this result is conceded, even by the friends of Hill and Boies, the only other candidates now in the field, though every indication is that they will go down to defeat with their colors flying, and the solid support of their respective States behind them.

The official announcement of Pennsylvania, Illinois and Indiana that they have decided to retire their favorite sons and cast their aggregate of 142 votes for the ex-President has about removed all doubt from the situation. Then all dark horses, including Gorman, Morrison, Russell and Campbell with their followers are hastening to clamor into the band wagon of the victor.

The general expectation is that ex-Governor Isaac P. Gray, Indiana, will be nominated for vice-president. It is understood that his withdrawal from the race for the first place was made on the assurance that the Cleveland men would support him for the second, and as the Cleveland force is well disciplined there is little doubt that the compact will be carried out. The Cleveland people are so secure that they will make no fight against Owens as temporary chairman, though he is an anti-Cleveland man. This was authoritatively given out by the Cleveland managers this morning but the Tammany leaders are still sulken, and continue to maintain that Cleveland cannot carry New York. Some of the lesser lights even declare that they will not, as a protest, cast any New York votes against Cleveland on the question of making his nomination unanimous.

THE IOWA DELEGATION STILL FOR BOIES.

Every effort of the Cleveland people to persuade the Iowa delegation to desert Governor Boies has proven signally unsuccessful. Despite the almost certainty that Cleveland will be nominated on the first ballot, the Boies people have announced that their candidate will remain in the race till the end, not only as a matter of State pride, but as a protest against the nomination of a candidate not supported by his own State. Indeed Boies' followers are almost as bitter as the Hill men in their protestation against Cleveland's nomination.

The delegation this morning decided to cast the solid vote for Boies, even if every other delegate in the convention voted for Cleveland, and under no circumstances to allow the consideration of his name for the second place. They say there is no reasonable hope that Cleveland can carry Iowa.

It is generally believed now that the contesting delegates from New York will content themselves with formal protest and allow the Hill delegates to take the seats in the convention without a fight. A definite decision on this point will be reached this afternoon after the close of the first session of the convention.

CHICAGO, June 21.—A circus tent, greatly magnified with a dozen huge white pendants stretching from covering to floor was the appearance of the big Democratic wigwam from the interior today.

What appeared to be pendants were really stout posts supporting a mammoth circular canopy of wood raised some distance above the walls to admit light and air from all sides. Blue-silked banners distributed on the main floor and bearing the names of various States showed where the State delegations would be seated. Around and back of them, rising like an amphitheatre were tiers of seats containing spectators, the entire structure having room for more than twenty thousand people.

The Chairman's desk, the same over which Cleveland and Hendricks were nominated in 1884, was surrounded by huge bouquets of flowers. The great interior was wreathed with red, white and blue streamers, flags and banners. There were here and there, shields of different States and portraits of honored Democrats of the past.

The delegations were seated according to the alphabet, Alabama having the front row, New York well back.

The crowd began to gather as early as eleven o'clock, though the convention was not to be called to order till noon, and it was long after that hour before the actual calling to order took place. When the gavel finally fell, the great structure was completely filled with people.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Chairman Brice called the convention to order at 12.45.

While the convention assembled, the blue satin banner of the Horace Boies club, Davenport, Iowa, was borne forward at the head of the delegation of rugged men who will sit in the convention and vote for their governor to the last ditch. They were greeted with applause as were the Tammany leaders from New York, who followed closely. Then came Illinois and Pennsylvania. Then in groups, pairs or singly, the other States took their places.

It was high noon when a black shadow crept up from the north and overspread the sky and the great spaces in the galleries became dim and shadowed. A hush crept over the throng of white faces turned upward toward the opening beneath the light wooden roof. Was the roof again to be blown away? Would terrific winds come on growing black clouds? Was there danger? Would there be peril in remaining? But as the shadow gently enveloped the entire structure, luckily no cry of fear came, though the women's faces were white and the men's faces intense with anxiety. Then came a vivid flash of lightning and the booming report of thunder reached the anxious crowd. Darker grew the murky air. At length so great was the outer darkness that the news reporters were compelled to pause, unable to see. Quickly followed the rattling of the burst of rain upon the roof. Almost instantly the water flowed down through a crack directly upon upon the heads of the New York delegation. Umbrellas were hoisted and the storm was on. Furious wind, thunder rolls and rain dashes continued for ten minutes. Suddenly as the storm had come it passed away, and light followed. Within the great hall was a wall of faces.

Then Chairman Brice of the national committee arose and commanded silence.

Rev. John Rouse offered prayer. Secretary Sheerin announced the temporary organization: W. C. Owens, Kentucky, temporary chairman; S. B. Keenly, secretary; Nicholas A. Bell, Missouri, principal reading clerk; Richard J. Bright, Indiana, sergeant-at-arms.

Owens was conducted to the chair amid applause, and spoke as follows:

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OWEN'S SPEECH.

Two great dangers confront the Democratic party. One is external and the other internal. The one is the organization of the machinery of organized capital, supported by the whole power of the government. The second is the tendency among the Democrats to make issues among themselves.

Two needs, therefore, stand before us, indispensable to success—unity and harmony. If this chair and gavel stand as representatives of one, it remains for you to supply the other. In this spirit I greet you, fellow-Democrats, as the advance guard of a grand army sent forward to blaze the pathway to victory.

How momentous is your responsibility, I need not tell you. If you work in wisdom, millions toiling in the shop and mine and field will rise and call you blessed.

The roll call of the Republic attests that its heart and conscience are with us; our war with the representatives of greed. The best thought in our party is the platform that challenges approbation and invites the support of the people. We can succeed; but we must do more, we must deserve success. Above the wreck, if need be, of selfish combinations, we must rear a temple to plain people and build a shrine so broad that every lover of his kind may kneel. The burden must be lifted from the back of toll and to that end, it has a righteous demand that whoever bears our banner must lift it above the smoke of conflict and the din of faction; that every Democrat of the Union may follow its lead in the exultant and irresistible combat. Let us not mistake the gravity of the situation. It demands the broadest patriotism and every needful sacrifice.

"Our work but begins here; under the sun of summer and in the frosts of autumn, we must carry it forward with unflinching courage to a triumphant close."

The speaker proceeded to characterize the coming campaign as one of education, to teach people everywhere their true relation to the tax gatherer. They must learn that no railroad president can champion the tribunes of the people, and no task-masters write our tariff bill. They must learn that for personal and political advantage their country has been menaced by threat of war, and will learn with shame and regret that on the day the warlike message of their President was read in Congress, the peaceful response of the little eight-by-ten-republic, Chile, accepting the terms of the Presidential ultimatum was read in every capital of the world.

The speaker proceeded to denounce the billion dollar Congress and closed as follows: "Impelled by the one purpose of the public good, we will free ourselves from the dickerings and heart-burns that characterized the Republican party when its Marshal Ney went down at Minneapolis before mailed legions of the bread-and-butter brigade."

At the close of Owen's speech, on motion of Delegate White, of California, the roll was called for the constitution of the committee on credentials, rules, order of business, permanent organization and resolutions. All resolutions and communications were ordered referred to the committee on resolutions.

CHICAGO, June 21.—[Special to the DESERET NEWS].—The first victory is won. The Democrats are seated and tickets have been issued for the Straights. The prospects are good for complete victory, as the members of the credentials committee are chiefly for the Regulars. The Tuscaroras are gloomy.

The controversy between the Democrats and Tuscaroras turns on the question as to which is the Democratic party of Utah. Both sides agree that up to May 5, 1888, the party was regularly organized; that then S. A. Merritt was chosen Chairman of the Territorial Central Committee and A. G. Norrell secretary. That committee was composed of twenty members. At the convention of 1888, no Mormons were admitted. After the manifesto was issued both Democrats and Republicans made overtures to the members of the People's party. That party was thereupon disbanded, a movement that had been discussed by it for several years. On June 20, 1891, the Territorial Central Committee met on regular call. Seventeen of the twenty were present. One having removed from the Territory—Ben Shreks, and one having died—C. W. Zane, their places were formally filled in the committee; one old member was absent, leaving nineteen members present.

At this meeting it was resolved that as the People's party had dissolved, its former members, who so desired, should be cordially welcomed into the party. Five members dissented and tendered their resignations, which were not accepted but they left the room.

The Chairman of the Committee was authorized to call a convention when necessary. A convention was duly called for July 20th. This convention was composed of Mormons and Gentiles. A new Territorial Central Committee was organized with S. S. Merritt as chairman and E. A. Smith as secretary.

On April 2, 1892, a meeting of the Committee was called at which the five members of the old committee, who bolted in 1891, presented themselves—two in person and three by proxy, and demanded recognition. They had been displaced entirely by this time, a new committee having been organized. But not receiving recognition from the chairman they withdrew, went to the office of O. W. Powers, who was one of the proxies, and attempted to reorganize the old superseded committee, by constituting themselves a new committee, eliminating S. A. Merritt and others and filling their places up to ten members, which they supposed made a majority to form a quorum. But they did not even know the number of the old committee of which they claimed to be members. As we have shown it was composed of twenty, but only nineteen were present when the five bolted; so they, thinking the number was nineteen made a committee of ten only. And with this number they proceeded to call a convention at which O. W. Powers and Fred J. Kiesel were chosen as delegates to Chicago.

These Tuscaroras claim that the committee of 1888 was chosen for four years, and on that supposed technicality they base their right to still be members of it. The record shows that the committee of twenty was simply elected. It also shows that fourteen out of nineteen called the convention at which a new Territorial central committee was duly elected. And this leaves the sham committee without a peg to hang a claim on.

The Democratic Convention at Ogden, then, was regularly called by the regular successors of the committee which all agree was properly constituted and that convention elected Judge H. P. Henderson and Hon. John T. Caine delegates to Chicago.

All booms but Cleveland's are dying. It is likely that Cleveland will be nominated on the first ballot.

The heat is intense. Thousands cannot enter the Wigwam. The exclusion of National Committeeman Ferry is a new thing under the sun. Work has been hard and incessant.

(To be continued.)

RATIFICATION AND DISAPPOINTMENT.

To be disappointed is sometimes very serious, usually vexatious and agitating.

At the expense of considerable effort to overcome distance and adverse circumstances, I put in an appearance at the Republican ratification meeting, expecting to see and hoping to hear from that individual who was known in the late Minneapolis convention as the man who had lived in Utah since the time when "those who differed from the Mormons were destroyed," and "he would have been killed if the Mormons had dared." To see this prodigy of a man over whom the vilest plotting for his life had been fruitless plotting was to me the great anticipated interesting feature of that occasion. I was disappointed.

Since then I have been endeavoring to reason out the character of such a man. Not knowing what star he was born under, that his life should be secured to him under such desperate conditions, I am under the necessity of adopting the plan of reasoning from cause to effect, as when one fact is established reason may justly arrive at other facts as deducible from the established premises or ultimate fact acquired.

Being personally a stranger to the gentleman in question, I have no other means at command of forming satisfactory conclusions to take the place of disappointment.

As to his physical appearance, I am satisfied he must be very care-worn, gaunt, weak, lean and meagre, as no one under ordinary conditions could possibly endure so many years of constant excitement under anticipations of being waylaid by the innumerable assassins who were inflicting death upon all "who differed from them." These years must have been full of mental excitement, leaving its furrows of care upon the ghastly visage that was able to carry them, demanding the pity rather than the contempt of every beholder. I trust that today his appearance is not "a living lie" to the declarations in which he has so freely indulged. He certainly must have something to show for the fearful apprehensions which have ever attended him in the midst of veritable assassinations. The agony of soul which he endured must have been excruciating, and have left visible marks of despair upon both countenance and conscience.

But what of his mental condition? It is painful to contemplate the activities of the mind which must have been his constant tormentor, lest some one should so far forget as to "laurel" do the terrible deed. Imagination takes in these years of sleepless, dreamy nights, and the terrible exercise of that conscience that never sleeps gives him no rest, but makes his couch of repose one of despair and inconceivable wretchedness.

His power of endurance must have been more than human not to have wholly given way under such a strain of excitement. That dream of blood at the midnight hour, that unearthly vision that denies him rest and haunts his slumbers with death's despairing doom awaiting him, is enough in its ordinary consequences to unsettle the most glauk mud—a mind to which he makes no claim. I am not surprised that under this pressure reason has fled, but more surprised that any one should consider him capable of possessing a mind that can reason with the accuracy of truth or the logic of right.

To expect one who has been subject to such extreme tests of both body and mind to tell the truth, to be logical in his reasoning, or consistent in his imaginations, is expecting entirely too much. Ravings and imprecations may be expected from such a distorted mind, and even editors should not look for consistency from such a source. Such conditions have often led to dangerous proclivities, and institutions have been prepared where such may be kindly cared for and possibly reclaimed. Is this poor suffering specimen of humanity still at large? Has he not one kind friend to pity rather than censure his demented condition, who will assist him to the kindly care his case demands in this his dire extremity.

Has humanity fled the wings of the morning and taken to the uttermost parts of the earth, that he should fail to enjoy the soothing administrations which Christian civilization is capable of imparting to such worn and weary imbeciles as imagination pictures this human form to be? Were it not so late dreaded death might now be a desired boon, but even that is denied. No one can be found now, as in the past many years, who "dare" afford the remedy, and a pitiful life must be endured until some kind providence shall determine the bounds of his endurance.

Such is but a faint, brief sketch of what imagination pictures to be the condition of one who has lived in a community where none "dared" to permit a realization of an anticipated end, however much that end was merited, or a guilty conscience could have desired.

IMAGINARY REASONER.

THE "LIBERAL" POLICE FORCE.

If you will kindly allow me a little space in your valuable paper, I would like to make a few comments and propound a few queries in regard to the sensational police developments of the last few days. The Tribune of yesterday morning, as is its custom when some of its benchmen are attacked, comes to the rescue of Albright and Johnson, and endeavors to make the public believe that these two men are very little short of being angels. In regard to Albright it attempts to make it appear that he is a much abused policeman and offers in evidence the alleged interview by its reporter of a friend of Albright's. The amusing part of that portion of the article, to one who is on the inside, is that this reporter has frequently been in the company of Albright and this friend for many months, and must have known how Albright was conducting himself.

It is understood that the scribe knows all that is going on among a certain faction—"the Albright faction" of the force, and I venture to say that there is not a man on the force "who has been there any length of time" that does not know all about this particular case as well as several other exploits of similar character. I can assure you that I, for one, have known of these things for two years, and also know that they have been talked over by the members of this remarkable body of men in the police office and upon the public streets all of that time.

As to Johnson, well, his interview is good, especially to one who has heard on several occasions speak of owning the furniture in the disreputable house on Commercial street. Another thing: Would it not have been well for Johnson to have given in his Tribune interview at least a partial list of the felons whom he has succeeded in capturing and convicting through information furnished him at this house of ill reput-? I have racked my brain to call to mind one case such as he speaks of, but cannot think of one, and I believe I am pretty familiar with the doings of the police since Johnson entered the service.

Another circumstance: When this woman, Willie Dougherty, opened this disreputable establishment, who was it that gave a colored man five dollars to buy some wall paper to use in said house? The said colored man, instead of buying the paper, got drunk with the money. And who was it who was going to arrest the coon for so doing? Another query and I have done for the present. I would like to have the deputy marshal, "In the interest of morality, and to assist Chief Janney in his great endeavor to discipline the force," give the public the exact location of the room, where he went with Willie Dougherty when he was sent out by the court, "on the night of her recent arrest," to get the money which she deposited for her appearance? Did she get that money from her trunk or that of someone else? More anon.

A. CORP.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 20, 1892.

ST. GEORGE STAKE CONFERENCE.

On the 11th inst. the quarterly gathering of the Priesthood and Saints of St. George Stake commenced with the High Priests' conference. This was followed by the Stake Priesthood meeting.

On Sunday and Monday, the 12th and 13th insts. the Priesthood and Saints met in quarterly conference.

In all these meetings we were favored with the presence and ministry of Presidents Wilford Woodruff and George Q. Cannon. President Brigham H. Roberts, of the general presidency over the Seventies, was also with us at the first meeting on Sunday and remained till the close of the conference. The usual business was transacted in the publication of statistical and other reports, and in the presentation of the general authorities of the Church and the Stake authorities, all of whom were sustained without a dissenting vote.

In addition to the general meetings, the Sunday schools and improvement associations of the Stake held joint quarterly conference, at which most satisfactory reports were made. The attendance at all the meetings was unusually large. The Saints were strengthened and encouraged in the ways of well-doing.

The Primary associations likewise held their quarterly conference. President Roberts convened the Seventies and as neither the Twenty-ninth or Ninety-ninth quorums were full, it was decided to unite the members of the two quorums in one, the Twenty-ninth. In settling this Twenty-ninth Quorum in active working order it was found that quite a number of the presidents and members were too aged to be called to go on missions, and it was suggested that if willing they might be honorably released from active Seventies' duty and be recommended to the High Priests' Quorum for ordination as High Priests. The suggestion was accepted.

JAMES G. BLEAK,
Clerk of Conference.

A CARD.

As impressions have been made upon the public mind through misleading press dispatches that I am engaged in founding "Mormon" colonies in Mexico, I hereby desire to say in the most emphatic manner that I am not employed by the "Mormon" Church in any such project; that what I am doing is entirely without connection with the Church, and that while I am endeavoring to establish settlements in Mexico and Texas, that work is without any direction, authority or assistance from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or its leading men.

ANDREW J. STEWART.

THE WEALTH OF THE NATION.

ACCORDING to the returns of the last census the assessed valuation of all property, excluding that of railway, was, in 1890, $24,651,685,465 or nearly twenty-five billions of dollars. In 1880 it was nearly seventeen billions, in 1870 fourteen billions, and 1860 twelve billions. In thirty years we find the assessed valuation of all property more than doubled. The estimated true valuation of all property is put at sixteen billions in 1860, thirty billions in 1870, and forty-one and a half billions in 1890. Should the same relation between the true and assessed values of all property be found to exist in 1890, the absolute wealth of the United States may be put at about sixty-four billions of dollars in 1890, making a per capita of over $1000.

The per capita in 1860 was $514, in 1870 $780, in 1880 $870, and in 1890 over $1,000. Figures show anyhow that the people of the United States are growing richer, but what would interest us more is to know whether a greater proportion of the people owned $514 worth each, in 1860, than the proportion who own, each $1000, in 1890. The trouble is that the enormous aggregation has, of late years, run into individual puddles, pools and lakes, having a great proportion of the masses on parched and thirsty ground. The aggregate sum is large, but its distribution fearfully unequal.

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held at the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, June 12th, 1892, commencing at 2 p.m., President Angus M. Cannon presiding.

The choir sang the hymn beginning:

Come, Come ye Saints, no toil nor labor fear,
But with joy wend your way;

Prayer was offered by Elder Samuel Friday.

Th choir sang:

Jesus, once of humble birth,
Now in glory comes to earth.

The Sacrament was administered by the Priesthood of the Sixteenth ward.

ELDER DAVID M'KENZIE

then was called upon to address the congregation.

The speaker said he felt weak, but relied on the sympathy and prayers of the Saints. This expression was not merely a matter of form, but it was founded on the firm assurance that blessings would be bestowed in answer to prayers.

It is necessary for the Saints to deal with facts rather than theories, to make themselves acquainted with their obligations to their Creator. For we are here on this earth on a probation. We are placed here, that we may obtain an exaltation by proving ourselves worthy of it. This makes it necessary for us to practice a religion which can elevate us and help us to progress in every direction. Speaking of progress, the speaker remarked that there was no record of savages ever having risen from a condition of savagery to that of civilization by their own power without aid from civilized races. Ever civilization exists. Where did it come from, if savages cannot civilize themselves, unless we admit the instruction by the Almighty of the first progenitors of the human race? We see that people who are excluded from civilization live in stagnant state. The inference is that without divine aid no progress can be made.

If it be true that the earliest inventions of our race are the greatest, who suggested these inventions? That man could not have made himself is held to be a proof of the agency of a Divine Creator; and that mankind could not in the first instance have civilized themselves is equally a proof of the agency of a Divine Instructor.

The Latter-day Saints would never have, of themselves, created the commonwealth we see today without aid from God. What man could by his own wisdom have invented a religion in perfect accordance with the Word of God. Our religion not only is in perfect harmony with the Word of God, but it has been antagonized in the same manner as the first Gospel. These things the Latter-day Saints can account for. We say God sent His messenger to preach the everlasting Gospel and proclaim it to all men and carry it to all nations preparatory to the coming of the Son of Man. This is what we say and have proved that we believe, under all circumstances.

The skeptic may be asked, How was this work brought about? Fanaticism is no explanation of it; nor is imposture, inasmuch as thousands have testified that God has again spoken, and this testimony has been abundantly confirmed in this day by accompanying signs as in former days. Joseph Smith was only a weak instrument. How can you imagine him an impostor? He placed himself in antagonism to all the world. His message contained the same truths, the same Gospel, the same morality as the Gospel of former days. How could he tell of his own learning that all the sects of the world had gone astray? His statement was practically an intimation that he was at fifteen years of age in a position to correct their errors. And in the organization that he was the instrument of effecting, we see the same arrangement of Apostles, Prophets, etc., as was instituted in the first Church of Christ.

The speaker pointed to the fact that the Church now is not making converts by the hundreds and the thousands as in the early days of the Church. Are, then, he asked, our Elders less capable than our early preachers?

If this work was the work of man, there would be as many chances to make converts today as formerly. It was not the preaching of man that had such marvelous results, but the Spirit of God working through them, and drawing thousands into the Church. This is the only intelligible explanation. The Elders today are more learned, but do not make more converts.

This work could not have been introduced and maintained on the earth, unless God had operated on His children so as to embrace the Gospel and gather here. The Gospel is free to all who will comply with the commandments of God, but only by the power of the Almighty can they be gathered into the fold.

It is evident that God had a purpose in the establishment of this work, and this was to prepare the world for the second appearance of the Son of Man. But we do not say that this preparation is the work of the Latter-day Saints alone. God uses all people in different ways to accomplish this grand purpose. But to His people His voice is, "Come out of Babylon!" Just as sure as in the days of Noah, He directed the preparation of an ark as a refuge for the faithful, so sure, in this day, He raised up the Prophet Joseph to prepare a place of refuge from the coming destruction. One of the principles of the revelation given was to prove to the world that our acts here have some bearing on a future state, that what we sow here, we shall reap there. This is in direct harmony with revelation. Some people have an idea that the limit of their obligation is to lead a moral life, whereas the truth is, that when God is represented as speaking, every one is under obligation to investigate the message and, if found to be what is claimed for it, to listen and obey it. The sense of obedience to the will of legitimate authority is inherent within all. But we can either conform to it, or rebel against it. Herein is man's agency. The promise is that those who will do the will of God shall know for themselves. The fulfillment of this promise is an evidence of the truth of the message. Learning of man was not the characteristic of the Gospel as preached by Jesus. Our Lord proved himself a true Messiah by sacrificing Himself, and His followers did not go forth for the temporal rewards they received. They knew that they had to suffer for their faithfulness to the Master. Yet Christianity took a firm hold in the early centuries, notwithstanding the fact that its doctrines were obnoxious to the Romans. It is clear, if Jesus had been a mere man, His work would have been impossible. It was the Spirit of God that was working, and the result was the triumph of the Church.

This led the speaker to a comparison between the primitive Church and the Christian churches of today. Christianity of today, he said, is no more than a picture of the first system. The resemblance may be there more or less, but it is only a picture after all. That is the difference between Christianity then and now. Morality alone does not constitute Christianity. It is part of it, but not all. And a moral obligation is not more binding because it is part of Christianity. Truth is truth wherever found.

The speaker then said he was proud to be among the Latter-day Saints. He knew the day would come when the Lord would reward them for their faithfulness to Him. He wished to be taught the will of God and be enabled to do it, in order to be worthy to associate with noble beings in a celestial world.

It had always seemed peculiar to him, how anybody could believe that God had a people on earth but not a Church. Many think that the various sects are churches, but it is clear that the Church cannot exist without divine sanction. Where can we find the principles that Christ preached? He said, "Except a man be born again by water and the spirit he cannot enter the kingdom of heaven." No sect admits this except the Latter-day Saints. The speaker briefly explained what it is to be born of water and spirit, viz.: the immersion in water for the remission of sins and reception of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. This is the condition, without which none can enter the Church.

Again, who has Apostles and Prophets except the Latter-day Saints? The names some may possibly have, but where is the power of their authority to be found? Further, the promise was that certain miracles should follow in confirmation of the preaching of the Gospel. These are among the Saints, and this is another testimony which none can gainsay, that we are the living Church of God.

The speaker closed by expressing the earnest wish that those who had been able to see this and to embrace the principles of the Gospel might be faithful and obtain the promises which are made to all who live according to the principles revealed.

The choir sang the anthem, "God be Merciful unto Us and Bless Us."

Benediction by Elder J. M. Sjodahl.

THE "LIBERAL" DEFEAT.

The Ogden Standard has a lengthy account of the arrival at that town, of their return from Minneapolis, of the Utah Republican delegation. We take the following extracts from it:

"Goodwin himself stated before the sub-committee, appointed by the National committee, that in all justice they should be seated and therefore 'either give us our seats or fire us out.'" Yet they were satisfied with a crumb or two. They were knocked out before the sub-committee and the whole committee and only as a matter of conciliation were they given half the vote. The empty honor of notifying President Harrison of his nomination was given him by Salisbury and Cannon when neither he nor his right hand man were present. He was one out of forty-eight and Hammond was one of another forty-eight to notify Whitelaw Reid. The actual honor fell on Salisbury, who will take his place from Utah on the National committee. The failure to secure from the National committee the promise that the contest would be recorded, must have been a fearful blow and has forever dropped their side into oblivion.

"Mr. Painter stated that just before the committee on credentials met, Mr. Varian came to him and said 'we had better get together and see what can be done.' All that stood in the way, he said, was the appointment of a National committeeman that would be unobjectionable to the Liberal party. If we can agree on this point, he said, we are ready to quit fighting here and now."

In a brief interview, Hon. O. J. Salisbury, National committeeman from Utah, made his appointment to the position perfectly clear. He stated emphatically that it was not his desire to accept the appointment. Arthur Brown had unanimously been named for the position "and it was my desire to support him. I did so and even insisted on it, but inasmuch as conciliation and peace had been proposed in the organization of the Republican party in Utah, and Mr. Brown having withdrawn so that not the slightest obstacle should remain to prevent the accomplishment of this much desired state of affairs, I reluctantly accepted a position which Mr. Brown could so ably fill. This action of Mr. Brown was certainly magnanimous and appears the more so as his magnanimity and courtesy seemed to go wholly unappreciated by the Liberals. Mr. Brown's name was on the roll and was presented to the convention and accepted, yet in the interval of peace and conciliation he withdrew."

"How did Goodwin come to receive the appointment to wait on the President?"

"Mr. Cannon and myself were the only Utah delegates on the floor when the roll of States was called for the purpose of appointing that committee. In continuance of the proposed policy of fairness and courtesy we decided to appoint Mr. Goodwin to wait on the President and Mr. Hammond to wait on the nominated Vice-President. No request to that effect had been made nor had any consultation on the subject been held with Mr. Goodwin or any one else on his side. It was merely an act of courtesy."

Hon. Arthur Brown was asked his opinion of the situation. He said: "We have retained the organization and won a substantial victory. We only let them down easily out of courtesy. They were not permitted to take any active part in the proceedings of the convention. While we were recognized on the floor they were ignored, though they attempted to secure a hearing on two separate occasions. If we now stand together and work together we will have it in our power to remove every Liberal officer holding federal appointment in the Territory from the governor down to probate judges."

"Mr. Downey stated that in his opinion, the stand of Mr. Goodwin's paper, after all the professions of peace and talk of reform and the treatment given the Liberals by the Republicans, was the height of discourtesy, to use a mild form, but was perfectly in harmony with its former course."

The foregoing is harmonious with and fully sustains the statements made by Mr. John Morgan, in an interview with a representative of the NEWS, which appeared in yesterday's issue of this journal.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met in regular session last night President Loofbourn in the chair. The aldermen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Evans, Simondt, Wantland, Beardsley, Heiss, Ewing and Moran.

Absent Kerrick and Hardy. The latter is now in the Deep Creek country looking after valuable mining interests in that locality.

After the minutes of the previous session had been read and corrected the following were read and referred as follows:

PETITIONS

Professor Hirsching sent in a bill for $215 for analyzing the water from the Lehi wells belonging to the city. Committee on claims.

Frank W. Rose asked to be allowed to lay a temporary sidewalk in front of his property at 417 to 421 south Main street. Committee on streets.

F. Auerbach & Bro. asked permission to pile building material in front of their property at the corner of Second South and West Temple streets. Committee on streets.

Architect Kletting asked to be allowed to pile building material and dig under sidewalk in front of the building lot owned by Spencer Clawson at corner of A and Fifth streets. Committee on streets.

H. C. Hill asked permission to lay sidewalk at private expense. Committee on streets.

A petition from Mrs. J. D. Thompson for a similar privilege was referred to the same committee.

J. M. Coombs and others, property owners on the Kennedy ditch, asked that their proportion of the watermaster's salary be paid by the city. Committee on irrigation.

Robert Thompson asked permission to erect a boot black stand on West Temple street. Committee on streets.

J. S. Lewis asked for $200 damage done to buggy and harness by an accident to same on Grape street. Committee on claims.

The Pacific Paving Company of Utah asked the Council to authorize the establishment of grade stakes on State street between First and Second South streets. Granted.

William Wolf asked permission to erect a fruit stand at the corner of West Temple and Second South streets. Committee on streets.

B. W. Alley protested against the payment of excessive taxes for water main extensions. Committee on waterworks.

Spencer Clawson and others asked that First street between State and A street be cut down to the established grade. Committee on streets.

Charles P. Taylor and others asked for an extension of water mains from a point midway between Second and Third streets along said streets to the west line of the military reservation. Committee on water works.

E. B. Tyson and others complained of excessive charge for water main extension and asked that the assessor and collector be requested not to force collection of taxes. Committee on waterworks.

D. Burnfield and others asked for an extension of water mains on Fourth West street. Committee on waterworks.

Oscar Groshell asked that Eighth West street be paved and put in a passable condition. Committee on streets.

HE WANTS MORE HELP.

City Auditor Raybould represented that he had several new books to open in his office and said that additional help would be required to perform the work. He asked that it be given him. Committee on finance and mayor associated, with power to act.

TEMPORARY GRADES.

The same official reported that he had, according to instruction, established a temporary grade on Fourth East street, in front of the First Congregationalist church; also on the west side of West Temple street, between Fourth and Fifth South streets, to which the cement sidewalk is now being laid.

In the matter of the petition of Walker Brothers for temporary grade along the west side of East Temple street, between Fourth and Fifth South streets, and of Dr. Taylor for temporary grade on east side of Seventh East street, between First and Second South streets, the city engineer reported that the request of the petitioners had been granted and sidewalks were being constructed accordingly. Received and filed.

A BITCH IN TIME.

In view of the fact that the paving of Main street between South Temple and Fourth South streets, and First and Second South between State and West Temple streets, is now assured and of the great amount of labor that will attend the reconstruction of street railway tracks before the work of paving can be commenced, the city engineer recommended that formal notice be given the street railway companies of the intended improvement and that they be requested to make the necessary modifications in their tracks that the work contemplated may be done during good weather. Adopted.

OGDEN SUBDIVISION.

The same official reported that duplicate maps and profiles of Ogden subdivision had been filed in his office and he asked for instruction regarding approval of the same. Committee on streets.

STREET AND SIDEWALK GRADES.

The city engineer submitted profiles showing street and sidewalk grades over the following thoroughfares: On A street from South Temple to Sixth street; on A, C and D streets from South Temple to Seventh street; on E, F, G, H, I, J, K, L, M and N streets from Fourth to Seventh streets; on First street from State to A streets; on Second and Third streets from Canyon road to A street; on Fifth and Sixth streets from A to N streets; on Seventh street from B to N street. Committee on streets.

OTHER MARKET STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

The same officer submitted the following estimates of cost of paving, curbing and guttering on Market street:

Asphaltum	$ 9,374 80
Curbing	1,650 40
Guttering	1,408 00
Engineering and inspection	500 00
Total	$12,932 30

Committee on streets.

COST OF CONSTRUCTING SIDEWALKS.

The same official submitted the following estimate of cost for constructing sidewalks on both sides of Market street, including grading and engineering:

Four inch cement	$3,038 00
Four inch asphaltum	3,098 00
Four inch flagstone	5,351 50

Committee on streets.

RETAINING WALL ENCROACHMENT.

The same official reported that he had permitted the retaining wall now being built in front of the Roland Hall property on First street to extend into the street a distance of 2½ feet in order to secure a uniformity in improvements. A similar encroachment was allowed for a portion of the wall by the preceding City Council. Adopted.

FROM JUSTICE KESLER.

Police Justice Kesler's report for the month of June was read. It showed that 121 cases had been tried, and $591 had been paid to Treasurer Duke, besides the fines collected by labor. Filed.

HOW MUCH ARE THEY ENTITLED TO?

John J. Riley and others represented that they are the owners of the Leadville sub-division; that they are entitled to the ownership and vested rights in certain streams of water controlled by the Council; that owing to the absence of any record they are unable to say what said streams are or the amount of water due them, and they ask that the city decide how much water is due them and make it a matter of record.

FROM THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

The board of public works submitted this:

"We beg to ask for instructions as to whether or not we shall order the contractor in sidewalk districts Nos. 7 and 8, to proceed with the laying of sidewalk in front of what is known as the Ontario hotel property on West Temple street. The portion of the work referred to is fenced in, but we have never been notified that the abutters were exempted from the sidewalk tax or granted permission to postpone the construction of the sidewalk."

Committee on streets.

FROM CORPORATION COUNCIL.

In the matter of condemnation of property for the purpose of widening Social Hall avenue and making that thoroughfare the same width at either end as it is in the middle, the city attorney reported that sufficient data had not been furnished him to draw up the necessary papers and he suggested that the city engineer make an estimate of the street as contemplated and have petitioners advance such amounts as will cover the expense of survey. This the attorney said was necessary before condemnation proceedings could be commenced.

STREET MATTERS.

In the matter of the petition of Murray C. Goibe for retaining walls on State street, the committee on streets reported that the case in question was one in which the city was not liable, and recommended that the petition be denied. Adopted.

In the matter of paving walks on Main, First and Second South streets the committee recommended that the city attorney be requested to prepare and the city recorder to publish a notice to the property owners directing them to make the usual water and sewer pipe connections. Adopted.

In the matter of paving works on Main, First and Second South streets, the same committee recommended that the superintendent of waterworks and city engineer be requested to submit a statement showing amount and estimate of cost of the water pipe necessary to be laid on the streets named, in advance of paving. Adopted.

The special committee, consisting of Alderman Rich, Lawson and Evans, reported as follows:

Your committee appointed to investigate the delay of the paving work on State street: would report, that after a thorough investigation with the Salt Lake railroad and Rapid Transit companies; also with Mr. Swift and Mr. Reid, of the Pacific Paving company, we report as follows:

The Salt Lake railway and the Rapid Transit companies are so far in advance with their work that we cannot possibly see that they are causing any delay in the paving of the said street, but we do find that the Pacific Paving company has not a sufficient plant here in this city to carry on as required by contract; that they are not getting their material on the ground fast enough, neither do they carry any paving blocks at the quarry or screened gravel at the pits in advance of work.

That they have made no preparations for the completion of their work that they should have done before plowing up the streets and stopping traffic thereon.

We also find that in our opinion there is a system, or no one who seems to have charge in cleaning up the sidewalk and guttering after curbing and paving is done.

If this is attended to your committee believes that business men would not have half the cause to complain, as teams could drive in on the upper and drive out at the lower end of each block. By so doing it would benefit the business men and help to remove a good deal of the dissatisfaction.

We recommend that the Pacific Paving company be requested to at once increase the capacity of their asphalt plant and to crowd the preparation of all material that may be necessary for the completion of this work, and unless a united effort on their part is done to the satisfaction of this Council, we would recommend that they be held to the strict terms of their contract, and that no further extension of time be granted them.

We further recommend that the intersection of State and Third South streets be not disturbed until the paving and railway companies have all material necessary to complete the work on the ground, and that the work shall not be suspended until completed—night and day.

Horn moved that the Secretary of the paving company, who was present, be allowed to set forth the company's side of the question in the delay in paving State street, and that the report of the committee be received and filed.

Moran moved to amend that the report be recorded and filed and the committee discharged from further service.

Wantland asked that the secretary of the company be allowed to present the company's side of the question.

Horn—Serious charges have been preferred by this committee against the company, and I think their secretary should be heard.

Rich—I do not propose to occupy my seat in this Council and listen to any such statement as that just made by Mr. Horn, without protesting against it. What the committee did was done after full and complete investigation.

Evans—I think the integrity of our committee has been assailed by Mr. Horn, and I think his remarks are entirely out of place.

Lawson—I, too, was a member of the committee that drew up that report, and I consider it a mild one. This Council has been trifled with by the contractors. Those gentlemen should be brought to time. The assertion that our report is too strong is false, and I stand prepared to defend the committee's action.

I cannot see that the company is hampered in any way, they have two representatives in this council who seem to be doing all in their power to protect their interest. Wantland moved that the secretary of the company be now allowed to speak on the question.

The chair said that permission could be granted only by unanimous consent.

Folland inquired what the object was in letting the secretary talk, and if it was not simply to get up a discussion. Wantland replied in the negative saying that it would be good to hear from him on general principles.

Wantland wanted to know if Lawson insinuated that Mr. Horn and myself were representatives of the Paving company.

Horn also took the floor and indignantly asked the same question, but the chair could not allow the query to be pressed and Lawson remained silent.

The motion now prevailed to allow Major Silva, secretary of the company, to speak. That gentleman said that he was at a loss to know why the councilmen had been so urgent in obtaining permission for him to talk. He had nothing whatever to say on the matter but would answer any question that might be propounded to him.

In response to a question by Mr. Moran he said that the work of paving would be completed on the west side of State street to Third South street inside of twenty days.

Councilman Bell asked if it was absolutely necessary to import the workmen employed in cutting the stone blocks. Major Silva replied in the affirmative saying that neither the necessary workmen nor tools could be procured in this Territory.

A communication from the Pacific Paving company, asking the council to authorize the establishment of grade stakes on State street, between First and Second South streets, was, on motion of Wantland, referred to the mayor with power to act.

Horn called Wantland to task for not addressing the chair, as a preface to his remarks.

Wantland claimed that he always did so, but his colleagues shook their heads and President Loofbourrow reminded the ubiquitous gentleman for the first that the formality mentioned by Alderman Horn should be observed.

APPROPRIATIONS

Inter Mountain Electric Co.	8 75
H. L. Myers	15 00
Utah Steam Laundry Co.	5 17
Fred Farallard & Carpet Co.	72 00
The United Electric Co.	15 00
Utah Paint and Oil Co.	1 00
Eureka Fire Hose Co.	20 50
Phil Kippie	12 50
Driehel & Franklin	36 65
John Regan	15 00
Moritz & Greenwood	12 50
Thomas Harris	3 00
E. Wells & Co.	21 00
Hirsch & Elberbeck	6 50
Nelson & Co.	106 75
Walker Bros & Fyler	18 00
Sierra Nevada Lumber company	5 16
Dahl & Cleland	5 00
Gedde, Pitts Drug Co.	5 00
F. Platte & Co.	2 25
Simpson Hill Drug Co.	18 50
Hospital of Holy Cross	125 25
Gaynor Electric Co.	39 25
R. M. Bell Telephone Co.	17 20
J. Pendleton	2 50
R. W. W. Railway company	1069 00
A. W. Caine & Co.	2 50
L. L. Pickard	25 00
Wadcomb & Co.	5 00
Neder & Cleland	5 00
Cohn Bros	11 85
Salt Lake Hardware company	17 25
E. W. Tilton	3 00
American Fire company	6 50
Gaynor Electric company	85 00
Paine & Lyne	192 75
Driehel & Franklin	192 35
Consolidated Implement company	2 35
Treyert & Company	16 40
J. Armstrong, Jr.	10 00
Consumers C. & T. company	51 10
U. M. Machinery company	8 13
A. W. Caine & company	1 50
Wadcomb & company	1 50
Western Drug company	8 15
E. C. Coffin Hardware company	42 04
J. J. Lowe	74 50
J. J. Duckworth	18 75
E. Wells & company	149 78
P. V. Coal Company	15 00
Kelly & company	15 00
Phil Kippie	6 75
U. M. & Machine Co.	35 80
Utah Lumber & Co.	28 25
A. M. Keller	4 00
R. M. Jones	22 50
A. J. Flynn	1 25
Filers Bros	26 50
Spiera Bros	2 65
Moritz & Greenwood	5 00
Pain & Lyne	2 10
Sierra Nevada Lumber Co.	26 45
Sierra Nevada Lumber Co.	19 45
Conington & Conington	2 00
A. J. Pendleton	11 45
W. P. Rowe	86 10
Burton, Gardner & Co.	22 30
C. C. Coffin Hardware	142 02
Mason & Company	2 70
C. H. Parsons

J. W. Whittaker	287 85
Mrs. Wm. Gilbert	201 45
A. J. Burt	25 00
Remington, J. & Co.	25 00
Bleech & Elberbeck	12 50
Montt & Griffin	1,550 04
Mount & Griffin	1,050 00

An adjourned session of the City Council was held Friday night, June 17th, President Loofbourrow in the chair. The aldermen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Evans, Simondt, Hels, Beardsley, Wantland.

Absent—Karrick, Hardy, Moran, Ewing.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

After the minutes of Tuesday night's session had been read, amended and approved business was transacted as follows:

BOSTON OFFICIALS HEARD FROM.

The recorder read the following:

Hon. R. N. Baskin, Mayor of Salt Lake City:

Dear Mr. Mayor—I have been requested by the aldermen and other officials of this municipality who recently visited your good city, to extend to the city government of Salt Lake, through you, its honored executive, their kindest and most heartfelt thanks for the generous hospitality and courteous treatment extended upon that very enjoyable occasion, and to assure you that they trust in the near future to reciprocate their kind attention when they visit Boston.

Very respectfully,

JOHN H. LEE,

Chairman of Board of Aldermen.

Filed.

INVITATION ACCEPTED.

A telegram was read from the Train Dispatchers' Association of America, now in session in New Orleans, that they had accepted the invitation of the Council to hold their sixth annual meeting in this city in June next. Received and filed.

CLEAN THE SIDEWALKS.

Bel introduced the following:

Resolved, That the street supervisor be instructed to enforce the ordinance passed by the City Council September 29th, 1891, in regard to weeds on sidewalks.

Adopted.

PLAT K.

Rich offered the following:

Resolved, That the lands which belong to the city and which are situated south of the capitol grounds and between State street and City Creek, be subdivided into lots and blocks to be known as Plat K, Salt Lake City survey, and that the city engineer is hereby authorized and instructed to incur the necessary expense and to stake out and plat said lands accordingly.

Adopted.

THE DOG ORDINANCE.

An ordinance in relation to unlicensed dogs was read by title by the recorder. A motion to take it from the table was lost after which Lawson moved to postpone action indefinitely.

Rich—I second that motion.

The Recorder—Mr. President, I would like to say something on that ordinance before that motion is put.

Mr. Stanton then proceeded to say that the passage of the ordinance would do away with from 1000 to 2000 unlicensed curs which now are a nuisance to the community.

Wantland said that he was in favor of postponing action until there was a fuller representation of the council. He had investigated the subject thoroughly the last ten days and he knew the passage of the ordinance would be beneficial to the city.

Lawson said the only reason for postponing the ordinance was that it would entail additional expense on the city. The dog-tax collector could already make from $3,500 to $4,500 per year. That was certainly sufficient to maintain the city's dog department.

Horn said he failed to see where the city would derive any benefit by the passage of the ordinance as stated by Mr. Wantland. If the dogs were cured and had no owners no tax could be collected.

Evans called for the reading of the present law. His request was granted, and after the recorder had finished Mr. Evans stated that he believed it stringent enough. It looked to him like a scheme to get more fees for the incumbent in office. It was like squeezing juice out of a lemon.

Folland said that he considered the proposition in the light of extortion and would oppose its adoption.

The vote to indefinitely postpone lost 6 a tie vote.

SEWER AND WATERMAIN CONNECTIONS.

City Attorney Hodge submitted a notice to property owners to proceed at once to connect the premises owned by them with the water and sewer mains on both sides of East and West Temple streets, from South Temple to Fourth South, and both sides of First and Second, South from West Temple to State street.

The recorder was ordered to publish the notice for ten days.

HARD ON VENDORS AND BOOTBLACKS.

The heads of the police department asked the City Council to abolish the practice of granting licenses to fruit vendors and bootblacks to erect stands on the outside of all sidewalks within the city. Granted.

RECEPTACLE FOR ASHES.

An ordinance providing for the erection of receptacles for ashes, and prohibiting sweepings to be put into the water ditches, and designating the penalties for non-compliance with its provisions, came up on its third reading and after considerable discussion went over until Tuesday night next.

PRIVATE SIDEWALKS.

The committee on streets reported favorably on the petition of Louis Cohn and others asking that property owners be allowed to lay their own sidewalks until the work was ordered done by the city. Adopted.

SEWER RESOLUTION AND ESTIMATES.

Councilman Lawson introduced the following which was adopted:

Be it Resolved, That the city engineer be instructed to return an estimate of cost of a sewer on the south side of First South street, extending from Second to Fifth East, the same being in and a part of sewer district No. 4.

From the same gentleman:

Resolved, That the city engineer be instructed to return an estimate of cost of a sewer located on the north side of Fifth South street, extending from East Temple to West Temple street, the same being in and a part of sewer district No. 6.

BY LAWSON.

Lawson offered the following which was adopted:

Resolved, That the city engineer be instructed to return an estimate of the cost of a sewer located at the north side of First South street, extending from Fifth East street to the east side of Eighth East street, thence north on Eighth East street to the south side of Brigham street, the same being in a part of sewer district No. 4.

ESTIMATES OF COST.

In accordance with resolutions prepared by Lawson the city engineer submitted estimates of cost of sewers as follows:

On north side of Fifth South street, extending from East Temple to West Temple, a distance of 660 feet, $2640 feet, or $4 per linear foot.

On north side of First South street, extending from Fifth East to Eighth East, thence north on Eighth East to Brigham, a distance of 3168 feet, $12674, or $3 per linear foot.

On the south side of First South street, extending from Second East to Fifth East, a distance of 2376 feet, $7128, or $3 per linear foot.

On the north side of First South street, extending from Second East to Fifth East, a distance of 2376 feet, $7128 feet, or $3 per linear foot.

On the north side of First South, between Second and Third East, a distance of 2376 feet, $7128, or $3 per linear foot.

Adopted.

The city recorder was instructed to advertise the notice of intention to construct the sewers mentioned in the foregoing.

STREET SIGNS.

The following from Horn was adopted:

The board of public works having failed to take any action in accordance with a resolution passed by this Council in regard to putting up street signs; therefore be it

Resolved, That the committee on Improvements be hereby authorized to have the work done as recommended.

Adopted.

WILL USE ITS OWN CARS.

The committee on streets made the following report:

In order to secure greater uniformity in the hauling and distribution of gravel for street repairs we have arranged to purchase from the R. G. W. Company fifteen narrow gauge cars at $40 each and to rent from the Union Pacific Railway Company an engine at a rental price of $6 per day. We ask confirmation of this arrangement and that the supervisor of streets be authorized to execute contracts with the railway companies accordingly.

The report was adopted.

ANOTHER BY LAWSON.

Be it resolved, That the city recorder be instructed to advertise the notice of intention to construct sewer in district No. 4, the same being located on the north side of First South and extending from Second East to Fifth East. Also, a sewer in sewer district No. 4, located on the west side of First South street, extending from Fifth East to the side of Eighth East street, thence west on Eighth East street to the south side of First South street, extending from Second East street to Fifth East. Also, a sewer in sewer district No. 6, located on the north side of Fifth South street, extending from East Temple to West Temple. Also, a sewer in sewer district No. 5, extending from West Temple street to Fifth South street on the east side of Third West street.

Adopted.

A TUSCAROARA INSPECTOR.

Rich wanted to know why the committee on streets had not reported on the alleged negligence of Gus Wood, the notorious State street paving inspector, who has obtained thirty days' leave of absence to accompany the Tuscaroras to Chicago.

Wantland replied that he did not think the committee's failure to report would seriously affect the questioner's health.

Rich—That is all very well, Mr. President, but it looks to me like that we have got a man here who is larger and more powerful than this council. I think we should assert ourselves in this matter and I move that the committee be instructed to report on this matter at the next regular meeting of the council.

Wantland intimated that the committee wanted more time.

Folland said that it was high time that something should be done in the matter at once.

Horn moved to amend by instructing the committee to report as soon as possible. Carried.

NEW WATER RATES.

The new water rates ordinance came up on its third reading but again went over to a future meeting.

Adjourned until Tuesday next at 7:30 p. m.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

At the weekly meeting of the Board of Education Thursday evening there were present—Colonel Nelson (presiding), Messrs. Alf. R. Lybould, Dooly, Newman and Pike.

A GOOD TEACHER WANTED.

Superintendent Millsaugh sent in a communication calling attention to the desirability of employing a teacher of special ability and careful training to have supervision of the primary grades, under the superintendent. About half of the teachers are engaged in the work of the first and third grades and this number is large enough to occupy the time in supervision of one person. Mr. Millsaugh finds it impossible to give all the departments the supervision necessary and thinks it desirable to employ a sub-superintendent, which is the course pursued in Ogden and other cities. Referred to the Committee on school work.

QUITE SATISFACTORY.

The following was received in regard to the school at the University of Utah:

Gentlemen—The arrangements made with you last year regarding the Training School have been so satisfactory, and the result so beneficial to us, that we respectfully ask for a similar arrangement next year. Awaiting an early reply, we are,
JOHN R. PARK, President.
WILLIAM E. STEWART,
Principal Normal School.

Referred to the committee on school work.

ABOUT MUSIC.

The subjoined letter was next read and referred to the committee on school work:

Board of Education:

Gentlemen:—By suggestion of the officers of the Salt Lake Tonic Sol-Fa Society, several competent musicians of this city have respectfully made application to you for appointment as vocal music teachers in the schools under your jurisdiction. Since then we have carefully read the report of business transacted at your meetings, but have seen no allusion therein to any disposition having been made of the applications alluded to.

Knowing the superior advantages of the Tonic sol-fa system as a means of rapidly and thoroughly educating children in vocal music, we are very desirous that the communications you have received from musicians, offering to teach it, should receive the consideration they deserve. Therefore, we respectfully request your honorable body to give the same your early attention.

Trusting that a favorable response will result, we remain, yours truly,

THE SALT LAKE TONIC SOL-FA SOCIETY.

Per HENRY GARDNER, Jr., President.

Mr. Pike asked what had become of the communication. He had never heard of it, and if such had been received it should have been read.

Professor Millsaugh stated that he had received several such communications, but none of them were addressed to the board.

SUPERVISION OF PRIMARY WORK.

Professor Millsaugh presented the appended communication:

Honorable Board of Education:

Gentlemen—I desire to call your attention to the desirability, as I regard it, of employing a teacher of special ability and careful training to have supervision of primary grades under the superintendent. About one-half of our entire corps of teachers are engaged in work of the first three grades. This number is large enough to occupy the time in supervision of one person. With 130 teachers I find it impossible to visit each room often than once in two months on an average. This is not sufficiently often to direct the work as it should be done. Moreover, these infrequent visits cannot be prolonged sufficiently to give the help which in many cases is needed. Where young teachers are employed it is extremely desirable that a supervisor visit them sufficiently often to guide their work in a right direction and prevent the formation of erroneous habits.

The plan which I propose is the one adopted in the greater number of our larger cities. In the neighboring city of Ogden where only forty teachers are employed such a supervisor is engaged in addition to the superintendent. This recommendation I have made after careful thought and after realizing fully the need in view of the experience which we have had during the past two years.

Referred to the committee on school work.

FINANCE.

The following statement of moneys received and disbursed from July 1, 1891, to June 1, 1892, was read:

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
June 16th, 1892.

Honorable Board of Education:
Gentlemen—At the request of several members of the board, permit me to submit the following financial statement of the receipts and disbursements on account of the public schools from July 1st, 1891, to June 1st, 1892:

RECEIPTS.

County School tax	$28,625 92
City School tax	23,18 79
Fifth District	3 30
Rent of Hooper barn	10 00
Bonds, 450 sold	436,941 01
Received from Hardy on account refund taxes	226 82

$ 512,124 4

DISBURSEMENTS.

School Expenses—
Indebtedness, July 1st, 1892.....	$ 26,200 66
General expense.....	10,199 41
Interest.....	1,967 46
Teachers.....	87,691 85
Janitors and supplies.....	12,311 65
School work supplies.....	1,039 68
Maintenance of school property.....	3,336 67
Rents.....	6,961 25
	$123,543 57

SCHOOL PROPERTY ACCOUNT.

Sites—
James Chesney, Seventh site.....	$ 2,400 00
Lincoln site.....	12,251 00
Jackson site.....	13,600 00
Washington site.....	9,500 00
Franklin site.....	9,935 00
	$ 47,686 00
Buildings—
Raymond and Rieben Seventh ward.....	$ 2,035 00
Costlerian, architect.....	101 40
Sierra Nevada Lumber Company.....	1,507 39
Tenth Ward Lumber Company.....	65 25
Harbold and Rieben.....	187 22
William J. Taddenham & Co., Twenty-first ward.....	4,686 88
George S. Spohr.....	172 63
Mosheim, Bird & Froud foot.....	600 00
School furniture and apparatus.....	$ 5,445 45
Miscellaneous (extended water mains, etc.).....	918 33
Old liabilities.....	728 21
Total disbursements to June 1st, 1892.....	$226,491 64

Balance in Treasurer's hands, June 1st, 1892.....	$117,114 05
Less warrants outstanding.....	1,214 24
Balance cash, June 1.....	$ 315,929 54
	$ 542,424 49

The following appropriations have been made since June 1:

General expense.....	569 10
Teachers salaries.....	9,867 50
Janitors and supplies.....	1,125 23
School work supplies.....	68 94
Maintenance of school property.....	27 75
Rents.....	635 00
Lincoln school paid on contract.....	$ 1,374 65
Refund of taxes.....	69,432 39
Cash on hand, June 1.....	$315,929 54
Paid since June 1.....	$3,430 06

Balance on hand.....$232,479 78

The following contracts for the erection of buildings are let to date:

Lincoln school.....	$ 24,800 00
Lowell school.....	46,499 92
Bryant school.....	20,000 00
Hamilton school.....	31,550 00
Franklin school.....	30,990 00
	$154,390 92

Bonds unsold.....$151,000 00

Respectfully submitted,

J. B. MORETON, Clerk.

Statement showing the amount available for building purposes:

Cash on hand June 1, 1892.....	$232,479 78
Bonds (after gold).....	150,000 00
Total.....	$ 382,479 78
Amount due on contracts let to date.....	$153,190 92
Amount due tax refund.....	15,793 43
Amount due school fund.....	35,421 97
Total.....	$204,606 32
Leaving balance available.....	$177,873 46

Both statements were ordered filed.

A NEW SCHOOL SITE.

The committee on sites and buildings reported that they had examined a number of sites in the First precinct near Third East and Sixth and Seventh South streets and, after carefully comparing the locations and prices of the different sites, recommended the acceptance of the offer of Mr. Thomas Maycock, hereto attached, for the sale of lot 7, block 19, plat "A," Salt Lake City survey, the same being 10 rods front on Third East and 20 rods deep, for the sum of $12,000, provided the title be found to be good and clear of all incumbrance. The south line of this lot is midway between Sixth South and Seventh South streets.

The committee recommend the plans of the architect for an eight-classroom building on this lot with such modifications and changes as your committee and superintendent of buildings may determine.

The report was adopted.

SALE OF OLD BUILDINGS.

The same committee recommended the sale of the old school building in the Twentieth ward to Messrs. Watson & Miller for the sum of $50, this being the highest offer received. Adopted.

Mr. Raybould said he had turned in a note by Mr. Greene for $150 as payment for the old building on the Sixth ward site.

MORE TEACHERS.

The following communication was made by Professor Millspaugh:

Hon. Board of Education:

Gentlemen—Hereby I have the honor to send you a second list of teachers who have during the past year been employed to the public schools, and recommend them for employment. The list includes those with whom or with whose principals I desired to confer before making recommendations to your committee.

I have had such conference since your last meeting and am convinced that their retention in the schools will be desirable.

These recommendations are made subject to the possession of a lawful certificate to teach by those named.

The list was read and filed.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following bills were reported by the finance committee for payment:

H. H. Rowe, rent at Folsom's addition for May and June.....	$ 30 00
J. Midgley & Co., slating blackboard at Twenty-first school.....	2 43
H. T. Duke, treasurer, for amount of special school tax refunded from April 25th to May 31st; increase.....	69,432 39
H. D. Woodcock Furniture Company, desks.....	15 30
G. M. Scott & Co., merchandise.....	1 33
Tenth Ward Lumber and Building Association, repairing roof at Tenth school.....	2 40
B. F. Allen & Co., cutting rails for Lincoln school.....	34 30
J. A. House, rent for May and June, Twenty-first school.....	100 00
Eighth Ward Eclectic Industrial Association, rent for May and June, Eighth ward.....	50 00
Utah National Bank, rent for May and June, "Whitney".....	140 00
Joseph E. Carter, rent for Hooper school for three months.....	360 00
George E. Blair, rent of Eagle Gate hall for June.....	35 00
Herald Publishing company, advertising.....	40 15
Deseret News company, advertising.....	6 15
George Harper, work done and material furnished Fourteenth ward.....	175 55
Salt Lake Building and Manufacturing company, repairs at Nineteenth school.....	62 36
Sears & Liddle, glazing.....	6 43
Parker & Dupue, first payment on contract for Lincoln school.....	1,345 15
Total.....	$71,967 51

Bills to the amount of $207,736 were referred to the finance committee.

Col. Nelson stated that the finance committee had recommended the payment of the bill due to Messrs. Parker & Dupue, as contractors for the Sixth building, for $1343.15. This payment had to be made and could not be brought before the board except by calling a special meeting. He asked the board to direct as to like cases in the future.

Mr. Dooley moved that the committee on finance be authorized to make payments on contracts when due.

The matter was referred to the committee on rules to report at the next meeting a way to make payments to contractors.

TAKING TIME BY THE FORELOCK.

Mr. Pike moved that hereafter any and all communications addressed to the board and received by any officer of the board be submitted by them to the clerk and by him read to the board. Mr. Dooley said it was useless, as the board has a private box and no one else would receive them.

Mr. Pike said that the Tonic Sol-fa system of teaching music should be investigated, as the board desired to know what system is the best.

The motion was seconded and carried.

A CLOUD ON IT.

Mr. Dooley said that there was a cloud on the title of the newly purchased site in the First ward, in that there was an unpaid water tax on the lot which was due when the lot was purchased.

Referred to the committee on sites and buildings.

Adjourned for one week.

A REPUBLICAN DEMONSTRATION.

There was a large and enthusiastic meeting of Republicans in the Salt Lake Theatre last night to ratify the Presidential nominations made at Minneapolis last week. The interior of the building was artistically decorated with flags and national bunting, while the circular base of the first gallery bore the following legends in letters of gorgeous colors: "We Recognize the Republican Party and No Other." "The Door is Open, Republicans Welcome!" "The Republican Party of Utah is Endorsed by the Nation." "Welcome Home, Salt Lake and Cannon." "We Shall Elect a Republican Congressman in November."

As Held's hand marched down the aisle discoursing a national air, the following prominent Republicans took their seats upon the stage: Judge Bennett, Arthur Brown, John Morgan, Arthur Pratt, W. F. James, Governor Thomas, John M. Zane, E. W. Tatlock, George M. Cannon, James Devine, Colonel Sells, Daniel Harrington, Harmel Pratt, Frank J. Cannon, Ben. E. Rich.

HON. JOHN F. LYNCH

was chosen chairman and in substance responded as follows:

I have just returned from Minneapolis where there were such vast crowds of Republicans that I was temporarily impressed with the idea that everybody in the United States were Republicans. (Laughter and applause.) In the enthusiastic demonstrations made there we became imbued with the idea that there should be but one party and that that should be Republican. With Benjamin Harrison at the head of the Presidential ticket victory is assured. From the days of Washington we have never had an administration that called out less criticism than the present one. On Tuesday we believed that that grandest of all statesmen—James G. Blaine—(Cheers) would be nominated, but on Wednesday there was a turn in the tide, and when Harrison was nominated by Dewey it seems that three-fourths of the delegates were for him and it soon became apparent that he was the choice of the people. Protection will be the slogan of the campaign. We want a Republican party in Utah—have one already. I trust that every Republican in this Territory will work for the organization of Republican clubs in every hamlet and village. We are known in the East. All we need to do is to show our honesty and enthusiasm, and our factional fight will soon be over. (Applause.)

HARREL PRATT

at this juncture was elected secretary of the meeting, after which said: We have met here to consider for a brief time the work of the grand old party at Minneapolis in nominating a presidential ticket. We commend and ratify this action. Nothing better could be done than to nominate Benjamin Harrison to the highest position in the power of the people. We can point to his administration as one made up of singular success. It has maintained peace at home, power abroad. First, The protective tariff act is one of wisdom and great good to the people and has reduced the aggregate of taxes collected to the extent of $50,000,000. Secondly, The reciprocity with the South American republics is applauded both at home and abroad as an act of justice. It gives us dignity and respect in the commercial world. Greater and purer patriotism has never been shown than that which has been exhibited in the present administration. It the settlement of the Chilean and Italian difficulties superior wisdom was apparent and so it goes through a long list of bright achievements. The second man on the ticket worked himself up from poverty to the high eminence of fame he now occupies. He convinced the country of his statesmanship and ability and was sent to France as a minister of the United States and we now would recognize him further. The platform of principles adopted by the Republicans at Minneapolis is worthy the support of every loyal citizen.

JUDGE BENNETT

Judge Bennett then offered the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we heartily approve and cheerfully ratify the nominations of Benjamin Harrison for the office of President and Whitelaw Reid for the office of Vice-President of the United States for the next Presidential term.

Resolved, That in the platform of principles, adopted by the late Republican National convention at Minneapolis, we recognize an excellent and statesmanlike document pledging our party to support and protect the best interests of the whole people of our country; especially do we heartily approve of the plank treating of protection to our home industries, reciprocity, restoration of silver to its former place as money, on a parity with gold, and statehood for the Territories, and most cordially do we join in its denunciation of the Democratic party for its efforts to destroy the tariff on wool and lead ores, two of the leading elements of wealth and prosperity in our Territory.

GOVERNOR THOMAS

was then introduced and advanced to the footlights amidst a volley of cheers. He said he did not know until a few minutes before that he would be called upon to endorse the resolution offered by Judge Bennett, but could not now decline the honor. He was a Republican and with Republicans ratified the nomination of Benjamin Harrison and Whitelaw Reid as President and Vice President respectively of the United States. He considered that the Republican party had been very fortunate in nominating such wise and able men. Its success in the coming campaign would be largely due to the magnificent administration given by President Harrison. He believed that the nominees would be elected. There was something about the present administration that appealed to the intelligence of the people. It had placed the business men of the United States in a stronger position in the markets of the world than they had before occupied. Republicans had just cause to be proud of their party. Its history was largely the history of the country during the last thirty years. No great act or broad measure had ever been drafted during this period but that had its origin in the Republican party. It made the people patriotic and taught them loyalty to law. It had no equal among the political parties of the world today.

It created love at home and peace abroad. It protects the workshop and those who toil therein. The Governor closed by predicting a sweeping victory for the ticket nominated.

ARTHUR BROWN

was next introduced as a man who was a Republican in every sense of the word and whose very physical and mental organization tingled with Republican enthusiasm. That gentleman was warmly applauded as he commenced his speech. He said that four years ago next November there was a rousing Republican meeting in Salt Lake City to ratify the election of Benjamin Harrison. It was full of enthusiasm. All factions of Republicans participated in that demonstration and were united at least for the time being. The time had again come when all should be one in deed, thought and purpose. Four golden years of prosperity during Republican rule had been recorded. Four years ago he had predicted without making any pretensions to being a prophet that Benjamin Harrison would be renominated and thus be President of the United States for eight years. The preliminary steps had been taken to make good his word. (Laughter and applause.) President Harrison has been met by many difficult and delicate questions. The President's chair is not a bed of roses. He has great problems to solve but our present executive has been equal to every emergency no matter how intricate it was. In Utah the silver question is a live and burning issue. We were producers of that precious metal in great abundance and to get its worth we cried for free silver. Able men had plead our cause in season and out. But there was one who had done more towards the accomplishment of our desires in that respect than all others and his name was Benjamin Harrison. While Congress had been in doubt as to which was the best course to pursue he appointed a commission that were formulating a plan that would give us a market for that precious product and put it on a parity with gold at a proper ratio. (Applause.) The great masses of both parties were opposed to free silver but it was now on the highway to success. The Republican theory and practice were home markets for home products. (Applause.) The most philosophical enactment by Congress in this respect was the passage of the McKinley bill. Republicans inherited their ideas regarding protection from their Whig ancestors and they knew that the McKinley bill was an act of wisdom, but honor should first be given to him whose name it bears. Yet not to him alone for he was backed and supported by many a compeer. When Great Britain recently showed signs of ill humor President Harrison showed that government that he was able to meet them in diplomacy or upon the battlefield if they desired it. In the little friction with the South American barbarians he maintained the dignity of our flag. Republicans of Utah as elsewhere did well to ratify the ticket nominated, but never as long as memory lasted would they forget the great plumed knight, the greatest of them all, James G. Blaine. (Cheers and protracted applause.) Neither should General Alger of Michigan go unremembered, nor that dark horse, whom they would nominate four years hence, William McKinley of Ohio. (Renewed applause.) It would be well to keep in mind, however, that the safe ones had been selected. Harrison had for four years been tested by every crucible, and Whitelaw Reid (cheers) was more than a journalist, he was now deservedly wearing the mantle of him who created Republicanism—Horace Greeley. (Loud applause.) It was in the recollection of some of the oldest Republicans how the semi-weekly Tribune, of which that learned and distinguished gentleman was editor, went abroad with good doctrine and converted thousands upon thousands of people.

The speaker here called the attention of the audience to Republicanism in Utah. He said there was a peculiar condition of affairs existing here and the meeting in which he was speaking had not only been called to ratify the nominations of the presidential ticket, but also the action of the convention with reference to Utah. There was but one Republican party in Utah and that was endorsed by the nation. (Applause.) The action in allowing two other gentlemen to occupy seats in that convention, in addition to the regular delegates, was simply in the interest of harmony. The right hand of fellowship had been extended to them and he trusted that it was accepted in the same spirit it was given. Factionalism and "Liberalism" were now dead in Utah. (Prolonged cheering and applause.) The Brilliant Goodwin had been honored by being appointed by the regular delegates to wait upon the President and inform him of his renomination, simply as an exhibition of good will. The great bone of contention—the office of national committee-man was given to the staunchest of us all—O. J. Salisbury. He has ever been true to the star of Republicanism in Utah. He would do more towards harmonizing all factions than any other. He was the right man in the right place. He had ever been for Straight Republicanism in Utah and it would be well for malcontents to understand once for all that he could not be bullied. He was a man with nerve, courage and backbone in abundance.

Republicanism should govern this country and must govern Utah. Every office in the Territory within the gift of the people should be filled with Republicans. (Applause.) Carrying water on both shoulders would soon be a thing of the past in Utah. "The door is open, Republicans welcome!" was the motto for which all should work. Union of Church and State could not be tolerated in any sense. They were told before a committee in Minneapolis by a certain gentleman that certain church dignitaries has sent their delegates there with instructions what to do and what not to do. Had that been true the weikin would have been made to ring with the cry of church interference and every newspaper would have issued an extra. The provision in the platform favoring the entire separation of Church and State was a good one. It was put there for a purpose. It did not mean one church alone but all without distinction as to their creeds. The Republican party had before the people a platform of principles upon which they could all stand secure from Democratic invasion.

COLONEL ELIJAH BELLS

was the next speaker. He said that he was a Republican from the ground up. He had been an advocate of Republican principles in Iowa in 1855, the year before the party was organized. He wanted to go on record as fully endorsing and ratifying the action of the Republican Convention at Minneapolis. Next to his family the Republican party was nearest his heart. He had helped fight its battles and would continue to do so.

The Colonel here amused the audience greatly by the narration of one of his funny stories, in which, of course, the Democratic party was not made to figure to the best advantage. Continuing, he said the Republican party was the grandest political organization that had ever been brought into being. It had put down the rebellion and saved the nation. Its existence was replete with splendid achievements. Its record was one to be proud of. He advised the nomination of a Republican as D-delegate to Congress in November next. If proper methods were pursued he would be elected too. Hereafter Republicans in this Territory work hand in hand, otherwise they would not succeed. When union was once established Republicans would be made with great rapidity in Utah. (Applause.)

FRANK J. CANNON

next addressed the meeting. He said there was a band of enthusiastic adherents, for the late Secretary of State, who went from Utah to Minneapolis, who fought for the supremacy of Blaine principles, who remained awake nights planning for Blaine's nomination and who marched under Blaine banners, but when defeated in their anticipation they made their way to Harrison headquarters, keeping time to Blaine music and declared that they had but one desire and that was the wish of the majority of the Republican party. It was a pleasure to nominate a ticket that you knew was going to win. Instead of having the fight of 1884 over again the Republicans had nominated a man who defeated Cleveland four years later, and who would do it again providing that gentleman was made the standard bearer of democracy.

The speaker here paid a glowing tribute to President Harrison, whom he declared had conducted himself in such a manner during his incumbency of office as to cause the greatest reverence for the name of America wherever it was spoken.

The nations of Europe, he declared would lend aid in the election of a Democratic President. Why? Because the Republican party had caused thrones to tremble and kings to grasp their royal diadems with nervous clutch, dislodging them from their unbolty seats of power. God's best gift to humanity was the government of the United States. (Applause.)

E. W. TATLOCK

made a strong characteristic speech in which he announced his fidelity to the Republican party of Utah. "In order that there might be no mistakes as to my position," said the speaker, "I mean the Republicans without an adjective." (Loud applause.) If a Republican should be nominated for delegate to Congress in November next—and he hoped there would be—he could assure him one vote at least. (More applause.)

JUDGE BOWMAN

said he, too, ratified the Minneapolis nominations and he did so without strings or adjectives. He knew but one party and that was the Republican.

He would unhesitatingly vote for a Republican Delegate to Congress if he had the opportunity. He had been invited to come into the Republican party—a live party and had done so. It was a party of living issues—the Democrats were imitators and had been camping in Republican graveyards for twenty years.

Harrison was one of the greatest men in the country, Blaine not excepted.

JOHN MORGAN

in a brief speech referred to some of the main events of the Minneapolis convention, and declared that he returned well satisfied with the results.

JOHN M. ZANE

was called for and said that there had been a great cry in this Territory about certain Federal officials at the Minneapolis convention, and the course they had pursued. He had been one of them. He had applauded and worked and cheered for Blaine until his throat grew sore and his voice husky and he didn't care who knew it. He found out afterward that he had made a mistake and was willing to acknowledge it. The convention was right and he was wrong. A National Republican was never known to commit an error. Harrison was undoubtedly the man. His character was stainless and his integrity unimpeached.

He then made repeated humorous references to the Democratic party beginning with Tammany and ending with the Tuscatoras, whom he said had taken their name from the lowest, meanest and most despicable tribe of Indians that ever trod the earth. He would work for the best interests of the Straight Republican party of Utah.

JAMES DEVINE

It was now nearly 11 o'clock and there were frequent and loud cries for James Devine, who hesitatingly arose and briefly traced the history of Republicanism in Utah from its establishment in this Territory. The future was full of promise and other and greater victories would yet perch on the banners of the Grand Old Party in Utah.

MALAD STAKE CONFERENCE.

A quarterly conference of the Malad Stake of Zion was held at Malad City on the 12th and 13th insts. The stand was occupied by Apostle John W. Taylor, President of Seventies Seymour B. Young, and Brother Andrew Jensen, visitors; also a goodly number of Stake officers and Bishops as Stake ward representatives. President O. C. Harkins presided. During the conference Brother Andrew Jensen spoke on the need of keeping Stake, ward and even family records, explaining the methods that should be used, and giving some interesting and instructive historical sketches.

Apostle John W. Taylor treated on the subject of marriage. President of Seventies Seymour B. Young, in a pointed discourse, showed that the inventions of the day are the fruits of inspiration, and spoke logically on family training.

The Stake officers were unanimously sustained, and Brothers Richard Morse and Brigham Jones, and President of Seventies William A. McCrary appointed to fill vacancies in the Stake High Council.

The discourses were truly a feast of spiritual instruction, and it is to be hoped that the teachings will long be remembered by the Saints.

WM. ANTHONY, Sec'y.

DEATHS.

WHITE.—In this city, June 10th, of whooping cough, Alfred Thomas, son of John and Sarah White, aged two years and eight months.

PARKER.—In Salt Lake City, June 10th, of heart disease, John, son of Charles W. and Sarah Parker; aged 9 years and 4 months.

THOMAS.—In the Nineteenth ward of this city, June 13, 1892, of heart failure, Gilbert W. son of Moroni J. and Agnes Olsen Thomas; born March 6, 1886, in this city.

GABBITASK.—At Springville, Utah county, May 25th, 1892, George Gabbitask, formerly of Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, England, aged 49 years. Emigrated to Utah in 1864.

PELUPHER.—At Erastus, Arizona, June 3d, 1892, of congestion of the lungs, Ellen Grace, daughter of David and Elizabeth I. Pelupher; born September 31st, 1860.

THORLEY.—At Cedar City, Iron county, Utah, June 10th, 1892, Hattie F. Thorley. She was the widow of the late William A. Thorley, who died on the 24th day of last March, and her death was undoubtedly due to the effects of excessive grief caused by the untimely death of her husband and that of their first-born, a son, who died immediately after his birth on the 29th day of May last.

THE DESERT WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION

ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION.

ESTABLISHED

JUNE, 1850.

NO. 2.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1892.

VOL. XLV.

DR. MAESER'S LECTURE.

My brethren and sisters, if at any time during the course of my ministry I have had cause to be thankful for the manifest assistance of the Spirit of the Lord in my endeavors, it has been in this present course of lectures in this building, during the week that is now drawing to a close. I must confess I entered upon the duty with much fear and trepidation—fear lest the interest in this work would not be made sufficiently strong to enable the young and those interested in the Sunday school cause to hold out to the end. But instead of my fears being realized, I have reason to be thankful for the increased interest among our people. This is the occasion of my joy and my gratitude.

It is no small credit to Sunday school workers and friends of this great movement in the midst of Zion, in this city and neighborhood, that they have been able to devote six successive evenings to this series of lectures, and not become tired. The lectures themselves are of such a character as not to admit of any flights of oratory, nor remarks of an entertaining nature merely; but rather it is the duty of the lecturer to bring out in bold relief and make clear every point and devote his earnest purpose for the benefit of all before him, in order to establish something, of inviting ideas, endeavors and understanding of those concerned in the work to be treated upon. I will now proceed to the subjects for this evening which will conclude my series of lectures.

The main features of the organization of a Sunday school and of the work to be performed having been dwelt upon in the previous lectures, there remains for me now only according to the programme these subjects—reviews, festivals, and the general board of the Union.

In regard to the first of these, I would remind my fellow-workers in the Sunday school cause of the ancient educational motto "Repetitio mater studiorum," which means: "Repetition is the mother of studies." The importance of frequent reviews cannot be over-estimated. The process of learning any kind of truth, theoretically as well as practically, resembles very much the process of making chromos. When the artist proceeds to do this, the first impression made upon the paper as it goes through the rollers is scarcely perceptible; the second time it goes through it becomes a little plainer; here and there fine outlines may be seen; the third time the outlines become more observable, and so on, until sometimes they pass through the rollers thirty to forty times before the finishing touch is given or the chromo completed. Now, somewhat upon the same process does the human mind operate. We may advance a principle for the first time. It passes over the mind and leaves its impression. It is said by chemists that by taking a key or any metallic substance and putting it for but a moment on a white sheet of paper, then immediately remove it, there remains upon that paper an impression for the time being which can through certain means be seen, though with the natural eye it cannot; so there are latent lines, according to the laws of optics, that leave their impressions upon substances without being discovered by the naked eye. So it is with the mental operations throughout all nature. Any kind of teaching once told is liable to fade away. It must be given over and over again, frequently repeated, and the more it is repeated the stronger the impression upon the mind becomes. Hence a teacher among the children should remember this, and if he uses pictures also it brings the second sense of sight into play, creating the same picture upon the mind through another means, making the truth, or picture, stronger and more lasting. If, also, we cause the children to make that picture with blocks, sticks or draw various object lessons, the sense of touch and feeling gives another impression of the same picture through the third sense. And so on; the more of the senses the teacher calls into operation the stronger that picture becomes. So it is with reviews. The ideas and principles should be repeated over and over again, until the teacher becomes satisfied that the pupils fully understand and will remember the same. Our teachers should not be deceived by memorized answers of the pupils, for sometimes these are deceptive and do not represent the knowledge and understanding of the pupil regarding that truth or idea. The testimony, the expression of the child in its own language—these become stronger and plainer upon the child's mind. A child may have a vague and crude conception of an idea.

Let it express it as best it can and behold that once vague idea is now plain, substantial and lasting. These are benefits of frequent reviews.

There are two kinds of reviews, incidental or special, and general. The former is conducted by their respective class teachers as often as they deem it necessary in his class. For instance, at the close of a certain section of a text book, every three or four weeks, or when certain principles or subjects have been passed over, or at the end of every principle. After the Lord's Prayer has been taken up and thoroughly handled, or the Ten Commandments, or certain of the Articles of Faith, the Life of Christ or any great prophet or certain period of Church history, whenever it is deemed necessary by the teacher to be convinced that his children understand thoroughly that which they have passed over, he should never give them more than they can digest. It is like taking stock. The merchant goes over the whole of his goods on hand to find out how much he has and what condition it is in. He makes nothing but reviews it all. So it is with reviews. There may be some who cannot always be present, and these reviews train all in the class in the same principles. These are the special or incidental reviews.

But these general reviews cannot be conducted to any great good unless there is a journal kept in every Sunday school wherein is recorded every principle that is passed over at the end of each session or term. There should be a column so ruled that each class may have recorded each day's work, or at least each subject. For instance, one Sunday the class is discussing faith, repentance or baptism, one of the ten commandments, the crucifixion, or any other subject. After the exercise the teacher should go to the journal and in his respective column simply enter the subject. Then whenever a review is desired, all the respective teachers have to do to obtain a good idea of what they want to review is to take up the journal and from its headings arrange the programme for the review. The superintendent may wish to visit a certain class and see what progress it is making. All he has to do is to turn to the journal, find out what subject the class had taken upon the previous Sunday and then he is prepared to talk or ask questions intelligently. He should see that the teacher uses judgment in the connection of one subject with another. If anything is wrong he knows how to correct it. A teacher may be absent, and by referring to the journal the substitute can get right along in the same line of study without any break.

Then the students will progress; they will learn the order of the principles of the Gospel, consecutively, logically, rationally—like the plants grow, like all nature works, like our Heavenly Father does all things—in order. Always teach and instruct according to the eternal laws of sound reasoning. Whatever God does is in order; and in everything that we should keep that ideal, that divine Master in view as our guide. We do not know how things are done in heaven, but we know of the spirit which characterizes their actions there. It is the Spirit of God, order, love, kindness, gentleness; and these things should be held up before the pupils continually. It is the children that we are laboring for their good, progress and salvation, because their spiritual, physical, intellectual welfare is at stake.

General reviews should be held at regular intervals with the whole Sunday school and consist of an actual repetition of the work done—a rehearsal if you please so held that every class will have the benefit thereof. And in all these reviews, see to it that every child has an opportunity of answering questions—not leave one or two to do all the answering; for they are too much like "parade horses." It would be of great benefit to this Sunday School if the superintendent and his assistants should make it a point to hold a special review with at least one class every Sunday, until they become posted by direct observation with the standing of each class. These reviews, whether special or general, can only be of real benefit to the pupils when they are based upon the actual work done since the last review of the same kind. That can be done effectually only by having reference to the weekly journal, to be kept for every class in a general book. From every subject during the period to be covered by the review the superintendent or teacher should formulate at least one question. Some teachers are satisfied simply with the answer given; but every answer should be the inward expression of the student's knowledge and understanding.

There are two ways of teaching children to learn. One is by a compulsory means, the other by emulative means. In our Sunday schools the former cannot be used to any great extent, for we should rather teach by loving words and kind acts; therefore the best plan at our disposal is the emulative methods. Some teachers distribute prizes to induce pupils to exert and emulate one another, but I do not think this the best method. Our Father in heaven does not do it; why should we?

The next subject is "Festivals, jubilees." The object of these festive occasions of the Sunday school organizations is a manifold one. There is, however, one feature of them that has received, in some instances, too great prominence. It seems that some superintendents have the idea that these occasions are gotten up for the sake of mere show and display, regardless of any positive educational tendencies. The symptoms of that misconception in regard to the nature of jubilees are noticeable in the arrangement of the programme of exercises. Recitations are sometimes allowed to be given that are not in the slightest degree illustrative of any moral or religious principle, and are chosen for the simple purpose of giving the reciter a source for some acclamatory display, although the attempt may be a long way beyond his capacity; as, for instance, the declamation of "Cattiline's Defiance" and similar pieces. The greatest mistake, however, is generally made in the selection of songs. We have such a fine collection of musical pieces from our own home composers that it is inadvisable to have at any jubilee from five to six pieces of music by foreign composers, to the almost entire exclusion of our own. The Saints are a musical people, and a characteristic style of Latter-day Saint music is rapidly developing itself, which should find due recognition at our Sunday school jubilees. I do not desire to be understood as opposed to occasional selections from the grand masters' music, inasmuch as such selections will stimulate connoisseurs and performers to renewed exertions in the "divine art," and direct them in the further progress of the work so nobly begun already. We must impress upon the youth of Zion that this people will lead in music as in all other branches of learning. I would love to see in all our jubilees the songs of Zion strongly impressed upon the youth of this people. For these beautiful strains of music will reverberate in their souls when they get old, and remembrances will spring up that will animate the whole being. "Why, that is the old song I learned in Sunday school when in my youth." In the hours of sorrow and grief, when temptation's hand is over you, when you are amidst storms and vicissitudes of a struggling, when they hear the songs of Zion they heard in their youth, their souls will be filled with joy and their hearts will be made glad. It will be one of the most sacred remembrances of their life. In drawing up the exercises for the programme for these jubilees, the entire faculty or staff of officers of the school, or schools, should be consulted and all work harmoniously together.

My next subject is "The Deseret Sunday School Union Board." As the name "Union" implies, there is no better word that could express any better the meaning. The Union, a unit, united together—a united organization—after the pattern of the whole kingdom. In my travels among the Saints the prophet of the Lord told me that in my visits to these organizations in Zion I was to impress upon them that all operations connected with the youth of Zion must be done after the pattern of the Priesthood. I understood what he meant. I worked to it constantly. There is no other organization as perfect as the Priesthood; it is an eternal one; it is the only organization that we know of that has not the seeds of dissolution in it.

No school should strike out for itself; everyone should seek the head—the Union Board—for guidance. The Union and schools are like the grand pyramid, from the head extending wider and wider, from the General Superintendency, Union Board, Superintendent of Stake, Ward Superintendents, Teachers, etc., all forming the grand link that will hold us together—ramifying from a common head into the remotest parts of the earth. All point to the Union Board as their head—their guide. To this board all matters deserving attention should be presented.

This now brings me to the last point to be considered, i.e., answering the questions that have been submitted in writing.

First question.—What is your opinion in regard to teachers reading novels, letters or newspapers in Sunday school?

Answer.—I had no opinion. I did not think such a thing had been done. I did not think it possible for any one who had accepted the sacred calling of a teacher to ever suggest such a thing. If any one wishes to do so, let them remain away from the school, where the children will not be tainted by such an influence and spirit. They should not come to darken the spirit—God's sunlight—with such dark and evil thoughts.

Second question.—Would you recommend the dismissal of the primary department before the rest of the school? Is it supposed that each department will have its own opening and closing exercises? If so, would you have the sacrament administered in each department?

Answer.—That depends on circumstances. If possible, the whole Sunday school should be a pattern of union held together like the fern leaf with its main stem and all the ramifications. Break a part of it and it will still have a main stem from which the other branches or fibres radiate; still divide and sub-divide until it takes the power of the microscope, and still the main stem is visible—it resembles the whole.

This is the principle of the Priesthood in its least and smallest organization. It resembles that perfect order, still resembling the whole; or like the crystal, no matter how fine you crush it up, through the powerful glass can be seen the crystallized form still. So with the Sunday schools. Every class or department should be perfect, and a pattern of the whole, and therefore, wherever possible, they should all meet and separate from the same room. They will then all be animated by the same influence, partake of the same welcome and separate with the same blessed benediction. Where it is impossible, let them dismiss separately but in the same order, and certainly have all the ordinances as in the main school.

Third question.—In your, Dr. Maeser's, remarks the other evening you said that ten were enough for one class. I would like to know what you would do when the intermediate and theological classes have twenty-five or more?

Answer.—What I said applied simply to the two intermediates—that the students would learn more by dividing up into classes of say ten, after the regular lesson is over, and having teachers—all teach the same principles—preside over the subdivisions of the large class for about the same time the whole class exercises together. This is merely a suggestion.

Fourth question—Is it proper in the theological class to enter into and discuss so-called mysteries; or should such subjects give place to the first principles of the Gospel?

Answer.—Many will try to fly to great heights, and climb to great altitudes, and forget that the Sunday school is not a "school of the Prophets." Teachers should confine themselves to the solid, staid, and well grounded subject—leave mysteries entirely alone—Sunday school is not the place for them. If they go beyond this they are beyond their horizon. They will get in deep water and are in danger of being drowned. Whatever subjects are authorized are legitimate studies. Leave all others severely alone.

Question.—"Will not the position you have taken with regard to our Sunday schools, that they should not be interrupted by other meetings, and that officers and teachers should not be called away to perform other duties, be detrimental to other organizations and interests in the Church?"

Answer.—"I think it is very hurtful to the Sunday schools to have them interrupted. It sets a bad example before the children. We want them to grow up to be depended on. The examples we set them will follow them through life. And if a person is needed where in one position than another he should be released from the one, that he might fill the other and throw his energies therein."

Q.—Has not a superintendent the right to conduct his Sunday school as he pleases, irrespective of any methods that may be considered by others an advancement?"

A.—No, he has not. No one has such a right, for two reasons. First—No one has a monopoly on truth, and when a superintendent or teacher has learned so much he cannot be taught further he is not fit for a teacher. Second—There is a Sunday School Union Board who are constantly working and laying out plans to follow. To this board we should go for all information. That is what it is organized for—to direct the movements of the schools.

I now close, asking my Heavenly Father to mercifully overlook any mistakes I may have made, and to bless every word that has found His approval to the good of the children of Zion.

May God bless the Sunday school work and those who labor in that sacred cause; that they may gather up treasures in heaven recorded in their favor for their labors among the youth of Zion, in my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

An excellent spirit prevailed throughout the entire course of lectures and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Dr. Maecer.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION

CHICAGO, June 21.—The National Democratic Convention was in session two hours today and during that time the name of but one illustrious American was mentioned and that was James G. Blaine. By a singular coincidence the Democratic idol, Grover Cleveland, who is destined to be the nominee of the convention, was unmentioned throughout the session, while the name of Blaine called forth the most enthusiastic demonstration of the day. Mr. Caple, of Illinois, offered the following:

"Resolved, That this convention tender its profound sympathy to that distinguished American, James G. Blaine, in his heavy affliction which has befallen him."

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Before its purport was known and immediately on the mention of the word "Blaine" the secretary was interrupted by a tremendous ovation which recalled the tribute accorded the name at Minneapolis. Equally pleasant was the incident which followed when Hon. E. C. Sweet, of Maine, arose and thanked the convention on behalf of his State for the resolutions adopted.

The indications are that the national convention of 1892 is not to be as tumultuous as was generally predicted.

The proceedings today were unanimously tame, but no action was offered to call forth any particular party enthusiasm.

Temporary Chairman Owen made the only speech of the day.

THE ONLY DISSENTION

which occurred during the day's proceedings was over an attempt of several delegates to throw open the vacant galleries to the crowds of eager Democrats who were standing outside in the rain. No one seemed able to explain the reason, but throughout the session there were 8000 unoccupied seats in the galleries of the convention hall, and there was a great popular inquiry as to who held the tickets for the seats. No one volunteered any information, but the national committee naturally came in for the most of the blame, and it was generally asserted that members of the organization or some of their favorite friends had pocketed the tickets to be used when the time comes in filling the galleries with cheers for some particular candidates.

Probably never in the history of American National conventions have press arrangements been so wretched and accommodations to active workers so inadequate. While there are 8000 vacant gallery seats there were over 400 hundred representatives of the press, half, it would seem, representatives of daily papers, standing on the outside and unable to gain admittance to the hall. The most of these gentlemen were from Western and Southern States and failed to secure the usual courtesies because of the matter being referred to the Washington Press Committee. Only 350 seats were accorded the committee. They quite naturally gave the preference to the papers having representatives at the National capital. The Congressional Press Committee maintained that as only 350 seats were allotted for the distribution, they certainly could not give accommodations to 2000 newspaper workers, and that they should not be blamed for lack of facilities, when the question was determined solely by the National Committee. Several vain attempts were made to open the vacant galleries to outsiders, and particularly to Union veterans of the late war, but the matter was referred to the committee on resolutions.

The conviction that

CLEVELAND SHALL BE THE LEADER

Of the Democratic party had full possession of the delegates today, and so fixed were their minds that all other things were merely done to reach this result, and for which the convention will rush impetuously and with unanimity that must settle the helpless opposition and amaze the Republican party.

Two strong factors in the Democratic party, the South and Tammany Hall, will not play leading parts, as they want to do. The moment the South believed Cleveland could carry New York, the opposition in the South, headed by Watterson, melted away and the popular demand for the nomination of Cleveland grew to be irresistible.

This means that Tammany Hall is one of the obstacles to Cleveland's royal triumph. The fact is manifest that the broken Republican lines in Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas infused courage into the Democrats. The doubtful Democratic States of the West are uniting on Cleveland. Neither the South nor the West can furnish a candidate for the Presidency in 1892. Indeed the efforts with brass bands and public parades to make candidates of Hill, Palmer, Morrison and Boies are no more successful than whisperings for Gorman and Carlisle. And while it is true that the ex-Federal office-holders are here in formidable numbers, still men like Gorman and Palmer, Boies and Gray are here to execute the will of the masses. Never was a National Democratic convention more thoroughly dominated by popular opinion against judgment.

The selection of ex-Governor Gray of Indiana, as the running mate of ex-President Cleveland, seemed probable last night and this morning, but later in the day it transpired that Gray might have opposition where least expected. There are various members of the Indiana delegation who are opposed to the selection of Gray and who have been disposed to construe his nomination as an affront to the people who have born the brunt of the battle in the Hoosier State in behalf of Cleveland and in opposition to the Presidential ambition of Indiana's favorite son. The discussion of this peculiar situation in the Hoosier State caused the entire question to be opened again. It is said that the Cleveland people of Indiana favor the selection of Congressman Bynum of Indianapolis if an Indiana man is to be nominated for the Vice-Presidency and the Georgia delegation is also understood to favor Bynum. Stevenson and Morrison of Illinois, Boies of Iowa and Campbell of Ohio, are also freely discussed, but despite the speculation Gray appears to be the favorite candidate for the Vice-Presidency.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Those having tickets of admission to the Wigwam began to assemble early, and when at 11:30 Temporary Chairman Owens called the convention to order and presented Rev. A. H. Henry to offer prayer, 15,000 people occupied the great hall of the audience room. When the preacher ceased his prayer for a truer, broader, nobler Democracy, that should work for the masses against the few there was hesitating handclapping, which finally grew to cheers.

The committee on credentials announced that they would not be ready to report till 2 p. m.

The committee on resolutions was called, but reported that it was not ready.

A committee was appointed to learn when the committee on credentials could report.

R. Q. Mills entered the hall greeted by shouts which ran from Mills to Hill, and on motion of a delegate, Mills was invited to address the convention. He reported that he was too ill to speak and soon left the hall. Then, on motion of the Michigan delegate, Senator Palmer of Illinois was invited to address the convention. When the gray haired Senator appeared coming down the aisle the cheer grew to a roar. Palmer put his hearers in a pleasant mood at once by a comical story and light comments on the crowd. The keynote of Palmer's talk was unity and co-operation. We want no skulkers in this great fight. Every man must work. The sentiment was cheered roundly. "Select a solid, firm Democrat for this contest, put the banner in his hand, then rally about him," said Palmer. "Hill is the man" came a voice from the gallery, and the name of the New Yorker was caught up and shouted from side to side. It grew and grew until the cheers and hisses died away. When the aged speaker claimed that Illinois would be Democratic the shouts were wild.

The credentials committee then announced they were ready to report. J. E. Lamb, Indiana, presented the report of the committee. Sitting delegate Barnard, first Ohio, was seated. In Utah, H. P. Henderson and John T. Caine were seated.

In New Mexico and Arizona the claims of each to six delegates was conceded; in Alabama the contesting delegation is given seats without votes. Morris and Davis were seated from the District of Columbia.

The committee on permanent organization reported W. L. Wilson, West Virginia, permanent chairman; S. P. Sheerin, Wisconsin, permanent secretary.

A committee was appointed to conduct the permanent chairman to the chair. When he was brought forward and introduced, he proceeded to deliver his speech of acceptance.

CHAIRMAN WILSON'S SPEECH.

Gentlemen of the Convention:—I thank you most heartily for this honor. I shall try to meet the duties of the high position to which you call me with a spirit of fairness and equality, that is Democracy.

This convention has a high patriotic work to perform. We owe much to our party; we owe much to our country. The mission of the Democratic party is to fight for the under dog. When that party is out of power we may be sure that there is an under dog to fight for, and that under dog is generally the American people. When that party is out of power, we may be sure that some party is in control of our government that represents a section and not the whole country, that stands for a class and not the whole people. Never was this truth brought home to us more definitely than by the recent convention at Minneapolis. We are not deceived as to the temper; we are not in doubt as to the purpose of our opponents. Having taxed us for years without excuse and without mercy, they now propose to disarm us of further power to resist their exaction.

Republican success in this campaign, when we look to the party platform, the party candidates, or the utterances of the party leaders, means that the people are to be stripped of their franchise through force bills, in order that they may be stripped of their substance through tariff bills. Free government is self-government. There is no self-government when the people do not control their own elections and levy their own taxes. When either of those rights are taken away or diminished, a breach is made, not in the outer defenses, but in the citadel of our freedom. For years we have been struggling to recover the lost right of taxing ourselves, and now we are threatened with the loss of the great right to govern ourselves. The loss of one follows in necessary succession the loss of the other. When you confer on the government the power of dealing out wealth, you unchain every evil that can prey upon and eventually destroy free institutions—excessive taxation, class taxation, billion dollar Congresses, corrupt civil service, a debauched ballot box and purchased elections. In every campaign the privilege of taxing the people will be bartered for contributions to corrupt them at the polls. After every victory, a new McKinley bill is to repay these contributions with taxes wrung from the people. For every self-governing people there can be no more momentous question than the question of taxation. It is a question, Burke truly said, around which all great battles of freedom have been fought. It is a question out of which grow all issues of government. Until we settle this question wisely, permanently, and justly, we build all other reform foundations of sand. We and the great party we represent are today for tariff reform, because it is the only gateway to a genuine Democratic government.

The distinguished leader who presided over the Republican convention boasted that he does not know what tariff reform is. Whoever said he did? Let us hope with that charity that endureth all things and believeth all things, that he is truly as ignorant as he admits himself to be. Unfortunately the people are not so ignorant of the meaning of protection—at least of the protection which was leaked out to them in the bill that bears his name. They see the meaning of the "Writ Large" today in the prostrated agriculture, in the shackled commerce, in the stricken industries, in the compulsory idleness of labor, in the law-made wealth, in the discontent of the workmen and the despair of the farmer. They know by hard experience protection as a system of taxation, but as the old, crafty scheme by which the rich compel the poor to pay the expenses of the government. They know by hard experience, protection as a system of tribute, but an old, crafty scheme by which the power of taxation of the people is made the private property of the few of the people.

Tariff reform means to readjust this system of taxation and purge away this system of tribute. It means that we have not reached the goal of perfect freedom as long as any citizen is forced to pay tribute to any other citizen, and until our taxes are proportioned to the ability and duty of the tax payer rather than to his ignorance, his weakness and his patience.

Governor McKinley further charged that the Democratic party believes in taxing ourselves. I am afraid, gentlemen, we must admit this charge. What right or excuse have we to tax anybody else? With a continent for our country, and with freedom and intelligence as the instruments for its development we shall stand disgraced in the eyes of mankind if we cannot and if we do not support our own government. We can throw that support on other people only by beggary or by force. If we use one we are a pauper nation; if we use the other we are a pirate nation. The Democratic party does not intend that we should be either. No more does it intend that they shall falsely call it taxing other people to transfer our taxes from the possession of those who own the property of the country to the bellies and backs of those who do the work of the country. It believes frugality is an essential virtue of a free government. It believes that taxes should be limited to the public needs and be levied by a plain rule of justice and economy.

But, gentlemen, we are confronted with a new cry in this campaign. The Republican party, says Governor McKinley, now stands for protection and reciprocity. He was for protection when he framed his bill in the House, or rather permitted his beneficiary to frame it for him, and firmly resisted all efforts of the statesman from Maine to annex reciprocity to it. No wonder he favors the reciprocity added by the Senate. You may explore the pages of burlesque literature for anything more supremely ludicrous than the so-called reciprocity of the McKinley bill. It is not reciprocity at all. It is retaliation, and the worst of all, retaliation on our own people. It punishes American citizens for the necessities or follies of other people. It says to a few small countries south of it, "If you are forced by your necessities or led by your follies to make bread higher and scarcer to your people, we will make shoes and sugar higher and scarcer to our people." And now we are told that reciprocity is to be their battle cry.

Already we are regaled with the pictures of Benjamin Harrison clad in armor, going forth to battle for reciprocity on his plumed steed. Simple Simon fishing for whales in his mother's rain barrel and in great triumph capturing an occasional wiggle-waggle is only a true, realistic picture of the reciprocity of the McKinley act. We are for protection that protects, and for reciprocity that reciprocates. We are in favor of protecting every man in the enjoyment of his labor, diminished only by his proper contributions for the support of the government, and we are for that real reciprocity, not through bickering diplomacy and presidential proclamations, but by laws of Congress that removes all unnecessary obstacles between the American producer and the markets he is obliged to seek for his products.

In so large a convention as this it would be ominously strange if there were not some differences of opinion on matters of policy, some differences of judgment or preference as to the choice of candidates. It is a sign of free Democracy that it is many-voiced, and within the limits of true freedom, tumultuous. It wears no collars, it serves no masters.

It is not for me, gentlemen, an impartial servant of you all, to attempt to forebadow what your choice should be or ought to be in the selection under your own sense of responsibility to the people you represent and to your country. One thing only, I venture to say, whoever may be your chosen leader in this campaign, no telegram will flash across the seas from castles of absentee tariff lords to congratulate him. But from the home of the laborer, from the home of the toiler, from the hearts of all who love justice and equity, who wish and intend that our matchless heritage of freedom shall be the commonwealth of all our people, and the common opportunity of all our youth, will come up the prayers for his success and recruits for the great Democratic host that must strike down the beast of sectionalism and the monarch of monopoly before we can have ever again the people's government run by the people's faithful representatives.

Wilson's speech was received with frequent bursts of applause.

At its close W. H. English, Indiana, presented the report of the committee on rules to make the rules of the last National Democratic Convention the rules of this convention. Adopted. The unit rule heretofore in force, therefore holds good in this convention. Delegate Phelps, of Missouri, presented the chairman in behalf of the miners of Missouri, a gavel of zinc as a protest against tariff on that metal.

The roll was then called for the naming by State of their national committeemen. While the list was being made up, ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio, in response to persistent calls, spoke five minutes, closing with "When November rolls around, keep your eye on Ohio."

CHICAGO, June 22.—The contest was decided unanimously in favor of the sitting delegates, Henry P. Henderson and John T. Caine.

This fight was precisely similar to the Utah contest at Minneapolis. The contestants belong to the old "Liberal" or anti-"Mormon" party. Caine and Henderson claim that now that the "Mormons" have relinquished polygamy there can be none but a regular Democratic and a regular Republican contest.

CHICAGO, June 22.—Every man, whether a spectator or delegate, who held a ticket knew full well as he went to the wigwam this afternoon that before the session was over the battle would be done. The atmosphere was charged heavily with moisture. The men in the galleries took off their coats. How women maintained life none but themselves know.

The New York delegation came first into the hall, and the genuine Tammany yell came from the braves. Immediately behind the alternates the cry of Hill went up, but the sound was like escaping steam. It shot from the floor and grew to be a whistling, hissing storm. The great throng, however, subsided when Chairman Wilson thumped on the desk, and the session began.

The Rev. Thomas Green offered prayer. At the conclusion of the prayer the band rendered "America."

W. W. Vandiver, of Georgia, moved that the convention adjourn until tomorrow. The motion was lost and the announcement was received with cheers.

During the time which elapsed after calling the convention to order and before the committee on resolutions was ready to report, caucusing among different delegations progressed with great activity.

Then the chairman announced that the committee on resolutions was ready to report. Howls of applause rose from all quarters.

Colonel Jones, chairman of the committee, mounted the platform amid great cheers and said:

"I am instructed to present the report of the committee and move its adoption."

Mr. Patterson of Colorado interrupted with the announcement that he represented a minority and wished to state that the minority expected to be heard before the previous question was put.

Mr. Vilas of Wisconsin then began to read the report of the committee. The first mention of Cleveland's name brought forth such applause as freedom witnessed in a national convention. Nineteen minutes were consumed, when Vilas raised his powerful voice and pleaded for a hearing. After the uproar subsided, he continued reading the platform which was greeted with great applause throughout. Jones moved the adoption of the platform as read, but Neal, of Ohio, interrupted with an amendment to the section relating to the tariff, moving to strike out the section of the platform pertaining to the tariff and all words preceding the denunciation of McKimley and substitute the following:

AN AMENDMENT.

"We denounce Republican protection as a fraud. (Cheers.) A great majority of the American people labor for the benefit of the few. (Cries of 'Read it again.') We declare it to be the fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government has no constitutional power to impose and collect tariff duties except for purposes of revenue only, and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the necessities of the government when honestly and economically administered."

In pursuance of the request the secretary read the minority report amid applause. The secretary read the portion relating to tariff, after which Neal addressed the convention in advocacy of the amendment.

In response to a call Henry Waterson took the platform. His appearance was greeted with prolonged cheers. He had read an extract from a tariff plank in the national Democratic convention of 1870 and afterward among other things said:

"When I listened to the minority's extraordinary essay this afternoon I asked myself whether we are indeed a Democratic convention or simply a Republican convention (laughter and applause) revised by James G. Blaine or Benjamin F. Butler. For tariff planks we listened to some almost identical in principle to the minority report submitted to the Democratic convention of 1884 by Benjamin F. Butler and voted down almost unanimously. Either you should reject the monstrosity which is hurled among you and adopt in its place the simple bold amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, or if you don't want to do that, recommit the whole matter to the committee with instructions to clarify and purge themselves." (Cries of "No, no," and "Vilas.")

Mr. Vilas then took the platform and when the cheers had subsided, said:

"The resolution which you propose to strike out was a resolution reported to the convention of 1884 and of all the eloquent voices lifted in behalf of it, none rang with such blissful joy as that of the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky." (Long continued laughter and applause.) Waterson handed Vilas the report of the 1884 convention and said:

"Read that."

The best of feeling seemed to prevail between the great orators. Vilas read from the book and said:

"Gentlemen, on that occasion the distinguished Kentuckian said in reference to it: 'It is an honest platform, entirely so.'" (Laughter and applause.) "It is sound doctrine, eminently so." Vilas continuing said:

"I do not propose to enter into a debate or discussion on the particular form of words in which we declare our opposition to tariff legislation."

Waterson replying, said:

"In 1884 the party seemed to be split wide open and after fifty-two hours of unbroken discussion in the platform committee, the best that moderate and conservative members of the committee, myself among the number, could obtain as common ground, was the platform of 1884, but since that time we have had a second Morrison bill, the Mills bill, the message of the President in 1887, the great campaign of education in 1888, and I say to myself, 'My God, it is possible in 1892 that we have to go back for a tariff plank to the straddle of 1884!'"

Jones stated in behalf of the committee on resolutions that it was ready to adopt the amendment of the gentleman from Ohio as an addenda to the tariff section.

At this point he was interrupted by a tumult of hisses and applause and retired in despair.

Henry Waterson said the convention needed instructions as to whether it proposed to accept the amendment as a substitute, which he would support, or whether to take it in addition, which he would oppose.

The chairman stated that the committee on resolutions had offered to accept the proposed amendment as an addition to the platform. (Cries of "No, no!" and "Question, question!" and "Call the roll!")

T. L. Johnson endorsed the amendment of his Ohio colleague, and the chairman put the question on Neal's amendment, which was a motion to strike out and insert, and a call of the roll of States was demanded.

Several demands for recognition were made, but were ignored by the chair.

After the commotion had lasted several minutes the band struck up, but this was not sufficient to cause any of the delegates crying for recognition to take seats. After the music subsided the chair recognized Mr. Morlow of Mississippi, who asked if the motion could be made to recommit the tariff plank back to the committee on platform. The confusion broke to sea again. Bourke Cockran left his place among the New York delegation and advanced to the platform, saying as he went, "I want to get into this confidential matter up here on the platform." The band struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner," but the charm of music had no effect. The secretary then proceeded with the roll call on the motion to strike out and substitute.

The chairman announced the result of the vote as follows: Ayes, 554; nays, 342.

On the announcement of the result there was tumultuous applause. Calls for three cheers for Henry Watterson were given amid enthusiasm.

MR. PATTERSON OF COLORADO

representing the minority report of the committee on resolutions, said there was another matter of difference relating to the coinage plank, and it was embraced in the use of a single word "free." He offered a substitute, which was practically the silver plank, of the platform with the addition of the word "free" before "coinage." "I desire," he said, "for the information of the delegates, to read the substitute exactly as it stands."

After reading the silver plank with the addition of the word "free" the chairman put the question on the adoption of Patterson's amendment and it was declared lost. The next question was on the adoption of the platform. The motion was voted by ayes and nays and carried.

The Chair then stated that the next order of business was the call of the roll of States for the

NOMINATION OF CANDIDATES

for the office of President. The clerk started to call the roll when Fenland of Arkansas moved a suspension of the rules and that the convention adjourn. There was loud cries of "No! No!" and the chairman ignored the motion. The clerk called Alabama. No response. On calling Arkansas Fordyce announced that Arkansas yielded her place to New Jersey. The clerk thereupon called New Jersey, when ex-Governor Abbott came forward to the platform, accompanied by enthusiastic cheers from the Cleveland wing of the convention. A fresh installment of yells greeted Governor Abbott as he was introduced to the convention. When quiet was restored Governor Abbott addressed the body as follows:

GOVERNOR ABBOTT'S SPEECH, NOMINATING GROVER CLEVELAND.

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Convention:—In presenting a name to this convention I speak for the united Democratic vote of New Jersey, whose loyalty to Democratic principles, faithful service to party and whose contributions to its success entitled it to a respectful consideration by the Democracy of the Union. Its electoral vote always has been cast for the support of Democratic principles and Democratic candidates. I voice the unanimous wish of the delegation from New Jersey when I present as their candidate for the suffrage of this convention, a distinguished Democratic statesman, born upon its soil, for whom, in two great Presidential contests, the State of New Jersey has given its electoral vote.

He represents the great Democratic principles and policy upon which the entire convention is a unit. We believe that with him as a candidate the Democracy of the United States will sweep the country and establish its principles throughout the land. We offer to the convention as its nominee the choice of the Democracy of New Jersey, Grover Cleveland, and we feel certain that every Democratic State, though its preference may be for some other distinguished Democrat, will give its warm, enthusiastic and earnest support to the nominee of this convention. The man whom we present will rally to the party thousands of independent voters whose choice is determined by the personal conviction that the candidate will represent principles dear to him, and whose public life and policy gives assurance that they will secure an honest, pure and conservative administration and the great interests of the country be encouraged and protected. We stand today in the presence of the fact that the majority of the Democratic masses throughout the country, the millions of its voters, demand the nomination of Grover Cleveland. This sentiment is so strong an overpowering that it has affected and controlled the actions of delegates who would otherwise present some other distinguished leader of their own State with whom they feel victory would be assured.

I feel that every Democratic State and every individual Democrat has reason to rejoice and applaud these splendid successes. The candidacy of Grover Cleveland is not reflected upon others, not antagonistic to any great Democratic leader. He comes before this convention, not as a candidate of any one State. He is the choice of the great majority of Democratic voters. The Democracy of New Jersey therefore presents to this convention in this, the people's year, the nominee of the people, a plain, blunt, honest citizen, the idol of the Democratic masses—Grover Cleveland. [Prolonged cheer.] I have sublime faith in the expression of the people. When clear and decisive, it is incumbent upon us to obey their wishes. Then, having given them the candidate of their choice, they will give us their most energetic efforts to secure success. We confidently rely upon the loyal and successful work of the Democratic leaders who have advocated other candidates. We know in the great State of New York, now controlled by the Democratic party, there is no Democrat who will shirk the duty of making every effort to secure the success of the candidate of this convention, notwithstanding his judgment may differ from that of the majority. The Democracy of New York and its great leaders whose efforts and splendid generalship have given to us a Democratic senator and governor, will always be true to the great party they represent. Their unquestioned Democracy will make them arise and fight as never before and with those they represent and lead, they will marshal the great independent vote, and we will again secure a Democratic victory in New York.

THE FIRST MENTION OF CLEVELAND'S NAME, as indeed all the subsequent mentions, was received with storms of applause, and in the first instance the clamor continued fifteen minutes.

Governor Abbott proceeded with his remarks until he came to the allusion to Senator D. H. Hill. This was a signal for an outburst of enthusiasm from the New Yorkers. Governor Abbott could not continue his remarks or be heard for at least twenty-five minutes, and during a turmoil the New York delegation remained glum and silent. Now under the inspiration of Hill they arose and waved everything they could lay their hands on. Portraits of Hill were produced and there was evident determination on the part of the Hill men to equal the Cleveland demonstration. While the demonstration was at its height one of Chicago's thunderstorms passed over the hall and emphasized the demonstration for Hill. A Cleveland man sang out "Hurrah for Grover!" He was instantly assailed by a Hill man, and the police were summoned to quell the disturbance. The confusion was intensified by the thunderstorm which poured down torrents of rain through the open roof, and soon drenched the vast assemblage. The chairman had to abandon his position at his desk on account of the rain, and umbrellas were raised everywhere.

The secretary proceeded with the roll of States, beginning with California. Hon. George F. Patten responded on behalf of the delegation, seconding the nomination of Grover Cleveland amidst applause. Colorado was next called and gave way to New York. Hon. William C. DeWitt, of New York, came forward and placed in nomination Senator David B. Hill. The continued rainstorm and confusion in the hall made it impossible for the speaker to be heard, and without a vote the chair declared a recess of fifteen minutes.

DURING THE INTERMISSION

the crowd amused itself by watching the glare of lightning and listening to the swish of the rain. When the recess expired, and after some confusion, Mr. DeWitt spoke nominating Hill.

At the conclusion of the speech the entire New York delegation cheered for Hill.

Hon. John R. Fellows came forward amid renewed cheering and addressed the convention, seconding Hill's nomination.

The conclusion of Fellows' speech was followed by loud applause and an outburst from the New York delegation.

The roll call was continued until Illinois was reached. When A. W. Green of Chicago seconded the nomination of Cleveland, Illinois cast forty-eight votes for Grover Cleveland," were his first words. The clear cut, terse announcement brought forth loud cheers, and then Green told why he did so.

When Indiana was reached, Hon. William E. Eggleish eloquently seconded the nomination of Cleveland in a few words, as substitute for Daniel W. Voorhees, who was taken ill.

The clerk called Iowa, and Hon. John M. Duncombe took the platform and addressed the convention nominating Boies.

When Duncombe mentioned the name of Boies as the candidate of Iowa the whole delegation of Iowa jumped from their chairs and sent up a yell, followed by South Carolina, Mississippi, New York and Texas. The Boies boom had nothing like the dimensions of the Cleveland and Hill demonstrations. It lasted only eight minutes.

COCHRAN PROTESTS.

Cochran of New York arose to make a statement for New York, protesting against Cleveland. "Our State is being threatened with invasion, and the invading force being of our own political house my associates in the delegation asked me to present to the delegation before it proceeds to take final action upon the great question now before it, a plain, friendly statement of the political conditions. Our statement is in no spirit of unkindness to any one, no desire to find fault with whatever may be the action of the convention, determined to promise in advance that whatever your wisdom may desire the Democracy of New York could not be disloyal if they tried. We came here and notwithstanding the fate to which we are about to be led, I state to you if it be decided so it will cast aside the precedent of the century; violate every notion of State rights, then we must submit."

Cochran denounced the mugwumps in unmeasurable terms. (Cheering and hissing.) Cochran said Cleveland's popularity in New York in 1884 was due to Dr. Burchard and not to himself. He spoke of Cleveland's great popularity—except on election day.

WM. S. HENSEL, of PENNSYLVANIA, seconding Cleveland, said Pennsylvania's five hundred thousand Democrats sent a representative here to make no demands, seeking only the selection of such men and the approval of such measures as will promote the best interests of their party and of the country. They anticipate an expression of the popular will that these interests will be best served by the re-nomination of Grover Cleveland.

W. H. Tillman, of South Carolina, seconded Boies' nomination, and O. C. Osbs of Tennessee and McDonald of Texas seconded Cleveland. Senator John W. Daniel of Virginia seconded Hill's nomination. Wilson of Minnesota and Wallace of Missouri seconded Cleveland, and W. A. Clark, in behalf of Montana, seconded Boies.

Thomas B. Fenton in seconding Cleveland's nomination for Kansas first assailed Ingalls, now a peetristan himself, for calling the Democracy the street walker of the Nineteenth century. By the unanimous vote of 120,000 Kansas Democrats he seconded Cleveland's nomination.

James McKennie of Kentucky made a characteristic speech seconding Cleveland.

HENRY WATTERSON

stepped upon the platform and seconded the nomination of Horace Boies.

Hon. J. T. Kernan of Louisiana seconded Boies' nomination.

When Massachusetts was called, Hon. Patric Colhins seconded Cleveland, saying: If my voice was on its last errand the request would be conveyed by it to every delegate: "When you are voting for a candidate for President heed not the voice of the locality, but the voice of the Democracy of the whole nation. I do not argue with the faction, I address myself to the entire Democracy. Today we have several candidates, but tomorrow we shall have but one, and upon whosever your choice falls I believe that any Democrat will see he bears the title of President of the United States, and among them all when you go to the people dismiss locality and forget individual friendship and you will find ninety-nine men out of a hundred will ask you to give them the chance to right the wrong and rectify the mistake made four years ago, by voting for Cleveland."

As Collins ceased tumultuous cheers arose from all parts of the hall, and the Massachusetts delegation delivered three cheers in a body.

The roll of States being exhausted, the balloting was then commenced by States, with the following result:

The Ballot.

STATE.	Cleveland.	Hill.	Boies.	Canfield.	Hamphill.	Morrison.	McKenna.	Conway.	Shields.	Watterson.
Alabama.....	27	4	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Arkansas.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
California.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Colorado.....	4	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Connecticut.....	12	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Delaware.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Florida.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Georgia.....	26	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Idaho.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Illinois.....	14	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Indiana.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Iowa.....	26	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Kansas.....	20	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Kentucky.....	2	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Louisiana.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Maine.....	12	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Maryland.....	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Massachusetts.....	32	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Michigan.....	26	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Minnesota.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Mississippi.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Missouri.....	34	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Montana.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Nebraska.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Nevada.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
New Hampshire.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
New Jersey.....	20	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
New York.....	72	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
New Hampshire.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
North Carolina.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Ohio.....	46	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Oregon.....	8	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Tennessee.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Rhode Island.....	8	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
South Carolina.....	16	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
South Dakota.....	8	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Texas.....	30	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Vermont.....	8	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Virginia.....	24	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Washington.....	24	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
West Virginia.....	12	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Wisconsin.....	24	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Wyoming.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Alaska.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
New Mexico.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Oklahoma.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Indian Territory.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
Arizona.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1
District of Columbia.....	6	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1	1

TOTALS.

Total vote cast.....	909
Necessary to choice.....	607
Cleveland's vote.....	617

Hill's vote.....	114
Boies' vote.....	108
Morrison's vote.....	3

ADJOURNED.

At 3:32 a. m. Mr. Upshur of Maryland that Cleveland's nomination be made unanimous. Much confusion ensued and there were many changes of votes and motions, Texas and Indiana changed solid to Cleveland as did also West Virginia and Kentucky.

Daniel (Va.) then obtained recognition and made a brief speech for Cleveland. The motion to make the vote unanimous, nominating Cleveland was carried with about half a dozen "nos," which were greeted with hisses.

Cochran (N. Y.) said, there having been some expressions of dissent in the New York neighborhood, he desired to state to the convention that on motion to make the nomination unanimous the New York vote would be cast in full for the affirmative.

Chairman Shields of Iowa made the same statement for his delegation and on motion of Don Dickinson (Mich.) the convention at 3:45 a. m. adjourned until 2 p. m.

CHICAGO, June 22.—The Democratic platform as unanimously adopted by the convention is as follows:

The representatives of the Democratic party of the United States, in national convention assembled, do reaffirm their allegiance to the principles of the party as formulated by Jefferson and exemplified by a long, illustrious line of successors in the Democratic leadership from Madison to Cleveland. We believe the public welfare demands that these principles be applied to the conduct of the federal government through the accession to power of the party that advocates them, and we solemnly declare that the need of the return to these fundamental principles of free popular government, based on home rule and individual liberty, was never more urgent than now, when a tendency to centralize all the power at the federal capital has become a menace to the reserved rights of States, that strikes at the roots of our government under the Constitution as framed by the fathers of the republic.

A WARNING.

We warn the people of the common country jealous for the preservation of their free institutions, that the policy of the Federal control of elections to which the Republican party has committed itself is fraught with the gravest dangers scarcely less momentous than would result from a revolution practically establishing a monarchy on the ruins of the Republic. It strikes at the North as well as at the South and injures the colored citizen more than the whites. It means hordes of deputy marshals at every polling place, armed with Federal power; returning boards appointed and controlled by Federal authority; the outrage of the electoral rights of the people in the States; subjugation of the colored people to the control of the party in power and reviving the races' antagonism, now happily abated; the utmost peril to the safety and happiness to all. The measure was deliberately and justly described by the Republican senator as the most infamous bill that ever crossed the threshold of the Senate. Such a policy if sanctioned by law would mean the domination of a self-perpetuating oligarchy of officeholders, and the party first entrusted with the machinery could be dislodged from power only by an appeal to the reserved right of the people to resist oppression which is inherent in all self-governing communities.

Two years ago this revolutionary policy was emphatically condemned by the people at the polls, but in contempt of that verdict the Republican party has defiantly declared in its latest authoritative utterances that its success in the coming elections will mean the enactment of a force bill and the usurpation of despotic control over the elections of all States. Believing that the preservation of a Republican government is dependent upon the defeat of a policy of legalized force and fraud, we invite the support of all citizens who desire to see the Constitution maintained in its integrity with the laws pursuant thereto which have given our country 100 years of unexampled prosperity, and we pledge that the Democratic party will not only defeat the Force bill, but also the Republican policy of profligate expenditure which in the short space of two years has squandered an enormous surplus and emptied the overflowing treasury after piling new burdens of taxation upon the already overtaxed labor of the country.

THE TARIFF.

We reiterate the oft-repeated doctrine of the Democratic party that the necessity of the government is the only justification for taxation, and whenever the tax is unnecessary it is unjustifiable. The impositions of the existing tariff fall with crushing force upon our farmers and workmen, and for the mere advantage of a few whom it enriches they exact from labor grossly unjust shares of the expenses of the government, and we demand such revision of the tariff laws as will remove their iniquitous inequalities, lighten the oppressions and put them on a constitutional and equitable basis. But in making a reduction in taxes it is not proposed to injure any domestic industries, but rather promote their healthy growth. From the foundation of the government the taxes collected at the custom house have been their chief source of Federal revenue. Such they must continue to be. Moreover, many industries have come to rely on legislation for successful continuance, so any change in the law must be at every step regardless of the labor and capital thus involved. The process of reform must be the subject in execution. It is the plain dictate of justice.

We denounce the McKinley tariff law enacted as a culminating atrocity of class legislation. We endorse the efforts of the Democrats of the recent Congress to modify its most oppressive features in the direction of free raw materials and cheaper manufactured goods than enter into consumption, and we promise its repeal as one of the beneficent results that will follow the action of the people in entrusting power to the Democratic party. Since the McKinley tariff went into operation there have been ten reductions in the wages of laboring men to one increase. We point to the failures in the country since the tariff went into operation, and point to the dullness and distress, wage reductions and strikes in the iron trade as the best evidence that no such prosperity resulted from the McKinley act. We call the attention of thoughtful Americans to the fact that after thirty years of restrictive taxes against the importation of foreign wealth in exchange for the agricultural surplus, the homes and farms of the country have become

ENCUMBERED BY MORTGAGES.

There are over two thousand five hundred million dollars, exclusive of all other forms of indebtedness, in one of the agricultural States in the west, and similar conditions are shown to exist in other agricultural exporting States. We denounce the policy which fosters no industry so much as it does that of the Sheriff.

Trade interchange on the basis of reciprocal advantages to the countries participating is a time-honored doctrine of the Democratic faith, but we denounce the sham reciprocity which luggs with the people's desire for enlarged foreign markets and freer exchanges by pretending to establish closer relations for a country whose articles of export are almost exclusively agricultural products, with other countries that are also agricultural, while erecting a custom-house barrier of a prohibitive tariff taxes against the rich countries of the world that stand ready to take our entire surplus product and exchange therefor commodities which include the necessities of life.

TRUSTS AND COMBINATIONS.

We recognize in trusts and combinations, something designed to enable capital to secure more than a just share of the joint produce of capital and labor, the natural consequence of prohibitive taxes which prevent free competition, which is the life of honest trade; but we believe their worst evils can be abated by law and we demand the rigid enforcement of laws made to prevent and control them together with such further legislation in restraining their abuses as experience may show to be necessary.

PUBLIC LANDS.

The Republican party while professing the policy of reserving public land or small holding by actual settlers, has given away the people's heritage until now a few railroads and non-resident aliens, individual and corporate, possess a larger area than that of all the farms between the two seas. The last Democratic administration reversed the improvident and unwise policy of the Republican party touching public domain and reclaimed from corporations and syndicates alien and domestic and restored to the people nearly 100,000,000 acres of valuable land to be sacredly held as homesteads for our citizens, and we pledge ourselves to continue this policy until every acre of land so unlawfully sold shall be reclaimed and restored to the people.

THE SHERMAN ACT.

We denounce the Republican legislation known as the Sherman act of 1890 as a cowardly makeshift fraught with possibilities of danger in the future which should make all of its supporters as well as the author anxious for speedy repeal. We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country and to the coinage of both gold and silver without discriminating against either metal or a charge for minting, but a dollar of unit value of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value or adjusted through international agreement or by such safeguards in legislation as shall insure the maintenance of a parity between the two metals, and the equal value of every dollar at all times in the market and in the payment of debts, and we demand that proper currency be kept a par with and redeemable in such coin. We insist upon this policy as especially necessary for the protection of farmers and laboring classes, the first and most defenseless victims of unstable money and fluctuating currency.

We recommend that the prohibitory ten per cent. tax on State bank issues be repealed. "A public office is a public trust."

REPORT OF THE CIVIL SERVICE.

We reaffirm the declaration of the Democratic National convention of 1876 for a reform of the civil service and call for honest enforcement of all laws regulating the same. The nomination of a President, as in the recent Republican convention, by delegations composed largely of his appointees, holding office at his pleasure, is a scandalous satire on free popular institutions and a startling illustration of the methods by which a President may gratify his ambition. We denounce the policy under which Federal office-holders usurp control of the party conventions in the States, and pledge the Democratic party to reform these and all other abuses which threaten individual liberty and local self-government.

THE FOREIGN POLICY.

The Democratic party is the only party that has ever given the country a foreign policy consistent and vigorous, compelling respect abroad and inspiring confidence at home. While avoiding entangling alliances, it has aimed to cultivate friendly relations with other nations, and especially with the neighbors in the American continent whose destiny is closely linked with ours, and we view with alarm the tendency to a policy of irritation and bluster which is reliable at any time to confront us with the alternatives of humiliation or war. We countenance a navy strong enough for all purpose of national defense and to properly maintain the honor and dignity of our country abroad. The country has always been the refuge of the oppressed from every land, exiles for conscience sake. We condemn the oppression practiced by the Russian government upon Russian and Jewish subjects, and call upon the national government in the interest of justice and humanity by all just and proper means to use prompt efforts to bring about a cessation of these cruel persecutions in the Czar's dominion and secure to the oppressed equal rights. We tender our profound and earnest sympathy for those lovers of freedom who are struggling for home rule and the great cause of local self-government of Ireland.

IMMIGRATION.

We heartily approve of legitimate efforts to prevent the United States being used as a dumping ground for known criminals and paupers and we demand the rigid enforcement of laws against Chinese immigration and the importation of foreign labor to reduce wages. But we condemn any measures to restrict the immigration of the industrious and worthy foreign laborers.

PENSIONS.

We renew the expression of our appreciation of the part often of the soldiers and sailors of the Union in the war for the preservation of the Union and in favor of just and liberal pensions for all disabled Union soldiers, their widows and their dependents, but we demand that the work of the pension office shall be done industriously, impartially and honestly. We denounce the present administration as incompetent, corrupt, disgraceful and dishonest. The federal government should care for and improve the Mississippi river and other waterways so as to secure for the interior States easy and cheap transportation to the tidewater and when any waterway of the republic is of sufficient importance to demand aid of the government we demand that such aid be extended on the definite plan of continuous work until permanent improvement is secured. For the support of the national defense and promotion of commerce between the States we recognize the early construction of the Nicaragua Canal and its protection against foreign control as of great importance to the United States.

WORLD'S FAIR.

Recognizing the World's Columbian Exposition as a National undertaking of vast importance in which the general government has invited the co-operation of all the powers of the world, and appreciating the acceptance by many of such powers of the invitation so extended and the broad and liberal efforts being made by them to contribute to the grand undertaking, we are of opinion that Congress should make such necessary financial provisions as shall be requisite to the maintenance of the national honor and public faith.

POPULAR EDUCATION.

Popular education being the only safe basis of popular suffrage, we recommend to the several States the most liberal appropriations for public schools. Free common schools are the nursery of good government and have always received the fostering care of the Democratic party, which favors every means of increasing intelligence, and the freedom of education being essential to civil and religious liberty as well as a necessity for the development of intelligence, must not be interfered with on any pretext whatever. We oppose State interference with parental rights and the rights of conscience in the education of children as an infringement of the fundamental Democratic doctrine, that the largest individual liberty consistent with the rights of others insures the highest type of American citizenship and the best government.

ADMISSION OF TERRITORIES.

We approve the action of the present House of Representatives in passing bills for the admission into the Union as States of the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona, and in favor of the early admission of all Territories having the necessary population and resources to entitle them to statehood, and while they remain Territories we hold that the officials appointed to administer the government of any Territory, together with the District of Columbia and Alaska, shall be bona fide residents of the Territory or district in which their duties are to be performed. The Democratic party believe in home rule and the control of their own affairs by the people of the vicinage.

THE LABOR QUESTIONS.

We favor legislation by Congress and State legislatures to protect the lives and limbs of railway employees and those other hazardous transportation companies and denounce the inactivity of the Republican party, and particularly the Republican Senate, for causing the defeat of measures beneficial and protective to this class of wage-workers. We are in favor of the enactment by States of laws for the abolishing of the notorious sweating system; for abolishing contract labor and prohibiting the employment in factories of children under 15 years of age. We oppose all summary laws as interference with the individual rights of the citizen.

Upon this statement of principles and policies the Democratic party asks the intelligent judgment of the American people. It asks for a change of administration and a change of party in order that there may be a change of system and methods, thus assuring the maintenance unimpaired of the Constitution under which the Republic has grown great and powerful.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The convention was slow in assembling and it was nearly 8 o'clock when the chairman called the delegates to order. The Indiana delegation, bearing a Gray banner, were received with cheers, which were increased when a banner bearing the names "Cleveland and Gray" followed. Nominating speeches were limited to five minutes, and speeches seconding the nominations were allowed two minutes.

The call of States for the presenting of names for the Vice-Presidential nomination was immediately ordered. Arkansas yielded to Indiana and Lamb presented the name of Isaac P. Gray, which was received with prolonged cheering.

Colorado yielded to Illinois and Worthington nominated Stevenson of that State, predicting the success of the ticket if Illinois was represented on it.

Connecticut seconded Gray's nomination as did also Idaho and Kansas.

Kentucky seconded the nomination of Stevenson.

Iowa and Ohio said they had no name to present.

Uhl of Michigan placed in nomination Judge Morse of that State.

When New York was reached Governor Flower, who was greeted with loud applause, said the Empire State had no name to present.

CHICAGO, June 23.—Stevenson of Illinois was nominated for Vice-President on the second ballot.

CHICAGO, June 23.—[Special to the DESERET NEWS.]—Before the convention opened this afternoon there was a procession in the wigwam of the Indianapolis band with Gray's banner and men following, each bearing the triple Gray plume with fine effect. There were shouts of Cleveland and Gray.

Henderson is on the committee to notify Cleveland.

After prayer by Rev. Thomas Green of Iowa the chairman declared the order of business to be the nomination of a candidate for the vice-presidency. On a motion by Mr. Potter of Tennessee the nominating speeches were limited to five minutes and the seconding speeches to two minutes. When the roll call began Alabama had no nomination to make. Arkansas waived its place to Indiana and Hon. J. E. Lamb of the latter State nominated Isaac P. Gray in a brief speech.

California had no name to present and Colorado gave way to Illinois.

NICHOLAS E. WORTHINGTON OF ILLINOIS, spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Fellow-Delegates: Illinois presented no Presidential candidate to this convention. It has within its borders more than one favorite son whom it would have delighted to honor and who are worthy of all political honor that could be conferred upon them, but here in this great city of Chicago, in this great commonwealth of Illinois, bordering upon the lake and the Mississippi, in the center of this great Republic, Democracy, catching the vibrations of the ground swells that came from south and east and west, put aside its favorite sons for the time, buried its State pride, and echoing back to Texas, Connecticut and California with forty-eight votes, shouted the name of Grover Cleveland. (Applause.) But for the Vice-Presidency or the second highest gift of the people it has a candidate so fully equipped by nature and education that it feels that it would be a political fault to fail to urge his name for nomination before you.

I stand then here, gentlemen, to name as a candidate for that position a man that is known by every woman and child and every voter that ever licked a postage stamp in every village and hamlet in the land. [Applause.] A big bodied, big hearted, big brained man. A man of commanding presence, dignified mien, a man whose courtesy in his every-day manner is rarely equaled, and never excelled. A man who in the administration of his duties in the last Democratic administration has been the ideal of honest, honorable, useful and efficient Democratic office-holders. Like his great leader who bears your banner, he believes that "public office is a public trust," but he believes also that the Democrats are the best trustees of the public trust. (Cheers.) Nor can the pride of office make him proud or haughty. I appeal to every Senator and Congressman here if ever he found the haughtiness of office or the chilling indifference of a little brief authority in the atmosphere of the rooms of the First Assistant Postmaster General during Cleveland's administration.

Gentlemen, we have nailed our banner to the mast—a democrat never surrenders. We propose to make true what our Republican friends say of us, that we do our quarreling before the convention and fighting against the enemies afterwards. (Cheers.)

We believe every Democrat will put on his armour. We of the West have been making a magnificent campaign of the late years. We have been educating the people and are proud of the results. They are seen in Boyd of Nebraska, Boies of Iowa and Peck of Wisconsin. (Applause.) They are seen in the grand old man who represents Illinois in the United States Senate. [Cheers.] They are seen in the reduction of the Republican majority from 60,000 to 15,000 in Illinois. They are seen in the election of a Democratic treasurer and superintendent of public instruction now in this State. We propose in this campaign to attack the last citadel. We have a governor we are going to elect. Will you help us give twenty-four electoral votes for Grover Cleveland? If you will vote for the man whose name I now present; a man who does not have to get a certificate from a labor organization to prove that he is the friend of the people (applause), a man we all love, Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois. (Prolonged cheers.)

When Connecticut was called Mr. Vance, chairman of that delegation, in a brief speech seconded the nomination of Gray. The roll proceeded until Idaho was reached, when it announced that the State seconded the nomination of Gray. When Iowa was called, were heard in different parts of the hall. Mr. Shields arose and said:

CRIES OF "BOIES! BOIES!"

Iowa has said she has no candidate. I wish to say it is Governor Boies's wish, united with the wish of the delegates from Iowa, that he be not nominated or named as a candidate for Vice-President by this convention.

Great applause followed this announcement. Kansas being called, Hon. I. Scott arose on behalf of his delegation and warmly seconded the nomination of Gray.

Mr. Rhea said: I support Illinois' candidate because I understand that he is a Democrat who believes that to the victor belongs the spoils (cheers); because he believes further, that there are honest and competent men enough in the Democratic party to fill all offices (cheers), and I warrant the assertion that if he be placed in the high position the mugwumps and Republicans will have no quarters at his hand.

When Michigan was reached Hon. Edwin Uhl plied in nomination Hon. Allan B. Morse, chief justice of the Michigan supreme court.

When North Carolina was called Mr. Kope seconded Stevenson's nomination warmly, saying that while Stevenson lives in Illinois, North Carolinians claim him as one of them because his ancestors belonged there.

When Tennessee was reached Mr. Cunningham seconded Gray's nomination in a few well chosen remarks. On behalf of Texas Mr. Throckmorton seconded the nomination of Stevenson. Vermont seconded Gray and Virginia that of Stevenson. Washington announced that she was for Gray as the natural running mate of Grover Cleveland. When Wisconsin was called, Veteran General E. S. Bragg was put forward by his delegation to speak for the Democrats of that commonwealth.

He had just begun speaking when another terrific thunder storm burst. Rain came down in sheets and dripped through on the crowd within the wigwam. After a delay of fifteen minutes, during which the band played and the people in the audience amused themselves in various noisy ways, General was reached J. S. Fielder seconded the nomination of Gray. Oklahoma seconded Gray. At the conclusion of the roll call Alabama, which had been passed by request, was given a hearing. W. F. Candwall of that delegation made a stirring speech for the one-armed soldier and jurist of the State of Michigan, Allen B. Morse. (Great applause.) M. O. King of Alabama also warmly seconded the nomination of Morse.

Bragg went on with his speech, making the nomination of John L. Mitchell of Milwaukee.

WHEN NEW MEXICO

The chairman then announced the four names which had been presented to the convention and directed the clerk to call the roll of States for a vote. When Colorado was reached the chairman of that delegation said:

"Colorado wants a candidate for Vice-President who can take the party in and out of the wet. It casts eight votes for Stevenson of Illinois. (Great cheering.)

When Iowa was reached Mr. Shields announced:

"Iowa casts her twenty-six votes for a man who needs no introduction to the Democracy of the United States nor any eulogy in the National Democratic convention; that Democrat of Democrats, that peerless son of a Kentucky Colono, Henry Watterson." (Loud applause.)

WHEN MONTANA

was reached two candidates were sprung in the persons of Bourke Cockran of New York, who got nine votes, and Judge Lambert Tree of Illinois, who got one. When New York was reached and Governor Flower cast their seventy-two votes for Stevenson, there was tremendous cheering and an evident intention to try to stampede the convention for Stevenson, the Illinois delegation standing up shouting and waving their hats. The attempt, however, was a failure. North Carolina immediately trailed in with twenty-two for Stevenson, and yelling was renewed.

The Gray men, who had been a little frightened, took fresh courage when Pennsylvania was called, and Hensel, after announcing that the individual preference was four for Mitchell, six for Morse and seventeen for Stevenson, but under the rule the sixty-four votes of the State would be cast for Gray. This brought the Gray men to their feet and they had a time. As the ballot proceeded there was evidence that the strongest candidates were Gray and Stevenson, and the adherents of each alternated with yells as their favorite candidate showed up with the highest votes from the State delegations. Shields of Iowa caused a great commotion by announcing that at the request of Colonel Watterson, Iowa changed its vote to Stevenson. Then Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, Ohio, Oregon, Kentucky and Tennessee hastened to do the same thing. By this time the convention was in an awful uproar, which was intensified when Texas cast thirty votes solid for the Illinois man. The chair refused to recognize any one else until the confusion in some measure subsided. Then Minnesota changed to Stevenson and another wild scene followed.

Finally Delegate Cole of Ohio attracted the attention of the chairman, and moved that Stevenson's nomination be made by acclamation. Mr. Hensel of Pennsylvania seconded the motion and it was unanimously adopted amid great cheers.

MISCELLANEOUS RESOLUTIONS.

The business of the convention was then resumed, and a number of miscellaneous resolutions referring to the affairs of the national committee and tendering thanks to the various officers of the Chicago reception committee were disposed of. Then Patrick Collins stirred things up with a speech, declaring that he felt free to say that the time had come when a Democratic convention should be a deliberative body, and not governed by outside influence.

"If we could," said he, "be on exhibition in view of sixty-five millions of people and seven millions of Democrats who will vote the ticket, well and good, but what sense is there in having 15,000 people who cannot hear and can hardly see the proceedings of the convention and preventing it from being deliberative? It is not only an inconvenience but there is danger of wrecking the good work of a convention. We are face to face with it today, and have reached the climax of absurdity."

Mr. Collins then offered a resolution that the National Committee be instructed to provide accommodations in the next convention for the delegates, alternates, National Committee, members of the press and no others. A great howl of protests went up from the galleries, whereupon Collins informed the audience that it was here solely by the courtesy of the convention.

THE CONVENTION ENDS IN A PANIC.

While confusion reigned throughout the hall there was a crash of arc lights which had furnished illumination, and they were seen descending on the heads of the delegates. Something had given way above, and it appeared as if the numerous interruptions which had so ominously occurred at the hands of nature were about to be supplemented by one great catastrophe which should wipe out the whole national convention. Three lights immediately over the New York delegation came crashing down upon the Hill men. The globes were broken and streams of electric fire flashed from the carbon points. In a moment every one in the building was on his feet, and nearly every one was making tracks for the exit. The delegates tumbled wildly over one another and frantic yells of fear were heard. It seemed for a moment as if there was no possible way out of the panic which must result in the loss of a hundred lives. Fortunately, however, a number of cool heads among the delegates in the audience asserted themselves, and, aided by the police and music by the band, contrived to get the frightened people down. When quiet was restored, on motion of Mr. Hensel of Pennsylvania, Collins' resolution was referred to the next national committee with an affirmative recommendation and power to act.

After some further routine business, on motion of Mr. Russell of Missouri, the convention at 5:17 p.m. adjourned sine die amid great applause.

PAROWAN STAKE CONFERENCE.

The quarterly conference of this Stake was held in the Parowan Meeting House on Sunday and Monday, June 19th and 20th. Present of the General Authorities, President Geo. Q. Cannon; B. H. Roberts of the presidency of the Seventies; President Uriah T. Jones and counselors, High Counselors and Bishops of the various wards in the Stake, Elder David H. Cannon of St. George Stake and Bishop George Mumford of Beaver Stake.

Conference opened at 10 a.m. on the 19th, President Uriah T. Jones presiding.

After the usual opening exercises, the following Bishops made reports of their respective wards: Bishop Wm. E. Jones, Paragutich Ward; Bishop Charles Adams, Parowan Ward; Bishop Wm. H. Carry, Cedar City Ward; Bishop Joseph B. Dalley, Summit Ward; Myron S. Rundy, Kanara Ward.

President B. H. Roberts occupied the remainder of the time, speaking upon the subject of Church government, the completeness of various organizations of the Church by the operation of which the Saints may be watched over from the cradle to the grave, and advised the young to shun the follies and vices of the world.

In the afternoon President George Q. Cannon spoke. He referred to the great responsibilities resting upon those who are called to important positions in the Priesthood, and desired to impress upon Bishops, Teachers and parents the necessity of their teachings being accompanied by good example. He gave very pointed instructions with regard to profanity, Sabbath breaking, etc.

The remaining time was occupied by President Uriah T. Jones, Morgan Richards, Jr., and Francis Webster, whose remarks were replete with instructions and encouragement.

In the evening the usual Priesthood meeting was held and the business pertaining to the Stake presented.

On Monday at 10 a. m. Elder David H. Cannon, of St. George Stake, and Elder George Mumford, of Beaver Stake, occupied a portion of the time, their subjects being the erection of temples and the ordinances therein performed, the first principles of the Gospel, and signs of the times.

President B. H. Roberts occupied the remaining time, giving an outline of the business usually transacted at these quarterly conferences and the importance that should attach thereto. He also referred to the success, advancement and blessings that had attended those who had rendered obedience to the counsels of God's Priesthood upon the earth, and the disaster and dissatisfaction that had seemingly overtaken those who had rejected and disregarded their counsels.

The time of the afternoon meeting was occupied by President George Q. Cannon in giving much counsel and general instructions to the Saints upon a variety of subjects. He explained some points of doctrine, and advised all the Saints to be very careful not to get into contention over points of doctrine that are not generally understood. His instructions were an important feature of the conference and listened to with much attention.

Conference adjourned for three months to meet in Cedar City.

WILLIAM H. HOLYOAK,
Stake Clerk.

IN NORTHERN ILLINOIS.

After a weary but interesting ride of five days, I find myself among relatives and friends in one of the loveliest spots in far northern Illinois. Gray's lake is situated about forty-five miles north of Chicago on the line of the Wisconsin Central railroad, and about ten miles from the Wisconsin State line.

Lake county, as its name indicates, has within its borders fully thirty-four lakes, many of them being of fairly large dimensions; several of them are in close proximity to the little village of Gray's Lake. On the banks of some of these are located huge ice houses, the property of Chicago meat packing companies, who thus store thousands of tons of ice each winter in readiness to ship as needed for their summer trade.

A Chicago schemer, realizing the inability of the World's Fair city hotels to accommodate the traveling public next year, has projected a plan which has good evidence of proving successful. Land has been purchased here on which he proposes to erect a large hotel with accommodations for the hundreds of visitors who will be anxious to leave the dust and din of the large city for a night or a few days, and enjoy the quiet and the scenery, boating, bathing and fishing which this locality affords.

Owing to incessant rains in May and June, a good portion of the crops have not yet been sown here, but those that are, look in excellent condition. The same may be said of the crops in Kansas and Missouri along the line of the Missouri Pacific railway. In Kansas, especially, the outlook should be bright and promising to the farmers who suffered so much from last year's drought.

The sad effects of the recent rise and overflow of the Mississippi river are startlingly visible after crossing the river from St. Louis. An entire village, very appropriately named Venice, is submerged and as far as the eye can readily distinguish are dwellings, churches and trees submerged in the waters. In some of the higher places, residents were able to stay in their dwellings by removing to the upper story, but with the exception of an occasional row boat and its occupants playing among the houses in search of household goods which may be rescued, the village has the appearance of being deserted.

Almost everyone whom I have met in this State and had conversation with makes inquiries in relation to the people in Utah. With those who have read or heard of the manifesto the general impression is decidedly favorable toward the "Mormons." Only yesterday, one aged farmer here who can remember well the troubles of the Saints in Illinois, declared very emphatically to me, that with "polygamy discontinued" and the "Mormons upholding the laws of the United States" they had as much right to practice their religion as any other sect has.

J. FRANC PICKERING.

RETURNED ELDERS.

Elder John R. Booth, who has been laboring in the Manchester Conference, England, returned home today, having left Liverpool on the steamer "Alaska" two weeks ago. He made the News office a call, and was looking and feeling well.

On Saturday last we received a call from Elder Robert Duke, of Heber City, who had just returned from a mission to the States. He labored in the Northern States mission, first in Southern Indiana and Southern Illinois, where the Elders were well treated, but in Ohio, his next field, but little interest is taken in the Gospel by the people. Elder Duke enjoyed his ministry, but is glad to get home.

This afternoon we received a call from Elder James Smith, of Kayaville, and Elder L. L. Nelson, of Provo, both of whom had just arrived from missions to Europe. The former left home on the 4th of June, 1890, and during his entire absence labored in London (England) conference, with the exception of the last six weeks of his mission, which he spent in Birmingham.

Elder Nelson left Utah on the 9th of April, 1890, and labored in the Swedish portion of the Scandinavian mission. In the northern part of that country, the work of the Lord is spreading, numbers of people embracing the Gospel as preached by the Elders. Both these brethren are in good health and enjoyed their ministry abroad.

Elder T. P. Coleman, of St. Johns, Arizona, who left his home for a mission to Great Britain on the 24th of May 1890, called at our office last evening having just returned from the Old World. The first fourteen months of Elder Coleman's mission were spent in the Norwich conference. He was then transferred to the London conference, where he remained until return home. He met his mother in this city who is at the Holy Cross Hospital attending one of her sons who recently had the misfortune to badly fracture one of his legs.

Elder B. Heertjes, of the Twentieth ward of this city, called at the News office this a. m., having just returned from a mission to Holland, to which part of the world he went as a missionary in October, 1889. The first eight months of his mission were spent in the City of Rotterdam, where, with Elder Lewis Simons, also of the Twentieth ward, this city, he performed an excellent work. Next he labored in Arnhem for ten months, where he also met with good success. At the expiration of that term he was appointed as traveling Elder for the northern provinces of the Netherlands, in which capacity he labored until he was released to return home.

His homeward voyage across the ocean was extremely stormy, and occupied ten days. He returns in fair health and good spirits.

A solid gold brick, weighing 500 pounds and worth $150,000, will be exhibited in the Mines and Mining building at the World's Fair by a Helena, Montana, mine owner.

THE DESERET WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED BY

THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, . . . $2.50

Per Volume, of Twenty-six Numbers, . . . 1.50

IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. PENROSE, EDITOR

Saturday, July 2, 1892

BE THESE MISTAKES?

If an explanation be necessary for making reference to statements which, during the last few days, have had space in the columns of the anti-"Mormon" organ, published in this city, it is that occasions arise when it appears necessary to defend the innocent against the satan's attacks of an scrupulous defamer. To do this is one of the functions of the NEWS.

This is the reason why, in the first place, we denounced the use by O. W. Powers, at Chicago, for political purposes, of the bogus Bishop West address, which originated with the organ of the Tuscarora "Liberal" Democrats. The information regarding the use of this base forgery by Mr. Powers came over the wires. This brought his organ into the subject, it being the author of the vile slander. It rises in rage at the exposure of the inwardness of the matter which has appeared in this journal. Its fulminations of this morning are as passionate, illogical and incongruous as usual. We lay this assertion down as a proposition and will proceed to prove it.

The anti-"Mormon" organ remarks:

"The so-called sermon was published in the Tribune more than eight years ago; there was nothing remarkable about it, except its close similarity to a thousand Mormon sermons that have been delivered in this Territory; so close was the similarity that the Tribune believed it was a real address, and so published it, and immediately corrected the error as soon as it ascertained that it had been imposed upon."

If needful we will reproduce the vile forgery. That would be sufficient to prove that it is not like anything in heaven, on earth or under it. We will, however, reserve that point for the present. There was no possibility for any intelligent person residing here to have been deceived by a "subterfuge" the clumsiness of which was only surprised by its baseness.

The "Liberal" Tuscarora Democratic organ makes an assertion that has had no parallel for hypocritical effrontery except it be when O. W. Powers, in the course of one of his speeches, turns up his eyes with an air of sanctity and quotes the Scriptures. It says this:

"The News had been trying for twelve or fourteen years previous to catch the Tribune in a mistake of this kind. It has been trying through eight years since to do the same thing, but this is the only instance on record."

This is all wrong. We have not taken exceptions to the mistakes of our fanatical cotemporary. What we have objected to and still contend against is the gross wrong it commits on purpose. Some excuse is admissible for blunders, but none for acts which are the outgrowth of malice prepense. We here benignly forgive our cotemporary for all the mistakes it has made and express our regrets for the injury it has inflicted upon itself by the many willful wrongs it has perpetrated.

When, in yesterday's issue, we reproduced a correspondence from a "Gentile" in which the writer denounced the manner in which our cotemporary distorted and misrepresented "Mormon" sermons delivered in the Tabernacle, our object was not to exhibit mistakes in that line, it was simply to show what it has done for many years willfully, wickedly and on purpose. No mistake about it at all. We have made no complaint whatever about mistakes.

Now we will give a little more non-"Mormon" testimony in relation to what our contentious cotemporary calls mistakes, of which it claims to be spotlessly free from making, except in one notorious instance. This is from the Salt Lake Times (Gentile) of about a year and a half ago.

"We are heartily ashamed of a species of journalism not to be found outside of Salt Lake City that revels in the most infamous, outrageous and blasphemous travesty in its reports of certain religious worship. We are ashamed of a species of journalism that ignores the difference between a devotional service to God and a political mass meeting. We are ashamed of it because it is calculated to advertise its broadcast as a horde of barbarians without sense of honor, decency or reverence.

When occasion requires it the Times does not hesitate to strike the most powerful blows at the Mormon hierarchy, and they are all the more effective because they fall direct; but it would no more think of invading the sanctuary of the people with foul language and cheap sport than it would of degrading the graves of its dearest friends. It takes a human jackal to do that. We would not even quote, in order to show the total depravity of Lannan's Own, any part of the report printed therein upon the Tabernacle services printed last Sunday. It is by all odds the most contemptible piece of journalism ever perpetrated in America.

"Of course Pat Lannan knows no better. Graduating from a beer bar and a butcher block to the position of an editor does not necessarily elevate one's morals or sense of decency. Beyond that, he is in distress. He has built up his organ on venom, and when that fails of effect, as lately does, the circumstances having changed, he ascribes that failure to a lack of malignity, and whoops up the boys to 'such vile, base practices.'

"The wonder is that Lannan's amenitis did not rebel against this degradation of a newspaper; this prostitution of a power, this defamation of a city. For shame!"

The nonplussed "Mormon" sermon manufacturer and distorter sprin, s this point:

"Again the News repeats the assertion that this address was circulated all over the United States, and especially in the South, where numbers of Mormon missionaries were laboring, and that it so inflamed the minds of the populace of Lewis county, Tenn., that in that county, where a number of Elders were preparing to hold divine services, an armed and masked mob broke into the house and cruelly murdered four persons. The News has no, and never has had, the slightest evidence that one man in the house had ever seen the Tribune."

This last quotation embodies another mistake (?). That "Red Hot Address" was handed about in the locality where the massacre occurred, and wherever the Elders went they were confronted with it. It was specially used and circulated by a Baptist preacher named Vandever, of Hohenwald, Lewis county, Tennessee. He read it to the people and made it a text for his anti-"Mormon" sermons. A request was sent to Vandever by John H. Gibbs, one of the victims of the massacre, and William H. Jones, a survivor of the tragedy, now living in this Territory, but so far as known the said Baptist paid no attention to the solicitation for him to correct the injustice to which he had been a party. Following is an extract from a letter from W. H. Jones, published shortly after the massacre occurred:

This villainous, slanderous fabrication was circulated over the country. Parson Vandever worked up prejudice against us in that section by giving it (the "Red Hot Address") wide publicity, and by his pretended credence to the falsehood, causing great excitement. Elder Gibbs and I sent by mail to Vandever an exposure of the address in question, but he did not show it to anybody that we know of.

This proves that the News has had evidence of the circulation of the West address in the neighborhood where the massacre occurred.

We will give one more sample of the mistakes of our cotemporary. Our readers will agree that it is a peculiar one:

"He says the editor of this paper stated in a committee in Minneapolis that if the Mormons had not been afraid to attack him he would have been killed because of his opposition to them. That is altogether false. In reply to an insolent assertion by one of the Mormons present in that committee, that the fact that the editor of this paper was alive was a proof of Mormon forbearance, he did say, 'You would have killed me long ago if you had thought it worth the trouble; you thought it would cost you more eventually than it was worth.'"

This is singular reasoning, exhibiting the fact that the editor of our innocent cotemporary is much more adept at feathery word-painting than journalistic polemics. He denies the truthfulness of a statement and concludes by proving its correctness. For instance, he denies that he "stated in a committee in Minneapolis that if the Mormons had not been afraid to attack him he would have been killed because of his opposition to them."

He immediately admits saying this in committee:

"You would have killed me long ago if you had thought it worth the trouble; you thought it would cost you more eventually than it was worth."

If there is any difference between the statement which is denied and that which is admitted, it is so slight as not to be visible to the naked eye.

When the editor asserted that there ever has been a disposition to kill him, on the part of the people he has so often and so outrageously maligned, he knew he was guilty of a Tribune mistake, which means something willfully and designedly done for a purpose.

THE CONVENTION AND THE CAMPAIGN.

The work of the Democratic National Convention is now before the country for acceptance or rejection. Before either of these is accomplished, however, the period of discussion will run its full and ample course, and those who are presently unenlightened as to what this, that or the other means, not only in what the Democrats have done but in the doings of all the other parties as well, will probably be thoroughly posted by that time.

The Democratic delegates labored under one disadvantage to which the Republicans were not subjected—they were exposed to the elements to a uncomfortable extent. It seems to rain almost periodically in the region of country surrounding the Wigwam, and at this season of the year the periods appear to be close together, all of which made umbrellas a necessity, albeit the delegates were nominally under cover.

It looks as though the coming campaign was likely to be a departure to some extent from most if not all of those preceding it, and it must be said that it is very fortunate it is so. Nearly all the Democrats admit that President Harrison is a man of ability and has given the country a clean administration; while Republicans concede that Mr. Cleveland is an upright man possessed of good general qualifications. Pretty much all that could be said against either as a politician and publicist has already been said and, under the circumstances, it would be a very difficult matter to rake up anything new; so the prospects for a campaign in which principles more than men and measures rather than those who advocate them will be the rule, are quite bright. It will be a refreshing change, whether it marks the beginning of a new era or not.

Just how much or how little importance the People's party will figure up in the contest remains to be seen. We shall know whom their candidates and what the declarations on which they rely are in about two weeks more.

NOT A "MORMON" AGENT.

STATEMENTS are repeatedly made through the press to the effect that the "Mormons," as a community, are procuring lands in Texas and Mexico, on which to settle, through the agency of Andrew J. Stewart. The most aggravating feature of this error is that assertions of that nature purport to come from the lips of Mr. Stewart himself. Following is a sample in that line from the Journal and Courier, of New Haven, Conn.:

"Texas is a big State, and the Mormons have an idea that it is big enough for them to find a place in. Mormon Elder Andrew J. Stewart, who has recently secured a concession of land in Chihuahua, says that the authorities of the Church are looking for lands in Texas on which to found a colony. They prefer an arid tract in the western part of the State, which can be bought for a song, and will depend upon irrigation, which they know more about than any other people, to transform the desert into gardens and farms. They do not apprehend a conflict with the State authorities, for, says Elder Stewart, 'polygamy is a thing of the past.' The laws of the Church now require all its members to live in obedience to the laws of the country in which their lot may be cast.' Asked if the Mormons would allow others than those of their faith to join them in the new colony, the Elder said: 'We make no distinction whatever as regards religion. We allow all to worship God according to the dictates of their consciences. All we insist on is a strict obedience to the laws of the country, the education of all children, and mutual assistance in securing homes for all. We want every head of a family to own his own house and land, and we are opposed to the tenant system that absorbs from the husbandman the lion's share of the fruits of his industry. In conclusion, let me say that as soon as we get well started the influx of colonists from Europe and the United States will astonish this country, and will spread over and bring under irrigation many of the arid districts of West Texas that are now but little better than barren wastes.'

We have several times stated the fact that Mr. Stewart is of no sense an agent of the "Mormon" Church or people for any purpose whatever, and think it appropriate to reproduce in this connection, the following card, which has heretofore appeared in this journal.

"A CARD."

"A. J. STEWART DENIES THAT HE IS ENGAGED IN 'MORMON' WORK IN MEXICO."

"As impressions have been made upon the public mind through misleading press dispatches that I am engaged in founding 'Mormon' colonies in Mexico, I hereby desire to say in the most emphatic manner that I am not employed by the 'Mormon' Church in any such project; that what I am doing is entirely without connection with the Church, and that while I am endeavoring to establish settlements in Mexico and Texas, that work is without any direction, authority or assistance from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints or its leading men."

ANDREW J. STEWART."

FATAL POLITICS.

WHAT a great many people at first received as a piece of gratuitous sentimentalism, is now recorded by the New York World as a sad and regretful fact—Emmons Blaine died broken-hearted over his father's defeat at Minneapolis. He may have had an affection of that organ that became aggravated through his intense vigils and constant watchfulness during the convention; and it is said of him that he scarcely slept an hour during the whole of that eventful week, so actively did he work and so intense was the nervous strain upon him. When the work was ended and his hopes had fled forever, he returned home a thoroughly sick man, and with but slight interruptions steadily declined till his sorrows ended in death.

Horace Greeley was cut down in the same way, doubtless many years before his time; and so have many other men. Politics is too fickle a jade for any man to set his heart upon.

RAVACHOL TO DIE.

THE jury that tried Ravachol, the anarchist, today rendered a verdict of murder and he was sentenced to be executed. Either the cause to which he has been devoting himself has weakened, or the jury in this case has more nerve power than had the one that tried him before; for the old threats still survived and the spirit of hate was manifestly as rampant. Ravachol has shown by his acts that he is one of the most desperate and dangerous men that ever lived in Paris, which is saying a great deal; and his summary "removal" while it may anger his confederates, can but give the cause of law and order new hope.

THE UNIVERSITY OF UTAH.

THE catalogue of the University of Utah for 1892-93 has been received. It is a pamphlet of eighty-two pages and contains the usual information pertaining to publications of that character.

On the 26th of February, 1850, the Legislative Assembly passed an act incorporating the "University of the State of Deceit." This act was ratified by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah, Oct. 4th, 1851.

According to the original charter, the government and administration of the University were vested in a chancellor and a board of twelve regents, appointed by the governor of the Territory for a term of two years, or until their successors were qualified. The first meeting of the Board was held March 13, 1850, with Orson Spencer as chancellor and chairman. The University was open to students in the November following. In 1867 it underwent a re-organization under the supervision of the late D. O. Calder. On the 8th of March, 1869, Dr. John R. Park entered into the superintendency of the institution, and under his administration it has become one of the leading educational establishments west of the Missouri river. In 1884 the Legislature amended the charter, giving the institution definite power to confer degrees and to issue diplomas. In 1892 the Legislature enacted a new charter and changed the name to the "University of Utah."

This recalls an incident which occurred here last winter. Prof. Eliot, of Harvard, in his address at the Tabernacle, alluded to the Puritans of Massachusetts Bay as having founded Harvard six years after the settlement of the colony. In this respect he stated that the Puritans were ahead of the "Mormon" settlers in this valley, because the latter did not establish a university for forty years after settling here. The fact is that the University of Deceit was established two and a half years after the first entrance to this valley by the Pioneers. President Eliot fell into the mistake naturally enough. The Legislature at that time had just amended the charter and changed the name. This caused the Professor to infer that the University was only recently established.

DAVID BENNETT HILL.

SENATOR HILL, whose name has been so enthusiastically heralded for the Chicago nomination by New York Democrats, is yet a young man. He was born in Havana, Schuylers County, New York, August 29, 1848. He was admitted to the bar in 1864 at the age of 21. Ever since he has combined politics and law. He was appointed City Attorney of Elmira a few months after his admission to the bar. He entered the State Assembly in 1871. In 1877, and in 1881, he presided over the New York Democratic State Convention of these years. In 1882 he was elected Mayor of Elmira. In 1886 and 1887 he was president of the New York State Bar Association. He succeeded Grover Cleveland as Governor of New York January, 1885, was elected Governor in November following, and re-elected in 1888. In 1891 he succeeded W. M. Evans as United States Senator from New York. His term expires March 3, 1897.

GLADSTONE'S CAMPAIGN.

MR. GLADSTONE has a hard contest on his hands and seems to realize the fact fully. He is actively engaged in his canvass in opposition to the Unionists, his appearances in the field being numerous. It is astonishing how well a man of his years bears with such uncomplaining fortitude burdens and trials such as have broken down many younger and stronger men; and in all these appears comparatively small diminution of vigor or earnestness—he goes right ahead and fills his appointments in all respects as of yore.

Gladstone spoke at Clapham, London, on the 17th instant, to an audience of non-conformists, and created an excellent impression, as, in fact, he seems to do everywhere. In his remarks he deplored that his assailants had seen fit to take the controversy out of legitimate political channels and turn it into a squabble over religious differences and animosities. It seems that the Unionists are acquitting with the Orangemen and other anti-Catholic organizations; and to such an extent has the situation gone and so heated have the opposition partisans become, that misrepresentations if nothing more serious have been rather freely resorted to. Some of these have been leveled at the "great commoner," one of them crediting him with saying that the Protestants of Ulster were fools or rogues. This he denied emphatically on the occasion referred to, and even without the denial very few people who know of Mr. Gladstone would believe any such statement; he is nothing if not dignified and argumentative, and such an expression would contain nothing of either dignity or argument.

The present is no doubt the last canvass Mr. Gladstone will ever make for several reasons; if defeated he will be forced into a retirement from which, all things considered, he will scarcely care to emerge; if successful the captain will have been placed upon the structure of an honorable and illustrious career and nothing more that he may achieve in the field of abstract politics would make him any greater; and then each succeeding day adds to his weight of years, and it must needs be, in the ordinary course of nature, that his last speech will soon be heard, his final rally be dispersed. Either a Liberal majority or minority in the next House of Commons is fraught with grave consequence to him.

CAMPAIGNING IN IRELAND.

THEY have lively times campaigning in Ireland. On the 19th instant, at Killorglin, the anti-Parnellites were holding a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting, when a party of Parnellites descended upon them like a wolf on the fold; the platform was wrecked and the band driven off, but those who fled in dismay obtained reinforcements and returned, driving the disturbers hence. This reinforcing business, however, proved to be a game which two parties could play at, and the Parnellites, concluding no doubt that they had not had fun enough for one day, doubled their force and went back to the scene of action. After considerable disturbance of a general character, not amounting to a riot, things got warmer and finally the fighting began, clubs and stones being the weapons. The police were unable to stop the row; the chairman was knocked senseless, and everybody in either crowd had some sort of a remainder of the event to carry away with him, some of them being themselves carried away.

Hearing of the Killorglin incident started a similar one at Tralee, where a desperate and bloody row took place.

This all goes to show that our Milesian friends have a keen appreciation of the privileges and opportunities opened up to the energetic politician; but we should think that those who are detailed for campaign work in Ireland would procure some sort of insurance on themselves before starting for their field of labor.

"LIBERALISM" DISCOMFITED.

THE Tuscorara gang have been completely routed, the regular delegates of the Democratic party having been seated in the convention. The information gives general satisfaction in the community, without respect to national political opinions or predilections. The rank "Liberals" are of course disappointed and chafed, but Republicans and Democrats alike are pleased with the result of the contest, because it gives a blow to rabbleism.

ROTTENNESS IN POLICE CIRCLES.

YESTERDAY this journal published some striking facts connected with an informal investigation into the conduct of officials connected with the police department of this city. We have been informed of the existence of an appalling degree of rottenness in that branch of the municipal government.

Some of the leading officials of the administration are cognizant of the fact that the News is not ignorant on the subject. One of the members of the Council (a "Liberal") remarked, a day or two since, to a representative of this journal, that it was due the public that it should, through these columns, expose the condition of the police department, with a view to having the gross wrongs corrected. He even intimated that if this was not done he would himself go before the grand jury and would to that body state that the News had information on the subject and failed to do its duty in the premises.

Of course this kind of talk was the veriest nonsense, especially when the source of it is considered. The work of rectifying such wrongs as exist in the police branch of the government and sweeping it clear of the filth that now clings to it, devolves upon the City Council, of which the gentleman who undertook to instruct the News in relation to its duty to the public is a member. Should he and his fellow councilmen and the Mayor fail to do their duty in the premises, then it would be time for this journal to get in its work, not only upon the transgressors in fact, but upon those who condone and foster corruption within the lines of the municipal administration by failing to root it out.

It seems however, that the police committee is at work on the subject, and we will give Mayor Baskin the credit of a belief on our part that he will not fail to properly act, according to the evidence that may be placed before him. He took prompt action in the case of Detective Johnson as soon as it was learned that he was conducting a disreputable house, by discharging him from the service. The mayor promises to do similarly in the pending cases, if the reports that have reached him are anything like true. He will find, in our opinion, that they can be well sustained. It is not only the chief of police who is concerned in the misconduct that is being uncovered, but also a police sergeant, a Detective, and a police justice.

During the municipal administration which preceded the present one, the police department was a disgrace and a scandal. It was divided into factions. The conduct of some of its members was debased, and the operations of the force so ineffective that criminals from all parts of the country flocked here, because they found it a paradise for their class. Thugs, highwaymen and burglars pursued their vocations with impunity. The climax was reached when the captain of police was shot down and killed on the public street by one of his own men.

The "Liberal" party has in many instances been singularly and deplorably unfortunate in the selection of its officers. This is necessarily the case, because the selections are made, as a rule, without respect either to efficiency or moral status. The leading qualification considered has been that the successful applicant for place has worked with prominent unscrupulousness for the election of "Liberal" candidates. Men who are dishonest in politics are not to be trusted in any department of affairs.

Let the police platter be cleansed of the putridity which now reeks at its head and among its members. The public peace demands that this shall be done.

HAVOC BY HEAT.

NINETY-FOUR degrees of heat in New York city means something that the mountain dweller has no conception of, and during the past week the thermometer has varied between 94 and 100 in that city. The daily death rate during the hot spell was from 170 to 200, and the prostrations from heat are beyond computation. The mortality among children suffering from cholera in autumn is fearful. It appears that the torrid wave is not confined to New York, as sunstrokes and prostrations are reported from all the New England towns as far north as Portland, Maine.

BOIES OF IOWA.

HORACE BOIES, of Waterloo, Iowa, has been conspicuously before the public during the last few days. He was born in Erie County, New York, December 7, 1827. He is of French descent. His father was a very poor farmer, and while Horace was yet a boy got into serious financial embarrassments. This caused young Boies to leave home to seek his fortune further west. He went as far as Racine, Wisconsin, where he worked on a farm for a short time, undergoing most tyrannical treatment. He did not even get enough to eat. After sometime he heard that his mother was on the point of death, and he returned to his father's home in New York. The mother recovered. Horace remained with his father and went to work on the farm. In the winter of 1845, he went to school. The following summer he went to Illinois, remained there about two years, working in summer and teaching school during the winter months. He returned once more to his father's home in Erie County, and went to school at the town of Aurora.

Ever since boyhood he entertained an ambition to become a lawyer. Being now a young man of 22 or 23, he thought that if his cherished idea could be at all put into practice, the time had come to do it. He repaired to Springville, a small village not far from his father's home. Here he contracted with a lawyer to do chores for the privilege of reading law in the latter's office. He studied hard, and after eighteen months was admitted to the bar. He married a young lady named King, a playmate of his, and then opened a law office with a library consisting of fifteen dollars' worth of books. He soon acquired a reputation for industry, conscientiousness, and devotion to the interests of his clients. He moved to Hamburg, a town near Buffalo. About this time the new Republican party was making quite a stir. Young Boies became one of its most active apostles. In 1855 he entered the State Legislature as a full-fledged Republican. The young politician did not enjoy his honors very long. The district underwent a gerrymandering process, and in the next election Boies was ousted. Finally he moved to Buffalo, and soon acquired fame as a lawyer. In 1866 Grover Cleveland was the nominee of the Democratic party for County Attorney. Mr. Boies was a candidate on the Republican ticket for the same office, and lost the nomination by two votes.

In 1867 Mr. Boies moved from Buffalo to Waterloo, Iowa. He is now spoken of exclusively as a western man, though forty years of his life were spent in New York. His first move in Iowa was to secure as much land as he could possibly get hold of. He combined farming with the practice of law. He owns 3,500 acres, which are all cultivated under his immediate supervision.

Until 1880 Mr. Boies had been a Republican of the most stalwart type. From 1870 to 1883 the Republicans of Iowa in their conventions invariably demanded tariff reform. In 1880 the National Republican convention adopted a strong protection plank. Boies among others severely criticized the action of his party, but did not leave it. In 1883 the prohibition cause struck Iowa. The Republicans adopted it. Boies, though a man who has never smoked, nor drank alcoholic liquors of any kind, repudiated prohibition. A state campaign was pending, and a legislature to be chosen. Boies worked against the prohibitionists and Republicans combined. They triumphed and he was no longer regarded as of the party. He made a coarse review of his political convictions. He found himself opposed to sumptuary laws, to high tariff, to vast expenditures of public moneys. In fact he found himself a Democrat, and openly proclaimed himself as such in 1884. He took the stump for Cleveland. He could have no hope for political office, because at that time Iowa was so overwhelmingly Republican, that it was classed as irrevocably and perpetually of that party. In 1887, however, the Democrats made some headway, in 1888 they made more and in 1889 they elected Horace Boies, governor of Iowa, by a plurality of 6528 in a total vote of 22,000 larger than in the preceding election for governor. In 1890 the Democrats carried six of the eleven Congressional districts in Iowa. In 1891 Boies was re-nominated for governor. He was elected by a plurality of 8216 in a total vote of 420,000, as against 404,000 in the Presidential election of 1888. Mr. Boies, according to a press dispatch, does not feel over sanguine that the Democratic ticket will be elected next November.

A BLACKMAILING POLICEMAN CONVICTED.

GERRY'S Society for the protection of children in New York employs a number of officers invested with police powers. At the time of the Dr. Parkhurst excitement two of these were charged with blackmailing keepers of houses of ill-fame. An investigation followed. One of them, a sergeant named Finn, has just been convicted and sentenced to six months in prison and to pay a fine of $250. He used to collect a monthly stipend from Sophia Martens, guaranteeing her protection from arrest. There were several cases in which it was shown that collections were made, but in the Martens transaction there was irrefutable proof. The fellow was actually detected while collecting his blackmail.

THE SUGAR BEET.

MR. C. A. GRANGER, agricultural superintendent of the Utah Sugar Co., L-ubi, Utah, has published a very instructive little brochure in relation to the sugar beet, and its proper cultivation. It appears that numerous inquiries from various portions of the country are being daily received at the Lehi sugar works in reference to the beet, and its treatment. This pamphlet has been written and published with a view to answering the interrogations and to present the information in a concise and clear form, which the author has succeeded in doing.

The little work takes a cognizance of the beet, the soil and its preparation, planting, seed, size, thinning, harvesting, irrigation, tonnage, cost of production, etc. In eight pages all that the farmer wants to know about the cultivation of the sugar beet is found.

FATE OF AN INDIAN WOMAN.

Some time ago the town of Sonora, Mexico, was thrown into a state of great religious excitement, by reason of a young Indian maiden who it was said performed miraculous feats through the agency of divine power. The excitement extended to the whole province, and whole tribes of Indians and troops of Mexicans came to worship the young woman. The government took the matter up and Teresa Urra was convicted and sentenced to death.

The New York Recorder gives the following account of the affair:

It will be remembered that the sentence of death which the district judge of Guaymas passed upon Saint Teresa was commuted upon condition that she leave the country, never to return. The Governor in his instructions to the beautiful Indian maiden and her aged father even went so far as to inform them that they must not stop until they reached the far interior of the United States.

The unfortunate axiles were escorted to the Mexican boundary by a detachment of Mexican soldiers. The first town on the little Sonora railroad, of any size on this side of the border is Nogales, Arizona, and it was there that Saint Teresa and her father stopped. They were cared for by the good citizens of Nogales.

The couple rented a little house on the outskirts of Nogales, but had barely got settled when the news of their Saint's location began to spread among her former Indian subjects and worshippers across the border, in the mountains of Sonora. They flocked to Nogales by the hundreds, and the excitement rapidly spread among the lower classes of Mexicans in southern Arizona. The afflicted were brought to Nogales in all kinds of conveyances, and Saint Teresa is said to have performed many miraculous cures.

In a few days, however, she began to pine for the joys of her rude mountain home, and the famished scenes of her happy childhood. Her father longed to be back with his herd of goats and to lead his quiet pastoral life again. They resolved four days ago to brave the wrath of the Sonora authorities and return to their mountain home, and quietly left Nogales, avoiding the concourse of Indians and Mexicans awaiting to see them.

"Through the assistance of F. L. Morley, a merchant of Nogales, they reached the Mexican boundary line, and on Thursday morning at an early hour they crossed into Sonora afoot and struck across the desert toward the mountains, where they had their old home.

"The news of their disappearance from Nogales was telegraphed to the Governor of Sonora, who notified all the subordinate authorities to keep a lookout for the fugitives and to show them no mercy if captured.

"Late on Thursday evening the rurales, or frontier guards at Cibola discovered Saint Teresa and her father making their way south through the chaparral.

"They were arrested and taken into town, and on the public plaza of the place Saint Teresa is said to have been shot to death. The life of her aged father was spared, but he was taken to Guaymas under a heavy guard.

THE KNIGHTS OF RECIPROCITY.

THERE exists in the United States a secret political society named the Knights of Reciprocity. It was first organized in February, 1891, and was more or less a direct outgrowth of the Kansas elections of 1890. It will be remembered that the Farmers' Alliance of that year promulgated platforms of a most radical nature, including sub-treasury schemes, absolute free trade, government loans and several other socialistic projects. The Knights of Reciprocity, finding, perhaps, that a golden mean between the extreme Alliance men and the extreme party men would be the best, organized a society mainly for political education, but providing also for social and recreative entertainments.

For the convenience of organizing and extending the order a short political catechism was formulated, and each candidate for membership was and is required to answer the following questions:

- "1. Are you in favor of the perpetuity of our Union?
- "2. Are you in favor of just and liberal pensions to all honorably discharged soldiers and sailors of the republic?
- "3. Are you in favor of the protection of American industries?
- "4. Are you in favor of fair and equitable reciprocity between all nations on the American continent?
- "5. Are you in favor of fair and equitable reciprocity between all interests in our nation?
- "6. Are you in favor of an intelligent ballot, honestly cast and counted?
- "Are you in favor of disfranchising every citizen who offers or accepts a bribe to influence a ballot?"

In Tennessee, where the convict labor question has been a burning one for some time, one more question is added, namely:

"Are you in favor of the abolition of the convict labor question as it exists in this State?"

There is no question as to party prejudices or party feelings. In both the old parties are individuals who favor moderate protection combined with reciprocity, hence the reciprocity idea forms the political basis of the order, and thus from it derives its name. All these questions, it is supposed, must be answered in the affirmative to qualify for eligibility. But the order must not be used for electioneering purposes in the interest of any party or individual. The members are, however, pledged to vote for the candidates who most closely represent the principles to which they have subscribed.

It is thought that this organization will figure largely in the pending election. At present there are 208 lodges in Kansas, 384 in Missouri, and 94 in Louisiana. The order is represented in New York, Nebraska, Maryland and ten other States. Forty-eight lecturers are already on the road organizing and extending the order into every State and Territory in the Union. The object is to draw every citizen who favors reciprocity into closer sympathy with each other, and then vote for the party which most nearly represents their ideas.

The organization is simple. There is a Supreme Lodge composed of two delegates from each State lodge. Its headquarters at present are in Garden city, Kansas, but after the next annual meeting they will be transferred to Washington, D. C. The state lodge is composed of representatives from subsidiary lodges, and meet twice a year.

As reciprocity, especially with the American nations, is favored very strongly by the Republican party, it looks as if this order would be of no small advantage to it. Its main object is, however, to offset the Farmers' Alliance, and it is stronger in those States where that party is also strongest, and it looks as if by a fusion of conservative Democrats and Republicans the alliance may be materially weakened.

THE CZAR'S TYRANNY.

THOSE who imagine that the social and governmental condition of Russia is exaggerated by those who are opposed to the Czar's system, should keep on reading until they obtain a better comprehension. That potentate's absolute way is so conclusive, so sweeping and so searching that we who have been born and reared under gentler circumstances can scarcely conceive of it at all. It is a proper subject to discuss, for the reason that it is such an anomaly in the midst of an enlightened age, and Russia is the greatest nation in a division of the earth where all else is civilization, progress and more or less enlightenment. The thought that at such a time and under such circumstances there can be found a hundred million white people whose ruler is their master as well and whose will is the supreme law of the land, is repulsive; what, then, must be the experience itself?

Poultey Bigelow, traveler and writer, has made several ineffectual attempts to journey through the dark empire, being invariably arrested and turned back before he got very far. Last fall he succeeded in penetrating to certain distances in different places along the western border of the Czar's dominions, and acquired sufficient material for a little volume of 176 pages, which he entitles "The German Emperor and his Eastern Neighbors." In it he explains the situation as affecting the ruler and the ruled in Russia in a few lines, they being a portion of an interview which the author had with a Polish playwright. He said:

"The matter is extremely simple—limited, in fact, to thirty words, the use of which must be avoided. For example, 'nation' must not be used; it suggests Poland. 'King' is objectionable, as well as 'kingdom,' for both are in contrast to the Czar and his empire. I must never use the word 'emperor'; it might imply that there was an Austrian or a German emperor, whereas in Russia there is but the Czar. 'Independence' is of course insulting to the government, so are 'freedom,' 'liberty,' 'constitution,' 'parliament,' which are obviously in the nature of lese-majeste. We must not only avoid the use of these bare words in any sense, but we must most carefully avoid any suggestion that might imply the assistance of such a thing as Poland. Polish history does not exist in Russia; for how can there be a history for a tract of land figuring only as a province of the Czar? The name of my country cannot be used, for officially we are not Poles, but are only known to our masters as inhabitants of the military department of the Vistula."

One would think that even the Czar, guarding jealously his power as an heirloom in the royal household, is more punctilious than is necessary or is consistent with real dignity; but he does not rest there, his freaks and spasms of imagined unfriendliness leading him to acts of oppression bordering on criminality. For instance, a large and respectable business concern in Warsaw last year undertook to open a branch house elsewhere in Poland, but the police would not allow the place to be opened, because the proprietors were suspected of entertaining liberal ideas. They (the police) will not allow favorable mention to be made of anything done or said by a Pole, the design being to make it appear that Poland cannot produce men of intellectual ability. It is related that an excellent Polish writer, who had made a scientific voyage to another country, was interviewed as to his experiences, but not a word of it was allowed to appear in print by the government censor, the only reason given being that it would advertise the writer. And so on, through a dreary list that might be produced, each case containing some overt or poorly concealed intent to harass, hinder or harm.

But for the effect which it would have produced upon the outside world and the prominence of the man, the generous Count Tolstoid would not have been permitted to prosecute his labors of love among the starving subjects of the Czar last winter, and it may readily be understood that the first act of the Count's which by any means of distortion can be construed into an offense against the despot, will be taken advantage of to harass if not to injure or drive the humanitarian away. Personally, Alexander is reported as a rather agreeable person, highly accomplished and disposed to be hospitable; but officially he is not to be emulated or admired.

The Paper Trade Club of Chicago, representing nearly all the paper manufacturers of the city, is arranging for an interesting display at the World's Fair.

THE DANGERS OF SCIENCE.

THOSE who stand in awe of the "deadly trolley" and have been hoping that their fears might eventuate some sort of substitute less dangerous, are apparently as far from the realization of their hopes now as at any time heretofore. A cable road in St. Louis has just been changed to an electric one, and a 25,000 horse power plant put in to operate it; besides which, the work of extending electric lines goes on almost everywhere where there are any. The people seem to be getting reconciled to it, dangers and all, just as they have regarding the railway with its dangers, many fold more numerous than the other or any other. All departments of scientific locomotion contain a percentage of danger in proportion to their rapidity, and those who avail themselves of such means must take their chances along with the rest, the risk accompanying the trip as an unfeeling attendant.

A SAMPLE OF "LIBERAL" METHODS.

THE conciliatory policy pursued by the regular Republican delegates to the National Convention toward the representatives of the "Liberal" faction, has been explained in these columns. The statements of the "regulars" on the subject have been precisely uniform. The magnanimous course taken toward the "Liberal" delegates was inspired by a desire to see peace established. It was also taken in response to the pleading of the most prominent of the "Liberals," who was disconsolate at the overwhelming defeat of himself and colleagues. He as much as stated that so far as he was concerned the local fight was finished.

His appeal was effectual. The public is aware of the courtesies and recognition accorded him at the hands of the regular delegation. Since his return home he has given evidence of a degree of inability to appreciate the magnanimity of an opponent that is enough to cause one to lose faith in humanity. It is now proved that to concede anything to the class to which he belongs only leads to a practical illustration of the correctness of the scriptural statement of the effect of casting precious things in front of a class of domestic animals not held in exalted esteem.

The leading "Liberal" delegate to Minneapolis, in a lengthy article in Saturday's issue of his paper, repudiates the idea that he gave any intimation of his intention to drop, in future, the old hate-inspired local contention, and he figuratively snaps his fingers contemptuously at the courtesies accorded him through the direct agency of the regular Republican delegation. The long, rambling statement winds up with characteristic inconsistency. Here is the last paragraph but one:

"There are Republican and Democratic clubs in the Liberal party; there is no Mormon who is working in good faith who could not join those clubs with perfect propriety and without humiliation; but that is soon ed at, which is a living evidence that the dissolution of the People's party was but a trick, and that now the aim is exactly as it was ten, fifteen, twenty and forty years ago, only that new methods have been adopted to secure the desired result."

"When that statement is analyzed, this is its logic: The dissolution of the People's party was a trick. The proof of this lies in the fact that the late members of the dissolved People's party do not practically join the ranks of the "Liberal" party. As a consequence the aim is the same as the last forty years, "only that new methods have been adopted to secure the desired result." Well, this rich.

If this be a trick, it was performed in accordance with suggestions made by the writer of the article quoted, and the class to which he belongs. The proofs of this exist in the lack members of his own paper. "Abolish polygamy, dissolve the People's party and divide on national party lines. If you "Mormons" do this there will be no longer a "Mormon" question; we will follow suit and dissolve the "Liberal" party, and Utah will be Americanized." The result is that a course in harmony with their own suggestion is declared "a trick," because they are opposed to a solution of questions that have heretofore divided the community. They think there are money and political prestige and place for them in the old fight, maintained by playing upon the religious prejudices of the nation.

The "Mormons" can do nothing of which such men are willing to approve. If their actions were as pure as the conduct of an angel, they would assert that the virtues displayed were the product of ulterior motives. The objects of their animus cannot suit them, no matter what course they may take. Their policy, at all times and under all circumstances, is to give the "Mormons" no credit, but to malign and abuse them at every opportunity. When opportunities do not exist they are manufactured. Non-"Mormons" who do not fall into the methods of the political conspirators are subjected to the same malignant treatment.

It is therefore no wonder that the degree of recognition accorded the "Liberal" delegation at Minneapolis at the hands of the regular Republicans from Utah was not appreciated. Neither should it cause astonishment that, after the implied promises made to the contrary by Judge Goodwin while the convention contest was on, he should now say through his paper: "We know of no advice to give to Liberals except to stand where they have always stood." This means that they are to continue to live in the musty past, instead of travelling forward with the march of progressive events.

Even so, if they will let them be left ingloriously in the rear.

SPREAD THE FACT WIDELY.

WORD comes from the political front, at Chicago, that the bogus Democrats are exhibiting their quality in that city. They have been marching with their tri-colored umbrellas, "Uncle Sam" hats and grey dusters, with a nigger and a fellow in Indian costume at the head of the column. They have been shouting their war-cry—"Utah, Utah, Tuscarora."

A gentleman who witnessed the semi-idiotic spectacle they presented is said to have remarked, in disgust, that he needed no further evidence to convince him of the quality of the Tuscarora crowd.

Why should he require any more proof that they have no higher conception of patriotism or of affairs of State than do ordinary street Arabs? Their ridiculous display degrades them, and anything further in that line were necessary, in the eyes of every sensible person who witnesses their mountebank performances.

The platform of this delectable faction is easy of formation. In order to construct it it would only be needful to pile together the barrels of intoxicants they carried on board the train on which they traveled to Chicago, and surmount them with a banner inscribed with this motto: "Whisky is King." The speakers for the crowd, in support of the platform, could "point with pride" to the fact that they had succeeded in inaugurating a whisky reign in the municipal government of Salt Lake, formerly the most orderly and exemplary city in the American Union.

We sincerely hope that the friends of Utah now in Chicago will industriously circulate the fact that the Tuscarora mountebanks do not belong to the old and solid citizens of this Territory, who do not wish to be considered as having descended to the verge of lunacy. Let it be known, as far as practicable, that these political pyrotechnicians belong to the class who, in a political campaign, at the suggestion of chief Tuscarora Powers, selected for their standard the empty carpet-bag—the symbol of the lowest forms of political degradation.

By all means let the citizens of the Queen City know that the Tuscaroras do not in any sense represent the people of Utah.

A THIN SENSATION.

THIS morning the Salt Lake Tribune announces, under flaming headlines, that its reporter was ordered to move from the table provided at the Tabernacle for the accommodation of press reporters. This is simply a piece of attempted martyrdom. There is no truth in the statement. No official of the Church has denied or has any intention of denying the representative of any paper, the Tribune included, the courtesies which ought to be accorded to the press. This childish endeavor to make it appear that the authorities of the Church have a disposition to curtail the freedom of the press is beneath contempt. We reiterate the fact that the statement is false. Our assertion can be proved at any moment.

CLEVELAND CLIMBING.

A FEW days ago a conservative yet searching and quite reliable canvass was made of the Illinois delegation to the Chicago convention, by a prominent newspaper worker of that city. The result of his footings gave the following result: Palmer 29, Morrison 12, Cleveland 9, Justice Craig 1. The importance of this estimate to those who are on the lookout for "straws" from the Lake City is considerable, or was so until yesterday, when, according to the Associated Press reporter, Secretary Palmer absolutely declined in favor of the ex-President and requested that not only the votes in his own favor but those for all other candidates go to Mr. Cleveland. If his wishes should be obeyed, the column for the noted New Yorker will have swollen somewhat beyond the majority line and be in easy sailing of the necessary two-thirds required to nominate.

Not only is the act of Senator Palmer consequential in and of itself, but it "sets the pace," so to speak, for other wavering delegations. Illinois was, perhaps, looked upon as a kind of criterion because having the largest mixed delegation and the largest one of any State but three—New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. If the last named and Indiana should now follow suit, and drop their "favorite sons" or those from other places and unite on Mr. Cleveland, his nomination on the first ballot would be assured.

It is announced by the same authority that the anti-Cleveland force are determined to make one grand, determined effort, by concentrating all their strength to prevent the consummation foreshadowed, at least so far as the first ballot is concerned, evidently believing that his failure to secure the prize at the outset will thereafter cause him losses instead of gains, and thence taking a downward course means ultimate defeat, or as soon as some other strong man can be agreed and combined upon.

The dispatches state that now, or rather yesterday evening, the only avowed candidates were Cleveland, Hill and Boies. This makes it look darker for the opposition, as, following the rule of proportions and preferences, the majority of those who have deserted their former inclinations have gone to swell the ex-President's following, so that while Hill and Boies have gained a little, Cleveland has gained considerably.

The later dispatches go to show that the Cleveland forces are being slowly but steadily augmented, from which the reader can draw his own conclusions.

POLITICAL CONVENTION.

Two weeks ago the eyes of politicians were turned to Minneapolis; today they are turned to Chicago. The situation at both places is somewhat similar. Grover Cleveland occupies more or less the same position with his party that Harrison did with his at Minneapolis. The Chicago Convention will consist of 898 delegates, necessary for a choice, two-thirds, 599. The vote cast at Minneapolis was 904, necessary for a choice, a majority, 453. On the first ballot Harrison received 335 1-6, or 52 more than was required. Blaine received 182 5-6 votes, McKinley, 182, ex-Speaker Reed 4, and Robert T. L. 1, out of 3. The Minneapolis Convention, according to the regular rule, would also consist of 898 delegates, but owing to contests and compromises a half dozen votes were added. Grover Cleveland must get 65 more votes than Harrison to secure the nomination on the first ballot.

About a week hence Cincinnati will be held to as a political centre, but not with such interest as Minneapolis and Chicago. On Wednesday, the 28th inst., at 10 a. m., the National Prohibition convention will assemble in the Music Hall of that city. The call provides for 1149 delegates and the same number of alternates. The basis of representation is as follows: Each State is entitled to four delegates at large, and each congressional district and Territory to two each, while for every thousand votes cast for Fluke in 1888 each State is entitled to one additional delegate. The candidates of this party in 1888 were Clinton B. Fluke for President and John A. Brooks for Vice-President. No State was carried and consequently no electoral vote was obtained. But a total of 248,436 votes was polled for the ticket all through the country.

The national convention of the People's party will assemble at Omaha on Monday, July 4. This party represents the Farmer's Alliance and various allied industrial and labor reform elements. To this convention each congressional district is entitled to send four delegates, and each State eight delegates-at-large. There are 356 districts and 44 States, therefore the convention should consist of 1776 delegates. There seems to have been no provision made for the Territories. The party of which this is more or less the successor was known in 1888 as the United Labor party. Its candidates were A. J. Streeter and C. E. Cunningham. The total vote polled was 144,698.

The People's party has made a good deal of noise, and in fact effected something during the past few years. It made itself felt in Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota and Nebraska. It caused quite a commotion in several of the Southern States, and succeeded in getting two U. S. Senators and a dozen Representatives.

SOUVENIR SILVER HALF DOLLAR.

THE bill to coin several millions of souvenir silver half dollars, as mementoes of the World's Fair, is one that both sides of the silver question can uphold—the bi-metallics because it is actually placing so much silver in circulation, and the mono-metallics because the silver is not used as money. A cleverer or more satisfactory scheme could scarcely be devised, since nearly everybody that goes to the Fair will want something to show for it and something to remember it by in one and the same article. If possible, the special half dollar issue will fill the bill exactly, and the chances are that the issue will be taken up.

It is really gratifying to know that the men of extreme views on opposite sides of the silver question can be got together for once, even though it be but for this occasion. Of course, having joined hands and accomplished the desired object, they will divide again and be as widely separate as before. This is not at all gratifying, but there is no prospect of anything better till some mutual concessions are made. It is entirely out of the question for the silver men to obtain the absolutely free and unrestricted coinage of the white metal; on the other hand, it is contrary to the spirit if not the letter of the Constitution to make it a mere maid-in-waiting on gold—so much merchandise whose value is to be determined by the more favored metal. The medium ground, with no uncertain provisions and no unjust restrictions, is the most feasible if not the best in all respects. Let a just and practicable ratio between gold and silver be established definitely and conclusively; and this being done, to say that we could have too much coinage would be to say that we could have too much money—a conditionavoring too strongly of Utopia to be looked for in this practical age.

THE ANTI-OPTIONS BILL.

WHAT is now known as the "Hatch" or "anti-options bill" which passed the House of Representatives at Washington on the 28th inst. is occasioning fierce criticism. The New York Times contends that if it should become law, it would not only cause a suspension on option trading, but exercise a surveillance over business in general that in the end would be destructive to all industry. The New York Cotton Exchange and the New York Produce Exchange have entered strong protests against this bill. The New York bankers here also oppose it, contending that the provisions of the measure would bring about a panic. The New Orleans bankers have joined with their Gotham brothers, and the bankers of Chicago are still more emphatic in their opposition. They declare that both the farmer and manufacturer would be ruinously injured by the "Hatch bill," or, as it is called in the Senate, the "Washburn bill," should it become law.

The purpose of the proposed enactment is to prevent dealing in what are known as "options" and "futures" in certain specified commodities. In board of trade parlance "options," "futures," "puts," "calls" and "straddles" are the terms used for manipulating products of various kinds in a method not generally understood by the average citizen, but which by many business men is characterized as a species of gambling. By "option" is meant any contract which gives the right to any party to deliver to another at a future time some article, but does not obligate said party to deliver it, should he feel so disinclined. The future is something similar and applies to agents, brokers or others who may act as a third party, in any transaction where an actual sale and bona fide delivery of goods does not take place.

The articles to which the "Hatch Bill" applies are raw cotton, hops, wheat, corn, oats, rye, barley, grain, seeds, flaxseed, pork, lard, bacon, and all edible products of swine. The bill demands that every "option" dealer in these products shall pay annually $1,000 license fee, and shall also pay the further sum of 5 cents per pound for each and every pound of raw cotton, hops, pork, lard and bacon, and 20 cents per bushel for each and every bushel of grain traded in, under the name of "option" or "futures."

The measure is quite a lengthy one, and embraces many other radical changes in the present mode of doing business in the great marts of this country. It also embodies severe punitive provisions for violation of the law. It passed the House by 167 yeas to 46 nays, 116 not voting.

THE MAD MONARCH.

A RECENT issue of the Cologne Gazette announces that the condition of the mad King of Bavaria—Otto I—is now merely vegetative; that he is unable to distinguish persons in his familiar entourage, and that his attendants have the greatest difficulty in getting him to take food—a condition of things which seems to indicate steady progression toward the inevitable and gloomy finale.

This is one of the most peculiar cases within the records of the materia medica. Of course the eminent station of the patient adds importance to the subject; but divested of kingliness and all other extraneous considerations, is still a peculiar, almost a mystifying one. What caused it? Gradual disintegration of the brain tissues? Most likely; but this does but give rise to another and just as perplexing a problem—What caused the disintegration? We have not heard it described as organic, a weakness of creation, because the symptoms, if we are correctly informed, did not manifest themselves in early life but developed only a few years ago.

Perhaps the following extract from a recent article on this subject may throw some light upon it: "The king is extremely fond of cigarettes and smokes more than thirty a day. Every time he lights a cigarette he burns a whole box of matches, and seems to enjoy the noise and the flame."

The poisonous smoke of thirty of those things every day being drawn to and saturating the salivary glands and clogging the pores of the mouth should, in the natural course of things, produce death within a more or less measured time corresponding with the physical ability of the victim to resist the baneful influence. Insanity would almost surely take place at an early stage, and what death more to be dreaded than that which is preceded by the complete occultation of the mind? We have not heard of the King's condition being ascribed to this cause; but that the loathsome and devouring habit is enlarging the malady and hastening the tragic development, there can be no manner of doubt.

NEEDS NO PUBLIC ENCOURAGEMENT

On last Tuesday, June 21, something new occurred in this locality. The leading business houses closed their establishments in order that all hands connected with them might attend the races. This is the first instance in the history of this city of a closing day for such a purpose.

Looking at the subject from the standpoint of the conservation of the public good, the propriety of the step was, in our view, questionable. We agree with the plea put forth by some people that horse-racing, pure and simple, is not necessarily demoralizing. On the contrary it is probably altogether harmless. It is, however, in its actual condition all over the world, associated with gambling, and more or less drinking, and draws together a great many vile characters, as well as people who are unquestionably respectable and good.

It may be argued that people can attend such occasions without being affected with the baser concomitants connected with them. Doubtless many have strength of character to go anywhere without having their moral sentiments or desires tainted in the least. This is not, however, the invariable rule. The effect in numbers of cases is liable to be the opposite of this.

What we wish to insist upon is that any public act that will induce the people of this community to enter and swim down the current of pleasure-seeking, and that might lead some into paths of danger, is of questionable propriety. Any person who has lived a good while in Utah will conclude, on a moment's reflection, that the popular trend in that direction has been for several years sufficiently impulsive without any assistance of any character whatever. In thus commenting we run the risk of being deemed, in this respect, out of the prevailing drift, and consequently foggyish. Be that as it may, it is better to be right and regarded as odd, than to be actually aside from the proper line and be popularly esteemed.

Horse-racing has grown in this Territory until even the smaller settlements have become infected with the spirit of it. Occasionally we, in consequence, are called upon to record the fact that some young fellow in the bloom of life has come to an untimely end, by meeting with an accident by which his neck was broken. It is sometimes also the painful duty of this journal to refer to quarrels, the result of betting and drunkenness that have sprung from this species of amusement. But, as we have already admitted, these are not necessary adjuncts to this species of sport, although so frequently associated with it.

Coming back to the point of closing business establishments on account of a horse-race, what must be the legitimate effect of such a step? Necessarily to popularize the sport and give it an aspect of legitimacy that, in its present status, few will have the temerity to insist properly belongs to it. We believe in employers being mindfully generous to their employees, in the way of tendering them opportunities for the recreation they need. But in order to do this it is not necessary to hold into prominence a species of pleasure-hunting which ought not to be cultivated.

As a matter of course these remarks have reference to people belonging to the community of Latter day Saints. Incidentally, others may take them by a process of self-application, if they wish.

History teaches this lesson, if it teaches anything; that an inordinate disposition toward frivolity and pleasure-seeking indicates a corresponding decay of those solid, sterling qualities which render a community or nation great.

A LONG AND GOOD REIGN.

On Monday last Queen Victoria had reigned over Great Britain fifty-five years, this being equalled by only two sovereigns of that country—Henry VIII, who held the throne a few months longer than the Queen so far has, and George III, who occupied it sixty years. It is also the case that but two other British sovereigns have lived to the age acquired by Victoria—George II, seventy-seven, and George III, eighty-two, while there is but one living sovereign, so far as known, whose age equals hers, he being the King of Denmark, and his age seventy-four, a year or thereabout more. Albert, the Queen's husband, died thirty-one years and six months ago.

THOSE WIGWAG INCIDENTS.

THE mishaps that occurred in connection with the late National Democratic Convention at Chicago are unparalleled by any occurrence of the kind associated with a similar body in the history of the nation. The forerunner of those discomforting incidents was the partial unroofing, by a cyclone, of the wigwag before the Convention convened. During its session the deafening thunder rolled overhead, while the rain poured through the flimsy roof, drenching the assembled multitude. Then came the breaking of the electric light attachments, the crashing of the fragments upon the heads of the members of the New York delegation and the terror which these circumstances inspired, a panic and consequent dire disaster being barely prevented by the more cool-headed of the men who comprised the great throng. Those who believe in omens will be likely to speculate upon these occurrences as portentous in their relation to the future.

DESTRUCTIVE FLOODS.

THE dispatches from the East contain lamentable details of floods and rain storms. Today it is reported that Chicago, the Convention city, is in a dire condition, the result of continued floods for the past few weeks. It looks as if the United States was becoming remarkable for its floods, as well as other elemental disasters.

Calamities of this nature are not unknown in history. According to Piny and Tacitus the most destructive floods ever known occurred in Europe about the time of Christ. The Celts, which in prehistoric Western Europe dominated the countries from the Atlantic to the mouth of the Danube, were compelled, by reason of floods along the western ocean, to move into Northern Italy. In the North about the same time terrible floods drove the Teutonic tribes to the South. Rome suffered severely from floods from about 44 B. C. to A. D. 70. In that city plague and pestilence invariably followed the inundations from the Tiber. About 60 A. D. France and England suffered a great deal from floods.

The present century is especially remarkable for its floods. In 1831 7000 houses and 15,000 lives were destroyed in the valley of the Euphrates. In 1856 in China 200,000 lives were lost. In 1871 and 1872 Stanley reported tremendous floods in Central Africa. The Bengal flood of 1876 is still remembered, in which 185,000 lives were lost. The floods in 1878 along the Nile, in 1879 in Hungary and Spain, and in China in 1881 are still fresh in the memories of most newspaper readers.

As the century grows in grace, the floods seem to grow more destructive. In 1883 the terrible Pennsylvania floods occurred. India had a visitation that same year. Every year since then this country is visited with most destructive floods. It is only a few years since 1,000,000 persons perished, and 2,000,000 were rendered homeless in China from that cause.

REVIEW OF THE CONTEST.

The preliminary fight for recognition by the National Democratic party, between the Democrats and Tuscarras of Utah was of great interest. The "Liberals" counted securely on seating their delegates because Ferry one of their number was the national committeeman for Utah. It was scarcely doubted by most people acquainted with the case that Ferry would receive the tickets and hand them to Powers and Kiesel, leaving the straight Democrats to fight for the seats on the outside.

It has always been the custom to give the tickets to the national committeeman for each State and it was thought to be impossible to change the rule. However, a protest was prepared and presented to the national committee endorsed by several influential Democrats, including Hon. Chauncey F. Black, Lawrence Gardner and W. D. Bynum. Straight Democrats who had friends and acquaintances on the national committee laid siege to them and briefly explained the facts in the case which only needed examination to show their truth and force. The result was that Ferry was left out in the cold and the delegates' tickets and badges were handed to Henderson and Caine. This unexampled victory gave courage for further exertion.

The hearing before the sub-committee on credentials, at the Palmer House, demonstrated the fact that conditions have changed not only in Utah but in the East. O. W. Powers made a characteristic speech, filled with ancient and rusty anti-"Mormon" charges, which were vociferously applauded by the crowd of Tuscaras, acting as claqueurs. The committee ordered the noise stopped and declared the room and lobbies should be cleared if it was continued. Powers put much force and feeling into his harangue, and declared that unless his party, which he claimed numbered 4700 voters, was recognized, there could be no Democratic party in Utah. He declaimed, threatened, pleaded and denied that any Republican money had been donated for the Tuscaras. When asked by O'Donnell of Colorado whether he was a Liberal he answered yes. Then said O'Donnell "you represent the Liberal party?" Powers replied "The Democratic party" but his confusion was apparent. He found the old venomous anti-Mormon darts were unavailing and only provoked derision.

Judge Henderson offered a striking contrast. His earnest, yet quiet and gentlemanly manner, his plain facts and clear but logical arguments and conclusive deductions went straight home to the minds of his hearers. He made it evident that he represented the genuine Democratic party of Utah and the Mormons had done everything that had been demanded of them on political grounds and nothing less could be honorably done but recognize them. He showed that admitting all the facts and figures put forth by Powers, still he represented a party of bolters, and they could not be recognized as Democrats. His speech made a deep impression.

Hon. W. D. Bynum of Indiana followed in a short argument, right to the point, as to the Democrats having the regular party organization. He spoke of his visit to Utah and testified to the complete and admirable club organizations in Utah not excelled in the country. He confirmed all that Judge Henderson had explained.

Ex-Governor West was the next speaker. With force and emphasis he put the straight Democratic claims forward in such shape that the Tuscararas ground their teeth and looked savage but despondent.

Powers attempted to reply but his effort was but a repetition of his former story and an attempt to show he was a good Democrat and that his opponents were the Mormon party. F. J. Kiesel then took up the lugubrious anti-Mormon refrain, talked about the Church and its influence in politics and the terrible consequences of delivering the Territory over to it. He boasted of his long residence and sufferings (?) in Utah and the non-sense of men coming into the Territory and eating "Mormon" strawberries and cream to learn all about the "Mormons." He was rapped down by the chairman's hammer. Tarpey followed, then Edwards of the Tribune, who had been very officious and impudent. They simply made a noise; they simply said nothing in a loud voice.

While this was going on the convention, which met at 11 o'clock, was waiting for the report of the credentials committee. The sub-committee cleared the room. They were out in two minutes. They said nothing, but the "Liberals" read defeat in their faces and declared the thing had been "fixed beforehand." The sub-committee were unanimous for Henderson and Caine. The full committee adopted the report unanimously. When they reported at noon to the Convention it was unanimously adopted, and so the contest was ended.

A. E. STEVENSON.

THE candidate for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket is not a man nationally known in the sense that Gray, Boies, Palmer and Campbell of Ohio are.

A. E. Stevenson is a native of Kentucky, where he was born in 1855. He was admitted to the bar in Bloomington, Ill. shortly before the opening of the war. Though a practicing lawyer by profession he has large interests in the coal fields of Illinois, and devotes a good deal of time to the development of this industry. He has been in public life ever since he was a young man. He served as State's attorney in his judicial circuit in Illinois from 1884 to 1888. He was in Congress for two terms, and was defeated for two other terms. Mr. Stevenson was Cleveland's first assistant postmaster-general. He was mentioned as the candidate for Governor of Illinois a month ago, but the counsels of party chieftains prevailed, and he was held in reserve for the nomination for Vice-President.

A RETROSPECTION AND A MORAL.

LAST Saturday was the seventy-seventh anniversary of one of the greatest and most desperate and consequential battles of modern times; it involved not only victory or defeat for the participants, but the future arrangement and welfare of all Europe. It resulted in the complete downfall of the ambitious monarch who precipitated it, and his enforced seclusion from mankind during the rest of his life.

We can occasionally look back to that momentous struggle and wonder what would be the social and political features of Europe had the result of the battle been different to what it was. Napoleon's plan was to push Wellington into the sea on the west, then turning to have given Blucher such a bloody welcome as he had previously received at the same hands and sent him home with a decimated force and a broken heart. Such was the design, and what followed would have been ordered, or at least approved of, by was "man of destiny" himself; but it the not thus to be and Napoleon went down to rise no more.

In his notes Victor Hugo says that when in Brussels he refused to visit the battle field of Waterloo, because it represented not only the triumph of Europe over France, but the "complete, absolute, startling, incontestable and final sovereign triumph of mediocrity over genius." The gifted Frenchman, like most of his countrymen, could see nothing but genius in Napoleon's unbridled ambition and stolid indifference to human sacrifice, and if, as alleged, all Europe combined against France, it was because, through Napoleon, France had arrayed itself against all Europe. The instinct of self-preservation manifests itself as distinctly in the case of nations, sometimes, as in that of individuals; and some day, perhaps, those who count so much upon the achievements of man and give praise only to those who have been manifest and conspicuous in the world's affairs, will learn that there is a Providence over all and that nations will not be dismembered or destroyed except as has been decreed.

THE COMING STRUGGLE.

THE agony is over at Chicago. Both the great parties can now settle down to an active campaign work. The contest on the 8th of November next will be a determined political battle. It is true there are two parties yet to hear from. The Prohibitionists will assemble in convention at Cincinnati on Wednesday next, the 29th inst. The People's party convention will assemble in Omaha on Monday, the 4th of July. But public attention is not exercised over these latter parties or their candidates.

The next electoral college will consist of 444 members, 223 of whom are required to elect a President. 11 by reason of complications arising from this third party movement, Cleveland should get, say 211 electors and Harrison 213, while the People's man should get 20, then the election would be thrown into the House of Representatives, which, as it has done on two occasions already, would be called on to choose the President and Vice-President.

THAT RUSSIAN AFFAIR.

AN editorial article in yesterday's News on the tyranny of the Czar recounted one of his latest exploits, or perhaps we ought to say one of the exploits for which he was directly responsible though not committed by him individually. This was the expulsion from Russian territory of Mr. Poulsen Bigelow, the American tourist and litterateur, and we learn from the New York World that the circumstance is to be made the subject of diplomatic correspondence between this country and that of the European autocrat.

Not only was Mr. Bigelow made the object of the ruler's wrath, but Mr. Frederick Remington, who accompanied him, as well. According to the paper named, the two men were on a literary and artistic errand, the former intending to write articles for Harper's publications, the latter to illustrate them. They were to have made a casual voyage from Russia to Germany, and the artist, if not the writer, had exceptional passports from the State department at Washington.

"They have been driven out and their canoes seized," says the World. "The question involved is whether this is a breach of international comity. There are hardly enough facts known about the matter to judge just how far the great American nation has been insulted by this free and breezy treatment of her venturesome young citizens. It is certain that if they had gone over as simple travelers Mr. Bigelow's hostile attitude towards the Czar and his government might have been overlooked, but if Bigelow went to make further literary war on Russia, and emphasized his offense by taking Remington along to make pictures of Russian soldiers, the question is quite different."

The sarcasm herein contained, while provocative of humorous thoughts, does not detract much from the seriousness of the case when properly considered. Had the young men so depicted themselves as to be properly classified among those regarded as suspects, or even made use of insulting language or actions towards the Czar or his government, it would have been a vastly different thing; but to forcibly expel citizens of a friendly friendship as well as humane feelings by feeding the despot's starving subjects, when the visitors were bent upon the acquirement only of such information as appeared upon the surface of things, was a little too much. The action which our government shall take in the premises will be looked for with considerable interest.

WEBER STAKE ACADEMY.

On Saturday, at 2 p.m., the spacious lecture hall of the Weber Stake Academy was filled to overflowing on the occasion of the closing exercises of the academic department. The room was appropriately decorated.

The exercises consisted of songs and choruses, declamations, essays and speeches. All the selections were exceedingly well rendered. The chief feature of the day was the principal's report and, to the surprise of all, the board accepted his resignation.

The following is the report and resolutions of respect of the board:

WEBER STAKE ACADEMY,
Ogden, June 24, 1892.

To the President and members of the Board of Directors of the Weber Stake Academy:

Dear Brethren—Again, after an elapse of over two years, I have the pleasure of submitting to your honorable body a report of the school work done at our new Academy building during a portion of the present school year.

As you are aware, our Academy first opened its doors to the admission of students on Jan. 8th, 1889, in the Second ward meeting house, where it held two sessions with an excellent attendance. In the same school year it resumed its work, and in a short time the building was too small and the accommodations too meagre as well as too inconvenient to meet the demands of the many students who desired to attend the institution. New quarters were provided, but unlooked for obstacles here also presented themselves, and ere we were fairly under way, we were compelled by force of circumstances to suspend operations again.

A year and seven months intervened before we had the pleasure of opening the doors of our Academy again, and this time to the joy of our students in the new Weber Stake Academy. Only a portion of the building was in a suitable condition for occupancy, and in consequence of the lateness of the season, many having gone to other schools, it was thought by the board that this would be sufficient for all who might desire to attend. But to the surprise of all, this portion of the building was in less than two weeks filled to its utmost capacity, and the board were necessitated to make immediate arrangements for the entire completion of the structure.

The chief difficulty which confronted us now, was the large number of students, 200 having been enrolled the first week and only two teachers to instruct them, and this at a time of the year when active available talent could not be obtained. However, through the energy and perseverance of the board this difficulty was finally overcome, and an active, intelligent faculty employed; still it was experimental work for some time in consequence of the many changes, and nearly the entire term was consumed before we found ourselves settled down to active work.

Following are the statistics: Total number enrolled, 301; males, 163; females, 138.

Places of residence: Ogden, 231; Uintah, 1; Mound Fort, 4; Lynne, 4; Harrisville, 6; Far West, 5; North Ogden, 3; Plain City, 3; West Weber, 5; Wilson's Lane, 3; Taylorsville, 2; Riverdale, 2; Eden, 8; Mariette, 2; Kaneville, 1; Box Elder Co., 1; Summit Co., 1; Morgan Co., 6; Idaho, 2; Montana, 3.

This I am informed is the second largest attendance of the Church school, which I think speaks exceedingly well for us, realizing the short time we have been in session.

Faculty: Males, 5; females, 2. Daily recitation: In academic department, A and B, 20; in intermediate department, 10; in preparatory department, 20; total daily, 50.

Theology: Priesthood meetings held, 14; fast meetings, 6, on which occasions 40 on an average bore testimony and a large number fasted. On the prayer list 141 had voluntarily given in their names.

It is with no small degree of satisfaction that I make mention of this department. It was a common thing for students to testify in there weekly, fast and priesthood meetings that of all studies theology had been the most interesting to them, and that their was a hallowed influence of purity and tenderest feelings of friendship between pupils as well as between pupils and teachers, that they had ever experienced before in any school; and nothing perhaps bears any stronger testimony to this, than the fact that in the spring term forty-two students were enrolled in the advanced academic class, and almost this entire number held out to the end.

This has been the spirit and work of our institution during the past school year, and which I now cheerfully submit to your honorable body with a desire that you may accept the same, and also with it my resignation as principal of the Weber Stake Academy. In so doing I must give my principal excuse as failing health.

Twenty-five years ago I was called to the schoolroom by the Prophet of God, President Young. I labored under his fatherly guidance until his death, receiving his sincere approbation of my work but three months before that sad event. I had the pleasure also of enjoying the full confidence of President Taylor during his administration, being called upon on several occasions to represent him as Superintendent of District Schools. Three years ago I received the counsel of Presidents Woodruff and Cannon to leave the schoolroom because, as I was informed, it was destroying my health. Of this counsel I was again and again forcibly reminded this winter when dragging my sick and emaciated body to the institution in which my spirit loved to dwell, but in which also, like Paul of old, the flesh proved too weak for the trying ordeal.

These circumstances indicated by President Woodruff have now in my mind presented themselves. I bid you, therefore, my dearly beloved students, a tender and affectionate farewell. I have spent many a happy hour with you, and the hallowed thoughts that filled your bosoms have produced a corresponding influence in mine, causing us mutually, in our temple of knowledge, to live in an atmosphere of purity and virtue, akin only, as has been often observed by those who have visited us, to the holy temples of God.

When looking upon your faces, numbering upwards of 300 this winter alone, and then associate with you the thousands of others whom I have had the honor of instructing during the past quarter of a century, containing in the ranks Bishops, High Councilors, Presidents of Stakes and two Apostles of the Lord, my heart swells with gratitude to my kind Father in heaven for having been permitted, through the voice of his servant, President Young, to enter these sacred halls of learning. I say again, God bless you, my dearly beloved students, remember the good I have taught you, but the errors of the brain and imperfections of human nature be pleased to blot from your book of remembrance.

And to you who have been my fellow companions in the cause of education and with whom I have had the pleasure of associating this winter without one unkind word passing between us or even a hard feeling existing in our hearts towards one another—to you, with a sadness of feeling I extend the parting hand. God bless you in your trying ordeal. I have trod the path you are treading and I know full well the briars and thorns that beset you on your way. Still there is a goal beyond; be faithful and true and you will reach it. Sustain my successor as you have so faithfully sustained me; strengthen his hands as you have strengthened mine, and the reward is sure to be yours.

Finally, beloved president and members of the board, please except my sincere thanks for the kind favors you have shown me, and the sustenance you have given while occupying this high and responsible position. Having been associated with you in the erection of this beautiful edifice, I know full well the anxiety and care that has attended you in your labors to bring the building to its present state of completion. This beautiful structure, however, whose classic front faces the rising sun of which it is emblematic in shedding its intellectual rays upon the growth of our Weber Stake, stands now as a memorial to your thrift and enterprise. Future generations will yet breathe a silent prayer within these sacred walls in your behalf and pronounce a blessing upon you.

And lastly, to the fathers and mothers whose confidence I have enjoyed now for twenty-five years and who have entrusted to my care their most sacred gifts of God, to you I return my heartfelt thanks.

I have but one wish in my heart and that is that my labors which have nearly cost me my life during this winter, may have marred at least one kind word in my retirement, and perchance even blessing. This is all I ask.

May this sacred institution, whose plans I drew, and whose educational foundation I have had the pleasure of laying, continue to extend its spires nearer to the dome of heaven, until the pure, unsullied principles of knowledge shall be distilled from the throne of grace, like gentle dew upon the intellects of our beloved sons and daughters of this Stake, in my sincere and earnest wish.

I remain your humble servant,
L. F. MONCH.

At the conclusion of the reading of the report, Elder Joseph Stanford, in behalf of the board, stated that when at a previous meeting Prof. Monch's resignation had been accepted, a committee was appointed to draft suitable resolutions of respect and appreciation of the professor's labors. Elder Stanford then presented the following resolutions:

OGDEN, Utah, June 25, 1892.

To Prof. Louis F. Monch, on his retiring from the position of Principal of the Weber Stake Academy:

Dear Brother—As you have deemed it wise, in view of your declining health, through so many years of arduous labor in the school room, to resign your position as principal and thus sever your connection with the Weber Stake Academy, we, the undersigned, feel that it is our duty, as well as our pleasure, to briefly testify in this manner of your great zeal, love, devoted diligence and faithful work in the cause of education.

It is now twenty years since you took up the labor of this profession in Ogden City. You were the first principal who had charge of the Central school, and it was in this institution where you established your justly-merited reputation as the leading disciplinarian in school government in this Territory, and where you demonstrated your ability to dispel from the minds of the students the elements of discouragement and gloom which invariably attend the laborious application of the mental powers to study; and in place thereof to inspire their feelings with a fascination and love of education, that it transformed the pursuit, in the experience of many, to one of pleasure and delight.

Your long and successful career as a principal, and for six years as head master of all the city schools, and for eight years county superintendent of district schools, besides the four years you have had the charge of the Weber Stake Academy, has endeared you to the hearts of thousands, and has left imperishable impressions of regard and esteem upon the minds and in the hearts of all those who have been under your tuition and abating influence in the schoolroom.

We part with you, therefore, with a due appreciation of your past services, so faithfully and intelligently rendered in the interests of the educational advancement of the youth of Zion.

We sincerely hope the change in your profession, from the training and directing of the youthful mind to the study and practice of medicine, will be the means of restoring and permanently establishing your health.

Should you, however, at any time feel disposed to resume the role of professor in any of the halls of an academy or college, we shall be most happy to aid you to fill any position to which you may aspire to occupy.

With feelings of profound respect we subscribe our names as your friends and brethren in the love of educational progress. (Signed)

Lewis W. Shurtliff, president. Joseph

Stanford, secretary. Robert McQuarrie, treasurer. Chas. F. Middleton, Niels Flygare, Thomas J. Stevens, David McKay, Members of the Educational Board of the Weber Stake of Zion.

OGDEN, June 25.

THE LATE NATIONAL CONVENTION

The Tammany raid against Grover Cleveland was an utter failure. The only plea its chiefs could put in was the great man's course in regard to the office in his gift. He was not a spoilsman and therefore not their tool nor the kind of President that was suited to the dirty work of the political machine. He had too much of a mind and will of his own and too broad a comprehension of the needs of the country to make the State of New York paramount to national interests. Tammany men here admit that there is nothing against Cleveland but this, and it is because of it that they maintain he cannot carry New York. But Tammany is Democratic, after all, and will work now for the election of the candidate whom they fiercely fought to the last in convention.

The Tammany cry against Cleveland's New York chances was raised against Tilden in 1876. Yet he carried the State by a majority over Hayes of 22,742. It was believed by many New York people that Cleveland will have a bigger majority there in 1892 than he had in 1884. On the other hand the disaffected declare he will lose the State by 50,000.

The withdrawal of the Syracuse delegates in the interest of harmony was very creditable to them and good politics also. They placated the Hill men and made Cleveland's chances much better than if they had raised a contest.

By the way, Senator Hill appears to be a man much misunderstood. Those who know him best, including his political opponents, both Democrats and Republicans, declare he is a clean man, who is free from personal vices, not a drinker or a smoker, and disposed to fairness and straight justice. He made a splendid executive for the State of New York and lifted from it a big burden of debt during his administration. It is true that he is charged with crooked work in the appropriation of representation to Republicans in certain districts, but this is denied by his friends and the courts of the State do not seem to have sustained the common accusation. He is no doubt a power in politics, although he had no chance for the presidency by the side of Cleveland. This term however closes the career of the favorite of the Democrats as chief magistrate and Hill will be heard from in '96.

The contest over the Vice Presidency was as spirited as that for the chief office. It was scarcely doubted at first that Gray of Indiana would secure the place. "Cleveland and Gray" was the device on numerous banners. In the convention, preceding its closing session, a splendid Indiana band paraded through the wigwan, followed by a procession, each man bearing a wand surmounted with triple grey plumes, tied with red, white and blue silk ribbons, and headed with a splendid slit banner. It aroused such enthusiasm that it was confidently expected Gray would be nominated by acclamation. This seemed to be good politics. It would probably secure Indiana for the Democrats. Stevenson was popular, but no one expected he could carry his two State, Illinois. But when it came to the test he ran ahead of Gray and most of the States which had reserved their votes then began to turn. The tide set in with a rush and State after State changed for Stevenson until it was evident he was chosen and the vote was made unanimous. Springer, of Illinois, declared privately that Stevenson could carry the State. It was whispered that Cleveland did not want Gray. But the turn of the tide was a surprise and another illustration of the "glorious uncertainty" of politics.

The motion made by Hon. Patrick Collins that conventions hereafter be composed only of delegates, the national committee and members of the press, has in it much merit. It was referred to the National Committee. That body will have to consider not only whether the proposition would be for the public benefit, but whether it will satisfy the popular feeling. But one thing is certain: It is impossible to construct a building to which the great American public can gain admission, and it would not do to hold a convention in the open air. The business of the convention was much hampered by the confusion and interruptions incident to so large an assembly, and the viva voce votes were more the decision of the multitude than of the delegates. The galleries, too, had considerable influence upon the floor. In a deliberative and representative body it is desirable that the delegates chosen from all sections of the country should be permitted to represent their constituents without being overawed or swayed in any way by a turbulent mass of spectators.

The wigwag was, in one way, a success. If the people assembled in it had been quiet, a good speaker could have been heard in every part of it. The stand and the speakers could be seen from every point of observation except for the plank, which had to be put up to support the frame roof after the canvas roof had been wrecked by the hurricane. But it was an ugly looking thing, rough and crude on the inside and worse on the outside. It was not suitable for the unparalleled time of storm and wet which Chicago suffered during the convention. The noise of the torrents of rain upon the immense roof, added to the roaring and frequent artillery-like shocks of the thunder, drowned the voices of the most stentorian speakers, and the cries of "louder, louder!" from the galleries added to the din and made it less possible for the speakers to be heard.

The gentlemen who officiated in the opening prayers were among the clearest and best of the orators. Their voices penetrated the whole audience. It may be that the listeners were quieter than ordinarily. Still there was little devotion among them. Occasionally there were tokens of irreverence. Few bowed their heads, still fewer stood during the prayer. At the opening invocation the newspaper men were startled by a small voice, apparently among them, repeating after the minister the words of the Lord's prayer. It was a telegraph messenger boy who, cap in hand and in reverential attitude, was oblivious to his surroundings. Just before the last words were uttered, "Boy!" called a spectator. The little fellow stopped, started to the caller, but was able to respond "Amen!" before he reached for the message which was held out to him. There was at least one sincere soul in that great irreverent multitude.

At the last session the words of the minister were clearly heard above the rainstorm, and when he asked that the rulers of the land might remember that "a public office was a public trust" the quotation from Cleveland caused a great clapping of hands, and at the close of a prayer, as eloquent as ever delivered to a political convention, a big round of applause proved the appreciation if not the devotion of the audience.

The difficulty of obtaining tickets to the Chicago convention was rendered the more aggravating by the traffic in those precious billets by street peddlers. How so many of them came into the hands that sold them was a mystery to thousands. The aldermen of the city raised a mighty murmur when the time came for the convention to meet, and they had not a single ticket of admission. They talked of taking back permission to hold it on city ground. They made other indignant threats. But the cooler among them obtained control and a strong but measurably polite letter to Col. Brice, brought back the coveted pieces of cardboard with the coupons attached and the civic dignitaries were pacified.

Those representatives of the press for whom applications had been made weeks ahead obtained passes and badges with but little difficulty. But those not so forehanded had to apply again and again at the small and stuffy office where the gentlemen who had the matter in hand were to be found. The place was without any apparent ventilation and was crammed full of reporters from country papers of various States, until it was impossible for a while to either enter or get out of the building. Not until midnight before the convention opened did some of the struggling and sweating newspaper men secure their tickets and many had to retire crestfallen without the needful token.

Then the accommodations for reporting were extremely meagre. Only a very few comparatively of the members of the press had a seat where there was any sort of desk or plank on which to write. They sat by thousands with the crowds of the general public and used their hats or their knees for a table. A telegraph office was placed within the building and messenger boys were plentiful but the office was inaccessible to the multitude until the sessions adjourned and the boys moved chiefly on the floor of the wigwag. The press arrangements were certainly not to be loudly applauded.

Thousands of people tried to get in without tickets, some pleading their long journeys of a thousand miles or more. Others tried to get in for twenty-five or fifty cents. One woman with three children and a lunch basket was surprised because her offer of two bits a head was refused, and when told that men were paying as high as $25 for a ticket her amazement was wonderful to behold. Gen. McClelland of the Utah Commission came from his home in Springfield without a ticket and the old veteran was turned back gruffly by the policeman at the ropes. He gave a grim smile and politely asked to be allowed to stand there until he could hear from the inside. Congressman Springer learned of the trouble and very soon a dozen friends were ready for the rescue and the General obtained a seat on the ground floor of the wigwag.

Kate Field was a visitor to the Convention. She was "a Hill man" at the start. What she was at the close will no doubt soon appear.

Susan B. Anthony was on hand with efforts for a suffrage plank in the Democratic platform.

Dr. Mary Walker, with her pants turned up at the bottom to keep them out of the mud, her silk hat and slinky little cane was conspicuous in the crowd because of her grotesque mannish femininity. She tried to interview some of the New Hampshire delegation and was marched out of one of their rooms by a big Liberalian policeman, to her great indignation and ludicrous assumption of masculine fierceness. She told him her name. "O! knows nothing about that," said he; "they sent for me to take yeas out and out yeas come."

There were many ladies scattered through the vast audience some of whom took great and intelligent interest in the proceedings. Others put queries which showed that they had no other impulse but curiosity. One lady asked why it was that Cleveland and Gray were not there, was astonished at their absence and considered it shameful they were not so hard to attend to the affairs of the country.

Two women, surrounded by men, sat together, one quite small. A sudden blast struck the building, then it shook with thunder, the lightning made green streaks around the roof, under the eaves, and the rain rattled over head. The little woman shuddered visibly. The other said kindly: "Don't be afraid, little girl." "I can't see it," she cried. "But I have an umbrella, so let it rain!" "What good would that do if the people rushed out?" The big one smiled in a superior way, and said: "There is only one thing to do—sit still. I shall not stir." Just then a hoarse voice shouted something that sounded like "Fir!" The older woman started up and was about to run, while the smaller one sat still. When the hubbub quieted down the older woman tried to look calm and exclaimed, "That was a different matter, I'd run from fire but never from water."

Many negroes were in the audience. It is singular how many colored people in Chicago are turning Democrats. Colored Democratic clubs are being organized and the darkies are enthusiastic for Cleveland and Stevenson.

The band was a magnificent one and played many popular airs, "Hail Columbia," the "Star Spangled Banner," and "Marching Through Georgia," vied with "Yankee Doodle" and God Save the Queen" in popular applause; but "Dixie" set the audience wild at every repetition. "Wait Till the Clo... By" and "Floating Down the Stream' were played as appropriate to the weather. The band aided, too, in suppressing the stampedee which threatened death and destruction towards the close of the convention. Some arc lights became loosened from their attachments and swung down with a rattle and a crash which caused many people to think the roof was falling in. Instantly there was a panic, strong men with their eyes bulging and fear gleaming from their countenances commenced to rush toward aisles and doors. The means of egress were miserable. A crush would have meant death to hundreds. Cooler men jumped upon the chairs and commanded "Sit down!" while others stood firmly in the way of the rushers. The band struck up and the audience cooled down and quiet was soon restored. It was a critical moment and the convention might have closed with a terrible catastrophe.

CHICAGO, June 24th.

BALFOUR A MAN OF MARK

MR. BALFOUR, although comparatively young, is now one of the most prominent political publicists of Great Britain. He possesses strong personal points and will, during his life, make himself felt among his countrymen. As is the case with all men who are conspicuously individualized, he makes many enemies, who hate him with intense cordiality. But he also creates hosts of friends who entertain the highest esteem for him and would stand loyally by him under exceptionally trying conditions. He is a man of powerful convictions, which he maintains with admirable pertinacity and courage. Even if he be mistaken in his views and policy, if he be honest in them and their pursuit he is entitled to consideration and respect.

While he occupied the position of chief secretary of Ireland he deemed it necessary to use extraordinary measures of a coercive character to suppress the turbulence which existed in that country. His methods were arbitrary and might at times have been cruel. He operated as many strong men who have been called great have done before him. He saw ahead of him what he deemed an overwhelming object. In seeking to attain it he kept his eyes steadily upon it, and paid but little regard to the propriety of the methods by which it could be accomplished. He was after success, which finally crowned his efforts. He considered the good resulting from the production of a pacific condition greatly overbalanced what constituted the wrongs inflicted by the methods employed in reaching the objective point of his efforts.

Balfour's opponents lost sight of his object because their gaze was fixed more on current connections than upon the outcome of his policy. Many of them also contended that the question of Ireland's being freed from the reign of the blackthorn could be settled by more amiable means, in the form of wholesale concessions by the government. The secretary evidently felt sure that such concessions would not be appreciated if forced from parliament by internal disturbances.

Balfour subsequently took the first occasion to show that he was not animated by a feeling of animosity toward Ireland and her people. When the famine brought distress into that country he set himself to work formulating and adopting measures of relief. He traveled about in districts where a few months before it would have been unsafe for him to make his appearance. Even then it was deemed injudicious on his part to expose himself to danger of being assassinated. But he is a man of courage as well as determination, and paid no attention to the solicitations of friends upon that point.

Again, not long since he introduced in Parliament a home-rule measure for Ireland. As a matter of course it was not such a proposed enactment as would be satisfactory to the Irish party in the house nor to the followers of Mr. Gladstone. Mr. Balfour is a Conservative, and believes that the emancipation of Ireland from the subordinate situation she has so long occupied ought to be gradual and not radical. But he sought to show that he was not a foe to the welfare of that country, but entertains his own peculiar view in relation to what will best serve her interests. He may be mistaken in his opinions, but he is evidently sincere with regard to them.

The strong popular feelings entertained toward the young Conservative leader were exhibited yesterday, at Sheffield, where he had great difficulty in addressing a large body of the people. The demonstration for and against him was vehement, some of his opponents showing a disposition in the direction of violence. His friends, on the other hand, encouraged him with lusty cheers. In consequence of the turbulence the proceedings were abbreviated.

If we judge Balfour right, no popular demonstration, however overwhelming, will turn him from the course he outlines in his own mind. He will pursue it to the end, unless he be overpowered by obstacles that cannot be surmounted. There is much in him that even his enemies could afford to admire. But it is not common for the usual run of men to give due credit to those whose opinions and methods are opposed to their own. Yet if such a person as Balfour were to act differently to what he does he would be inconsistent, and consistency is always admirable.

We repeat that the name of Balfour will yet be among the most conspicuous in British affairs of State, unless his career should be cut short by some event not now in sight.

THE SCHOOL BOOK CONVENTION.

THE convention now being held in this city for the purpose of considering what text books shall be used in the district schools, is a very important assembly. The law wisely provides that there shall be no changes in the text books adopted by this convention for five years, unless otherwise decided by a special convention. The constant changing of the books used in school, entails a very great expense and inconvenience and ought to be restricted. No teacher has a right under the law to make any change from the books adopted by the convention.

However, the science as well as the art of teaching is progressive. New methods are coming into use which very properly supersede the old, because more natural and better adapted to the comprehension of the pupils and more in accord with the advancing thought of the age. Therefore a change of books becomes necessary, that the children of the present may not be kept under the disadvantages of the past, and that each successive generation may have the benefit of former experiences.

We have no doubt that the gentlemen who compose the convention will give this important matter full and unbiased consideration. Men are apt to become wedded to the modes and the books to which they have been long accustomed. On the other hand, some minds are too eager for change. This subject should be treated both in a conservative and a progressive spirit. We want the best books for our children, and the question of expense, though a pressing one, is secondary to that of advancement.

Agents of various book establishments will, no doubt, press their claims with more or less persistence. The teachers must endeavor to keep in view, in the midst of all these efforts, the best interests of the future men and women of this region, the cultivation of whose minds is of momentous importance, for upon that to a large degree will depend the intellectual and moral status of the coming State.

In our opinion, one of the pressing needs of the times is the simplifying of methods of instruction. Taking, for instance, the teaching of grammar. How many of us were able in childhood to grasp the meaning of the abstract rules which had to be committed to memory, and how many of us received any real information from them? How few children there are now, even with the advancement that has been made in the methods of teaching it, who can conscientiously say that they like the study of grammar? We hope that in this, as well as in other studies, such text books will be selected as present grammatical principles and promote the use of correct language, in the easiest and most attractive and effective manner. We do not know of any textbook in present use here that entirely meets the demand in this important particular.

The convention has it in its power to lay the foundation for an educational work that will bear an edifice which shall be the admiration of all, and upon which successive and loftier departments may be built, with nothing or but little to be torn down or patched up. We hope they will do this, and adopt such means to this desirable end as shall insure success to the educational movement now in active progress in this Territory.

An exhibit of bells will be made at the World's Fair by a large manufacturing concern in this country, and the firm is planning to display it in a reproduction of the Tsar Kokolot (king of bells), the famous broken bell of Moscow, which is 23 feet in diameter and 21 feet 3 inches high, weighs 443,772 pounds, and is used as a chapel.

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, June 19, 1892, commencing at 2 p. m. President Angus M. Cannon presiding.

The choir sang the hymn beginning:

Hark! listen to the trampeters!
They sound our volunteers.

Prayer was offered by Elder Wm. C. Dunbar.

The choir sang the anthem:

"Glorious God, Eternal Father."

The Priesthood of the Seventeenth ward administered in the ordinance of the Sacrament.

ELDER DAVID F. DAVIS

first addressed the congregation. He said that what little experience he had had in the ministry had taught him that without the aid and assistance of the Spirit of the Lord it was folly for an Elder to attempt to address the Latter-day Saints. He had for many years known that what the world called "Mormonism" was nothing more nor less than the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which was the power of God unto salvation to all those who believed and obeyed. The speaker quoted from the 101st section of the Doctrine and Covenants:

Verily I say unto you, concerning your brethren who have been afflicted, and persecuted, and cast out from the land of their inheritance,

I, the Lord, have suffered the affliction to come upon them, wherewith they have been afflicted, in consequence of their transgressions;

Yet I will own them, and they shall be mine in that day when I shall come to make up my jewels.

There were, he said, not only sins of commission but sins of omission. If we called upon the Lord for light and knowledge and then failed to live according to that knowledge, we were transgressors.

In the first year of the organization of this Church it was revealed unto the Prophet Joseph Smith that this was the dispensation when God would build His city—the New Jerusalem, the Zion of the latter days; and in the fall of 1830 missionaries were sent to the western country from New York to preach to the Lamanites. In the instructions given to those missionaries it was said that somewhere in the west was the locality of this city, and it was in this city that the great Temple of which most of the ancient Prophets spoke—the Temple upon which the Lord would rest as a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night—was to be built. In June, 1831, another revelation was given instructing others to go on a mission to the west. Those who went in the fall of 1830 traveled as far as the western boundary of Missouri, which at that time was the frontier of the United States. They remained in Independence, Jackson Co., or in that neighborhood until those who were called previously joined them. Among those who took part in the latter mission was the Prophet Joseph. He held a conference in Jackson Co., and there it was that the Lord revealed unto him the exact spot upon which a temple should be built—a little west of the court house in Independence. On the 2nd of August the land was dedicated by Sidney Rigdon for the gathering of the Saints, and the following day the ground upon which the Temple now stands was dedicated by the Prophet Joseph. Revelations were given concerning the celestial law, on temporal matters as well as spiritual.

Speaking of the persecutions which the Saints encountered, he said these became so severe that in the fall of 1832 the mob drove the people en masse from the county—their houses were burned and many of the brethren and sisters were slain, while many died from exposure to the inclement weather. At this time the Prophet was in Ohio. When he received the news it filled his soul with sorrow and he was greatly surprised, for it had not, the speaker supposed, been then opened to his mind that the Saints would come from that region, eventually reach these mountains, build up cities here and become a great people, as he afterwards prophesied would be the case. Not knowing why this calamity—these persecutions—had come upon the Saints, he inquired of the Lord and received a revelation in answer to his prayer. The truth would meet, and always had met, with opposition so long as Satan had power, and it could be maintained only on the principles of righteousness. If our righteousness did not conform with the truth we had received from God, we would surely be beaten with many stripes. Having the higher, the celestial law, the Saints were not judged as the world, and therefore what would condemn them would not condemn the world.

After exhorting his hearers to abandon all feeling of covetousness, pride and self-will, and build up the kingdom of God according to the celestial law, Elder Davis referred to the organization of Zion's Camp and the march to Missouri, accompanied by the Prophet Joseph, and dwelt upon the driving of the Saints from Missouri and their journeying to Illinois, where another Temple was built unto the Lord. He pictured the subsequent afflictions of the people, the martyrdom of the prophet, and the arrival eventually of the Saints in these mountain valleys. Here they had been a great many years and had become a prosperous community; but, he asked, how much more were we prepared for Zion's redemption now than when the Latter-day Saints first entered these valleys? In our prosperity and blessings did we live any nearer to God than we did forty years ago? Were we fulfilling as we should the celestial law? The speaker strongly urged the necessity of keeping strictly holy the Sabbath day and of discharging steadfastly all the duties and obligations which the Lord had placed upon His chosen people.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH

was the next speaker. He should depend on the guidance of the Spirit of the Lord for what he would say that afternoon. While Brother Davis was speaking his own mind reverted to a revelation given to the Prophet Joseph Smith in September, 1831, which he desired now to read, as it might bring it to the recollection of those who had not read it for some time. If any one present was under the impression that the Presidency of the Church had nothing else to do but read the Scriptures and ponder upon the doctrines of the Church and the precepts of the Gospel, he or she did not understand the nature of the responsibilities and labors which devolved upon them. Day after day, from morning until evening, they were beset with business, with cares and responsibilities, not of their own but of the people at large. Thus the greater portion of their time was occupied, so that they had no doubt even less at command than very many of the Saints in which to read the Scriptures and ponder upon those great and glorious principles of the Gospel which had been revealed to us in this dispensation. Consequently, he himself did not read the Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants anything like as much as he ought, and he would like to do. But when he had the opportunity to look into the Scriptures or read the revelations, they came, so to speak, new to him, though he had studied them in bygone days. No matter how frequently we read the Word of the Lord, as often as we did so in the spirit of the Lord, in the spirit of meekness, and with a desire to learn, some new thought would become impressed on our minds, and it would open to us something, perhaps, in a new light.

Not long ago, in a Stake Conference, he read a certain revelation and then called upon all in the congregation who had read it within the previous month to rise to their feet, but out of the hundreds assembled he believed seventeen persons only responded. It would be unnecessary, probably, to ask the congregation now before him how many among the number had read the passage which he was about to read within the last few days or weeks. President Smith then turned to the 84th section (page 241) of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and recited verses 23 and 24 (from the revelation given to the Prophet Joseph, in Kirtland, 8-September 11th, 1831):

Behold, now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the titling of my people; for he that is titled shall not be burned (at his coming).

For after today cometh the burning: this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of Hosts; and I will not spare any that remain in Babylon.

We had the Gospel of repentance for sins preached unto us, of faith in Jesus Christ, and of baptism for the remission of sins; also the dispensation of the gathering of the people—the dispensation of thefulness of times, in which all things shall be gathered in one in the due time of the Lord. As a beginning He had required His people to gather together that they might be taught in His laws, to walk in His ways, that they might not partake of the sins of the world and receive of her plagues. We had been called together by the voice of God that we might be one taught in the law of God; that we might be thoroughly furnished in every good work, and every good word that proceedeth from the mouth of God—that we might build houses of worship in which to assemble and in spirit and in truth draw near unto Him with our hearts, and not with our lips only. We were called together that we might live in peace with each other; that we might be honest toward our neighbor, and be brethren as of one common household—that we might learn to do good and profit by the example of those who were inspired by God to walk in the paths of truth and righteousness.

The Lord designed that we should come together, also, in order that we might build Temples unto His name and be blessed peculiarly of Him, not only in our spiritual labors and in our faith, in the knowledge of the truth, but that we might be placed in a position in which He could pour out His blessing upon our farms, our orchards and our flocks and herds—that He might bestow it upon His people according to their merit and worthiness before Him. We had come together that we might send the Gospel to the nations of the earth by our combined effort.

Go where we would in the world to-day—and we need not go far from Zion either for this—the name of God was blasphemed; we would hear men uttering in a contemptuous way the name of Him who is the Father of our spirit, the Maker of all things; He who held the destiny of men and nations in His hands, from whom all blessings flowed, from whom all good emanated, from whom we received the light of heaven and the intelligence which we possessed—all the benefits that we enjoyed in the world. The gospel which we had embraced taught us to honor the Being who created us and gave us this beautiful world in which to dwell. Was it a small thing, then, to acknowledge the Sovereign of all gods? What would we be and what would be our condition were it not that God poured out the rains upon the just and the unjust and caused the sun to shine upon the evil and the good? Had not gifts been bestowed upon the Latter-day Saints which were not commonly enjoyed by the world? Not that the world outside was excluded from all the gifts, blessings, and privileges in which the Saints shared; all the children of men might enjoy them if they would only hearken to the voice of God and obey His law. If we obeyed the law upon which the blessing was predicated, upon which the promise was based, we were entitled to that blessing, and vice versa.

Let us, said the speaker, look at our condition a little: "It is a day of sacrifice and a day for the titling of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming." By their tithing and offerings the Latter-day Saints had built Temples in this land. They were building one in this city and hastening now to complete it, in order that it might be dedicated next April. It was by the sacrifices which the people had made that these Temples were erected. And for what? In the first place, they were built unto the name of the Lord, for the performance of certain ordinances of the Gospel of Jesus Christ which ought not to be performed anywhere else.

It was not a new idea or Gospel which had been revealed to us in this dispensation; for in the days of the children of Israel, in their wanderings in the wilderness and in their journeyings, they carried their tabernacle with them. The speaker referred to the temple of Solomon and asked should not the Latter-day Saints, who had received the instructions of the Almighty, and a smattering of the knowledge of the gospel of Jesus Christ, know to some extent the objects for which that house was built and the nature of the ordinances performed therein? It was not known, however, to the world, and today there was not a sectarian minister on God's earth who could give an intelligent account of it, because the ordinances of the Gospel were not proclaimed broadcast to the world; they were for the children of the kingdom, to be administered unto those who received the truth, who were born again and became heirs of God and joint heirs of Jesus Christ. There were special privileges which belonged to the righteous and the initiated, who were entitled to receive the gifts of heaven that the world knew not of. We spoke of them now to the world in general terms. We said to mankind, "There you must go to receive your washing and anointing. There you must go to be baptized for your dead, to be confirmed for them, to be endowed for them, to be ordained for them, and to be sealed for them for time and for eternity." For there was but one Gospel, and that applied to the dead as well as the living—the one eternal Gospel, the one perfect plan of redemption and salvation for the human family—adapted to men in the flesh and to the spirits in the spirit world—to the youth, to the aged, and to all the children of God throughout the world.

But he could tell his hearers of men who had preached the Gospel to the nations of the earth for years, who had traveled hundreds of thousands of miles, and yet, all told, perhaps they had not baptized more than twenty, thirty, or maybe a hundred souls and brought them into the fold of Christ. Perhaps one or two men in this Church had been so successful and so blessed of God as to have been instrumental in baptizing a thousand individuals after all their preaching and labors abroad; but he could tell them of many a one who had gone into the Temples and there been baptized for thousands upon thousands of the dead, for the remission of their sins, and who had received the first ordinances of the Gospel in their behalf. So that the work done outside was a mere trifle in comparison with the great work which we might do for those who had died without a knowledge of the Gospel. Their hearts were turned unto us, and the hearts of the children must be turned unto them. If it were not so, God had said that the earth would be utterly wasted at His coming.

Quoting the first verse previously read, the speaker said that no power on earth could take away a man's crown, his reward, or make him destitute. He was laying a foundation that it would reach into eternity; because he was engaged in the work which God had revealed for the redemption and salvation of the dead. All the ordinances applicable to us were applicable to the dead also. There was but one law for all, and that must be obeyed, simple as it might seem to us and non-essential as it might appear to many. There was not a principle in the Gospel that could be ignored with impunity. The Savior when on the earth had to obey the same law that we were required to obey. He was our Exemplar, and the works that He did we must do, the course which He pursued we must pursue, even as He acknowledged the will of His Father to be done rather than His own will. Jesus himself went and "preached to the spirits in prison." He did so that they might be judged according to men in the flesh and be prepared to live according to God in the Spirit. If it were necessary, then, for Him to go and open the prison doors to those who were bound in consequence of their wickedness and rebellion in the days of Noah, was it not necessary that ministers of the Gospel should go and preach unto those who had died without a knowledge of the Gospel since that day?

Those of the Latter-day Saints who had passed away were not idle behind the veil today. They were busy constantly, working and exercising their rights and privileges and the authority of the Priesthood which they held in the Spirit world, proclaiming the Gospel unto "the spirits in prison"—unto those who had died without a knowledge of the truth; and as they preached unto them there, the ordinances of the Gospel would have to be performed in their behalf here. Their hearts would be turned towards their children in the flesh, and unless we sought of God for knowledge and understanding in regard to these matters, the earth would be smitten with a curse and be desolated at His coming.

He realized how the world felt in the face of a declaration like this; they would laugh us to scorn; they would regard us as fanatical, as visionary and foolish, when we stood up and proclaimed the scriptures in reference to these things. But those who prepared themselves for God's coming through their faithfulness before Him in rearing temples in which to administer the ordinances of the Gospel both for the living and the dead, they would not be burned, saith the Lord, at His coming. When that day came He would laugh, He would mock, when fear came upon the inhabitants of the earth, when calamities befell them.

The Lord Almighty called the Latter-day Saints out from the nations of the earth that they might become a peculiar people—that they might be virtuous, for virtue was rapidly departing from the world today. "I tell you no idle tale (continued the speaker), I tell you no untruth when I tell you that today the world is ripening in its abominable practices, in its sexual crimes, in its sexual infamy; and virtue is becoming the exception among the inhabitants of the earth. Let an Elder in this Church go out into the world and declare that he is virtuous and they will laugh him to scorn. I have seen it done. And they will laugh with incredulity and unbelief when you tell them that there are men growing up in the midst of these mountains who are pure from crimes against virtue, and that good and pure women are growing up here. I am sorry to say that there should be any exception to this rule; but there is.

We are not ignorant of it, either. I do not want you to think, my brethren and sisters, that the Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are shut up somewhere in a closet, where the knowledge of the world is shut out from them, where they have no access to knowledge in relation to the condition of the people. Let me tell you that we are where a knowledge of these matters come. We know of the condition of the people; we understand the condition of the Latter-day Saints, and many a time our hearts grieve and mourn because of the sins of the inhabitants of Zion. I would to God that the people would live their religion, keep the commandments of the Almighty, and work righteousness in the earth, that they might be worthy of the blessings that are ready to be bestowed upon them."

The ordinances of the Gospel were for the righteous and not for the wicked; the blessings of the House of God were for the people of God, not for the alien and the stranger. If they would receive the blessings which the Lord had in store for them, let them live according to God in the spirit, that they might be judged by a righteous judgment, and be found worthy to receive those gifts for which they were seeking.

In conclusion, President Smith again adverted to the building of the Salt Lake Temple and said he would like to exhort his hearers on that occasion to remember their promises in regard to helping toward its final completion.

May the Lord bless you and bless Zion, and prosper us in the labors of our hands, that we may accomplish our mission on the earth. This is my prayer in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

The choir sang the chorus:

"Hallelujah, the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth."

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Henry P. Richards.

THE "LIBERAL" POLICE FORCE.

The difficulties existing in the city police force are apparently growing more complicated daily, both as to its detective and judicial branches. It has generally been supposed that misunderstandings existed only among the policemen, but this is a mistake.

For some time past Assistant City Attorney Coad has been entirely ignored in the drawing up of a certain class of complaints and the work done by police officers and the court. The preparing of these papers is a part of Mr. Coad's official duty, and he naturally and rightfully objects to anyone, be they police officer or police justice, to assume this authority during his absence and then have the cases precipitated upon him as they come before the court, without any previous knowledge as to their nature. It is understood that he will no longer submit to this course of procedure and that he has asserted and will stand by his rights.

REMORS OF REMOVALS.

There was a secret meeting of some of the members of the police committee last night to consider what course is best to pursue in regard to the sensational discovery made by them in a notorious Franklin Avenue dive, while on a private prospecting tour for purification purposes, on Friday night last. The result of their caucus was not made public, but it is understood that they agree that a climax has been reached and that pronounced action is necessary. Mayor Baskin has been made acquainted with a portion—but a portion only—of the true state of affairs and is quoted as saying that if after a full and complete investigation a tithe of the statements which have reached his ears the last few days are found to be true, the offenders will have their heads "chopped off like thistle tops." It is further stated that the chief of police is among them and will be called upon to tender his resignation and that Captain Donovan is talked of as his successor. The police justice is another of the unfortunate ones and already his expected-to-be vacant chair is being looked upon with anxious eyes by several attorneys who have done yeoman service to the "Liberal" party. There are also a large number of would-be criminal capturers who are desirous of wearing the stars of a sergeant of police and city detective.

ALBRIGHT'S ACCUSERS.

The case of Elsie St. Omer, alias Elsie Anderson, came up before Justice Keeler this afternoon at 8 o'clock. Mr. Elchuer, attorney for the defendant, filed an affidavit for a change of venue. The document sets forth that the defendant has reason to believe and does believe that she cannot have a fair and impartial trial before the said Fred Keeler, the justice before whom this case was called for trial, by reason of the prejudice and bias of said justice, for the following reasons:

First—That she was arrested on the night of the 21st inst. on a warrant charging her with keeping a house of ill fame, and was taken before said justice, who fixed her bond for appearance at the sum of $100; that said bond was fixed in said sum at the request of Joseph E. O'Brien and George A. Sheets, the policemen who arrested her, and that the said George A. Sheets is the complaining witness against her; that at the same time one Rose Miller, who rooms in her house, and one Goldie Shears, who works for her, were each arrested in her house, the charge being that they were inmates of a house of ill fame, and that the bonds for their appearance were fixed by said justice in the sum of $100 at the request of the same officers; that the same night of the same day the said justice fixed the bonds for appearance of one Hattie Wilson and one Lucy Anderson, charged with a similar offense, in the sum of $50 each; and that the same night of the same day said justice fixed the bonds for appearance of May Smith, Kitty Wilson, Maud Mitchell, Dora Hansen and Grace Johnson, charged with a similar offense as Rose Miller and Goldie Shears, to wit, being inmates of houses of ill fame, in the sum of $25 each; that the said Rose Miller and Goldie Shears and herself were the only persons whose bonds for appearance were fixed by said justice in the sum of $100 each; that the said Hattie Wilson was several times convicted upon a plea of guilty in said justice's court during the last past year.

Second—That chapter XII, sec. 2, of the Revised Ordinances of Salt Lake City provides: "It shall be the duty of the city attorney to prosecute and defend in all courts in all actions on behalf of said city." That the complaint filed against her in said court was not drawn by E. D. Hoge, city attorney, nor by E. F. Coad, his deputy. That said E. F. Coad is the prosecuting attorney in said justice's court, who conducts the prosecution of all cases on behalf of said city in said court, and the said George A. Sheets, the said complaining witness, did not submit the facts to the said E. F. Coad, on which said complaint is based. That said complaint was filed on the 20th day of June, 1892, and that neither the said justice nor the said complaining witness did inform the said E. F. Coad, prosecuting attorney, at any time, of such fact. That the first information he had concerning said matter was on the morning of June 22nd, 1892, when he saw an account of her arrest in a morning paper.

The affidavit also sets forth that the said Fred Keeler is a material witness for the defendant in this respect, to wit, that the said Fred Keeler heard the request of some of the witnesses for the prosecution that she should be placed under $100 bond; that she will subpoena said Fred Keeler as a witness in her behalf to show the malice and animus of the prosecution. Wherefore, defendant demands that the place of trial of said cause be removed to some other justice's court having jurisdiction.

Justice Keeler overruled the motion for a change of venue.

THE WEST ADDRESS AGAIN.

In our last issue we treated on the infamy of O. W. Powers in using the notorious Bishop West bogus address as a campaign document at Chicago. We necessarily, in this connection, presented some details of the character of the fraudulent discourse and its origin. In making this explanation, the fact of its having originated with the Salt Lake Tribune, in the columns of which it appeared on March 15th, 1884, was mentioned. By that paper it was, at the time, thus introduced:

"Stenographical report of Bishop West's harangue in the Juab school-house, Sunday, March 9th, 1884. Reported for the Salt Lake Tribune."

In a lengthy editorial article in the same issue of that journal the writer pretended, with double-dyed deceit, to believe the address to be genuine. That article begins thus:

"Today we print a verbatim report of an address delivered by Bishop West of Juab, as forwarded by a friend."

Yesterday we gave an idea of the murderous character of the statements embodied in this fraudulent discourse. Our leading object in treating upon the theme was to show the villainy of Tuscara Powers and his gang in using the vile anti-"Mormon" forgery at Chicago, but incidentally exhibited the raceality of the originators of the wicked slander upon a whole people. Here is the characteristic reply of the paper referred to, in this morning's issue:

"Again the Deseret News has the infamous inequity to say that the Bishop West 'Red-Hot' address was 'evidently manufactured in the office of the SALT LAKE TRIBUNE.' And again we must brand the editor of the News as a liar without stint and a scoundrel without conscience. The fact is, as we have stated constantly, that address was sent to this office as a communication, and purported to be a report of an address actually delivered in Juab. When we found this was not so, we promptly stated the fact; and at the same time quoted sentiments so identical in admittedly genuine Mormon discourses that the public could easily see we were not much at fault in using the bogus address."

It is quite inelegant and vulgar to say, "We must brand the editor of the News as a liar without stint and a scoundrel without conscience." We have no desire to make use of such ungentlemanly language toward the editor of the Tribune; it is not compatible with anything but low breeding and degraded taste. But even if we had any desire to indulge in language the use of which amounts to self-abasement of the person who resorts to it, it would be quite unnecessary. We only need to present facts and that of course at once places the individual on the other side of the contention in the category in which he erroneously lists the editor of this journal. We still assert that the Bishop West address was evidently manufactured in the Tribune office.

Here is one point in evidence: While we believe the Tribune people to be capable of committing the bogus address forgery, we have no idea that they are idiots. If they were really imposed upon and believed that the clumsy and brutal address, which we have not space to reproduce in the issue of today, was real, the logic theory would be forced upon us. If on the other hand the bogus discourse was published while those who gave it publicity believed, as they must have done, that it was a forgery, the matter of it being formulated in the Tribune office or not is as broad as it is long. The crime is no greater one way or the other. Even if the evidence of the monstrous concoction having been formulated in the Tribune office could, by any means, be set aside, the forgery would not be very far from its sanctum, seeing that, secondly, to the assistance of the editor, it was forwarded to him "by a friend." That is to say, "a friend" of the Tribune manufactured the address and that paper adopted it by giving it publicity. The editor of our wrathful and unprincipled contemporary further commits himself, by saying:

"We were not so much at fault in using the bogus address."

The basis of justification for being a party to a forgery and slander after it not before the fact is that when the explanation of the Tribune being imposed upon was made "it quoted sentiments so identical in admittedly genuine Mormon discourses," so as to show it was not much at fault in using the Bishop West fraudulent sermon. It is now in order to show what is the character of the ideas of the Tribune editor in relation to identity of sentiments when pretending to quote "genuine Mormon discourses." In giving the proof we will go outside the "Mormon" people, and introduce a correspondence from a "Gentile" which appeared in the News a year and a half ago:

SALT LAKE ANARCHISTS.

THEY HOLD UP SACRED SUBJECTS TO BRUTAL RIQUICLE.

Editor Deseret News:

"In this morning's Tribune I notice what purports to be a report of yesterday's services in the Tabernacle. That a newspaper published by Christians should describe the communion service of any church in the following words is something that will astonish even atheists. Here are the words of the Tribune report: 'Brother Penrose offered prayer, after which the choir sang, after which a score of flunkies fed and watered the animals.' If there is in this broad land a Christian who endorses such a presentation of the communion service of any church, then in truth Christianity is a failure.

"The report further says: 'He told the story of Adam and the apple, and how Eve and the moccasin snake beguiled the father of mankind into contracting an attack of the colic. Then he described the death of Abel and how Cain wallowed in stuffing out of him with the club. Cain was a brute, and thus the sermon went.'

"This is just how Johan Most and Mrs. Parsons, the Anarchists, describe the same Biblical incident when ridiculing Christianity and the Bible. The Tribune may suppose that such language as this reviles Mormonism alone; in that it is mistaken. It is an attack on all religion. It is an outrage on the sacred beliefs of the vast majority of American people. This is just how the Bible is handled in the slums of all large cities, by the Communists of Paris, by the Red Socialists of Berlin, by the Anarchists of Chicago, and by (as I see now) alleged Christians of Salt Lake City.

"Being a stranger in the city and having attended yesterday's services in the Tabernacle, I cannot help regretting, as a Christian, such foul and villainous representations of the most important sacrament of the Bible.

"Heaven help the country which depends on such a source for patriotism and purification, for sanctification and evangelization. That's what I say.

STRANGER.

SALT LAKE CITY, Dec. 29, 1890."

Thus, in its attempt at justification for being a party to an outrageous slander upon a whole community, the Tribune practically commits a double crime by basing its plea of extenuation upon its publication—hundreds of times repeated—of distortions and fabrications, under the pretense that they were quotations from "Mormon" sermons.

We have more outside proof of this species of anti-"Mormon" infamy salted away, but the above will suffice for the present.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met in regular session June 21, President Looftbourrow in the chair. The aldermen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Karrick, Evans, Bell, Simondt, Wantland, Bearusley, Helsa, Horn, Lawson.

Absent—Moran, Hardy, Ewing. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and approved were read and referred as follows:

PETITIONS

H. W. Lawrence and others asked that the curbing on State street be so arranged as to permit them to have access to their property. Referred.

Mary E. Brown asked to be allowed to pile building material in front of her premises on West Temple street. Committee on streets.

Samuel J. Brown and others represented that the Great Salt Lake & Hot Springs Railway company were operating their cars in violation of the provisions of its franchise, and asked relief. Referred.

John R. Jones complained of the action of the Saltair railroad occupying West South Temple street. City engineer and city attorney associated.

William Morris and others asked for the establishment of an electric light at the intersection of First South and Eighth West streets. Committee on improvements.

John Black represented that he was the possessor of a patent paint that had no equal in preserving wood and asked that he be allowed to coat the flume now in course of construction on North Temple street, with same. Committee on improvements.

William Langton asked that immediate steps be taken to prevent further damage from high water in the vicinity of South Temple and Eighth South streets. Committee on irrigation.

Henry F. Heath and others asked for a watermain extension on Eighth West street. Committee on water-works.

C. W. Higgins asked for the improvement of Fourth West street. Committee on streets.

AMONG THE BEARS.

Wm. Newton sent in the following: I want to buy some of the city's land—that which is away up in the mountains among the bears. I have use for it. Committee on public grounds.

A DANGEROUS PLACE.

David R. Parry and a large number of others represented that they were residents in the vicinity of Sullivan's saloon near the corner of First South and Fourth West street; that said saloon is a common resort for tramps and vagabonds who engage in all kinds of unlawful exhibitions and that children are thereby attracted to said premises and made the associates of disreputable characters; that the place has the reputation of being a rendezvous for thieves and a place for the concealment of stolen goods and further that it was a danger and disgrace to the community. They asked that the license be revoked. Committee on license.

FROM THE D. A. AND M. SOCIETY.

Your petitioners, the Deseret Agricultural and Manufacturing Society, respectfully represents that it is a public institution, whose officers are appointed by the governor and Legislative Assembly of this Territory, and exists only for the benefit of the people and encouragement of home industries and assisting in bringing to the front the resources of our Territory; that as such it has control of the Territorial Exposition grounds, given by the city to the Territory for fair purposes.

One of the provisions of this gift was that the portion of the grounds not actually devoted to buildings should be improved and cultivated as a public park and the society is desirous of fulfilling this condition and has already made some improvements looking to this end in the planting of trees and grass.

The society realizes, however, that with its limited finances, which are year by year eaten up by premiums offered to encourage home industries, such improvements must necessarily be slow and behind what the people look for.

Therefore, it feels justified in asking your honorable body to aid in making the desired improvements by laying a cement or asphalt sidewalk or pavement around said block. Such a move, it is sure, will be one of public benefit and will be upheld by every citizen of this city.

Respectfully submitted,
The Deseret Agricultural and Manufacturing Society.

By Geo. D. TYFER, Ass't Sec'y.

Referred to the committee on streets with the city attorney associated.

REMOVALS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Mayor Baekin sent in the following: To the President and City Council:

Gentlemen:—I hereby appoint Dr. T. B. Beatty to the position of Health Commissioner of Salt Lake City, John B. O'Reilly to act as policeman in City Creek Canyon and P. C. Howell as patrolman on the city police in place of H. B. Johnson, removed and submit the appointments for confirmation. Adopted.

Johnson's successor is a darkey of mastodon proportions.

SEWER AND WATERMAIN ESTIMATES.

The city engineer reported that on East Temple street no modification beyond the possible lowering of water pipes would be necessary before paving; on First South street the 18 inch main should be extended from East Temple to West Temple street, which would require about 800 feet of pipe. The cost will be about $3,500; on Second South street an 8 inch main should be laid from East to West Temple streets. This would require 1600 feet of pipe. The cost would be $3,400. In addition to this five new hydrants at a cost of $75 each would be needed. Adopted.

The same official submitted the following estimate of the cost for the construction of a sewer along the east side of Third West Street, between North Temple and Fifth South streets in sewer district No. 5: Four thousand seven hundred and fifty-two feet at $3.50 per lineal or front foot, $16,632.

The same official also submitted estimates for the cost of constructing a sewer along both sides of Fifth East Street, between South Temple and First South streets in sewer district No. 4. They were: One thousand six hundred feet at $3.00 per lineal or front foot, $4,800. Received and filed.

Bell said that with due respect the city engineer believed that the work could be done for less than the figure designated.

Horn said that Bell was laboring under a misapprehension. The estimate in the city engineer's report was not uniform, but where these sewers were to be constructed the cost was greater than elsewhere. The tax levy was two cents per front foot.

The city attorney said it had been the policy of the city engineer heretofore to assess the abutting property, but it had been thought best to make persons who owned property in the central portions of blocks pay their proportion. He had always insinuated the city engineer to make the estimates sufficiently large to prevent a re-assessment, as the statutes were lame on that point.

The reports were received and filed.

BUNNELL'S SUBDIVISION.

The city engineer reported that duplicate maps of Bunnell's subdivision had been filed in his office and he asked for instruction, with reference to the approval of the same. Adopted and the city engineer authorized to approve the same.

THE SHADE TREES TO REMAIN.

The board of public works reported adversely on the petition of property owners to remove all shade trees on State street, between South Temple and Fourth South streets. Received and filed.

THE COMPANY NOTIFIED.

The board of public works reported that it had notified the Salt Lake City Railway Company to provide material and prepare for the construction of pavement on Main street, First and Second South streets, and that the company had replied that it would require considerable time to comply with the request. Received and filed.

THE TUSCABORA INSPECTOR.

The committee on streets reported as follows:

We are informed that the inspector referred to on June 15th was given the leave of absence for twenty days without pay and that the work he was employed to do will be completed before that time has expired. We, therefore, see no necessity for further action in the matter. Concerning paving work on State street the committee stated that the work was a credit to the city. Adopted.

The same committee reported that all of the property owners interested as far west as Twelfth West street were willing to open Third North street, and recommended their desires be complied with, and that the street supervisor be instructed to put the street in a passable condition. Concerning the street between Twelfth West and the Jordan river the committee recommended similar action. Adopted.

ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

The committee on improvements reported favorably on the petition of the residents of the Twenty-first ward, contiguous to Fourth street, asking that the system of electric lights along Fourth street be extended from G street to K street, only two lights being required. Adopted.

HE OBJECTS TO FISHER.

The committee on finance reported as follows:

We have acted as directed by this Council and appointed as a deputy to the auditor I. M. Fisher, who will be required to obey the auditor as his deputy and be expected to help the city treasurer, by permission of the auditor. The city auditor will allow his deputy time to assist the treasurer when said treasurer requires assistance.

Lanson said he understood that the auditor did not want the proposed helper as an assistant.

Bell replied that it was true that the auditor was opposed to the employment of Mr. Fisher, but he wanted it understood that the auditor should have no authority whatever in saying who should and who should not be employed by the company.

Karrick inquired if this action of the company would not make it necessary to pass an ordinance to make the appointment legal. He believed it would.

President Loofbourow thought that Mr. Karrick's query was a good one and should be given consideration.

Rich referred to the city charter, saying he was of the opinion that the auditor had the right to appoint his own assistant, and moved that the matter be laid over for one week.

Folland seconded the motion, but before it was put Horn said he thought the Council should pay no attention to the vague and unsatisfactory whisperings of its auditor.

Rich's motion to lay over for one week carried.

TELFORD MACADAM.

Simondi presented a communication from the Union Rook Company as follows: "In view of the fact that many cities are putting down Telford macadam of quartzite, notably so Chicago, Boston and Oakland, Cal., where it has superseded blocks and asphaltum, we would be willing to furnish enough quartzite crushed to the proper size at a cost not to exceed 10 per cent less than what it has cost the city for gravel as a test for one block on Sixth South Street between First and Second East Streets." Committee on Streets.

WANTLAND'S LAST.

Whereas, In the experience gained in San Francisco and other cities it is found to be advantageous to have sidewalks of a dark color,

Resolved, That the board of public works be requested to follow the precedent established by San Francisco concerning color of sidewalks and to have advertisements for bids so stated.

Rich said if it was the object of the city to beautify its sidewalks and give them a high polish and sombre hue, he would move that the sidewalks be oak grained. (Laughter.)

Wantland said he had anticipated just such a display of ignorance when he introduced the resolution. (More merriment.) He had communicated with San Francisco, where colored walks were used with the best of satisfaction.

Folland said Mr. Wantland had always favored the idea of originality in Salt Lake. Now, why was he desirous of following, monkey-like, the action of the San Francisco board of public works? He suggested a sky blue or moonlight color. (Laughter.)

The resolution was finally referred to the board of public works.

CITY PROPERTY PLAT BOOK.

The Salt Lake Abstract, Guarantee Title and Trust Company, by S. W. Genter, submitted a plat book of property the title of which is vested in the city. The book is a very fine one and consists of fifty pages 24x18 inches of cloth lined Paragon paper. It shows that the city owns 5,700 acres of ground independent of 9,000 acres recently purchased from the Union Pacific Railway Company. With abstracts to each piece of property, the book will cost $800.

Half of that amount was appropriated to the company and the work referred for inspection, and report to the committee on public grounds, city engineer and the city attorney associated.

HOW ABOUT IT?

The Bricklayers and Masons' International Union called the attention of the Council to the way some of the public work is going on in this city.

During election, he said, the war cry was "Salt Lake work for Salt Lake workmen," and eight hours for a day's work," and on these planks the Liberals were elected. The contractor on the joint city and county building, they said, had reduced the wages of the men employed by them and had tacked on an extra sur. They asked whether the Council proposed to submit to such proceedings. Referred.

STREET CAR SIGN BOARDS.

Beil was responsible for the following:

Resolved, That the street companies be requested to put guide boards on head end of all cars, thereby showing the route and direction of the different cars, at the same time avoiding danger to patrons by compelling them to walk to the center of the street to find out the direction of the car.

Adopted.

THE WATER RATE SCHEDULE was made the special order of business for a meeting to be held Friday night, after which the following appropriations were made and the Council adjourned:

APPROPRIATIONS.

A. J. Pendleton & Son.....	$ 12 00
A. H. Hall.....	126 35
W. L. Pickard.....	2 80
G. M. Scott & Co.....	31 64
Murphy & Co.....	3 50
P. V. Coal company.....	10 25
Belsey & Gillespie.....	90 00
A. M. Scott & Co.....	38 50
A. W. Caine & Co.....	1 40
Kelly & Co.....	8 50
St. Mark's hospital.....	10 25
P. V. Coal company.....	19 35
G. M. Scott & Co.....	11 05
R. Anderson.....	1 40
H. T. Duke.....	203 55
G. S. Bell.....	7 00
W. C. Line & Co.....	2 30
Michigan Brass and Iron Works.....	42 99
P. V. Coal Co.....	8 50
G. M. Scott & Co.....	740 54
U. P. Supply Co.....	92
Cunningham & Co.....	27 34
Mountain Ice and Cold Storage company.....	1 75
Sierra Nevada Lumber Co.....	14 40
J. M. Kennedy.....	55 25
Varley Joseph & Co.....	12 10
A. U. Smith & Co.....	3 75
Hesch & Klierbeck.....	10
Calmer Bros.....	2 00
Montre & Greenwood.....	50
Utah and Montana Machinery company.....	350 00
Salt Lake Rapid Transit Co.....	437 50
P. V. Bowman.....	1,046 45
G. M. Scott & Co.....	8 35
A. W. Caine & Co.....	15 75
The Salt Lake Abstract Title and Guaranty Trust Co.....	400 00

A special session of the City Council was held Friday night, June 24th, President Loofbourrow in the chair. The following aldermen were in attendance: Rich, Folland; Horn, Lawson, Ewing, Evans, Simondi, Beardsley, Helsa, Bell and Wantland.

Absent—Kawlek Moran, Hardy.

After reading, amending and approving the minutes of the proceedings of Tuesday night's session a communication from the Pocatello municipal officers in which they asked to be allowed to purchase certain pipe belonging to the city which was left over in the construction of the Parley's canyon conduit was read and referred to the committee on streets with power to act. The new then came up on its final reading and was amended until it now stands as follows:

WATER RATES SCHEDULE

Bakery.....	$15 00 to $30 00
Barber shop, not exceeding two chairs.....	10 00
Each additional chair.....	2 00
Each public first tub.....	10 00
Each additional tub, not exceeding four.....	5 00
Each additional tub exceeding four.....	2 00
Beer pump.....	10 00
Blacksmith shop.....	8 00 to 10 00
Bookbinding and printing office.....	20 00 to 20 00
Brewery, for brewing and washing purposes.....	500 00 to 500 00
Butcher shop.....	15 00 to 20 00
Café room.....	15 00 to 20 00
Confectionery and ice cream saloon.....	10 00 to 10 00
Dancing hall.....	10 00 to 15 00
Drug store.....	15 00 to 25 00
Flour mill.....	10 00 to 10 00
Foundries and machine shops.....	10 00 to 30 00
Fountain with jet not exceeding 4 inch in diameter, per month.....	5 00
Fountain in store, restaurant or other place.....	5 00 to 15 00
Hose connection for sprinkling lawn or garden, or yard, per square yard.....	0 3
No license issued for sprinkling lawn, or garden, or yard less than.....	3 00
For washing five vehicles, each vehicle.....	1 00
For washing each animal.....	1 00
Hotels, boarding and lodging houses.....
For each room, having water attachments, including water closets, urinal and bath for guests.....	1 50
For each room not having water attachment.....	1 00
No hotel, boarding or lodging houses less than.....	10 00
Household or residential premises exceeding six rooms with privilege of sink.....	5 00
Each additional room exceeding six.....	1 00
Each bath tub.....	1 00
Each water closet.....	1 00
Each sink or bathtub.....	1 00
Stationary laundry tubs.....	5 00
Laboratories, soda manufacturers, bottling establishments, or sugar factories.....	20 00 to 100 00
Packing houses.....	48 00 to 1 00 00
Laundries.....	15 00
Wholesale liquor stock, without bar.....	25 00
Livery, feed or sale stable, each animal.....	1 00
For washing vehicles, each.....	2 00
Locomotives, (railroad) each.....	50 00
For washing cars, railway.....	10 00
For washing street cars, each.....	7 50
Lumber yard or planing mill.....	10 00 to 20 00
Stable stand.....	5 00 to 20 00
Office, including bank, saloon, railroad, attorneys, physicians, mining companies or other offices, with or without water attachments, first floor, each.....	5 00 to 10 00
Up stairs, with or without attachments.....	2 00
Photograph galleries.....	10 00
Sanitarium or public bath houses, each.....	2 00
Turkish baths.....	50 00
Soda fountain, for season.....	5 00 to 20 00
Society hall, etc.....	10 00
Steam boats, stationary, when used not to exceed 15 out of 24 hours per horse power.....	1 00
When used constantly per horse power.....	2 00
When used for heating private residences.....	3 00 to 5 00
Stone yards and stone saw mills.....	10 00 to 50 00
Stables or corrals not less than.....	25 00
Store or shop.....	5 00 to 20 00
Tanks or reservoirs for each 400 gallons.....	25
Theatres or public halls.....	10 00 to 50 00
Urinals, public, in hotels, saloons, private school houses or restaurants, each.....	10 00
In office buildings, stores or shops, each.....	5 00
Water closets in office buildings, stores or shops, each.....	5 00
Water closets, public, in hotels, saloons, private school houses or restaurants, each.....	10 00
Meter rates per 100 gallons.....	25

For a supply of water for any purpose not specifically designated, the price shall be fixed by the assessor and collector of water rates, conforming with the standard hereinbefore established.

There was considerable unimportant discussion as the ordinance was read item by item, and all went smoothly enough until the question of lowering the rate on Turkish baths was reached.

Simondi, it seems, is the proprietor of the only establishment of the kind there is in the city, and objected to the rate of $100. The steam used in such baths, he said, was produced by the engine, and that was already taxed.

A good deal of councilmanic wit was indulged in, and Rich inquired how much water was used in these baths and how often the tubs or vats were emptied. He said he took a bath at this place a few days ago, and eight of them used the same water.

The recorder here interposed the statement that the tubs were only emptied once in three weeks.

"In that case," said Rich, "it seems that the consumption of water is not very great and I think the reduction ought to be made."

The climax was reached when Wantland said: "I am not surprised at hearing such a statement come from Mr. Rich, as he has belonged to the party of the great unwashed for so long."

Rich—"If the gentleman ever makes that assertion again I shall certainly call him to order. I want him to understand once and for all that my party and myself are just as clean as himself or party and that my hair is combed just as prettily as his."

This statement caused Wantland to roar with laughter and he attempted to reply but Rich called him to order but the gentleman from the First continued to make an effort to be heard, when Rich roared as he looked across the chamber at his antagonist: "You, if you don't stop your personal remarks I will punch your head for you."

President Loofbourrow—Come to order! Come to order I say! We cannot have any such disgraceful demonstrations here again. If they are repeated I tell you I will restore order if I have to do so by the aid of a policeman.

Rich—Well, I just want him to keep within proper boundaries.

Ewing—I think that Rich should be compelled to apologize for using profane language in this house.

President Loofbourrow.—Wait a moment; nothing more will be said about the matter tonight.

Business was then proceeded with and the feeling that was exhibited during the remainder of the session was positively painful. After the schedule had been adopted and the remainder of the ordinance referred to the City Attorney, Rich arose and apologized for the harsh language that he had used and said that he would see to it that it did not occur again.

Beil then moved that it be the sense of the Council that all members who were inclined to be cutting and sarcastic in their remarks refrain from indulging in personalities hereafter and endeavor to preserve order and decorum. He knew that such a thing was necessary as there were several members in the Council who had fiery and impetuous tempers. He numbered himself among that class and therefore thought that he had a right to make the motion.

None of the councillors were there in the interest of this party or that. They were simply servants of the people and were accountable to them for their official acts. They should all unite together and work in harmony with the chair.

Horn, Ewing and Simonds all agreed that the remarks of Mr. Bell were all right except as to the motion. To that they were opposed, as they saw no necessity of going on record in the matter. All of the members knew that they should behave like gentlemen, and that was sufficient.

The chairman then remarked he was pleased to see Mr. Rich apologize, and trusted that it had been received in the same spirit that it was given. So far as he was individually concerned this was true. Personalities, sarcasms and insinuations should be guarded against and hope that no such unpleasantness will ever occur again.

Wantland arose to a question of privilege and explained that he did not intend to be personal in any degree whatever but as he was a Republican the opportunity to give Democracy a good humored thrust was so great that he could not resist.

Bell again took the floor and said that when such men as Rich and Wantland came together it was pity that the City Hall was not six stories high instead of two.

Ewing here interrupted Bell and declared that his remarks were uncalled for; that he was out of order and that such talk instead of pouring oil upon the troubled waters would only stir up strife and create bad blood.

Bell replied with emphasis that it would not create bad blood.

"I tell you it will," replied Ewing warmly and Bell withdrew his motion and sat down.

After the council adjourned Rich and Wantland explained matters to each other in a manner that seemed perfectly satisfactory as they looked at one another and marched down street together chatting as though nothing unusual had occurred.

OPPOSITION TO HOME RULE.

THE United States has no monopoly of the Convention business and its attendant excitement. The monster gathering of the Unionists of Ulster, Ireland, in the City of Belfast on the 17th instant, was characterized by such attendance, interest and enthusiasm as place it in the fore front of such assemblages. Just think of a convention containing 10,000 delegates! It makes our national affairs with a thousand or less look insignificant; yet the former number is what the roll call at Belfast disclosed. The press were not at all oblivious to the situation, there being 150 reporters present.

The prime of all Ireland opened the proceedings with prayer, after which a psalm was read, and then the convention got down to its regular business by electing the Duke of Abercorn chairman. On taking the chair the duke said the meeting was one of a solemn nature, deeply earnest in its motives and animated by love of country, family, home and religion; above all, it was animated by a determination to live as an integral portion of the United Kingdom, declaring the meeting was not a sham but a throbbing reality that would never have home rule, and so on in a similar strain, showing decided hostility to Gladstone's doctrine, but professing great friendship for Ireland. The following resolutions, which were acted on separately and adopted unanimously, are as complete a presentation of the case for the Unionists as can be contained within the same space:

1. That we avow our fixed resolve to retain unchanged our present position as an integral portion of the United Kingdom, and to protest in the most unequivocal manner against the passage of any measure that would rob us of our inheritance in the Imperial Parliament under the protection of which our capital has been invested, and our homes and rights safeguarded.

2. That we record our determination to have nothing to do with a Parliament certain to be controlled by men responsible for the crime and outrage of the Land League, the dishonesty of the Plan of Campaign and the cruelties of boycotting, many of whom have shown themselves the ready instruments of clerical domination.

3. That we declare to the people of Great Britain our conviction that the attempt to set up such a Parliament in Ireland will inevitably result in disorder, violence and bloodshed, such as have not been experienced in this century, and announce our resolve to take no part in the election or the proceedings of such a Parliament, the authority of which, should it ever be constituted, we shall be forced to repudiate.

4. That we protest against this great question which involves our lives, property and civil rights, being treated as a mere side issue in the impending electoral struggle.

5. That we appeal to those of our fellow-countrymen who have hitherto been in favor of a separate Parliament to abandon a demand which hopelessly divides Irishmen and to unite with us under an imperial legislature in developing the resources of our common country.

It is stated that one of the arguments used by the Ulsterites against home rule is that if a Dublin Parliament shall be established Protestants would be excluded from all places of honor and emolument. This, however, is unqualifiedly and authoritatively denied.

THE UTAH AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

THE annual catalogue of the Agricultural College of Utah for 1892-3 has been received. It contains much that is interesting and worthy of perusal. The College was organized by an act of the Territorial Legislature, approved March 8, 1888, accepting the provisions of the 1882 Morrill act of Congress. To this latter supplemental acts were passed in 1888 and in 1890, providing for the establishment and endowment of Agricultural Experiment Stations as departments of agricultural colleges.

An idea has obtained that because of the name given these institutions agriculture is the only department in which instruction is given. It is true the organic law founding the colleges names agriculture first, and also provides for a special feature, such as the teaching of "such branches of learning as relate to agriculture and the mechanic arts." But the law further says that the colleges were intended "to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions of life." A review of the courses in the Utah College shows that outside the agricultural department, the authorities have not forgotten that the man is before the industrialist, and that due attention is paid to the "several pursuits and professions of life."

The college work includes five distinctive lines of instruction, four special courses and a preparatory department. The ordinary courses are agriculture, domestic arts, mechanical engineering, civil engineering and business. The special courses are three years in agriculture, two years in domestic arts, a course in mining engineering and one in irrigation engineering.

The college is located at Logan, the capital city of Cache Valley. Tuition is free. An entrance fee of $5 for each year of the college course is charged. This is in lieu of the charge ordinarily made at colleges for library and other fees, so that the library, museum, reading rooms, literary societies, etc., may be free to students. Board at the new club-house will cost about $2 per week, fire and light included. Students putting up at private homes can secure board at from $3 to $3.50 per week.

The Board of Trustees consists of W. S. McCormick, Salt Lake City; Robert W. Cross, Ogden; J. T. Hammond, Logan; A. G. Barber, Logan; W. R. Stover, Logan; A. R. Heywood, Ogden, and J. B. Keeler, Provo. The catalogue is a pamphlet of 60 pages. It contains full particulars relating to the college. Copies can be obtained of John T. Caine, Jr., secretary of the college, Logan, Utah.

OLD AGE DENUDE OF ITS TERRORS

SIR JAMES CRICHTON BROWNE, the British scientist who so strenuously opposes the higher education of women, on physiological grounds, has something to say on old age. He contends that the functions of the body must be kept in exercise in order to maintain their efficiency. This is a fact constantly observed in persons engaged in trade and business, who retire at 60, and then fall rapidly into decay. At the present time octogenarians can be found among poets, philosophers, statesmen and professional men. In England Lord Palmerston, Lord Brougham and Lord Lyndhurst maintained their full faculties to a very advanced age. Gladstone at present seems not to have lost all of his pristine vigor and aggressiveness. Among the ancients Sophocles and Plato are said to have lived to be 90, and some of their best work was produced late in life.

Browne's theory is that hard work does not kill, but he admits that the work must be genial and diversified. Persons troubled with mental worry and irritability should never seek rest as a means of effecting a cure. Rest is what must be avoided, because it gives the morbid mind more leisure to brood over its fancied grievances. The rest which the mind requires in such cases is occupation for faculties more or less dormant. By rousing these into action, and by throwing around the mind, as it were, a new environment, the old troubles will gradually disappear, and the irascible, despondent, pessimistic, saturnine, snappish wasp will become the profound, rational, logical, tolerant philosopher. And in this latter condition age is never thought of except as one is reminded of it by whitening hairs or baldness.

Sir Crichton Browne says: "Depend upon it, the best antiseptic against senile decay is an active interest in human affairs, and that those keep young longest who love most." Oliver Wendell Holmes was presented by some ladies with a cup on his 80th birthday. In his acceptance ode he said that an empty bowl with only the perfume of love, was superior to the cup overflowing with the wine of nepenthe to soothe the aching soul of age. It is love for humanity and a desire for the improvement and betterment of mankind that makes the old heart young, and gives to old age its hale virility.

A PREHISTORIC PEOPLE.

[Chicago Tribune.]

The recent wonderful discoveries of iron, copper and silver ores in Northern Wisconsin, Michigan, and Minnesota call attention to a fact not generally known that wise old Dr. Franklin, when arranging the treaty between this country and England, after the Revolution, so drew the boundary lines between the late hostile powers as to include in the United States the great mining regions on the southern shore of Lake Superior. In these days, when every week gives fresh information concerning the boundless wealth in iron, copper and silver of this wonderful world, the remark is often heard that the treasures here untold are scarcely yet unlocked—so it would seem upon a cursory examination of the copper and silver mines which fringe the bleak shores of the great inland fresh-water sea. Such is, however, not the fact. There is indubitable evidence that long before the first red man hunted in the gloomy forests that girdle these wild and lonely shores—long years before the first Jesuit launched his boat upon the waves of the Getchee Gneiss, a race of men, in numbers as thousands on the shore, toiled and hammered and beat the copper—not only into implements of warfare, but without doubt for transportation to other lands. A civilization must then have existed far superior to any since known among the native tribes north of Mexico. Thousands of years ago a race of people worked the copper mines in the upper peninsula. They worked the native copper and were so far advanced in the mechanical arts as to be able to handle masses of ore weighing many tons. Their implements were fashioned to do skillful work. In working the copper mines of today these implements are found at a great depth, showing that ages have elapsed since this prehistoric race existed. The geological formations bear evidence that thousands of years have passed since these people disappeared. Who were they? Whence came they? and where did they go? Their unfinished work has been laid before scientists, their tools and implements of stone and copper are to be seen in museums and collections in Milwaukee and other cities, and yet no one can give any reliable data of the existence or extinction of these people of the long ago.

The southern shores of Superior were first explored in 1641 by two Jesuit priests. Small bands continued to explore the region until 1760. In that year Alexander Henry visited the region. He soon became familiar with the fact that copper existed in the country. He published a book on the subject and described his explorations. That a prehistoric race had worked these mines was not discovered until the middle of the present century. The ancient excavations are found in all parts of the peninsula. There is scarcely a vein of copper in the whole district that does not show evidence of ancient workings. In places they even extend in the rock from three to sixty feet. The method of mining was to heat the rock with fire and then by pouring on water and pounding with their stone hammers to disintegrate and separate the ore. A careful search of all the old records show that the Indians who were found in the country were ignorant of the mines and the uses of the metal.

In 1847 S. O. Knapp was prospecting on the range near Rockland, a small town in Ontonagon county, Michigan. He opened a test pit, the surface outcropping of copper-bearing rock giving evidence of hidden treasure, and when eighteen feet from the surface he discovered a mass of nearly pure copper weighing more than six tons. This is regarded as the most wonderful mineral discovery ever known, from the fact that the copper was almost pure and showed conclusively that it had been worked and abandoned by a prehistoric race.

This mass had been raised several feet and secured there upon timbers. These had decayed and the mass remained in its place supported by the soil. It had been hammered all over, until its surface was perfectly smooth. In this pit, as in many others, there were found great numbers of stone hammers, bits of burned wood and copper chisels. Over this mass, drawing its life from the soil, stood a hemlock tree which showed 325 distinct annual rings of growth; this was standing by the stump of a much larger tree which had grown, died, and decayed since this pit had been dug, and this mass had been raised from its bed and the brands beneath it had been burned and the soil gathered above it in the long lapse of ages.

In the bottoms of all the pits or diggings large numbers of stone hammers and copper chisels are found. The hammers consist of small bowlers of trap rock weighing from three to thirty pounds. A groove around the stone shows where the handle was tied on with a withe. These "diggings" are so abundant in the copper region as to cause no surprise. After the discovery of the mass of copper there were many more of a similar nature in different localities, extending over a vast area. The existence of these "ancient diggings" was suggested by depressions in the ground. Later, enormous masses of copper were found at Rockland, and for many years great wealth flowed in upon the owners of the Minnesota and National mines.

Even on the desolate Isle Royale multitudes of hammers, etc., have been found. An old mining captain, speaking of this mystery of the ages, said to the writer that thousands and thousands of men were engaged in mining in that unknown epoch of human existence, ages before the days of the Pharaohs, or even before the birth of "Abraham Haran-Terah-Sot," the world's gray fathers." In speaking further upon the subject, this gentleman, Captain Parnell, said that something must have occurred to disquiet those odd fellows—they threw down their hammers and quit work suddenly. Perhaps the question of labor and capital was even then brewing mischief; if so, it must have been a successful strike, for the toiling thousands quit work for good. Everything points to the fact that work was stopped at a moment's notice.

The six-ton mass of copper found by Mr. Knapp was afterwards, with great difficulty, raised, taken down the Ontonagon River, and sent to the Smithsonian, where it still remains if I am correctly informed. These facts heighten the interest in that fascinating excitement of exploring and prospecting for new treasures in this still wild and unknown portion of the Northwest: There can be no doubt that vast and untold wealth in silver, iron and copper yet await the energy and toil of men, backed by the capital, pluck and enterprise of other men who have already reaped the fruits of industry in other fields. Some will win and others will fail. It might not be amiss to state that up to 1880 over $150,000,000 of copper ore had been produced by the Michigan mine.

DEATHS.

KEES.—In this city, at the residence of John Kees, at 7 o'clock p. m., Friday, June 17, of congestion of the lungs, William Kees.

GROO.—In this city June 22, at 4:30 a. m., Sarah Gillis Groo, wife of Isaac Groo, born in Sullivan county, New York, March 4, 1827.

HUFFAKER.—At South Cottonwood, June 14th, 1892, after one day's illness, Irene Huffaker, daughter of Ray E. and Esther E. Huffaker, aged 2 months and 2 days.

STOWELL.—At Spring Glen, of scarlet fever, Stella Levin, daughter of Heber J. and Eliza LeVina Stowell, Bishop of that place; aged 3 years, 4 months and 5 days.

SMART.—On the 20th inst., at his residence, Franklin Lodge, Victoria Road, Harbourside, aged 72, James Smart, brick manufacturer.—Birmingham (Eng.) Mercury, April 30th.

ALBION.—In the Sixth-enth ward, Salt Lake City, James Albion, aged 81 years, 1 month and 15 days. Formerly of Bolton, Lancashire, England. Death was caused by being run over by a horse and buggy.

PASCOE.—In this city June 22, 1892, of spinal meningitis, after one week's illness, Elizabeth L. Barfoot, wife of Francis A. Pascoe and daughter of the late Jos. L. Barfoot; born in London, England, May 2, 1813.

SMITH.—At Meadow, Millard Co., June 11th, of diphtheria, Elias Smith, aged 70 years and 4 days. The deceased was born June 6th, 1822, at Stockholm, St. Lawrence Co., New York. He was baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Aug. 27, 1835, and passed through all the troubles and persecutions to which he Saints were subjected in the early days. He was a brother of the late Judge Elias Smith, of Salt Lake City. He died, as he had lived, in full faith of the Gospel.

THE DESERT WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION.

ESTABLISHED TRUTH AND LIBERTY. JUNE 1850.

NO. 3. SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1892.

VOL. XLV.

A VOICE FROM CARTHAGE.

After a short delay caused by the cloud bursts and floods, so prevalent in Northern Illinois during the last few days, and a one day's stop in Chicago the return trip, your correspondent boarded a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad train at this last name: city, with Carthage, Illinois, as the point of destination. Leaving Chicago at 10:30 in the evening, Burlington, Iowa, is reached early next morning, where a change of cars is made, the Carthage route being a branch of the main line, between Burlington, Iowa and Quincy, Illinois.

Carthage was reached in about an hour's ride and as the next south bound train was not due until 5:30 p.m., I had ample time to examine this city, once so importantly connected with the history of the Latter-day Saints.

Carthage has a population of about two thousand, and is the county seat of Hancock County. Its not over-prepossessing court house is situated in the center of a neatly kept square, opposite, and on three sides of which are the stores and various business places. One noticeable fact, and a very favorable one to the city, is that not a saloon is within its limits, the municipal government being controlled by a "prohibitory party." The county, politically, is Democratic, and this line of politics in Carthage is expounded by two weekly newspapers, the Journal and Republican, while "protection and the McKinley bill" find an able champion in the Gazette. Learning that Judge Thomas C. Sharpe, (who will be remembered by many Utah residents, as one of the Mormons' bitterest opponents in the days of the expulsion,) was the editor of the latter named paper, I called at the office and found a son of Mr. Sharpe in charge, who informed me that his father was a victim of paralysis and unable to leave his residence. On calling at his home, I was ushered into a room where the "Judge" was seated at a table, writing copy for his paper, a process which he informed me was done very laboriously, as he suffered with what is known as "half paralysis," that is, half of his body had lost its controlling power.

Mr. Sharpe is apparently a very aged man and his hearing is so badly affected that conversation with him was very difficult. After learning that his visitor was a young Mormon from Utah, he discontinued his work and instead of the polite which I had hoped to gain from the visit, I found myself, for the time at least, as a recognized bureau of information on Utah and the Mormon question.

His inquiries were of all varieties; on the political situation here, at Minneapolis, and at Chicago; on the question of polygamy and the probabilities of Utah being admitted into the Union.

From his standpoint, my answers did not apparently give much satisfaction, especially when I advised him of the action of the Chicago convention in relation to the Utah contest, and after a reply to each question had been shouted in his ears, he would respond with an "h'm," rivet his eyes on the floor for a few seconds and then fix a steadfast gaze on me for some time before propounding his next inquiry. His wife was in the room, and informed me that she was formerly the wife of Frank Worrell, captain of the Carthage Greys at the time of the martyrdom, and she very bitterly lays the death of Worrell, about a year afterwards, to the doors of the Mormons.

Her present husband, Sharpe, was the editor of that strong anti-Mormon paper, the Warsaw Signal, and he is one of the few men who were arrested for the crime of the murder of the Prophet Joseph and Hyrum Smith. As intimated, the old lady is very bitterly opposed to the Mormon Church, but after ridding herself of the presumption that I was a son of Brigham Young, she very readily gave me the information I desired in relation to affairs connected with the mobbings of the Saints in Illinois.

My footsteps were next wended toward the old jail building which is located in the northern part of the town, near the business centre. Comparing the present view with an old photograph of the original jail, the great improvements which have been made were readily discernable. The jail was sold many years ago at public auction by the county, and was afterwards resold to its present owners a Mr. and Mrs. Browning. They being in affluent circumstances, have made a veritable mansion of the old place, a large addition having been added to the east, and an elegant glass conservatory adjoining the south end. The lady very cordially invited me to examine the building, an invitation which I was not loth to take advantage of.

The jail proper is a strong, red stone structure, about twenty-five by thirty-four feet, and a little over two stories high, although having a low and stunted appearance. The old stairway, built of oak and walnut, is the same as in 1844 and, in fact, there has, practically, not been a change made on the jail portion of the building, with the exception of the wall-papering, painting and furnishing of the rooms. The door through which Hyrum and Joseph was shot was reached and the bullet hole carefully examined, and we next entered this doorway to the room in which were the Mormon prisoners at the time of the assassination.

Heating myself upon the stone window sill from which the Prophet Joseph made his fatal leap, my informant carefully explaining every point of interest in the room, the tones of a piano in a neighboring residence, echoing through the building, the feelings and thoughts experienced would be difficult to describe. In fact, I could hardly make myself believe that I was viewing the spot, where within two days of forty-eight years ago the blood of the martyrs flowed to satisfy the maddened desires of a horde of fanatics.

This room mentioned is fitted as a spare bedroom, and I was informed, in answer to a query, that the blood stains of Hyrum Smith still remained upon the carpeted floor. On leaving the building I was shown through the grounds, where the floral taste of Mrs. Browning has led to the expenditure of hundreds of dollars in choice varieties of flowers and shrubs. Ivy covers the walls of the old jail to the very roof, and the entire premises are a veritable flower garden. The old well, against the curb of which the Prophet was shot, has long since been filled, but the spot is kept well marked, and on it grows a choice variety of flowers. An armful of flowers and ivy was presented me and every consideration shown that could possibly be accorded a stranger. In answer to my inquiries as to the estimated value of the place, a sum away up in the thousands was named, and I afterwards learned that the same proportionate values are held on various kinds of property throughout the State.

Carthage has five churches, all imposing structures, they being the Baptist, Lutheran, Christian, Presbyterian and Methodist. While Carthage is no doubt a live and flourishing city as compared with Nauvoo and other places in the vicinity, to me a dead spirit seemed to permeate the town and the progressive push and energy so common in the Utah towns is entirely absent here. Beyond the points of interest which I have attempted to describe, there was nothing in the place to attract my attention and at the time for leaving, I was willing and anxious to shake the dust of the place from my feet.

J. FRANK PICKERING.

OLD FOLKS' DAY.

The seventeenth annual excursion of the old folks of Salt Lake City and vicinity was a success in every particular. It came off June 29th, the trip being over the Rio Grande Western Railway to Payson, a pretty town of 3500 inhabitants, seventy miles from this city. A special train consisting of seventeen coaches and a baggage car was placed at the disposal of the Old Folks' arrangements committee by the local management of that company, free of cost. The courtesy and efficiency of the railroad officials and employees contributed in no small degree to the success of the occasion.

The Old Folks' arrangements committee was composed of the following gentlemen: C. R. Savage, George Goddard, John Kirkman, Bishop W. B. Preston, W. Edington, W. Naylor, W. L. Blader, Andrew Jensen and N. A. Empey, all of whom were present and actively engaged in superintending the work of attending to the old people. Brothers Savage, Goddard and Kirkman were members of the original committee which inaugurated Old Folks' day seventeen years ago. Bishop Hunter, now deceased, was one of their colleagues at that time. To Mr. Savage might be credited the idea of originating the day, and though on the first excursion only a limited number of persons participated, he had the satisfaction of seeing 1152 persons on the train yesterday, 1000 of whom were over seventy years of age.

Shortly before 8 o'clock yesterday morning the old folks and their friends began to pour into the R. G. W. depot. They came in hacks, carriages, street cars, buggies and in vehicles of all kinds. Those between 70 and 80 wore red badges, between 80 and 90, blue, and those of 90 and over white silk. The seventies seemed so numerous that the woods appeared to be full of them, the eighties were not so plentiful and the nineties numbered about half a dozen. The work of seating the old people was promptly performed under the guidance of the committee and an able corps of assistants. For this duty three young persons—two ladies and one gentleman—were deputized for each car. The cars were distinctly designated, and the deputations were numbered accordingly. So there was no confusion.

Immediately after the train started, lemonade, cake, candy and other little delicacies were served to the old folks. No royal or aristocratic personages could be more tenderly waited on. Then came the old folks' choir, composed of members of the Tabernacle Choir, under Prof. Beesley, and serenaded the occupants of each car. On the outward trip they gave 18 serenades, no easy task, in yesterday's temperature. They were followed by Mr. W. C. Dunbar, with his bagpipes, who also rendered "The Highland March" in each of the 18 cars. Contingents were taken up at all the depots between here and Payson, and care was taken that no aged person wishing to participate should be neglected.

The train arrived at Payson about 11:30 a. m. The Payson Silver band was at the depot, discoursing lively airs for the benefit of the old people. The Payson Executive Committee, under the guidance of John Quigley acquitted themselves nobly. Stalwart young fellows were stationed at the steps of each car to assist the aged to alight, and in cases where persons were too feeble to walk, to take them bodily in their arms to vehicles in waiting. The road all the way from the depot to the city park was strewn with new-mown hay, and on each side of this was a line of young ladies all dressed in white, waving miniature American flags. The Benjamin brass band was also in attendance and marched at the head of the procession.

The old folks marched six abreast to the City Park, the entrance to which was marked by a triumphal arch, under which was wrought in beautiful flowers the word WELCOME. In fact, it was a triumphal march such as only conquerors or heroes are usually accorded. Immediately on their arrival at the grounds, the work of dining commenced. Bulwer says man can live without lots of things, but he can't live without dining. Here were special tables of great length, laden with edibles of the choicest kind, and in attendance was a little army of young men and young women dressed in garb suggestive of the culinary department of Delmonico's. The banquet was a success in every respect. Though the crowd was larger than was anticipated, yet there was abundance for all, and large quantities of viands remained untouched.

Among those over 70 were noticed the venerable parents of his Excellency Governor A. L. Thomas. Mr. Thomas, Sr., was born in Wales, and takes delight in talking the ancient tongue in which Caractacus and Boadicea exhorted their warriors to oppose the invading legions of the Roman Caesars on British soil nineteen centuries ago. Mrs. Thomas is an American lady, having been born in the Keystone State some seventy summers since, but she can do a little in the ancient cymraeg, by way of accompaniment to her aged spouse.

Governor Thomas, though having attended several of these old folks' days, felt more at home yesterday than ever. On the way down, President Angus M. Cannon, who seemed to be personally acquainted with every man and woman on the train, escorted the Governor through the cars and gave his Excellency a personal introduction to the veterans. When he got through he had shaken the hands of over 1150 persons; representing, perhaps, a score of nationalities, ranging from the age of nineteen to ninety-four.

There were on the grounds at Payson probably about 2,500 people. Of these fully 1,200 were over 70; Payson and vicinity furnished about 200 over 70. That town also furnished the oldest person, Rachel Drollinger, aged 94, a native of Kentucky. The next oldest lady was Mrs. Sarah Free, 92, a native of England, Mrs. Anne Taylor, the mother of Counselor Joseph E. Taylor, who was with the party, also aged 92, a native of England, was among the veterans. Jane Cornwall, aged 90, native of Ireland, and Johanna Jensen, aged 90, native of Sweden, comprised the ladies' list of 90 and over. There was one gentleman aged 92, Joseph Hancock, a citizen of Payson and Robert Wimmer, aged 90, also of Payson. This it is believed comprised the list of persons aged ninety and over.

About 2:30 p. m. Mr. C. H. Savage called the assemblage to order, and the exercises of the day commenced. Mr. John Quigley acting as master of ceremonies. The Payson Silver band gave a selection, followed by prayer from Father Robert Wimmer, aged 90. The Old Folks' choir next rendered a chorus in fine style, followed by "Hail Columbia" by the combined Benjamin and Payson bands.

Governor A. L. Thomas addressed the old folks. He regretted that he could not make himself heard in every quarter of the grounds. It was a grand spectacle to see so many aged persons present, notwithstanding the heat, and he deemed it one of the greatest events of his life to be present among so many old people, where such careful attention, respect and reverence were paid to them. In other States gatherings of old persons were not uncommon, but they could not equal Utah in their concern for silvery hairs and bent forms. There were present many of the original settlers of the valley, persons who by their toil and labor paved the way to the comfort and affluence enjoyed by the present generation. All honor, respect and veneration were due these aged veterans; when they first beheld these valleys nothing but sand, sage and alkali met the eye. This morning meadows, pasture fields, and growing crops smiled on every side, the result more or less of the early labors of these old people, whom he was to glad and proud to meet. This was the fourth occasion of the kind at which he had been present, and he hoped by the aid of Providence he would meet the old folks many times in the future. It was well that practical proof could be given in such a manner of the goodness in the human heart, in thus honoring old age and paying respectful homage to the founders of a progressive community. Future generations will yet call these pioneers blessed.

The Governor then concluded by extending his best wishes to all present, to the old that they may enjoy the day and many repetitions of it, to the young for their tender solicitude and regard for the aged.

"The Star Spangled Banner" was rendered in excellent style by the combined bands.

Next came an address of welcome, written specially for the occasion by J. L. Townsend, and read by Miss Annie Worencroft, a bright, intellectual young lady. She was arrayed in a costume composed of the Stars and Stripes, and might have served as a representation of the genius of Columbia.

The following is a copy of the address of WELCOME.

OLD FOLKS' REUNION AT PAYSON,
June 29, 1892.

Ye who wear the silver crown,
Of a life complete with age,
Ye whom wisdom gives roadways
By her long-life heritage;
Old folks everywhere held dear,
Filled with years three score and ten,
Welcome, ye thrice, welcome here,
Honored guests of honored men.

Old folks' day—a cherished thought,
Often called in pleasant dreams;
Teaching charity unsought
And that life is what it seems;
Bright as glow the summer flowers
Or the ripples of the stream
Let these fleeting pleasant hours
Brightly in thy memory gleam.

Old folks! Ah! What honor this
To have lived and toiled for years
That as pioneers the blizzards
Of the present now appears.
Then all honor to the brow
Wrinkled with life's toil and woes—
Ye have sown the seed and now
Blossoms the desert as the rose.

To our city, lovely scene,
Sparkling with the mountain rills,
To our homes and gardens green
Welcome while the day fulfils
I very joy that hope foretold,
Of a time both bright and long,
E'er thou thought these hearts may hold
Of reunion, feast and song.

Care hath here no part today;
Joy shall sing her songs above;
Faith in every heart shall say:
"God is near and God is love."
Old Folks, Fathers, Mothers dear,
Ye who wear the silver crown,
Ye are welcome to our cheers,
Ye are welcome to our town.

Mr. John Quigley made a short address of welcome on behalf of the people of Payson and vicinity.

The Payson Quartette sang "Don't forget the Old Folks."

President Angus M. Cannon briefly pictured the transformation of the valley from the time it had only a few cabins, to the present era of comfort, plenty, and even luxury which was now found thereon. He paid a beautiful tribute to the old folks for the part they played in this transformation, and concluded by praying that God would inspire all hearts to reverence age, and especially those persons to whom the younger generation owed their liberty, protection and munificence they now enjoy.

The Benjamin brass band gave a selection.

This was followed by an address from George Goddard, who spoke in behalf of the old folks, thanking the railroad company for its generosity. He called for a vote of thanks to the company, which was unanimously and enthusiastically accorded.

Mayor Lemon of Payson spoke briefly but appropriately, welcoming everybody to Payson, and hoping that many such reunions would take place there in the future. He was sure that if any persons were neglected it was not the fault of the Payson committee, but it must have arisen from mistake, or too much modesty on the part of visitors who failed to make their wants known.

A vote of thanks to the Payson executive committee was moved and carried unanimously.

Mr. W. C. Dunbar gave two selections with his Caledonian band, the Highland pipes.

The Rev. A. C. Todd, Presbyterian minister of Payson, delivered a brief address, dwelling on the beauty, goodness and Christianity of respect for the aged.

Mrs. J. A. Lindsay gave a vocal solo entitled "Father's Growing Old."

Counselor David John, of Utah Stake, made a few remarks, saying that the originator of old folks' day was blessed with an inspired idea; that old age was deprived of all its terrors in such surroundings as the present.

The Presbyterian Male Quartette gave the selection "I'm Wandering Down."

Brother C. R. Savage then came to the front and presented every person in Payson over 70, irrespective of creed or race, with a gift of some kind. The Salt Lake people had a good time, therefore they needed no presents. He then introduced Mrs. Rachel Drollinger, aged 84, as the oldest lady on the grounds, and presented her with some money, a mirror and a number of other articles which seemed to please the old lady immensely. [About a hundred gifts were presented, varying from a walking stick to $10.00 in money. A few of the persons were indigent, and to these money and useful articles of apparel were given. The well-to-do received walking canes, etc., as souvenirs of the occasion.]

Bishop W. B. Preston addressed the party, dwelling on the grace and goodness of treating old age with proper respect. The Old Folks' choir then concluded the exercises with the following:

Welcome here, ye aged veterans,
For this day to you belongs;
With the grip of love and friendship,
With our hearty words and songs!

Chorus:

Young and old now gather 'round you,
Vining who the best shall serve you,
For from home we give you greeting,
Is not that a happy meeting?
Is not this a happy meeting,
On life's great highway?

Toilers ye, as we are toilers,
Mid these valleys God hath blest;
Now they bloom to give you glory,
And when weary to give rest!

Brethren tried and sisters proven,
Ye have whited as the snow;
Your example is the text-book,
Which your children read and know!

Noble sires and honored mothers,
For you we shall ever pray;
Though as year by year theirs' lost one,
Others ageing keep this day!

Angels wait with friend and kindred,
All the loved will meet at last;
Gather welcome 'mid these gardens,
At the Old Folks' feast more vast!

Chorus:

Young and old will gather rounder,
Vining who the best can be;
Safe at home, life's strange old story,
Oft rehearsed, we'll find its glory,
Oft rehearsed, we'll find its glory,
Mid celestial day!

Father—Joseph Bates Noble, of Bountiful, closed with prayer, and Mr. Quigley gave the order to march to the depot.

A conspicuous figure on the stand was Father Greaves of Provo, aged 87, decorated with a number of medals. They were not obtained in battles by sword or cannon, but for industry at the loom and shuttle. One was bronze, given in 1879 for the best silk vest, by the Desert Agricultural Society; and another given in the same year for the best display of miscellaneous silks. There were two gold medals given in 1891 for silk displays at the Territorial fair, and one given in 1881 for the best silk handkerchief.

Another marked personage was Jacob P. Terry, aged 87, born within a few rods of the hill Cumorah, New York. Solon Foster, aged 81, was another New Yorker whose memory has not lost its vigor. Bishop Wisler, aged 84, a native of Pennsylvania, looked hale and hearty.

Two personages on the grounds attracted a good deal of attention. They were Isaac Lewis Manning, colored, a native of Connecticut, aged 77, and his sister, Mrs. Jane E. James, aged 79. Both looked vigorous. At dinner they occupied seats next to President Cannon and Governor Thomas, and felt as happy as if they owned half of Utah.

Eli Ludington, aged 86, a native of Connecticut, looked vigorous and bright. New Jersey furnished in the person of John T. Conk one octogenarian. Pennsylvania furnished another in Joseph Busby, aged 83. Vermont was represented by Willis Smith, aged 82, Ohio by W. F. Cahoon, aged 80, and New York by J. J. Tanner, aged 81.

England was represented by Amanda M. Pierce, aged 82, Robert Halford aged 85, Elizabeth Newman 81, Jane Longmore 82, Mary Titton 83, Nancy Jackson 82, Margaret Green 83, Mary Argent 89, Sarah Whitworth 80, Joseph Horne 81, Anne Butler 86, William Stoner 83, Mrs. W. Smith 88, M. A. E. Watmough 84, W. R. Smith 83, Thomas Smith 85, Hannah Miller 81, Sarah Haslam 82, William Burrows 91, Elizabeth Free 82, Lucy Cowley 81, Mrs. Taylor 80, W. J. Moss 87, John Evans 86, John Marcroft 80, Jane Latley 81.

Wales was represented by Llewellyn Mantell 84, Elizabeth Williams 80, John Jones 82, Edward Williams 81.

Scotland was represented by Jane Chapman 85, Robert Micklejohn 80, Jane Anderson 85, James Elliott 89, Rutina S. Kaul 80, and Jane Camperman 83.

The Isle of Man was represented by Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor 81, Ireland by Jane Cornwall 90, and Charles Nowlan 81.

Sweden was represented by Johanna Jensen 80, T. Laurence 80, Nells Benson 80, Hannah Jacobson 80; Norway by Helena Cresham 80; Denmark by Mrs. Clawson 82, Anne Godman 85, Carrie Christensen 82, Rasmus Olsen 81, Elsie Anderson 82; Switzerland by Anna Morris 82; Germany by Eva Kabessau, 81; Prussia by Abraham Watters 84, and Prince Edward Island by Elizabeth Marfield 80.

The Old Folks war- all put safely aboard the train at 5:15 p. m., and the train started homeward. The same attention was paid on the return trip as was tendered on the outgoing one. Mr. Savage exercised particular care that the stations were called out distinctly so that none should be brought past their proper destination.

The Rio Grand depot was reached at 7:45, the day having passed without a single mishap or accident of any kind.

South Burma and the East Indies intend to have a worthy exhibit at the Exposition.

A collective exhibit at the World's Fair by the various college fraternities in the United States is well assured.

THE "LIBERAL" POLICE FORCE.

The Elsie St. Omer, Rose Miller and Goldie Shears case took a decidedly sensational turn before Justice Keeler June 27th after the NEWS went to press. It was full of startling statements which are of so serious a nature as to require the most complete investigation possible. Following is the testimony:

JOE O'BRIEN,

the alleged city detective, was the first witness. He testified that he had arrested the defendant. He said further: "I know that her place of residence is reputed to be a house of prostitution; I have seen men enter and come from the house during the day and at night. I visited the place in person on the night that Miss Elsie moved there; I know that beer was sold there; for I bought it, paid for it and drank it. (Laughter.) Harry Duke (city treasurer) told me that the house was disorderly, and he believed resorted to for purposes of lewdness. A young man named McErlain told me that Miss Elsie was 'running a house on the quiet.' He is a roomer there and ought to know."

Attorney Straup here held a consultation with his client and then asked that a subpoena be issued for McErlain. The request was granted and a gaudily attired self-confessed sporting character, took the stand and in response to questions nervously said: "I do not know that the general reputation of the house is bad. I know that Miss Elsie kept furnished rooms and that a placard to that effect was tacked on to the front of the house."

MARION FIELDS,

Attorney Coad—Is not that a usual ruse for women of the defendant's stripe?

Witness—I cannot say, sir.
"How long did you remain there?"
"Only one week."
"What did you do?"
"I followed dressmaking."
"At the expiration of that week where did you go?"
"I entered a house."

"Did you pay for your board and lodging at Miss Elsie's?"

"A portion of it. Miss Elsie holds my trunk and some of my wearing apparel for the remainder."

SERGEANT GEORGE A. SHEETS

said: I have known the defendant for about one year. She is a keeper of a house of prostitution. I have kept close watch of her place for the most of sixty days last past.

Attorney Coad—State why the defendant was not arrested when the last regular raid was made?

Witness—Because the officer who had charge of that branch of the business refused to swear to the complaint.
"Who was that officer?"

"Huge L. Glenn."
"Why did he refuse?"

"Because he said there was no evidence that she was breaking the law."

"Have you seen hacks drive up to the defendant's house?"

"I have, both day and night."

Cross-examined by Mr. Straup—"How do you know that the defendant's house is of the character set forth in the complaint?"

"Because I have watched it for sixty days until one and two o'clock in the morning."

"And it has taken you all that time to catch these women?"

"Well, no—that is not exactly"—
"Stand aside, call the next witness."

Officer THOMAS MATTHEWS then took the stand and testified that he had heard Mr. Duke complain about the character of the defendant's house. He lived in that vicinity and could corroborate Mr. Duke's statement. He, too, had watched the place and saw men going in and out. From his own knowledge he could not say what they went there for but believed that it was for immoral purposes.

POLICEMAN MIKE SULLIVAN,

a good natured, six feet, 215 pound officer, who one time posed before the public for honors as a pugilist but who gave up the "manly art" to accept a position on the police force took the stand and said: "I have visited Miss Elsie's establishment on Eighth South street. I believe it is a house of ill-fame."

Attorney Coad—What did you go there for?

"A trunk."
"Whose trunk?"

"Miss Marion Field's."

Attorney Straup—Who is Miss Marion Fields?

"She is the lady who testified a few minutes ago."

"At whose instance did you go?"

"I went at the request of Miss Field's."

"And why did she select you for that purpose?"

"She said that Miss Elsie was holding her trunk and some things for her board and she wanted me to see about it and so I went there."

SANITARY INSPECTOR SHOWELL, testified that the reputation of the house was bad. He knew no more than that.

Attorney Straup—Your business, Mr. Showell, is to look after the health of the city is it not?

"Yes sir; but not in such cases as this" replied the witness with emphasis as he left the stand. The audience roared with laughter at the witness' response and he left the court room and sought the fresh air as the bailiff threatened to clear the auditorium unless silence was maintained.

OFFICER WILSON

said he assisted in placing the defendant Rose Miller and Goldie Shears under arrest. It was about 11 o'clock on the night of the 17th inst. Saw several men jump out at the window and over the fence.

Attorney Straup why didn't you arrest them?

Witness—Had no warrants for them.

Attorney Straup—Don't you know Mr. Wilson that there are wire screens over all the windows and that jumping through them would be impossible?

Witness—There may be now, but there was not at that time.

Attorney Straup—Again I say why did not you arrest these men of whom you speak?

Witness—That would have been impossible, because they moved with a rapidity that could not easily be equalled.

SERGEANT SHEETS

was recalled and further testified—I saw four men and one woman endeavor to escape. The former had no intention of going through the gate but jumped clear over the fence, and scattered in all directions. I did not see the men come out of the building, but saw them on the porch and as they ran through the yard and leaped the fence.

"Why didn't you, as an officer in search of violators of the law, make an attempt to catch the men as well as the women? If the place is a house of prostitution the men were certainly equally guilty, were they not?"

"It required all our time to take care of the females."

"So," said Mr. Straup, "It required the strength and diplomacy of three big policemen to arrest three little women, did it?"

At this there was another burst of merriment, and again the bailiff was called upon to restore order. The last question rather confused the witness, and Attorney Straup did not press him further but inquired: "Is it not a matter of fact that these men you saw were merely roomers?"

"Well, they acted rather strangely for regular inmates of the house."

Witness was again asked if he did not think it was his duty to have placed these men under arrest. He replied in the affirmative, but said that it would have taken at least eight policemen to have done the work. He finally reduced the number to six and Straup once more muttered audibly: "Three policemen—three women," and the witness was dismissed. This ended the testimony for the prosecution and opened by calling M. W. Palmer. He testified I live at No. 125 East Fourth South, next door to where the defendant resides. I run a livery stable; know Miss St. Omer; she occasionally hires a livery rig from me; her house has a very good reputation; as far as morals and chastity are concerned; have heard no one say aught against it.

THE DEFENSE

MRS. M. W. PALMER

wife of the preceding witness was called and gave similar evidence. She had frequently been in the house during the time covered in the complaint, but had never seen anything that would excite her suspicion as to the place being a bad one. It certainly was very quiet all hours of the day and night.

Attorney Coad asked if it was not possible to conduct a house of prostitution in a quiet manner.

To this the witness indignantly replied that she did not know as she had made no such experiment.

GEORGE HENRY

testified that he lived at 375 south, State street, within two hundred feet of Miss St. Omer's residence. He was a grocery and provision dealer and had often delivered goods there. He understood that the defendant was keeping roomers. The defendant had owed him $200 for goods and on inquiring as to her reliability he was informed that she once maintained a sporting house, but that she had reformed and was going to get married; said sporting house was not the one in question. Mr. Brixen had told him that Miss St. Omer was "good pay," so good in fact that he proposed to liquidate his bill for him if necessary. He had taken plge' feet and other canned goods at night. J. W. Norrell testified similarly.

MORRIS LIVINGSTON, a corpulent German saloon keeper, who runs a liquor store near the Anderson house, said so far as he knew the persons and house in question were neither good nor bad. The defendants some times bought beer of him, but very little.

DEPUTY U. S. MARSHALL GLENN. I live half a block east of defendant on the same street. Have heard nothing of the defendant keeping a fast house since some time before I left the police force until this arrest was made. Have heard the defendant repeatedly say that abh was leading a private life.

Attorney Coad—Have you ever visited the place?
Witness—I have. I was recently called upon to go there and arrest Policeman Albright but refused to take him into custody as I had no warrant.

Attorney Coad—Any other occasion?
Witness—A few evenings ago.

Attorney Coad—With certain councilmen?

Witness—Yes, sir; and newspapermen.

Attorney Coad—State who they were and for what purpose they were there.

The witness here enumerated the aldermen and newspaper representatives, and added that they were out for the purpose of investigating the doings of the police department.

Attorney Coad—Had you not been instructed to arrest these women before leaving the police force?

Witness—I had never been instructed but had heard something said about it. I stated to my superior and associate officers at that time that I could not get any evidence against the defendants, but if they would swear to the complaints I would arrest them, but this they would not do.

Attorney Coad—Have you ever talked with anyone about this place—that is, any of the city officers, I mean?

Witness—I have spoken to Mr. Duke about it.

Attorney Coad—When were you there last?

Witness—A few minutes ago.

Attorney Coad—What did you go there for?

Witness—To subpoena a witness.

Attorney Coad—When were you there before?

Witness—Last night.

Attorney Coad—At what time?

Witness—Shortly after dark.

Attorney Coad—Who went with you, if anybody?

Witness—Mr. Straup.

Attorney Coad—Oh! When were you there before?

Witness—Three or four nights ago.

Attorney Coad—With whom?

Witness—Mr. Elchnor, former counsel for the defendants, who went there on professional business.

Attorney Coad—You seem to be watching the progress of this prosecution with a good deal of interest—

Witness—Not the prosecution, but the persecution.

Attorney Coad—You have made it your special business to injure the police officers, have you not?

To this question the witness made no definite reply and Mr. Coad insisted upon an answer. Mr. Glenn said he did not fully understand the question and asked that it be repeated, when Attorney Coad again asked, "Is it not true that you have made it your special business to injure the officers of the force?"

Witness—It is true that I have made it my special business to expose their unlawful deeds.

Attorney Coad—Did not you make the remark in the Baby saloon some time ago that you would have the heads of Janney and some of his men?

Witness—I would like to know what that has got to do with this case?

Attorney Straup here took the floor and objected to the putting of such questions, saying that Mr. Janney did not figure in the case in any manner whatever.

Attorney Coad thought the question entirely proper, as it would tend to show the animus of the witness to the officers of the force. The court took the same view and decided that the witness might answer the question.

Witness—If I had made any such statement it would be criminal, and I am not here for the purpose of criminalizing myself, and cannot be compelled to answer the question.

J. SHERIFF,

stone cutter and foreman on the joint city and county building, testified that he was a roomer at Miss Anderson's. Had never heard anything against the reputation of the house until this case came up. If revelry or immoral practices were carried on there he would certainly know it.

DENNIS JOSEPH O'MAHONEY, a blacksmith in the vicinity, knew nothing of the house either good or bad.

JOSEPH M'ERLAIN

testified that he was also a roomer there and that the place was a respectable one. He denied having told O'Brien or anyone else that business was being done there on the quiet.

MISS GOLDIE SHEARS

testified I live with Miss Anderson; am employed by her as housekeeper, and for such work get $4 per week. The house is a respectable one in every way. I came here from Sioux Falls, Dakota.

Attorney Straup then drew the following story from the witness, which, if true, is simply horrible: "My mother died when I was 13 years of age; my father I had never seen, as he deserted my mother before I was born; immediately after my mother's death my troubles commenced; I fell in with strangers, and had ones, too; when I was 14 I was taken to Omaha by a procuress on the pretext that I was going to be brought up as her own child in her house, but she put me in a house of ill fame, and compelled me to remain there. When I found that I could not escape I remained there, caring little what became of me after that."

The witness here dashed the tears from her eyes and continued, I got acquainted with Miss Anderson in Dakota; she was kind to me and when the opportunity of making a livelihood in her house by leading a respectable life was offered to me I availed myself of it. I most emphatically deny that there was any men in the house the night we were arrested, outside of the regular lodgers. I had got as far as the gate in my way up town to change $5 when Sergeant Sheets grasped me by the arm and threw me backward and told me not to be so fresh. I had not been drinking and no living man or woman ever saw me do so as I do not drink liquor of any kind.

ELISE ANDERSON,

or St. Omer, testified that she once maintained a house of ill resort but that she had long since discontinued the business. Her house was now a thoroughly respectable one. She had reformed and was expecting her mother, sister and brother from the East to live with her. She maintained herself in the past by keeping a lodging-house. She also had money.

Attorney Coad—Has any man visited your present residence for immoral purposes?

Witness—No one but police officers, who sometimes came in squads of three and four.

Attorney Straup (sarcastically)—Oh, officers are fine gentlemen; they did not go for any such purpose. You must be mistaken.

Attorney Coad—Have carriages and hacks ever been driven up to your door during the night?

Witness—Yes; but only when sent by Policeman Albright after Miss Miller, who he wanted driven to his room.

Attorney Coad—Did she ever go?

Witness—Never.

Attorney Coad—Is it not true that Officer O'Brien bought and drank beer in your house?

Witness—He may have drunk it, but if he did, he brought it with him. [Laughter.]

Attorney Coad—Did not the councilmen who visited your place call for beer?

Witness—I believe one of them did, but I informed him that I had none in the house, which statement was true.

Attorney Coad—What was the object of their visit to your house?

Witness—They said they were out inspecting the doings of some of the policemen.

Attorney Coad—Did they question you about any of them?

Witness—Yes about Albright who became infatuated with Miss Miller and who was treated so badly by him that she has been obliged to ask for protection.

ROSE MILLER

was next called. She testified—I came to this city on the 3rd of July last; was then leading a respectable life but for want of means I entered No. 243 in March last. I soon after accidentally met a gentleman to whom I was engaged to be married ten years ago, but which contract we did not consummate on account of a misunderstanding. We "made up" again and he offered to take me from where I was and assist me to lead a better life. I readily accepted his proposition and soon became re-engaged to him and expect to be married to him soon after his arrival from San Francisco, three weeks hence. He gave me $150 on his departure and it is on that I am living at present. When I was at 243 Albright commenced paying his addresses to me but I did not, like the man and resented him. I took a room in the Brook's Arcade building opposite the Knutsford but he soon located me and I was obliged to leave there too as he soon located me and haunted me day and night, sometimes in full uniform but generally in citizens' clothes.

Attorney Coad—Have you been molested by anyone where you are now living?

Witness—By no one except police officers.

Attorney Coad—Do you know of any one jumping out of the window on the night of your arrest?

Witness (emphatically)—I know that no one jumped through the window. That statement is absolutely false and is manufactured evidence.

Attorney Coad—Have any of the other officers ever visited you?

Witness—Yes; Mike Sullivan was there one night and asked to be allowed to go to my room with me but I refused him.

Attorney Coad—Any one else there?

Witness—Yes; Max Lippman.

Attorney Coad—Did you ever go to Albright's room?

Witness—No; but he sent me $20.

Attorney Coad—Did any other officers ever make indecent proposals to you?

Witness—Yes; Joe O'Brien. He came to me out at the race park a few days ago and said: "Och honey, Miss Rosie, I would like to do something for you, but faith, I am officer of the law and—But he jabsers, I am struck on ye meself. Its shure I am, for ye are a nice girl, so ye are, and I like ye for my swatehart, so I would. (Laughter.) Oh, Miss Rosie, but ye are a lady and if I wasn't of the police force—Oh, but I'd like ye to be my love."

Joe O'Brien was present when the witness made this last statement and stand at her in blank amazement while his face displayed all the colors of the rainbow with varying shades and tints.

Attorney Coad—State whether any other officers ever called upon you for purposes before referred to?

Witness—Yes; Officer Tom Matthews called upon me frequently and said he wanted to be my lover. He wore his uniform on each occasion.

Attorney Coad—You are telling the truth?

Witness—I swear it. At 243 he went to sleep on a chair and fell off and we had a good laugh about it.

Attorney Coad—Was Matthews drunk?

Witness—No sir; he never drinks liquor of any kind. He was perfectly sober but stayed a long time and got sleepy.

It was now nearly six o'clock and the court suggested an adjournment until 10 a. m. today seeing he had partaken of nothing in the shape of edibles since 8 o'clock in the morning. The proposition was agreed to and the case set down for the hour named.

The Elsie St. Omer case was resumed before Justice Kesler this morning. The courtroom was filled as on yesterday. Following are

THIS MORNING'S PROCEEDINGS.

Rose Miller was recalled this morning. She said—Officer Matthews did not fall off a chair in my room, but in another part of the house; he wanted to go to my room with me. I told him that he did not mean it as he was an officer. He replied that he did mean it, and took off a gold ring and put it on my finger.

The remainder of the witness' story was entirely unfit for publication.

ELSIE ST. OMER

was also recalled and testified that on the occasion of Officer Sullivan's visit to her present residence, Goldie Shears went to the door in response to the bell call. She informed Mr. Sullivan and his friends that they could not enter. They replied that they had been invited, and so came in. Did not call the girls to come and entertain them. Don't remember just what Mr. Sullivan said, but he commenced joking with Miss Miller; said something about reprieving a trunk, and asked Miss Miller to go upstairs with him.

Attorney Coad—How long have you known McErlain?

Attorney Straup—I object.

Attorney Coad argued that the grounds for asking the questions were simply to show that Mr. McErlain was residing in her house and keeping company with her, and which would go a long way in establishing the credibility of the witness.

The court took the same view and Attorney Coad repeated the question?

Witness—About one year.

Attorney Coad—Did he not visit your place of business frequently during the time you maintained a house of ill-repute, and was he not criminally intimate with you?

Witness—No sir.

Attorney Coad—How long since he engaged a room at your present house?

Witness—About two weeks.

Attorney Coad—How did he come to go down there?

Witness—I do not know.

Attorney Coad—Is it not a fact that you have been keeping him at your place of residence and also his guard, free of charge, since his arrest?

Straup—I object. Objection sustained.

SERGEANT GEORGE A. SHEETS

was recalled and testified that he did not say that he would run the defendants out of town.

JOE O'BRIEN

was recalled and closely questioned by Mr. Straup.

Straup—Did you not offer to make a bet of a bottle of wine with me that these women would be convicted?

O'Brien—I don't remember it.

Straup—Did you not say that you would pack the jury in case of a jury trial?

O'Brien—I have no such recollection.

Straup—Do you not know that you made the assertions in the presence of Mr. Eichnor?

O'Brien—If I did I didn't mean it.

ROSE MILLER

was again recalled and testified that O'Brien and Sheets had taken her by the arm and that they threw her and Miss Elsie and Miss Goldie Shears behind the bars and placed them in a dark cell pending the time that their bonds were being arranged, when they knew the fixing of them would only take a few minutes. She did not abuse the officers when arrested. They made these statements in order to protect themselves.

ELSIE ST. OMER

was again recalled on cross-examination and denied that she had abused the officers on the night she and the others were taken into custody.

DANIEL SWANN,

clerk of the United States marshal's office, took the stand.

Attorney Coad—Do you know whether or not Hugh L. Glenn is a deputy United States marshal?

Witness—I do not think that he is. The marshal informed me about a week or ten days ago to withdraw his commission from the office of the clerk of the Supreme court of the Territory.

LOU TAYLOR,

a hack driver, was called.

Attorney Coad—Did Mr. Matthews go with you to collect a bill from Miss Miller?

Witness—He did.

Attorney Coad—Did she pay it?

Witness—She did.

Attorney Coad—Then what did she say?

Witness—She said she would get even with him. Rose did not owe the bill herself but she paid it.

Cross-examined—Knew nothing about any other visit of Matthews to the place in question. I did not understand that the remarks she made with reference to getting even applied to another man; do not think they did.

OFFICER MATTHEWS

said the only time he ever went to Miss Miller's room was when he went there to collect back fare for the preceding witness. She paid the bill between oaths and said that she would get even with me if it cost her her life, said that she had nothing to lose and I had. There was a man whose name I do not now remember in Miss Miller's room when I went there. Never visited 243 except when called upon to quiet a disturbance. Never proposed to be her lover.

Cross-examined—Miss Miller met me on the street about three weeks ago while I was in full uniform; said nothing about becoming her lover on any occasion. My previous record should be sufficient proof against any such accusation. Never gave her my ring at any time as a pledge that I would come back. I never offered to hire a room for her.

SERGEANT SHEETS

was called in rebuttal and said that the defendants were not abused by himself or associate officers on the night of their arrest. They made some objections to walking up street with the officers and were allowed to precede them at a considerable distance. At police headquarters Captain Donovan told me to put them in the best room in the city jail which I did.

Attorney Straup—Don't you know that it is customary to fix the bonds at a uniform rate—say at $50 for keepers and $25 for inmates?

Sergeant Sheets—I don't know much about it.

Attorney Straup—You don't?

Sergeant Sheets—No, I don't.

Attorney Straup—Don't you know as a matter of fact that the fixing of these bonds was an unusual proceeding?

Sergeant Sheets—There is nothing uniform about the matter at all. Sometimes we fix bonds at $10, $25, $50 and $75. In this instance the bonds were made high in order to force the accused into court. When the bonds were low they generally forfeited. The house of the defendant was situated near the Eighth Ward schoolhouse and frequent complaints had been made with reference to its character by citizens in that vicinity and that was one reason for fixing the bonds higher than ordinarily.

OFFICERS WILSON AND O'BRIEN

were again placed on the stand in rebuttal. Both denied that they had abused the officers in the slightest degree. The latter stated that when he read the warrant to Miss Miller, she asked who swore to the complaint, and I replied George A. Sheets, to which she responded that is the long-legged one of a b—that was with Albright when he threatened to cut me open.

CAPTAIN DONOVAN

was called and testified that he was the only man that took hold of Rose Miller at the city hall and he did that gently and informed the officers to treat them kindly and gave them the best room in the jail. Remember talking with H. L. Glenn when that gentleman was on the police force, regarding Miss Omer keeping a disorderly house. Mr. Glenn stated that he was satisfied Miss St. Omer was keeping a house of ill-fame, but that he had no evidence against her. Marshal Janney and Officer O'Brien were present.

The latter gentlemen were both called and corroborated Captain Donovan's statement. Marshal Janney said he heard Mr. Glenn say further that he would serve the papers providing that some one else would swear to them.

MAX LIPPMAN,

a Main street clothier, testified that he was present at Miss Elsie's house when Officer Sullivan went in search of Miss Field's trunk. He took no improper liberties with the inmates whatsoever.

This closed the taking of testimony and Mr. Straup commenced his argument and asked the court to disabuse its mind of all prejudices, if any it had and consider it as having come to it as a blank. The presumption that the defendant was at once a keeper of a house of ill-fame was no proof that she was engaged in the same business now. The fact that it had been admitted that the Miller and Shear women had once been inmates of a sporting house was not proof that they had abandoned their lives of shame and resolved to lead a better and more reserved life. There was no proof that the house of Miss Anderson had been used for indecent or immoral purposes. If the driving of hacks to the place at either day or night time made it a house of prostitution then the Knutevory and every other hotel in the city was a place of that character. No man nor woman has fallen so low but that the court and the strong arm of the law could and should, to a certain extent at least, offer them protection and encouragement in their resolutions to reform and cast of the lives of shame that they had been leading. He asked that the case be dismissed.

Attorney Coad closed for the defense. He said that the statement had been made that the defendants were endeavoring to lead a better life. If that were true he would never take any stand to discourage them in such a noble resolve. Virtue was too precious and womanhood too honorable. No honest man would cast a single pebble in their way or lay a single charge at their doors, but on the contrary would assist them to do better. The persons who reside in the neighborhood who testified for the defense had an object in knowing nothing about the character of this house. It was dollars and cents to them to remain ignorant and say nothing. If the defendant maintained a lodging-house or kept furnished rooms where were the roomers. Four men had escaped through the windows; confound lodgers did not act in that manner. The witness Glenn had taken a great deal of interest in the case. His every act, his every emotion, his general demeanor, both on and off the witness stand proved that. He had fought and fought hard to injure the character of members of the police force. A man that would steal another's purse or of property committed a deed which can be partially condoned, but when character is attacked and destroyed an irreparable wrong—a crime has been committed. That man who came on to the stand and with his befouling tongue abused his betters, had better open up the skeleton of his own dark acts while on the police force. He had less respect for such a blasphemous man than he had for the unfortunate prostitutes on trial.

As to Officer Matthews, Mr. Coad said no one could look into his frank face and inquire into his daily acts and honest heart and say that he had not been blackmail d. It was a question of veracity between him and Rose Miller. Whose word would the public accept? not that of the Miller woman.

Mr. Coad asked that the defendant be found guilty.

Attorney Straup then took the floor and said that he just wished to reply to the jumping through the window business. He said the windows were covered with screens and the great stalwart police officers knew it.

THE COURT'S DECISION.

The court said that the case was one of this kind which belonged to a class of crimes that could only be committed behind closed doors. It had taken a wider range than was necessary. The defense brought in witnesses who reside in the neighborhood. They did not say that the place was a bad one, but he believed without going into details that the defendant was guilty and so held.

Ten o'clock tomorrow morning was set down as the time for sentence to be pronounced on Miss Anderson.

The case against Goldie Shears was dismissed on motion of the prosecution. Mayor Baekin's dark lantern investigation which is now on in the City Hall is causing a lot of public talk and indignation. Newspaper representatives are expelled and every effort is being made to maintain the utmost secrecy regarding the matter. The investigation is entirely an irregular one and, his Honor admits, is being held for his individual benefit. The witnesses summoned to appear and give testimony before him have had the following notice served upon them.

Sir—I have to request that you will appear at the Council Chamber on Wednesday next, June 29th, at 2 o'clock p. m., and continue to attend from day to day, if necessary, for the purpose of giving testimony in the matter of the charges made against the chief and other city officers which is at present agitating the public.

It will be observed from the above that Chief of Police Janney and other municipal peace officers are occupying an unenviable position before the public. The other officials are Police Justice Keeler, Sergeant George A. Sheets and City Detective Eklund.

The charges are that these men were discovered in a notorious dive on Franklin Avenue about ten days ago, while in the midst of revelry with the inmates. The discovery was accidentally made by a number of the councilmen, to whose ears ugly rumors had come regarding the alleged unofficial conduct of Policeman Albright. On the night in question, after the adjournment of the City Council, several of the aldermen determined upon making a personal visit to the place where Albright's accusers were living and interrogate them as to their charges. When they arrived there they found two reporters—representatives of the local evening papers, who already had the stories reduced to writing. They were repeated in the presence of the so-called self-constituted committee, after which the party visited the place and found the officers named.

The testimony of the witnesses examined, so far as the outline of the affair is concerned, confirms this statement, but the details cannot be had for publication, at least not yet. When they are made public the disclosures will be of the most sensational character.

Unfortunately there seems to be a disposition to shield the guilty and prosecute the officials who discovered the ghastly skeleton of municipal irregularity in a dive of infamy on the most notorious thoroughfare in the city.

IN RELATION TO FISH.

By courtesy of the gentleman to whom it is addressed, we are enabled to publish the following letter:

U. S. COMMISSION OF FISH AND FISHERIES,

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 27, 1902.

A. M. Musser, Esq., Salt Lake City, Utah: Dear Mr. Musser.—I am greatly obliged to you for the photograph of the two-year old shad from Utah lake. The photograph, I presume, represents the actual size of the fish. I do not look for any large growth of shad under conditions where they cannot get to salt water, and shall be very much surprised if they mature and spawn in Utah lake, though this is possible. I am disposed to think that plants in Bear lake and Bear river will give better results; since the salt water there is not so densely saline as it is where Jordan river enters into Great Salt Lake, and the shad can descend into water of suitable density for them to remain in. The only question unsettled in my mind in regard to the success of the experiment is the presence at the end of Great Salt Lake, of marine life in sufficient abundance to furnish food for the shad. Very truly yours,

MARSHALL McDONALD,
Commissioner.

THE DESERET WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED BY
THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY.
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, $2.50
Per Volume, of Twenty-six Numbers, 1.50
IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. PENROSE, EDITOR.

Saturday, . . . July 2, 1892

CHOLERA SPREADING.

ALARMING reports are current in relation to the spread of Asiatic cholera, which has so often devastated the world. It is not long since reports stated that the dread disease was carrying off 400 victims daily in Cashmere, Persia. A few cases occurred in the Parisian suburbs a short time ago. Lately statements have come over the wires to the effect that this plague was spreading in Russia. The situation in that country has become so alarming that the authorities are suppressing dispatches which tell of the ravages of the malady.

Appearances indicate that it has commenced its usual course and is traveling westward. While the "grip" was prevalent in Europe and in this country, numbers of noted physicians asserted that that disease was a natural forerunner of cholera. If this be the case there should be, so far as possible, an all round cleaning up throughout the civilized world—a task of such herculean dimensions as to render it practically impossible.

If the grip is really a forerunner of the old-fashioned cholera plague, it certainly prepares the way for its havoc, as the influenza complaint so enfleaves the systems of its victims as to render them specially susceptible to the operations of any other prevailing epidemic.

MR. GLADSTONE FAILING.

HON. W. E. GLADSTONE was hit on the eye with a missile, in the City of Chester, while on the way to attend a political meeting in that town. He filled his appointment, however, and the incident caused him to be the recipient of an ovation.

The statesman made an egregious mistake in stating his belief that the injury inflicted upon him was the result of malice because the Conservative party were resorting to coercion.

If there had been any generally riotous demonstration toward Mr. Gladstone, this statement of his would have had an excuse behind it. The throwing of the missile was a mere personal affair. It was a piece of gingerbread thrown from the hand of a woman, the wife of a workman.

A few years ago Mr. Gladstone would have been ashamed to have made such an application of a circumstance of that character, as there can be no doubt that the conservative party, as such, would go to great lengths to protect the honorable gentleman from bodily injury.

He must be failing, or be never would have uttered an allegation so childish and absurd as the one referred to.

DEFEAT FOLLOWS THEM.

A SAD fatality seems to have attended the Tuscarora outfit throughout. They had announced that they would return in fighting trim, with umbrellas aloft, banners waving and drums beating. A special dispatch was forwarded to the "Liberal" organ stating that, owing to so many who went east with the crowd concluding to remain back awhile, the saddened remnants of the dejected tribe could not obtain a special train to bring them on to Salt Lake. Their car was tagged on to the regular. The baggage car, containing the Tuscarora paraphernalia, was sent on ahead, but was side-tracked away back on the road. Hence the discomfited Indians were not in a position to celebrate circus fashion, by a street parade, the tremendous defeat which they have suffered. The dispatch does not state that the people who did not come on with the remnants delayed their coming, in some instances, in order to avoid returning in the ranks of the demoralized tribe.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY POSITION.

JUDGE GRESHAM is now seriously talked of as the possible nominee by the People's Party convention at Omaha on the 4th of July next. He is a native of Indiana. It is said that his views are in accord with much that the People's Party favor. He is also popular with labor organizations and labor leaders. It is reported that these latter will defray Gresham's campaign expenses in the event of his acceptance of the nomination.

Judge Gresham is about sixty years of age. He has an excellent war record. He received a wound before Atlanta, the effects of which still cause him pain at times. He also distinguished himself as military commander of the Natchez district. After the war he served a term in Congress, and later was offered several places by Gen. Grant, but declined them. Among the offices he declined was that of Secretary of the Interior, but he subsequently accepted that of United States District Judge. He was a candidate for the U. S. Senate from Indiana in 1880, but was not successful. He acted for one year as Postmaster General under President Arthur, and then succeeded Secretary Folger in the Treasury Department towards the close of Arthur's administration, but only held the position a few months. He was appointed United States Circuit Judge in December, 1884, by President Arthur, which place he still holds.

Judge Gresham is one of the most popular members of the Federal Judiciary in the whole United States. He has rendered several decisions in which he emphatically denounced combines, trusts and monopolies. The Seventh Judicial Circuit embraces Indiana, Northern Illinois, Southern Illinois, Eastern Wisconsin and Western Wisconsin. Walter G. Gresham and W. A. Woods are the Circuit Judges, and Justice Harlan the Supreme Court member of the same Circuit.

In 1888 Judge Gresham was a candidate for nomination before the Chicago Republican Convention. His chances at first were considered good. Col. Ingersoll was his companion. A scene occurred at that occasion which, no doubt, disconcerted the Greshamites. Col. Ingersoll was actually compelled to cease speaking when it was learned that Gresham was his candidate.

If the Judge accepts the Omaha nomination it will certainly complicate matters in the ensuing election, though it is well known that he has not even the ghost of a chance for President.

JULY IN SALT LAKE FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS.

A REPORT of weather observations for July, extending over eighteen years, at Salt Lake, has been issued by Director Sellsbury. The mean temperature of the month for that period was 75.6 degrees. The warmest July was that of 1890, with an average of 78.8 degrees. The coldest July was that of 1891, with an average of 73.3 degrees. The highest temperature during any July for eighteen years was 102 degrees on July 30, 1889; the lowest for the month in the same period was 45 degrees on July 12th, 1880.

The average rainfall for July in eighteen years was 0.51 inches. The greatest monthly precipitation was 2.42 inches in the July of 1874; the least was a trace in July, 1890.

AN INTERESTING "FIND."

THE Government Fish Commissioner dispatched the steamer "Albatross" to Alaska, the object being to obtain data regarding pelagic sealing and such other information as would be of general interest. Special treasury agents William A. Nettleton and Barnes accompanied the expedition. A dispatch to the San Francisco Chronicle announces that on Copper Island the skeleton of a rhyngas or mammoth sea cow was obtained from the natives, $150 being the consideration. This animal has been extinct about 180 years. The skeleton obtained is nearly thirty feet long, and all parts of it are preserved and in splendid condition. It is the second specimen known to be in existence, the other being in possession of the Czar of Russia. The one obtained by the expedition has been sent to the Smithsonian Institute, at Washington, where it will be properly mounted and taken care of.

The last living specimen of the rhyngas was seen in 1780 by the Behring expedition; and two trips equipped and sent out by the government for the purpose of discovering and capturing others have resulted in getting nothing but a few broken and detached bones. The skeleton is an object of interest and study.

The Woman's Pharmaceutical Association of Illinois is planning to conduct a model pharmacy in the Illinois building at the World's Fair.

LOGIC AND LIBERALITY. (?)

THERE is no reason in strong intolerance and no reform in deep-rooted bigotry. Anti-"Mormon" intolerance and bigotry are more bitter than any other kind in the present age. One of the coarsest examples of this is the spirit and the letter of the Salt Lake Tribune. Its venom affects all its utterances touching the majority of the people of Utah. In small things, as in matters of moment, this is all the time apparent.

Take, for instance, the question of the nomination of Cleveland for the Presidency. A local paper has made the statement that more than half the voters in this Territory desired that Mr. Cleveland should be nominated, whereupon the "Liberal" organ exclaims: "What stronger reason could be given to establish that not quite yet is Utah prepared intellectually or any other way for Statehood?"

That is about the height usually reached in logic and in liberal thought by the writers on that paper. It is consistent with the course they have pursued in urging the disfranchisement of the "Mormons." Because the people here would not vote as their "Liberal" opponents desired they ought not to vote at all. That was the logic of their argument. That was the reason and the only reason for the disfranchisement of the women voters of Utah. Now the reasoning (?) extends to the question of choice for a presidential nominee. If the majority of the people of Utah favor a man who is objectionable to the "Liberal" organ, that is the strongest reason why they should not be permitted to vote for anybody. Very pleasant sort of political doctrine, is it not?

On this "Liberal" principle, none of those States already formed which favor the nomination of Grover Cleveland are fit for the powers and liberties of statehood. What is to be done with them? Take away their rights and privileges? Reduce them to the condition of conquered provinces? Relegate them to Territorial vassalage? This is perhaps hardly possible. But any Territory in which there is a majority of voters who want Cleveland for a presidential nominee, according to "Liberal" logic offers the strongest evidence of unfitness for statehood.

Reversing this proposition but using the same argument, a Democratic paper could show that any people who would choose the Republican nominee ought to be denied the right and privilege of citizens in a sovereign State. No Democratic paper would descend to such a level, and we do not believe any real Republican paper would so degrade itself. Only a "Liberal" sheet would set forth such balderdash and use such reasoning.

As to the facts in the case we do not care to contend. We do not know whether or not a majority of the voters of Utah wanted Grover Cleveland nominated. That does not matter in this controversy. But when a man or a paper gets down to the muddy and groveling position taken by the Tribune on this matter, it is proof, not of the unfitness of people for statehood, but of the bigotry, intolerance, malice and blind ignorance of that person or paper, its unfitness to touch on a public question, and its lack of claim to the serious consideration of sensible people.

FATE OF THE UTAH COMMISSION.

THE action taken by the Senate on Wednesday, in reference to the Utah Commission, has thrown a heavy damper upon the body and its friends. After voting by 28 to 24 to continue the Commission, it was thought that the Senate had disposed of the matter. But Senator Carey proposed, in view of the continuance of the Commissioners, that their salary be reduced from $5,000 to $3,000 each per annum. The reasons advanced for this reduction were so cogent that Senator Sherman, to the great surprise of all, moved to reduce the salary to $2,000 and the motion prevailed. So, if the Commission is not abolished it will not be so expensive as heretofore, and its members will not be quite so anxious to retain the sinecures to which they have clung affectionately. Another thing: If they should resign—a remote possibility, their places must be filled by bona fide residents of the Territory. It is not improbable, however, that when the bill as amended goes back to the House, the entire abolition of the Commission will be insisted on, in which case the Senate may yield after all, and the useless body be laid in its already gaping grave.

A PLEASANT HOME.

THE representative of the DESERET NEWS at Chicago was kindly and right royally entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Thatcher, Jr., who have an elegant home at River Forest, about ten miles westward from the centre of the city. Mrs. Thatcher is the orator who so eloquently addressed the Mutual Improvement Conference in this city a short time ago, and is one of the lady commissioners of the World's Fair. She has succeeded in obtaining the use and control of a number of school houses during the Fair, for the accommodation of lady teachers visiting the exposition. Mr. Thatcher has a project in view for the entertainment of ministers of various denominations, about which we may hear more later on.

The sentiments expressed by this lady and gentleman while visiting this Territory are embodied in their daily lives. There is a Christian home, and it formed a peaceful retreat from the noise and turmoil and heat of the city during the convention which will be ever gratefully remembered by this writer. They are Republicans in politics and Methodists in religion, but their souls are too large and warm to exclude regard and esteem for people of other parties and other faiths. They speak in the highest terms and without hesitation, in every appropriate place, of the virtues and progress of the people of Utah, and are doing much to allay prejudice and diffuse correct information concerning the "Mormons." On the evening of June 23rd they gathered all the Thatchers in the neighborhood, with the Logan Thatchers and their family connections who were visiting Chicago, and held a very pleasant reception, in which the writer participated and at which there was a free exchange of views on various subjects, some music, recitations and speeches, choice refreshments, with intellectual conversations, and a general good feeling. Father Solomon Thatcher, aged 86, was present, and though a little "hard of hearing" exhibited much vigor and heartiness, showing scarcely any sign of extreme old age. The family possesses much talent. They trace their ancestry back to a common derivation with the Utah Thatchers, and they possess that one touch of nature that makes the whole world kin.

When the day comes that people of differing opinions can meet on a common level of brotherhood and tolerance, where each soul is free to believe that which most impresses him with its truth, and where virtue, honor, kindness and peace are valued more than technical opinions, the world will approach that millennial joy of which seers have spoken and poets have sung, and such a place may be found in the lovely home of the Thatchers, at River Forest, Cook County, Illinois.

A SETTLEMENT IN DISTRESS.

BROTHER A. M. MUSSER has received a letter from Brother Henry Lunt, written at Colonia Pacheco, Chihuahua, Mexico, in which the writer depicts a somewhat unfavorable situation connected with that settlement, as will be seen by the following extract, which we are courteously enabled to make:

"We are all tolerably well in health, but it is very hard times with us, as we are having a great drought and great scarcity of breadstuffs and water. We can hardly get enough water on our townsite to drink, and that we have to carry a long distance. The forest fires are also very extensive in the mountains, and the smoke is dense. Our stock are very poor and the wild beasts, such as bears, mountain lions and wolves are devouring many calves and colts. The boys had to turn out last night and fight the fire in order to keep it from burning all the old grass in this immediate vicinity. A good feeling prevails among the Saints, our meetings are well attended and the Spirit of the Lord is abundantly manifest. Our trust is in the God of Israel that He will be mindful of us and provide for our wants."

MARQUIS DE MORES.

THE Marquis de Mores, who, a few days ago, killed Captain Mayer, a Hebrew officer of the French army, in a duel, is to be challenged by another Jewish officer—Captain Cremieux Fox. The cause of the second combat is the same as that which originated the recent one—the insult directed by the Marquis toward all Hebrew officers in the army, and, by implication, to that entire race. The bigoted and quarrelsome Frenchman is to be released provisionally from arrest, presumably to enable him to fight Captain Fox.

It looks as if the Marquis de Mores had undertaken to fight all the Jewish officers in the French army, as his gratuitous affront covered the whole of them. After he had killed Captain Mayer he is represented as having stated that he expected to be arrested, but "the work we have undertaken must go on. We are on the verge of a civil war." His expression was somewhat ambiguous as given in the dispatches. The reader was left to conjecture as to whether a civil war of a general character was meant, or merely a general extermination of the Jews, or a wiping out of Hebrew officers.

If the latter surmise be the correct one and he proposes carrying it on single-handed, there will be a general wish throughout the civilized world that he will make a discovery. That is, that he will be confronted with the fact that he has bitten off a larger lump than he has the capacity to masticate. Before he murders any more Hebrews, it will be sincerely hoped that he will meet one of that race who will administer to him an effectual dose of the medicine he gave the late Captain Mayer.

AN ERROR CORRECTED.

At the services in the Provo Tabernacle on Sunday, June 26th, one of the speakers, referring to the missionary work of the Elders of the Church, made the following remarks, as reported in the Enquirer of that city:

"The time is short when the people of the world will have an opportunity to hear the Gospel. President Woodruff had informed the speaker that a short time after the Salt Lake Temple is dedicated the missionaries would be called home. It becomes our duty to let our prayers ascend to our Eternal Father that the Gospel may be embraced by the honest, the pure and the true, throughout the world, before the time comes when there will be a famine for the word of God.

The dedication of the Salt Lake Temple will not only be a ceremony setting apart a fine building for the performance of ordinances of the Gospel, but it will commence a new epoch in the history of the Saints."

These remarks have occasioned some comments from the press, and the Enquirer published them with big headlines, announcing the "Time Near at Hand—When Missionaries Will no Longer be Sent to the World With the Gospel."

President Woodruff's attention having been called to the matter, he addressed the following communication to the Enquirer, which was published in that paper on June 29th:

Editor Daily Enquirer:

Dear sir:—In the report of the Provo Tabernacle services, as contained in your paper on the 27th inst., one of the speakers is reported as follows:

"The time is short when the people of the world will have an opportunity to hear the gospel. President Woodruff had informed the speaker that a short time after the Salt Lake Temple is dedicated the missionaries would be called home."

I beg leave to inform your readers that this language in no wise reflects my mind with regard to the preaching of the gospel to the inhabitants of the earth; but that, on the contrary, it is my belief that our labors will continue in this direction, and that, too, with greater energy and power, until the coming of the Son of Man.

Respectfully your Brother,
W. WOODRUFF.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 28, 1892.

This will be sufficient for the Latter-day Saints regarding President Woodruff's views on this subject. We have no idea that the speaker intentionally misrepresented the President, or that the Enquirer had any other motive than to report correctly what was said at the services. But there has evidently been a mistake and it is proper that the error should be corrected.

There have been rumors at different times that the foreign missions were to be closed up and the Elders withdrawn from abroad. Also that some new and startling occurrences would mark certain times and events in the history of the Church. These reports have usually turned out to be incorrect. The Church has continued the work of the ministry and the even tenor of its way, without any sudden revolutions or convulsions, or violent changes of policy or purpose. Remarks made by its leading authorities are sometimes misapprehended, and enthusiastic speakers occasionally go to extremes and attach added importance and significance to simple expressions of opinion. But great care should be taken lest, even without intention, the words of our leaders be misconstrued and the people thereby be misled.

That the gospel is to be preached "first to the Gentiles and then to the Jews," is plainly declared in the revelations to the Church. Also that "the times of the Gentiles" are about to be fulfilled, and that "the fulness of the Gentiles" will come in. But that the Elders are to continue their efforts to warn and save mankind until the coming of the Son of Man, is also in accordance with holy writ, and President Woodruff's statement on this is both positive and timely.

The Salt Lake Temple, we hope and expect, will be completed at the time appointed and be duly dedicated to the Lord. It will be one more monument to the faith and diligence of the Latter-day Saints. It will be another means of linking the living to the dead and of welding the great chain of the Priesthood which will eventually bind the powers of evil. It will bring increase of blessing and influence for good, and hasten the progress of the work of redemption. But we do not know that it will commence any "new epoch in the history of the Saints," nor bring about any sudden or remarkable change affecting either the Church or the world.

On these and kindred matters every man is entitled to his own opinions. But they should be given in that light, and the utmost care should be taken not to state them as the views of others or to add to their importance by stamping them with the seal of authority.

AN INDUSTRIAL REVOLT.

STRIKES and lockouts continue with phenomenal frequency. The latest dispute on a large scale in this country is that in which Andrew Carnegie, the great steel and iron manufacturer, and his workmen are principals. The iron workers and coal miners in the north of England are still in conflict and many of the people in that part of the world are in a starving condition in consequence. A gigantic strike of English shoemakers is threatened, likely to throw 90,000 workers out of employment.

We agree with B. O. Flower, editor of the Arena in his view of the industrial revolt which is such a conspicuous feature of our times. He holds that those who regard it as a transient protest are in error, and that the growing discontent will culminate in a great struggle between the classes involved. This is inevitable, because the revolt is the result of the spread of education and the growth among the masses of a knowledge of unjust conditions. The people are becoming familiar with social problems. The fact of this educational basis for the discontent is exhibited in their unity and the intelligent manner in which they present their grievances.

We also agree with Mr. Flower in his belief that after the battle is fought, the result will be a new condition in which justice, liberty and fraternity will mean much more than they have meant in any other stage of man's career. But before that point is reached the masses will, by the tremendous forces at their command, show that they are masters of the situation. They have not yet learned the extent of their power. When they do, as they inevitably will, nothing will be strong enough to resist them. So soon as they fully comprehend the fact the result will reach its culminating point, and after that will come the epoch of justice and fraternity.

UNIVERSITY INTERESTS.

DR. JAMES E. TALMAGE will leave on a trip to the East this evening. Before his return he will visit the cities of Chicago, Boston, New York, St. Louis and Washington. He will, during his absence, purchase additional scientific apparatus for the proposed University of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, for which it is the intention to expend at present in the neighborhood of $12,000.

As it will be some time before an extensive edifice commensurate with the character of the institution can be erected, it is intended to at once begin the building of a permanent structure for temporary occupancy. The site selected is on the grounds occupied by the Latter-day Saints' College, on First North street, this city. The new building will be adjacent to the one used by the College and will be utilized by the University almost exclusively for scientific work.

Captain Willard Young, who will be President of the University, will also have supervisory charge of the Latter-day Saints' College.

The foregoing information will be of much interest to all the Latter-day Saints who are concerned about the advancement of education in the community.

The Latter-day Saints' College will open at the beginning of the approaching academic year with brightening prospects.

LOST ITS GRIP.

THE "Liberal" organ is in a bad way. The Herald sums it up in this one editorial paragraph: "Poor old Tribune!" That would be sufficient but for the attempt of the Tribune to bolster up Boss Powers, to reflect on the gentlemen at Chicago who refused to be swayed by his anti-"Mormon" sophistry, and to attack the DESERET NEWS with its accustomed "Liberal" billing-gate. However, we do not care to pursue the matter further. There is nothing in all the Tribune's editorial page today that amounts to an argument or anything more than wild assertions and black-guard invective. It credits the NEWS with undoubted ability to misstate the truth. Well, even if that were correct, it is one of the distinctive differences between the NEWS and the Tribune. The latter continually misstates the truth and does it without ability. Its columns of misrepresentation are transparently thin and weak, and deceive only the most unsophisticated and uninformed. They are, further, so farfetched and inapplicable, in fact and illustration, that a reasoner is led to wonder at their inaptness and fatuity as much as at their lack of logic and their intellectual flaccidity. Well may its readers exclaim, "Poor old Tribune!"

THE DENVER "NEWS" BOLTS.

THE Denver News, in its issue of June 23, in a double headed editorial, repudiates the work of the Chicago convention. This paper has been solidly Democratic since its birth many, many years ago. Of course its defection to its party may not affect the result next November, as Colorado has been always a strong Republican State. But, taking it in connection with developments going on in adjoining States, it may lead to an effective result.

Our Denver contemporary bases its opposition to Cleveland entirely on the ground of his currency record. It says:

"In view of those facts, and moved by these convictions, the News unhesitatingly elects to sustain the people and the industries of the section to which it has been so long wedded, and refuses to betray those interests by supporting Grover Cleveland for the Presidency, thus becoming a party to a financial conspiracy the culmination of which would involve certain and ruinous disaster to all who are concerned in silver mining, and would as surely prove calamitous to the producing population of the United States."

"KNOCKED OUT BY A TRICK."

We are asked to admit that "the Tuscaroras were knocked out by a trick." Well, we will do so if that will please anybody. They were. But the "trick" which knocked them out was their own. It used to do very well, before the "changed conditions" in Utah, and before the information was imparted concerning Utah affairs that has penetrated both the Congress and the country. But the "trick" now works the other way. Anti-"Mormon" bugaboos are "played out." They do not work on public men except to the detriment of those who work them. The Tuscaroras tried this trick and it rebounded and "knocked them out." They did not make a point. They had no case. They had nothing but the old trick.

It is useless to bespatter the gentlemen who patiently gave them a hearing and listened to their rant. The fault is their own. By their own admission, five members of a Utah committee bolted from the decision of fourteen out of a committee of twenty. The five made an attempt to pose as the whole committee and control the party. They were rejected, and went to Chicago expecting by a trick to cheat the real committee and the real party out of recognition. All they had to effect this was the anti-"Mormon" trick and it worked, the wrong way—for them.

Let the howlers about "polygamy," "Church and State," and "Mormon insincerity and slavery," take notice! The old trick does not work now. And in future it will serve all who try it as it served the Tuscaroras; it will most effectually and emphatically "knock them out."

A NEW DEPARTURE IN RELIGION.

COLORADO leads in a new departure in religion. On the 8th inst. a meeting of ministers representing various denominations was held in Denver. The object of the meeting was to consider the best way of advancing Christian doctrines in the West. It was conceded that no one of the Christian sects is at present able to obtain a sufficiency of competent men, to act as ministers and teachers of religion. The outcome of the conference is the establishment of a Divinity School in Boulder, on the omnibus plan. It will prepare candidates for theological honors in the various sects known to the Christian world.

Provisions are made for the establishment of chairs in homiletics, systematic theology, ecclesiastical history, Biblical learning and exegesis, philosophy of religion, pastoral care, comparative religion, ethics of social reform, hermeneutics, and history of Christian doctrines. Though the school will be made a department of the Colorado University, yet it will receive no aid from the State. It will be wholly unsectarian, but provision is made that during the last year of study, if a student manifests a desire for a particular denomination, instruction will be given in that by a regularly ordained representative of the sect.

The faculty will be recruited from the various sects, and a degree of Bachelor of Divinity given after completing a three year course; and passing the prescribed examination. It will be open to both sexes, and ladies can graduate as bachelors and scholars of divinity the same as their male brethren.

ANTI-JEWISH FEELING IN FRANCE.

FRANCE has long been regarded as the most tolerant of European nations towards the Hebrew people. In fact, the first movement of modern times to accord to that race the right of human beings was inaugurated among the gallant Gauls shortly after the great revolution. Ever since, positions of honor and eminence have been open alike to Jew and Gentile in that country. But judging from recent developments a change is setting in, and the anti-Semitic feeling begins to assume as fierce an aspect as it does in Germany or Russia.

A duel was fought in Paris a few days ago which in its main features is suggestive of the worst barbarity of the dark ages. The contestants were Captain Mayer, a Hebrew officer of engineers, in the French army, and the Marquis de Mores, a person who has had a good deal of newspaper notoriety. It appears the Marquis stated in the presence of Mayer and of his companions that no Hebrew should be permitted to occupy the place of officer in the French army. Mayer, who was a brave, generous fellow and very sensitive to aspersions on his people, challenged Mores to a duel. The weapons were swords, and though Mayer was regarded as an expert fencer, yet he was run through the body at the second assault.

Mores indulged in a good deal of bathos when Mayer lay on the ground dying. He wanted to shake hands with his victim, and did so, the unfortunate man holding out his hand for the purpose. Mores is under arrest, but he entertains little fear of prosecution. He is reported to have said immediately after the duel: "I am aware the authorities will issue a warrant for my arrest. What does it matter? The magistrates will not prevent the prosecution of the work we have undertaken. Personal questions are nothing; principles are all in all. We are but at the beginning of a civil war."

The Jewish residents of Paris were terribly excited over the affair, and gave their unfortunate co-religionists a sort of public funeral on Sunday last. There are a number of Hebrews in the French army, and it is thought that the end has not yet come. One thing seems apparent, and that is public feeling in France is changing toward the Jews.

WOOL MARKET.

"BRADSTREETS" of June 25 has the following in relation to the wool trade:

The leading wool markets are quiet. Manufacturers seem to be waiting to see whether the higher prices being paid in the west will hold, and are endeavoring to prevent an advance by keeping out of the market. Meanwhile the new wool is coming forward and stocks are steadily increasing. The wools have, as a rule, been put up in a cleaner and better manner than for several years. . . . The London sales have shown a strong competition among buyers and a hardening tendency to values. But a comparatively small amount of wool suitable for this country has been offered. There is a good demand reported for Australian wool in New York, and while prices are no higher they are very firm. Ohio and Michigan wools are in light demand. New wools from these States are coming forward slowly and in small lots. A fair demand is reported for Texas wool. Territories are selling in a small way. Pulled wools are quiet. There has been little doing in carpet wools.

THE FRENCH ANARCHISTS.

THE anarchist Ravaehol, now under sentence of death in Paris for the murder of an old man named Brunel and two women, is a striking character even among the class to which he belongs.

It required several officers to make the arrest, and after it was made he got away and was retaken with considerable difficulty. With the circumstances immediately following—his comrades' revenge on the restaurant keeper where the arrest was made, the terrorizing of the court and thus securing a sentence for imprisonment instead of death on the first trial, and the second trial with the verdict of murder and sentence of death—our readers are already familiar. As to what may follow we can only wait and see. The Society in France and more especially in Paris is a very strong one numerically considered. It has ramifications and adjuncts which give the police an abundance of usually unrequited labor. The anarchists may not be able to effect a rescue or even place any serious impediments in the way of the due execution of the law's sentence, but they can "get even" in a stylish and peculiarly anarchistic, as was evinced in the case of the unfortunate restaurateur spoken of, who lost first a leg and then his life. It is not what they may do before or at the execution that is to be so much dreaded, perhaps, as it is the means to which they may resort to make the government feel their power afterwards.

PROSPERITY IN KANSAS.

THE poverty stricken is likely to have a poor field in Kansas this year. Crops are excellent, employment for everybody is promised. Already farmers are advertising for help. A committee of Rush County farmers a few days ago sent a circular to the Secretary of the Topeka labor unions, part of which reads as follows:

"Wheat acreage, Rush County, 85,510 acres; wheat acreage, Ness County, 60,000 acres. The crop never looked better, and all who come can find work during harvest and all the fall at big wages. Harvest begins July 1. Come early. A job is certain. Come via Missouri Pacific Railroad to McCracken, Rush County, Kan., the center of the wheat belt."

Both the counties mentioned here are in Western Kansas, and in a district in which up to a few years ago agriculture was deemed impossible. In 1887 Ness County had only 4,000 acres of wheat, and Rush only 14,000. The impression prevailed in those times that corn flourished better in that region than any other crop, but it is now being demonstrated that as a wheat soil Western Kansas will soon excel Minnesota.

LET THE TRUTH COME OUT.

THERE is so much bad feeling over the scandals that have been developed in the police department, and there is such an evident desire to cover up the iniquity in certain spots and to cast mud and mire in order to create an appearance of evil in others, that we believe it will be necessary, and certainly for the good of the community, to take the whole matter before a court of competent jurisdiction and have it thoroughly investigated. One thing may as well be understood now. Whitewash will not do in this instance no matter by whom applied. Nor will a cranky and vindictive official be permitted to muzzle the mouths of men who know the facts, nor to cover them with infamy in order to keep them quiet or arouse unjust sentiment against them. These inquiries now started must be pursued until the truth appears, no matter where it may strike nor who may be exposed. We think it is a matter for judicial investigation, and hope that those who know the facts will not suffer themselves to be overawed by threats of retaliation, nor be constrained to shield the guilty through fear of falsehood and malicious attacks upon themselves. The great public and the Federal courts will protect the innocent and we hope will punish the guilty.

UTAH MATTERS IN CONGRESS.

As we expected, the Senate committee has restored the provision in the appropriation bill for the salaries and expenses of the Utah Commission which was stricken out by the House of Representatives. This will no doubt be adopted by the Senate, and the bill will go then to a conference committee. But if the House stands by its action the Senate will have to recede. It is in the power of the lower body to prevent the appropriation of public money for any purpose it deems improper.

However, it is not improbable that the Utah Commission will have another but very short lease of life. The Senate committee has stricken out the transfer provision of the Industrial Home to the Deaf Mute Institute. It is not unlikely that a compromise will be effected, the House receding from its proposal to strike out the Utah Commission money, and the Senate receding from its action to strike out the Deaf Mute proposition. It will depend a good deal upon the men who will form the reference committee of the two houses. But the Commission is doomed and cannot last much longer.

The debate in the Senate over the report of the committee on Tuesday, brought out the fact that there is no necessity for further inimical legislation against Utah, nor for the long continuance of the repressive measures now in operation. Even those speakers who opposed the immediate abolition of the Commission, admitted that the time when Utah must be admitted as a State is nearer than many people suppose, and that there is nothing practically in the way but the educating of the public mind to the understanding of the true condition of affairs in this Territory.

Senator Faulkner made a forcible and courageous speech against the longer continuance of the Commission, and showed the wrong endured under its rule as well as the evils of the absolute veto power vested in the Governor. We present a full report of his speech in another column. Senator

Vest eloquently supported Senator Faulkner, and closed a powerful appeal for justice to Utah by declaring "It was an outrage to keep the Territory in swaddling clothes any longer."

Senators Allison and Platt argued against abolishing the Commission, yet admitted that the time was near when the whole question would be settled by statehood. However, they wanted the Commission to remain until then, and seemed to be under the impression that the settlement of the polygamy question was largely due to the work done by that useless and expensive body.

The Senate amendments would no doubt have passed on Tuesday but for the fact that there was no quorum present and so the matter had to be laid over for a day. The vote was 21 to 13. Senators Carey and Kyle voted with the Democrats against the Commission. Senators Shoup, Dubois, Stewart and Warren voted with their Republican confederates to retain the Commission and make the increased appropriation proposed.

Utah has had many practical lessons in patience, and the probability is that in this case they will receive one more. But there will be an end, in good time, to every wrong, and the end of the evil now in debate is very near at hand.

THE RECORD IS READY.

THE pretended newspaper friends of O. W. Powers will make no capital for him by throwing out a "dare," nor by repeating the whole-cloth falsehood that "the Mormons spent thousands of dollars to get Judge Powers dismissed from office," on a man who formed one of the sub-committee on credentials at Chicago. We are quite ready to ventilate all the facts in this case, if it is necessary. We are quite willing for the whole record to go into print, if it is wanted. We challenge the proof of "thousands of dollars of Mormon money" being paid to the gentleman indicated for the purpose stated, and we do not think the scribe who pretends to champion Mr. Powers' cause is any friend of his in springing this question. We have not assailed Judge Powers personally. We do not propose to do so. But there must not be too much "daring" in this matter, because we have nothing to conceal nor any fear in relation to the subject, individual or journalistic. Judge Powers made a cleaner fight than those who followed him as his backers in the contest at Chicago, and we have no desire to attack him. But in defense of the right we are not to be intimidated by his pretended champions, and we are prepared for the full issue if it becomes necessary. He had better call off his dogs. They scare no one and may hurt him.

DEATH OF NOAH L. SHURTLIFF.

A LETTER to President L. W. Shurtliff, of Weber State, from Cardston, N. W. T., Canada, under date of June 20th, brought the sad news of the untimely death at that place of his brother, Noah L. Shurtliff. The fatality was caused by the caving in upon him of the walls of a well, on the night prior to the date of the letter." He had descended into the well to take a squirrel out of it, when the cave occurred. It appears from the account given of the accident that the deceased must have been stunned by the falling stones from the sides of the excavation, pressed down into the water and drowned. When the body was extricated it was discovered that no bones were broken, but life was completely extinct.

The accident caused great sorrow among the people of the settlement, where he was greatly esteemed, being a self-sacrificing man, devoted to every good cause within his sphere.

The news of the event is a terrible blow to his large family, by whom he was devotedly loved, and the people of Weber Stake, in which he resided for many years, as well as numerous friends throughout the Territory, will deeply sympathize with them in their bereavement.

Elder Noah L. Shurtliff was born November 25th, 1846, at Garden Grove, Iowa, and had been in the Church all most during his whole life. He came to Utah in 1851, and was one of the oldest and most prominent settlers of Harrisville, Weber county. In that ward he occupied, for many years, the position of Counselor to Bishop P. G. Taylor, and was also a conspicuous worker in the Sabbath school cause, that of Mutual Improvement, and every organization whose object was the education and advancement of the people. He was a noble, honest man, and as such was one of the most highly esteemed citizens of that party of the Territory.

It was not practicable to have the remains brought to Harrisville for interment at present, but it is more than probable that they will, in course of time, be exhumed, conveyed to and laid away near his old home some time in the future.

The News extends sympathy to the family of the respected deceased and takes pleasure in testifying to his worth.

BETTER BEAR DEFEAT IN SILENCE.

THE "Liberal" organ is endeavoring to pit O. W. Powers against Calvin Brice on a question of veracity. That may do very well as a little needed encouragement to the battered chief of the Tuscororas, but to the public, at home and abroad, it is only an exhibition of impudence on the part of the organ aforesaid.

Powers is apparently ready to do anything and say anything to account for his total defeat at Chicago, other than the plain and simple reason for it. The idea of comparing the two men on a question of veracity is bold and audacious, but it is at the same time ludicrous and on the verge of lunacy. With the record of the Michigan "Sagamore" both before and after his advent to this Territory, and that of the celebrated Chairman of the Democratic national committee, any statement made by the former in reference to the probity of the latter will have not the force of a summer zephyr against a solid stone wall.

The truth is, that the case against the Tuscororas was so plain that it had not the ghost of a chance as soon as it could be considered. It stood self-condemned by its own showing, before men accustomed to look for facts through the dust of sophistry, and the pamphlet circulated for the purpose of deceiving the convention as to the claims of the Tuscorora delegates, contained the very proofs of their endeavor to gain what they had not the slightest right to.

Powers had better say nothing. In his case at present silence is golden. And when he and his Republican organ tries to call Calvin Brice "a liar," because that gentleman did not suffer himself to be blinded by Tuscorora itself, nor tell the would-be delegate to his face that there was no earthly chance for him to win, Powers helps his lost cause not a iota but only provokes contempt where otherwise there would be commiseration.

A gentleman on the California train, who was asked to read the statement of the case prepared by the straight Democrats, replied that he didn't want to, he had read the other side and that was enough. When importuned to examine both sides he answered: "I have read the Tuscororas' pamphlet and it shows they have no case; there is no need for one to read anything further, they give themselves away." That is the fact. And all attempts to charge that the committee, or any of its members, that decided the controversy were influenced by anything else than the plain and patent situation as presented from both sides, are as futile as they are false and as senseless as they are scandalous.

Powers told some of the successful party after the contest, "Boye, I made a big fight and I lost. I'm done. I shall go home and practice law and quit this sort of thing." He had better keep his promise instead of impugning the word of a man whose reputation will not suffer by comparison with his own. Defeat was galling, no doubt, but there are some things that may be worse than defeat.

SAM SMALL'S NAME.

THE Prohibition party must be very short of vice "presidential timber." This remark is induced by the fact that the name of "Sam Small," of Georgia, was mentioned in the Prohibitionist convention in connection with the candidacy of the party for the vice-presidency of the United States. Such a selection would be unfortunate for the party, because Sam Small has a record. It is such a one as would not be useful to him in a political campaign. Some of his co-religionists who do not love him might undertake to rake up the ash-pile of scandal, connected with Mr. Small's presidency of the proposed Methodist University at Oiden, and the criminalations and recriminations indulged in between himself and Rev. J. Wesley Hill, the fiery fanatic of the Junction city.

"TESTIMONY OF THE FACT."

THE organ of the "Liberal" Democratic announces this morning that it is now dead, having been assassinated by the state of its friends. It says piteously: "It seems Judge Henderson bore his testimony in Chicago to the fact that the Tribune was not a truthful journal." It then exclaims, in the language used by Cæsar when he uttered his dying groan, Et tu Brute!

It is pitiful that our cotemporary should have to use the last words of the Great Roman—"Thou also Brutus!"—at receiving such a well merited stab at the hands of Judge Henderson, seeing that the cut simply consisted of testifying to the fact of the Tribune's tendency towards glibness in dispensing the truth and corresponding prodigality in the use of its opposite.

Seeing that our cotemporary has uttered its expiring groan, the "most unkind cut of all" having been delivered by one rated among its former friends, the rabble will want to know when Mark Antony Powers will deliver the funeral oration over the body of the journalistic Cæsar and display the gaping wounds to the vulgar multitude.

ANOTHER FOREIGN LABOR QUESTION

PREDICTIONS that were made at the time of the passage of the latest anti-Chinese legislation are now being verified. Great gangs of Japs are being brought to this country and distributed on railroad sections, and in lumber camps and yards on the Pacific Coast. They are retaining the places of white laborers as well as those of Chiuamen. These importations are bound to raise a tremendous outcry and protest from the ranks of labor, and the government of the United States will soon have another hard nut to crack in the shape of a Japanese question. The country will be confronted with a demand for an exclusion act applicable to natives of Japan. If such a measure is to be adopted at any time, the longer the subject lingers the more difficult will be its solution, and the stronger the feeling of antipathy created among the yellow races against this country, when the step shall be taken.

WHAT SACRED BUILDINGS EXPRESS

NOT long since Bishop Potter, the well known Roman Catholic dignitary, advocated the erection of a set of great American cathedrals, because great cathedrals were outcomes and embodiments of great faith and reverence and noble aspirations, which are what this age needs most. The Traveler's Record, in alluding to the subject, very correctly contends that this would be "putting the cart before the horse." If, as Bishop Potter states, great cathedrals are outgrowths of faith, noble aspirations and reverence, these conditions are not caused by those immense and grand structures. The faith and reverence must be created first; otherwise such edifices express nothing beyond architectural skill. The Record remarks: "Embodiments of strong belief in an age of weak belief are only paradoxes and shams, and will not in the least help to bring back relief. Faith made cathedrals, but cathedrals cannot make faith. What is the sense of boasting in stone of a conviction you have not, and making sacri-nces to rear monumental falsehoods? It is well to greatly embody a great idea, but you want to get the great idea first."

As an illustration of the correctness of this view—but for the faith, reverence and noble aspirations of those who erected them, the magnificent temples of the Latter-day Saints would be comparatively meaningless. To the people who produced them they have a beauty, and are the expression of ideas and truths that are not comprehended by any other class. Without the faith, hope and reverence which inspired the builders the edifices would be lifeless. As it is they are objects of intense active interest, because they are embodiments of elevated truths, thoughts and aspirations, while their uses are, to those who erected them, of the most sacred character.

NOT AN HONORABLE TRANSACTION

THE recall of Captain Borup, an attaché of the American embassy at Paris, sheds a glimmer of light upon the intricacies of international diplomacy. He was charged by the French authorities with having purchased from a French government clerk copies of documents descriptive of certain defenses of France and selling them to Germany and Italy.

The evidence must have been very strong against the American officer, otherwise our government would probably not have been so precipitate in recalling him. Washington authorities are represented as stating that they do not believe he is guilty of the charge preferred against him, and that the action in the case was taken simply "in the interest of harmony."

Of course it is diplomatic to state that Captain Borup was notified to return home simply to please the French government, but to a man on top of the Eiffel tower and looking down it would seem as if the charge was not entirely groundless. Beliefs or professed beliefs do not amount to much, which are stubborn and "hard to ding."

If the Captain did give the French defenses away to the German and Italian governments he ought to have something added to his recall, in the way of showing the American disapproval of that species of underhand international traffic.

THE CHOOSING OF PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

A DISPATCH from Lansing, Michigan, states that the Miner election law declared constitutional on the 17th ult. by the State Supreme Court will be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States for final adjudication. Five judges constitute the Michigan Supreme Court, three of whom are Republicans, the two others being Democrats. Inasmuch as the issue of constitutionality was raised by leaders of the Republican party, it seems that the Michigan tribunal did not favor party in its decision. Michigan has been overwhelmingly Republican ever since 1880, until 1890, when the Democrats took all the State offices and both branches of the legislature.

One of the first measures passed by the Democratic legislature and assented to by Governor Winans was what is now known as the Miner election law, which relates entirely to presidential electors. For thirty years Michigan had chosen her electors by the usual method now prevailing in all the States, that is by vote of the citizens of the State at large. The Miner law provided for the election of district presidential electors by congressional districts, instead of by the State at large. Michigan under the new re-apportionment has twelve representatives in the House at Washington and two senators. She is, according to the Constitution of the United States, entitled to fourteen presidential electors, chosen in whatever way her State legislature may decide. The Miner law provides for the election of twelve of these by congressional districts, and divides the State into two districts for the senatorial electors.

The State Republican Committee took up the law and resolved to test its constitutionality in the courts. About half a dozen exceptions were taken, but the main one rests on the words of the second section of the fourteenth amendment, which reads: "When the right to vote at any election for the choice of Electors for President and Vice-President of the United States is denied, etc." It is contended that by choice of electors is meant the whole body of State electors, and that every citizen must vote for the whole college, and not for one individual. The State Supreme Court decided that the law was constitutional, and furthermore it held that the power of the legislature in providing for any method of selection was beyond controversy.

History seems to justify the decision of the court. At the first Presidential election in 1789 eleven States participated. Five different ways of choosing electors were adopted. Pennsylvania and Virginia elected by popular vote of the citizens of the State at large—the same method which now prevails. Maryland elected by popular vote but by Congressional districts, the same as the Miner law now provides for. In Connecticut, New Jersey, Delaware, South Carolina, and Georgia the legislatures chose the Presidential electors. In New Hampshire the citizens at large nominated the electors, but the legislature rejected or confirmed. The State was near losing its electoral vote, a deadlock sprang up between both houses in regard to the confirmation, broken only a few minutes before 12 midnight of January 7th, 1789. New York adopted the same plan, and a like deadlock occurred in the legislature which could not be removed; hence the Empire State was not represented in the college which elected George Washington first President of the United States. Massachusetts was divided into Congressional districts. The citizens of each district selected two persons. The names of all so chosen went before the legislature, which selected one for each district and two for the State at large.

Subsequent elections were carried out in similar ways, but by 1860 all the States in the Union except South Carolina had adopted the old Pennsylvania and Virginia plan. After reconstruction, South Carolina adopted the prevailing system, which became the universal method until the Michigan Miner law was enacted in 1890.

GOLD EXPORTS.

DURING the week ending June 25th, 1892, $5,250,000 in gold was shipped to Europe. Nearly $10,000,000 in gold was shipped during the two preceding weeks, making in all $15,000,000. The draw continues during the current week, and financial circles in New York begin to show signs of uneasiness. Of course various causes are assigned for this movement, and in the speculations and theories promulgated is involved the whole currency question.

Nearly all the gold which has left this country during the past three weeks has gone to Germany. It is supposed the Bank of Germany is paying a premium on specie. Austria, which has been for some time a silver standard country, has recently adopted the gold standard. She requires about $100,000,000 in gold to inaugurate her new financial policy. She has already acquired about half of this sum, and it is thought that by means of German agents she is thus obtaining the remainder.

The mechanical exports for eleven months, ending June 1st, were $210,000,000 larger than imports for the same period, yet gold has been leaving this country since January last. This is the question which puzzles the average financier; with such an enormous balance of trade in favor of the United States, why does her gold leave the country?

In 1886 the United States treasury held $200,000,000 in gold, against $490,000,000 in the banks of England, France and Germany. At the present time the United States treasury has only $114,000,000 in gold, against $627,000,000 in the three banks above mentioned. This is another puzzle.

It is possible that the thousands of wealthy Americans who visit Europe annually, and distribute their gold in the shoddy pleasures and enervating festivities of European capitals, may not have something to do in the matter. Americans have been making themselves quite conspicuous abroad of late. The story of Mr. Bacon in France and of Mr. Coleman Drayton in England, and the Baroness de Steuers in Germany, may give a clue to our gold exports.

ADLAI "THE JUST."

THE Christal name of the Democratic candidate for Vice-President seems to be somewhat of a puzzle to a great many. It is not a new one, and is strictly Biblical. In Chronicles, Book 1, chap. 27, verse 29 we read: "And over the herds that fed in Sharon was Shital the Sharonite, and over the herds that were in the valleys were Shaphat, the son of Adlai."

The full name of the man now of national celebrity is Adlai Ewing Stephenson. Adlai means "the just," and Democrats look upon it as ominous of success next November.

THE UTAH COMMISSION.

In the United States Senate on Tuesday the committee on appropriations having reported against the abolition of the Utah Commission, a debate ensued in which several senators took part, and the following remarks were made by Senator Faulkner, and telegraphed to the Salt Lake Herald:

"Mr. President:—Yesterday I asked the chairman of the committee on appropriations to give the reasons to the Senate for modifying or changing the provision of the bill, or the law, as it formerly existed.

IN REFERENCE TO THE UTAH COMMISSION.

So far as I have been able to understand the object and scope and purpose of the original creation of the commission, I could see no purpose or benefit that could result either to the country or to the Territory of Utah in preserving and continuing the commission in office any longer. It certainly was not the purpose or intention of Congress when in 1882 they passed the law, that ten years after its passage the Utah Commission should still be in existence. They found at the time this matter was before Congress the Territory was in the hands of polygamists, absolutely and entirely, and they determined after that period to fit their stringent laws in reference to the offense. In order to carry out those laws they of every description, and they entered into an agreement to supply the vacancy in all the territorial inferior offices which were absolutely held by that law, by creating a commission of five gentlemen from other states or territories within the territory of Utah to be appointed by the president.

VACATED ALL TERRITORIAL OFFICES

"But that law further went on and contemplated that at the succeeding election that was to be held under an entirely new election law, every man who exercised the right of the elective franchise was to take an oath that he was not a polygamist, and any man who was running for an office was compelled to take the same oath. Then it was expected the legislature was given the right to pass such laws as every other territorial legislature had the right to pass in order to fill all the offices made vacant by the Edmunds law, and which were subsequently filled by appointment under the commission.

"After all that had been carried out in accordance with the views of Congress, we find that when the legislature met under these circumstances in 1884, they passed a law anticipated by Congress to carry out the provisions of the latter clause of the ninth section of the Edmunds law. The Governor of Utah, which is not the case in any other territory under the government of the United States, has the ABSOLUTE VETO POWER.

He has not only the absolute veto power, but may by simply pocketing a bill absolutely deprive the legislative body of that Territory from the expression of any opinion on a legislative matter. In the organic act of Utah it requires the signature of the governor in order to give vitality to any act of the legislature, something that is unheard of in the government of this country or in any Territory under the government of the United States.

"Without reason, without explanation, as I am informed, the governor simply vetoed that bill in 1884. The legislature, trying to carry out the provisions of the act of Congress again in 1886, passed a law and again in 1890 they passed a law to carry out the provisions of it, and provide for the election of officers in that Territory as anticipated in the Edmunds law, and again in 1892 it did the same thing and the governor has simply put it in his pocket. What object and purpose he had in preserving this Territorial commission created in 1882 I am at a loss to know. He is not a member of it or in any way affected by the provisions of the law of the legislature passed in pursuance of the Edmunds law.

"Mr. President, I am opposed to any kind of a commission sent from the States to govern a Territory. If I had been in the Senate when this commission was created, under the act of 1882, I should have opposed it. There is not, so far as I know, an excuse for it. The last territorial legislature passed as stringent a law against polygamy as the Edmunds law itself. I suppose it will not be questioned here that POLYGAMY AS AN INSTITUTION IN UTAH IS DEAD.

I do not know any gentleman who could question it, because if he would go to the records of the attorney-general's office here in this city of Washington, he would find an application for amnesty for all these men who were convicted by judges appointed during the Cleveland administration, in which the authorities of the church announce the fact of the abolition of polygamy in the Territory of Utah, and appeal to the President for the clemency which the law permits him to exercise. If it were simply the church authorities that made that statement there might be some question in this body; but that statement is endorsed by the governor of the Territory, by the Utah commissioner, and it is endorsed by all four of the judges of the superior court of Utah. The President, for the reasons stated in that petition, is urged to grant the clemency asked for by the people of Utah. Those who perhaps have not thought about this question, should remember that the commission has but

ONE SOLITARY FUNCTION TO PERFORM in the Territory of Utah. It simply has to govern the election of the people of Utah. It is sent for that purpose annually when they have their general election. They appoint the registrars, they appoint the commissioners and supervisors of elections. The returns of election have to be made to this board of commissioners and they certify the result. That is the sole function and power that has been conferred upon them, except under the act of 1891, when they were given the authority to apportion the Territory into legislative districts, which they have complied with, and the last legislature was elected under the apportionment made by that commission under the act of 1891.

Now, sir, I think the time has come, ten years after the creation of this commission, when they by the very nature of the law it was to have passed expired in 1884, at the meeting of the next legislature for Congress to abolish it, when the question of polygamy as a question of offense against the laws of the territory and against the laws of the United States is virtually admitted to have been abandoned, when they have

NO OTHER FUNCTIONS IN THE WORLD except to control the elections of the people of Utah. I think the time has come when the people of Utah should have the right and privilege of selecting their own registrars and all the men who are to sit behind the ballot box, and to pass upon the qualifications and competency of the voter asking to deposit his ballot, especially when no man can be registered or vote in that territory who does not take the oath prescribed by law of the Congress of the United States, known as the Edmunds law.

There is another view I want to take of this matter. What justification can the appropriation committee make in reversing the action of the House of Representatives, increasing, as they admit in their report to the Senate that it does increase, the appropriations for the Utah Commission $50,500, in order to give five gentlemen $5,000 a year to go to Utah once a year or once in two years to appoint registrars, commissioners of election, and receive the returns from the polls and certify to them at the general election. That is all they have to do, that embraces all their functions, and yet for that this bill is to be increased, notwithstanding the condition of the treasury, to the amount of $50,500 as announced to us by the committee on appropriations. It has been rather expensive to this government in order to furnish salaries for five gentlemen to perform duties that every other civilized community performs for itself, instead of having to send off two or three thousand miles to bring a man there to designate the person who shall pass upon the certifications of the electors of that section of country."

Mr. Faulkner then quoted from the report made by Mr. Washington of the House Territories Committee, showing that during its ten years continuance the salaries of the commission amounted to $241,061; for contingent expenses, $106,184; and for compensation of officers of election $193,422.

"These facts," said Mr. Faulkner, "seem to justify me in my opposition to the views of the Committee on Appropriations. I will say frankly to the Senate that I do not like this provision of the other House exactly. I do not like the creation of this law which the House created. I do not think there ought to be any commissioner there, but I prefer it to this extent, that at least one of the gentlemen who is to be appointed is a gentleman who has lived in Utah a long time, a man in whom the people have confidence, and who, although a Republican in politics, as all the members of the commission created by the House are, is one that they feel they can trust their best interests to, and that is the Chief Justice of the Territory, Justice Zane.

"There is, of course, no question of politics in the commission as created by the other house, because every member of this board of commissioners, who are to appoint these registrars and supervisors and to receive the returns and certify to them, are members of the same party, but yet they live in the territory. If they did not live there, therefore, since their appointment to office, at least they have become domiciled in the territory. They know the people, they know their sentiments, and it is more agreeable to any class of people in any section of this country to have that class of officers placed over them than to bring officers from two to three thousand miles there to perform these inferior duties. I hope, therefore, the Senate will not adopt the suggestion of the committee on appropriations and strike out the provision as provided in the other House, or support the amendment reported by the committee on appropriations.

MARICOPA STAKE CONFERENCE.

The quarterly conference of this Stake was held at Mesa on the 19th and 20th inst., Presidents Robson, Rogers and Hakes presiding. There was a good attendance and an excellent spirit prevailed.

The strict observance of the Sabbath, union, and the necessity of laying a good foundation upon which to build our moral and spiritual structures were the subjects treated.

The usual business of the conference was attended to during Monday forenoon, when an adjournment was made to allow those going to Pine Top to make preparation and start during the afternoon. Presidents Robson and Rogers with a number of the brethren and their families will visit the conference at the latter place.

Weather is fine, crops excellent, and harvesting and threshing in full blast.
GEO. PARSLEY, Clerk.

MEBA, Maricopa Co., A. T., June 22, 1892.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION CONVENTION

CINCINNATI, June 30.—The platform was the cleaver which threatened at one time to split the party, but tonight the National Prohibition party is united and to all appearances harmonious. The platform which caused the trouble, is a brood, radical document. The absence of a free and unlimited coinage plank is noteworthy, however, for the convention refused to accept the plank of the majority of the resolutions committee, and struck it from the platform without replacing it with any declaration on the silver question.

The platform was completed at 2 o'clock. The majority report was taken up section by section, and no serious trouble occurred until the financial and silver planks were reached. An effort made to substitute the minority plank caused a parliamentary tangle, which was further complicated by an amendment offered by Mr. Martz of Illinois, having in view as a substitute both a declaration for the free coinage of the product of American gold and silver mines. Professor Dickie endeavored to cut off debate, but Ex-Governor St. John demanded that it continue. The chairman recognized Dickie, but on an appeal from the decision of the chair it was reversed by a vote of 482 to 453, and there was a warm discussion on the silver question, St. John and Hitt of California championing free coinage and Cascadon opposing it. Finally Martz's amendment was beaten and the majority report was defeated by a vote of 337 to 317.

Plank No. 3, relating to finance, was then adopted without division. A vote by States was then taken on the fourth plank, it being rejected by a vote of 335 to 296. After the free coinage men had been beaten an effort was made to strike out "unlimited" and adopt a resolution for "free coinage," but was ruled out of order.

The tariff fight followed but it took only a few moments to defeat the minority plank and adopt the majority.

The other planks went through without amendment, though meeting with opposition. Rev. George Woodley, a colored delegate from Nebraska, offered an addition to the "Mob Rule" as follows:

Believing in the purity of the ballot and the freedom of elections, we denounce the two old parties for purchasing votes, fraud and intimidation.

The amendment was defeated. The passage of the public school plank was greeted with vociferous cheering.

THE PLATFORM

as finally adopted is as follows.

The Prohibition party in National convention assembled, acknowledging Almighty God as the source of all true government and His law as the standard to which all human enactments must conform to secure the blessings of peace and prosperity, present the following declaration of principles:

First—The liquor traffic is a foe to civilization, an arch enemy to popular government, and a public nuisance. It is the citadel of the forces that corrupt politics, promote poverty and crime, degrade nations, home life, thwart the will of the people and deliver the country into the hands of rapacious class interest. All laws that under the guise of regulation legalize and protect this traffic, or make the government share in its ill gotten gains, are "vicious in principle and powerless as a remedy."

We declare anew for the suppression of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of alcoholic liquors as a beverage by Federal and State legislation, and the full powers of the government should be exerted to secure this end. Any party that fails to recognize the dominating nature of this issue in American politics is undeserving of the support of the people.

Second—No citizen should be denied the right to vote on account of sex, and equal labor should receive equal wages without regard to sex.

Third—The money of the country should be issued by the general government, and only in sufficient quantities to meet the demands of business and give a full opportunity for the employment of labor. To this end an increase in the volume of money is demanded, and no individual or corporation should be allowed to make any profit through its issue. It should be made legal tender for the payment of all debts, public and private. Its volume should be fixed at a definite sum per capita and made to increase with our increase in population.

FOREIGN IMMIGRATION.

Fourth—We favor the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold.

Fifth—Tariff should only be levied as a defense against foreign governments which levy a tariff upon or bar our products from their markets, the revenue being identical. The residue of means necessary to an economical administration should be raised by levying the burden upon what the people possess, instead of upon what we consume.

Sixth—Railroads, telegraph and other public corporations should be controlled by the government in the interest of the people and no higher charges allowed than are necessary to give a fair interest on the capital actually invested.

Seventh—Foreign immigration has become a burden on industry—one of the factors in depressing wages and causing discontent, therefore our immigration laws should be revised and strictly enforced. Time of residence for naturalization should be extended and a naturalized person should not be allowed to vote until one year after he becomes a citizen.

Eighth—A non-resident should not be allowed to acquire residence in this country, and we favor limitation of individual and corporate ownership of land. All unearned grants of lands to railroad companies and other corporations should be reclaimed.

Ninth—Years of inaction and treachery on the part of the Republican and Democratic parties have resulted in the present reign of mob law, and we demand that every citizen be protected in the right of trial by constitutional tribunals.

Tenth—All men should be protected by law. It is their right to one day's rest in seven.

Eleventh—Arbitration is the wisest, most economical and humane method of settling national differences.

Twelfth—Speculations in margins concerning grain, money and products, and the formation of pools, trusts and combinations for the arbitrary advancement of prices, should be suppressed.

FAVORABLE TO PENSIONS.

Thirteenth—We pledge that the Prohibition party, if elected to power, will ever grant just pensions to disabled veterans of the Union army and navy and their widows and orphans.

Fourteenth—We stand unequivocally for American public schools and are opposed to any appropriation of public money for sectarian schools. We declare that only by the united support of such common schools taught in the English language, can we hope to become and remain a homogenous people.

Fifteenth—We arraign the Republican and Democratic parties as false to the standards reared by their founders, as faithless to the principles of their illustrious leaders in the past to whom they do homage with lips as recalcitrant to "higher law" which is inflexible in political affairs as in personal life, and as no longer embodying the aspiration of the American people, or inviting confidence of enlightened progress of patriotism. Their protest against the admission of moral issues in politics is a confession of their own moral degeneracy. The declaration of an eminent authority that municipal misrule is "one of the conspicuous failures of American politics follows as a natural consequence of such degeneracy, and is true alike in cities under Republican and Democratic control. Each accuses the other of extravagance in Congressional appropriations and both alike are guilty. Each protests when out of power against the infractions of Civil Service laws and each when in power violates those laws in letter and spirit. Each professes fealty to the interests of the toiling masses; but both covertly truckle to the money power in administration of public affairs. Even the tariff issue as represented in the Democratic Mills bill and Republican McKinley bill is no longer treated by them as the issue upon the great and divergent principles of government, but it is a mere catering to different sectional and class interests. The attempt of many States to wrest the Australian ballot system from its true purpose and so deform it as to render it extremely difficult to use parties to exercise the right of suffrage is an outrage upon popular government. Competition in both parties for the vote of slums and the assiduous courtship of the liquor power and subservency to the money power resulted in placing those powers in the position of practical arbiters of the destiny of the nation.

We renew our protest against these perilous tendencies and invite all the citizens to join us in upholding the party that has shown in five National campaigns that it prefers temporary defeat to abandonment of the claims of justice, sobriety, personal rights and the protection of American homes.

The minority, composed of almost half the members of the resolutions committee, through Wheeler of New York, offered the following as substitute for the financial silver and tariff plank:

Issuing National currency belongs to Congress alone as the representative of the sovereign power of the Nation, and should not be delegated to private individuals or corporations. The insufficiency of the production of gold and the variance of the relative values of gold and silver render it impracticable to rely upon either gold or silver for safe, sound, sufficient currency. We favor, therefore, the issue of legal tender Treasury notes, exchangeable in gold or silver bullion on a plan similar to that which now floats $34,000,000 greenbacks on $100,000,000 of gold reserve, and make them more acceptable and convenient than either gold or silver coin. In the extension of this plan, rather than in the coinage of gold or silver, lies the solution of the monetary problem that is disturbing all nations.

FOR A TARIFF PLANK,

the minority offered the following:

Our tariff should be so levied as to furnish revenue for the needs of the government, economically administered, relieving the necessities used by the mass of the people and for the benefit of labor, protecting American productions and manufactures against competition of foreign nations. The details of our tariff laws have become a foot ball of party politics to the great disturbance and damage of our protective industries and commerce, we believe such details could be better adjusted by a tariff commission to recommend to Congress the duties to meet the wants of the government so graduated as to protect American skill and labor against the competition of the world.

The following was offered by the minority as an additional plank to the platform:

Recognizing and declaring that the prohibition

TO LIQUOR TRAFFIC

has become the dominant issue in national politics, we invite to full party fellowship all those who, on this one dominant issue, are with us agreed. In full belief that this party can and will remove sectional differences, promote national unity and insure the best welfare of our entire race.

The financial and other economy planks are extremely distasteful and the defeat of the minority resolution was taken hardly, and members acknowledged that some of their associates are thinking of leaving the convention. The trouble is known only to the leaders, and Mr. Stephens of Pennsylvania saw a light out of the storm and moved to take the fealty resolution from the table and add it to the platform. Mr. Wolfenberger of Nebraska opposed it, while Chairman Dickie defended it. Mrs. Gougar, amid the scenes of yelling and disorder, asked Mr. Wardwell, treasurer of the Standard Oil company, if he made the statement that unless the convention adopted the plank, he would walk out of the convention and desert the Prohibition party. When the uproar subsided Mr. Wardwell denied the statement, which was greeted with great enthusiasm. After some further debate, and amid considerable disorder, the resolution was placed on the platform, and the star of peace once again shone on the party. The platform as a whole was then adopted, and afterwards by the following resolution, offered by Rev. J. G. Evans of Abingdon, Ill., was carried:

Resolved, That we favor liberal appropriations by the Federal government for the World's Columbian Exposition, but only upon condition that the sale of intoxicating drinks upon the Exposition grounds be prohibited, and that the Exposition be kept closed on Sunday.

On motion of Mr. St. John it was ordered that the convention assemble at 8:30 and proceed to ballot for a candidate for President of the United States.

THE CANDIDATES.

The convention followed the season's convention of fashion and made a first ballot nomination for the presidency. General John Bidwell, an old California pioneer, a former congressman and now a wealthy landowner of California, was nominated by an unmistakable majority, receiving 590 votes out of a total of 974, 437 votes being necessary to a choice. It was greeted with deafening cheers, whistles and catcalls.

The evening session was opened with prayer, after which ex-Governor St. John of Kansas, at the request of the California delegation was given the floor to place before the convention General John Bidwell of California. He assailed the circulation of unsigned doggers in the convention attacking Bidwell's record because the latter voted for Pacific Railroad land grants and against the tax on wine years ago.

He said Bidwell would stay in the race till noon. He reviewed Bidwell's career and said he was a man competent and able to administer the office of President if elected.

John Hipp in behalf of Colorado seconded the nomination and Connecticut and Florida followed suit. When Illinois was called Dr. J. G. Evans arose and announced the retirement from the field of David McCullough and seconded Bidwell's nomination. Iowa and Kentucky also seconded Bidwell as did Michigan. At last New York was reached and another name was put in nomination. John Floyd Thomas, on behalf of the New York delegation nominated W. Jennings Demorest. He urged Demorest as a more available man than Bidwell because there would be no charges to meet and no record to explain. C. N. Grandison, a colored professor of North Carolina, seconded Demorest's nomination. L. B. Logan of Ohio earnestly put in nomination Gideon T. Stewart. When the call of States was furnished a ballot was taken with the following result:

STATES.	Bidwell	Demorest	Stewart
Alabama.....	4	4
Arkansas.....	1	1
California.....	12
Colorado.....	9
Connecticut.....	10
Delaware.....	3
Florida.....	6
Georgia.....	1
Illinois.....	21	13	3
Indiana.....	22	10	6
Iowa.....	24	8	3
Kansas.....	27
Kentucky.....	22	8	5
Louisiana.....
Maine.....
Maryland.....	15	4	2
Massachusetts.....	21	3	10
Michigan.....	17	6	20
Minnesota.....	22	1	3
Mississippi.....	22
Missouri.....	22
Montana.....	3	1
Nebraska.....	12	8
Nevada.....	1
New Hampshire.....	1
New Jersey.....	23	9	2
New York.....	76	12	8
North Carolina.....	9	8
North Dakota.....	3
Ohio.....	22	05
Oregon.....	15	17
Pennsylvania.....	15	17
Rhode Island.....	9
South Carolina.....
South Dakota.....	30
Tennessee.....	30
Texas.....	11
Vermont.....	9
Virginia.....	9
Washington.....	6
West Virginia.....	9	2	1
Wisconsin.....	31	6
Wyoming.....
Total.....	590	139	179

The cheers which greeted Bidwell's victory lasted some time. On motion of Georgia, Bidwell's nomination was made unanimous and another outburst followed, ending with cheers for Bidwell and Demorest.

John Lloyd Thomas, late secretary of the national committee, was presented with a purse of $20 in appreciation of his services. It was approaching one o'clock a. m. when the nominating and seconding speeches for Vice-Presidential candidates got under way. The following candidates were presented for Vice President: Sam Small of Georgia, William Batteri of Minnesota, Joshua Levering of Maryland, J. B. Cranfill of Texas, and Thomas R. Carakadon of West Virginia. Small withdrew before a vote was taken. He tried, as he had previously tried against Bidwell, to break the State by urging Cranfill in place of Levering. The first vote for Vice-President gave Levering 880, Cranfill, 886; Sateri, 20; Carakad, 2.

Enough changes were made before the figures were announced to give Cranfill of Texas 416 votes—nine more than enough to win. Dr. Cranfill was called to the stage and made a stirring address. Before adjournment a bitter discussion sprang up as to the treatment of colored delegates at the Cincinnati hotels. The adoption of a resolution censuring the hotels was favored and at 2 a.m. the convention adjourned sine die.

GLASS WORKS FOR UTAH.

The following is a reply to one of the many inquiries received at the Chamber of Commerce in relation to the establishment of glass works in Utah:

June 21th, 1892.

J. W. Collins, Esq., Buena Vista, Va.:

Dear Sir:—Your communication of the 6th inst. to the Salt Lake Tribune, one of our leading dailies, has been handed to us for reply, and it is with pleasure that I note the fact that the Crockery Journal has recommended this city as a suitable place for a glass plant, and if present indications prove worthy, as they undoubtedly will, of the confidence vested in them, this city will soon be the choice source of supply for all the glass used throughout the whole Western country.

Labor is comparatively cheap and building material is plentiful at reasonable prices. Natural gas will be the principal fuel used in this section, both for manufacturing and domestic purposes. Its recent discovery has been instrumental in the organization of several active companies, who are effecting wonderful developments as well as offering liberal inducements to manufacturers, who find the oppressive competition of the thickly populated cities of the East hard to overcome.

Soda ash, salt cake, lime and glass sand, the last two named being almost pure, and everything necessary for the manufacture of glass in this city can be obtained within a short distance of the location of the wells.

Natural Gas will be furnished to manufacturers at Eastern prices. This, together with the price of soda ash at $5.00 per ton, and the other necessities comparatively as cheap, shows that there is no reason why a glass plant should not flourish here.

The freight rates on glass from this point to the coast and the river are respectively $1.10 and $1.45.

The formation in which gas is found proves to be soapstone, and when penetrated, there lies beneath it, at a depth of 800 or 1000 feet, a flow of gas with a pressure of 250 to 300 pounds to the inch.

Trusting that the above may prove to be the information you seek,

I beg to remain, yours respectfully,
SEP. W. SEARS, Jr.,
Corresponding Secretary.

The Kentucky building at the World's Fair will be a typical representation of a southern colonial mansion, one of the distinctive features of which is great pillared porches or verandas. Exclusive of these porches the building will measure about 75 by 90 feet.

THE SCANDINAVIAN MISSION.

The spring conferences have now been held in the Scandinavian mission, the dates being as follows: Aalborg April 2nd and 3rd, Aarhus April 9th and 10th, Malmö, Skane conference, April 23rd and 24th, Norrköping, Göteborg conference, April 30th and May 1st, Copenhagen May 13th, 14th and 15th, Christiania May 21st and 22nd, Stockholm May 28th and 29th. At each of these conferences all the Elders laboring therein were present and they realized much joy in relating their experiences to each other and in teaching and receiving instructions pertaining to their labors in the ministry. The spirit of God prevailed in the meetings which were largely attended by Saints and strangers. As a rule a report and business meeting, a meeting of the laboring missionaries, and four general meetings were held at each conference—making forty-two in all.

Some interesting points relating to the progress of the work were mentioned. Several new fields had been opened where the elders were meeting with good success in proclaiming the Gospel, although comparatively few baptisms were reported, there having been only about two hundred in the whole mission during the six months ending May 15th, but good opportunities were given to preach, and the Elders had taken advantage of these to witness to the people that God has spoken to the earth in our day and authorized the establishment of His true Church with the gifts and powers anciently enjoyed. In Denmark there is only little freedom, and there is no opportunity to sell tracts, yet more than half the baptisms were performed in this country.

In Sweden all the liberties that could be asked are granted, and the people come in large numbers to listen to the Elders who can not always fill the numerous invitations to preach the Gospel, yet only few so far seem willing to make the sacrifice necessary to become Latter-day Saints, but the testimony of the servants of God is sure to bear fruit in time.

In Norway the conditions are much similar, except that the apparent fruits are even less numerous than in the former. In both countries efforts are made to introduce the Gospel in the far northern districts. During the summer two Elders will labor in Tromsø and the region thereabout, 1200 miles north of Christiania, and a number of missionaries will endeavor to teach the Gospel in the north of Sweden. In southern Sweden the field seems to be opening up anew, the Elders being very favorably received in certain districts, and a number of baptisms are recently reported.

It requires sacrifice, patience and labor to perform the work, as it requires courage and a testimony of the Spirit of God to become a Latter-day Saint, and a life-long struggle to remain a faithful one. Men and women are offered salvation cheap now-a-days, and only such as are willing to think and act can be made to see the necessity of obeying the ordinances of the Gospel; thousands are convinced who are too weak, too full of the world's abominations, or too fond of riches and the plaudits of men to repent and make a covenant with God to walk in newness of life, thus struggling upward and onward to the goal of salvation.

The halls where conferences were held were nicely decorated, and without exception, the meetings were well attended. The Elders are energetic in their work, and enjoy the spirit of their callings. The Saints, numbering about four thousand, are generally alive to their duties, but in most instances poor, and can do only little financially for the cause, though ever willing and ready where their conditions are such that they can do anything, and so the Elders must bear their own expenses, which are frequently quite heavy. In some cases they even pay hall rent and other expenses, besides buying tracts with their own money to distribute among the people. They do this gladly for the love of the Gospel, having no other motive at heart than the cheerful performance of duty. How far it is a duty to spend money, in view of the commandments of the Lord on this subject, I can not say, but this is certain that it does not appear that the Gospel can be preached now in these lands without means; whether this condition is the result of a lack of faith on our part or on the part of the people of these nations, the Lord must judge. In the meantime, since God has blessed his people abundantly with money, the Elders justify themselves in spending what they have and in calling upon their friends for more.

Sunday, May 29th, as per instructions from the First Presidency and President B. Young, was observed in all the conferences and branches as a general fast-day, and from the reports that have come to hand as well as from the meetings attended, we are pleased to know that a profitable season was enjoyed by the Saints. Many bore their testimonies, prayed or sang, and praised the Lord, the meetings lasting in many instances over three hours, and a rich portion of the Spirit of God was present among the people. The House of the Lord was not forgotten, and liberal donations, considering the circumstances of the people, were given for its completion with fervent prayers and desires that the donors would some day be released from the bonds of Babylon, and be gathered with the body of the Church to receive the ordinances of the Gospel within its holy walls, both for themselves and for their dead. The occasion was only equalled by the meetings in the various branches on March 17, the Fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Relief society.

At present, with an exception or two, the missionaries are well, and all desire to be remembered at home. Encouraging reports come from their various fields concerning meetings, baptisms and the manifestation of the power of God. Recently quite a number of young men have arrived who are now at work in different parts. To them the faith and prayers of their friends at home, not forgetting a little substantial aid, with a word of encouragement now and then, will be appreciated boons, which we all have learned to prize.

Praying for the progress of peace and truth, I remain, your friend,

EDWARD H. ANDERSON.

COPENHAGEN, June 15th, 1892.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY CONVENTION.

OMAHA, July 3.—Chairman Taubeneck announced the list of temporary officers selected by the National Committee and they were elected by acclamation.

C. H. Ellington of Georgia was introduced as temporary chairman. In his speech of acceptance he thanked the convention for the high honor conferred and spoke eloquently of the great purpose for which the convention is in session, and declared that there had been no other such gathering of people, north, east, south or west, mingling in hosts for a purpose never before realized in this country.

At the conclusion of the chairman's speech, Mrs. Todd of Michigan took the platform and presented the chairman with a gavel carved by the wife of Ben Terrill of Tex., from a tree planted by George Washington at Mount Vernon.

Unfortunately, at the first rap of the new gavel it fell to pieces, the head flying off the handle and rolling down to the foot of the stage. There was a little burst of laughter, but the occasion was too reverential to cause general merriment.

The committee on rules and permanent organization was announced. While this was in progress a delegate paraded the hall with a banner bearing the following inscription: "Volunteer State of Tennessee; Blue and Gray, People's Party. 80,000 votes for the ticket." The convention then adjourned to 3 p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At the opening of the afternoon session messages of congratulation were read from the party leaders. The one which provoked the greatest applause was from the representatives of the party in Congress.

While awaiting the report of the committee on credentials the Hon. Ignatius Donnelly was introduced and spoke at some length on the issues of the People's party. He said in part:

"This body in many respects is the most astonishing gathering the country has ever seen. A convention without a single tool or instrument of monopoly in its midst; a convention whose every man paid the expenses of his journey hither and return, or which were paid by men as poor as himself. (Cheers.) There is not in this gathering a single president of a railroad company, not a representative of any ring which is robbing and sucking the life blood of the American people. I cannot but think of the astounding contrast to the conventions which recently met in Minneapolis and Chicago.

"On yonder banner I see the world's 'Spirit of 1776.' This is the spirit which animates this august gathering. We are literal representatives of those men in HOMERUN and DEARBORN who founded the nation. Without a millionaire and without a pauper. A hundred and sixteen years of national life under the management of the two great parties has given us, according to differing estimates, from eight thousand to thirty thousand millionaires and one-half million tramps, while the whole land is blighted with mortgages and the people are steeped to the lips in poverty. My friends, every great fight ever made in the past for right and liberty has culminated in the present gathering. The battle in which we are employed is the battle of mankind. Every oppressed nation in the world is looking upon this convention to discover whether the star spangled banner and stars and stripes shall float across the country steadily rising generation after generation to higher levels of culture and civilization, or shall it float in solemn mockery above a land cursed as Europe is cursed—the middle classes driven off the land, while concentrated in the hands of the few is the wealth provided by the tiller." (Cheers.)

Having quoted figures showing that the possession of wealth in the hands of the farmer decreased from five-eighths in 1880 to one-fifth in 1890, he declared that no man would fail to see the mark and the terrible feature into which they were advancing.

"I can promise you the solid electoral vote of Minnesota for the People's party. I believe I can promise Nebraska, North and South Carolina and Georgia, and I know we can count on Kansas. I tell you that there is no such word as failure so far as this movement is concerned."

After Donnelly's speech J. C. Manning, the eloquent boy-orator from Alabama, was called to the platform and addressed the assemblage.

Mr. Norton of Chicago afterwards led to the platform Alexander Campbell of La Salle, Ill., and presented him as the original Greenbacker, formerly known among politicians as "Old Greenbacks."

After the announcement of the committee "Cyclone" Davis was called for and he painted in vivid colors the picture of the condition of things as they existed today in the country. When the committee on credentials announced itself ready to report, he abruptly concluded.

The committee's report shows no contests, and 1868 delegates present. The report was adopted, amid applause, and the sitting delegates were declared entitled to their seats.

Hon. John Jaxon of Chicago was invited to address the convention. He is a representative of Metta's council of the Northwest mixed race of Indians and Frenchmen. He said he was proud to attend a convention where an Indian might shake hands with a white man on an equality and because the People's party had a platform on which the Indian was not ashamed to stand. He closed with the assurance that if it became necessary to meet oppression with rifles the Indian would not be found slow.

The convention became restless under the wearisome delay of the committee on organization to report. The committee on resolutions was directed to retire at once and begin its labors. At 6:30 o'clock the convention adjourned until 8 o'clock Monday morning.

The committee on permanent organization reported in favor of H. L. Loucks of South Dakota for permanent chairman, and J. H. Hayes of New Jersey for permanent secretary, with a list of assistant secretaries and vice-chairmen for each State. The report was adopted, and Chairman Loucks assumed his duties.

He thanked the convention for the honor of presiding over the grandest, largest convention ever held in the West, or, he believed, anywhere in the civilized world. In the past great revolutions had been brought about by work and bullet. This greatest of all revolutions is propelled by education and the ballot.

He congratulated the convention on the harmony which prevailed throughout and the facts that no states were fixed up, so that the choice of the people would finally determine the nominee.

A new gavel, announced as made from the timber of the first homestead entry of the United States, was presented to the chairman amid some evidences of dissent.

General William Jackson Armstrong, inspector-general of consuls under President Grant, was given the floor. Armstrong spoke at some length on the issues before the convention, denouncing the millionaires, and declaring it had come to such a pass that the price of a cabinet portfolio under a Republican administration was $150,000. He said the only sacred thing in this world was humanity, and the only thing having a right in this world is a man. We have met to affirm that the sorrows of this world should be attended to here, and not wait for the mysterious judgment of the future state.

Mrs. Emery of Michigan was then introduced for a speech, but the convention was visibly impatient to get to business. A delegate from Oregon presented another gavel in honor of the People's party achievement in the Oregon State election.

The committee on rules presented a report limiting nominating speeches for President and Vice-President to fifteen minutes, and remarks on questions in general to five.

The convention then took a recess of twenty minutes to witness the Omaha Fourth of July parade as it passed the convention hall.

Instead of twenty minutes it was nearly an hour before the convention resumed business.

The roll of States was then called and each announced the name of its member of the national committee.

Then a storm was precipitated by the chairman of the resolutions committee offering a resolution calling attention to the fact that the ticket agents in Washington and other States on the line of the Union Pacific railroad did not receive instruction to grant the delegates to the convention the usual reduction in fares and appointing a committee to communicate with the railroad officials and have the mistake rectified. A delegate moved that the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern roads be included in the resolution. Delegate Marlon Cannon of California protested against the resolution as exhibiting a want of an independent spirit in the convention. His vehement denunciation of the roads led to the liveliest scene of the day.

"I want this convention to understand," he said, "it is not by accident or oversight that the Pacific coast delegates have been overlooked. Our request for the customary courtesy was denied deliberately and with insolence. I do not want this convention, as far as California is concerned, to go back to the railroad cap in hand and ask for any privileges whatever."

The enthusiasm and passion of the speaker extended to the audience.

Every member rose and cheers rent the air. The Montana delegation endorsed the sentiment of Cannon, so did Oregon. The chairman of the resolution committee then withdrew the resolution.

IN THE AFTERNOON.

It was 2:07 o'clock when the chairman called the afternoon session to order, but it was 3 p.m. before business began. The motion was carried that the resolutions committee should report such parts of the platform as were ready. This was apparently the first move on the part of the Weaver men to hasten a ballot.

A suspicion had gained currency that the committee on resolutions was not anxious to make progress for the reason that it, as a whole, preferred Judge Gresham for the candidate and wanted time to get an agreement from him that he would let the convention nominate him. The motion was carried, but the committee reported that it was not prepared just yet to make even a partial report.

Mr. Ward of Missouri moved to suspend the rules and proceed to ballot for the nomination of candidates, but there was no intention on the part of the ardent Gresham men to give up hope, and an Illinois delegate raised the point of order that the motion was contrary to rules. The chairman overruled the point of order on the ground that the convention could do as it pleased. Ward's motion was then tabled on motion of Edlington of Georgia.

Mr. Lamb of Texas, a Weaver man and also working for Ferrill for Vice-President, moved to adopt the entire St. Louis platform as the party platform.

Mr. Brown of Massachusetts declared that the St. Louis platform was one upon which the organizations of united labor stood.

The resolutions committee soon filed on the stage with the platform hastily brought to completion. It is as follows:

THE PLATFORM.

We meet in the midst of a nation brought to the verge of moral, political and material ruin. Corruption dominates the ballot-box, legislature, Congress, and even touches the ermine of the bench. The people are demoralized. Most of the States have been compelled to isolate the voters at the polling places to prevent universal intimidation or bribery; the newspapers are subsidized or muzzled; public opinion is silenced, business is prostrated, our homes are covered with mortgages, labor impoverished, and concentrating in the hands of capitalists, urban workmen denied the right of organization for self-protection. Imported pauperized labor beats down their wages; a hired standing army recognized by law, is established to shoot them down; and they are rapidly degenerating into a European condition. The fruits of the toil of millions are boldly stolen to build up colossal fortunes unprecedented in the history of mankind; and the possessors of these in turn despise the Republic and endanger liberty; from the same prolific womb of governmental injustice we breed two great classes, tramps and a millionaires. The National power to create money is appropriated to enrich bond holders. The vast public debt payable in legal tendence has been funded into gold-bearing bonds, thereby adding millions to the burdens of the people.

The silver which has been accepted as coin since the dawn of history, has been demonetized to add to the purchasing power of gold by decreasing the value of all forms of property, as well as human labor and supply of currency is purposely abridged to fatten the usurer, bankrupt enterprise, and enslave industry. The vast conspiracy against mankind has been organized on two continents and is rapidly taking possession of the world. If not met and overthrown at once, it forbodes terrible social convulsions, the destruction of civilization or the establishment of an absolute despotism.

We have witnessed for more than a quarter of a century the struggles of the two great political parties for power and plunder, while the grievous wrongs have been inflicted upon the suffering people. We charge that the controlling influences dominating both these parties have permitted the existing dreadful conditions to develop without serious efforts to prevent or restrain them. Neither do they now promise us any substantial reform. They agreed together to ignore in the coming campaign every issue but one. They propose to drown the outcries of the plundered people with the uproar of sham battle over the tariff, so that capitalists, corporations, National banks, rings, trusts, watered stock, demonetization of silver and oppressions of all usurers may be lost sight of. They propose to sacrifice our homes, lives and children on the altar of Mammon; to destroy a multitude in order to secure corruption funds from millionaires.

Assembled on the anniversary of the birth of the Nation and filled with the spirit of the grand generation who established our independence, we seek to restore the good of the Republic to the hands of "the plain people," which class originated it. We assert our purpose to be identical with the purpose of the National construction to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare and secure blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity. We declare this Republic can only endure as a free government upon the love of the whole people for each other and for the Nation; that it cannot be planned together by a bayonet. The civil war is over and every passion and resentment which grew out of it must die with it, and we must be in fact as we are in name, one united brotherhood of free men. Our country finds itself confronted by conditions for which there is no precedent in the history of the world. Our annual agricultural productions amount to billions of dollars in the value of which must within a few weeks or months be exchanged for billions of commodities consumed in their production. The existing current supply is wholly inadequate to make this exchange. The results are: Falling prices, formation of combines and rings and in the impoverishment of the producing class. We pledge ourselves that if given power we will labor to correct these evils by wise and reasonable legislation.

We believe that the powers of government should be expanded (as in the case of the postal service) rapidly and so far as the good sense of the intelligent people and the teachings of experience shall justify, to the end that oppression, injustice and poverty shall eventually cease in the land. While our sympathies as a party of reform are naturally upon the side of every proposition which will tend to make men intelligent, virtuous and temperate, we nevertheless regard these questions, important as they are, as subordinate to the great issues now pressing for solution, and upon which not only individual prosperity, but the very existence of free institutions depend, and we ask all men to first help us determine whether we are to have a Republic to administer before we differ as to the conditions upon which it is to be administered.

Believing that the forces of reform this day set in motion will never cease to move forward until every wrong shall be remedied and equal privileges securely established for all men and women, We declare, therefore,

First, that the union of labor forces of the United States this day consummated, shall be permanent and perpetual; may its spirit enter into all hearts for the salvation of the Republic and the uplifting of mankind.

Second—Wealth belongs to him who created it and every dollar taken from industry without an equivalent is robbery. "If any man will not work, neither shall he eat." The interest of rural and civil labor are the same; they are identical.

Third—We believe the time has come when railroad corporations will either own the people or the people must own the railroads, and should the government enter upon the work of holding and managing any or all of the railroads, we should favor an amendment to the Constitution by which all persons engaged in the government service shall be placed under civil service regulation of the most rigid character, so as to prevent the increase of power of the National administration by the use of such government employes.

THE PLATFORM PROPER

is as follows:

We demand a national currency, safe, sound and flexible, issued by the general government only, full legal tender for all debts, public and private and that without the use of banking corporations; a just, equitable and efficient means of distribution to the people; a tax not to exceed two per cent. per annum, to be provided as set forth in the sub-treasury plan of the Farmers' Alliance or a better system, also payments in the discharge of the obligations for public improvements.

(A.) We demand the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at the present legal ratio of sixteen to one.

(B.) We demand that the circulating medium be speedily increased to not less than fifty dollars per capita.

(C.) We demand a graduated income tax.

(D.) We believe the money of the country should be kept as much as possible in the hands of the people, and hence demand that all State and National revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of government, economically and honestly administered.

(E.) We demand postal savings banks to be established by the government, for the safe deposit of earnings by the people and to facilitate exchange.

TRANSPORTATION.

Transportation being the means of exchange and public necessity, the government should own the railroads in the interest of the people. The telegraph, telephone, like the post office being a necessity for the transmission of news, should be owned and operated by the government in the interest of the people.

LAND.

Land, including all natural resources of wealth, is the heritage of the people and should not be monopolized for speculative purposes, and alien ownership of land should be prohibited. All land now held by railroads and other corporations in excess of their actual needs, and all lands now owned by aliens should be reclaimed by the government and held for actual settlers only.

Mr. Branch of Georgia read the platform proper, the strong sentences picturing graphically the ruin of the country unless there was reform, were well received and met approbation, but when the sentence relating to government ownership of transportation in the people's interest was reached there was a demonstration which interrupted his progress by ex-Senator Van Wyck, in the front of the hall, leading the Nebraska delegation and the convention. The reading of nearly every plank in the platform proper was received with more or less applause. The free silver plank was enthusiastically greeted with cheers and the waving of hats, and the government ownership of railroads again got a tumultuous greeting in which it was noticeable that Nebraska, Georgia, Kansas and Texas led the applause and cries of "Amen" were heard from all parts of the house. The paragraph favoring governmental control of telephone and telegraph lines was cheered loudly.

The completion of the reading of the platform was warmly greeted and put through by unanimous consent.

Then the convention broke over all restraint and went wild. Delegates arose in their chairs, cheering and waving coats, hats and fans and throwing things in the air. Several delegates seized Mr. Branch of Georgia, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, and trotted him down the main aisle on their shoulders. A number of delegates seized the uprights used to hold the placards designating the places of the delegations, and rushed with them to the platform, forming a cordon above the whole platform. Banners were also borne there. The frontier county of Nebraska bore a placard inscribed, "What is home without a mortgage. Don't all speak at once." A picture of a settler's cabin was a part of it, and on the reverse side was one big gold piece inscribed, "Twenty dollars, 1892," the portrait device on the coin being a money lender with a long, avaricious nose and a noticeable lack of chin.

The Tennesseeans' banner pledged 50,000 votes to the new party. Virginia had George Washington for its example. The banners and placards were rushed down from the stage and an impromptu procession, to which new adherents were constantly received, started around the body of the hall in which the delegates sat, drummers heading the marching.

Taubeneck had, during the latter part of the scene following the adoption of the platform, been in despair, seeking to get an opportunity to make himself heard. He was on a chair wildly waving a telegram just received. A surmise that the dispatch was from Gresham spread like wildfire and from all over the hall people ran to get information from Taubeneck, while others became excited and added to the confusion by howling down neighbors. The people on the stage were noisier, and ingersoll of Kansas, regardless of the rapping of the chairman's gavel, excitedly rushed up and vehemently warned them to keep quiet.

"I have," said he, "just received a telegram from Dr. Hauser of Indiana. In order that you may know what credit to place in it, I will tell you who he is. He is the present candidate for lieutenant-governor on the People's party ticket, and author of the celebrated work: 'Is Marriage a Failure?' (Laughter.) This is the telegram: 'I have seen Gresham. It unanimous, he will not decline.'

The audience arose en masse, "Gresham! Gresham! Three cheers for Gresham! Hurrah for Gresham!" rang through the hall for several seconds, and the words were accompanied by wild manifestations of enthusiasm. Mr. Brown resentfully yelled: "I do not propose to stampee the convention with the aid of the gallery. That is an old party trick."

Hisses, loud and long continued, greeted this statement, and again Chairman Louck interferred, shouting, "This is a disgrace to the convention." Instantly Robert Schilling of Wisconsin sprang to his feet. "No gentleman has a right to insult the chairman of the national committee and our convention," he said, amid ringing cheers. "No one has the right to so insult us by making charges and fraudulent insinuations against the party's chairman."

Indescribable confusion followed and indiscriminations were hurled back and forth by the two factions. Then Mrs. Lease elbowed her way to the front and shouted in her stentorian voice:

"I, too, have received a message. I am authorized to say that if the nomination is tendered unanimously, even General Harrison will decline." (Derisive laughter.)

At this point the opposers of Gresham made a clever move to prevent his name carrying the convention by storm. Paul Vandervoort of Nebraska, who is bitterly opposed to Gresham, having been removed from office by Gresham when the latter was postmaster-general, claimed recognition. With remarkable dexterity he shifted his position and assumed the role of a Gresham enthusiast.

"If it is true," said he, "that Walter Q. Gresham will accept on the platform of the People's party I will support him with all my heart and second his nomination in this convention."

After some more discussion an adjournment was taken till 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

The delegates were prompt in arriving for the night session and all were nervous and expectant.

The first business was the reading by the chairman of a branch of resolution committee of the supplement to the platform, as follows:

MORE PLANKS.

Other questions have been presented for our consideration. We hereby submit the following, not as a part of the platform of the People's party, but as a resolution expressive of the sentiment of this committee. We demand a free ballot and a fair count in all elections, and pledge ourselves to secure it to every legal voter without Federal intervention through the adoption by States of perverted Australian or secret ballot system.

The revenue derived from the graduated income tax should be applied to the reduction of the burden of taxation, now levied upon the domestic industries of the country.

We pledge our support to fair and liberal pensions to ex-Union soldiers and sailors.

We condemn the fallacy of protecting American labor under the present system, which opens our ports to the pauper and criminal classes of the world and crowds out our wage earners; and we denounce the present ineffective laws against contract labor and demand further restriction to undesirable immigration.

We cordially sympathize with the efforts of organized working men to shorten the hours of labor and demand a rigid enforcement of the existing eight-hour law on government work, and ask a penalty clause to be added to said law.

We regard the maintenance of the large standing army of mercenaries known as the Pinkerton system as a menace to our liberties, and demand its abolition; and we condemn the recent invasion of the Territory of Wyoming by hired assassins of plutocracy, assisted by Federal officers.

We commend to the thoughtful consideration of the people and the reform press of the legislative system known as the initiative and referendum.

We favor a constitutional provision limiting the office of President and Vice President to one term and providing for the election of senators of the United States to the direct vote of the people.

We oppose any subsidy or national aid to any private corporation for any purpose.

The immigration plank and anti-Pinkerton plank were loudly cheered. When the first paragraph relating to the force bill and Australian ballot system was read, a delegate moved to lay it on the table. They already had the St. Louis platform, he said. The motion was beaten decisively on a vote.

A motion supplementary was promptly seconded, and it was adopted before some protestants could get a hearing. They protested against any "gag" law, and moved a reconsideration, but on its being put to a vote it was defeated, though the delegates from Ohio and Missouri protested against this method of counting, and demanded the call of States on vote.

Mr. Branch then introduced Hugh Cavanaugh of Ohio, secretary of the resolution committee, who read the following resolution unanimously adopted by the committee:

Resolved, That this convention sympathizes with the Knights of Labor in their righteous contest with the tyrannical combine of clothing manufacturers of Rochester and declares it the duty of all who hate tyranny and oppression to refuse to purchase goods made by said manufacturers or patronize any merchant who sells such goods.

Mr. Peters of Texas moved to table the resolution, and Mr. Dean of New York to divide it. The first part, expressing sympathy, he wanted to vote for, but not for the boycott. "This is a political convention," said he, "and the latter part of the resolution is out of order."

General Secretary Hayes of the Knights of Labor declared that sympathy was not what they wanted. The Knights of Labor demanded a boycott.

Mr. Cator of California earnestly supported the resolution, and entered upon what he described as the scientific basis of the boycott, and pointed up the action of Moses when the children of Israel were oppressed, to show its ancient character. "Boycotting is not human, but divine," said he.

"Cyclone" Davis of Texas was for the boycott.

After some further debate Ignatius Donnelly took the platform. The resolution, he declared, was in keeping with the spirit of the preamble to the platform adopted with so much unanimity earlier in the day. The Rochester clothing manufacturers have said to 16,000 of their workmen that they could not gain the means of livelihood without yielding their rights as American citizens. Mr. Donnelly said: "On this there can be no compromise. The agriculturalists of the country must stand by their brethren and we will crush all men who seek to oppress their fellow-men. Here there can be no hesitation and no compromise. It is war to the knife and the knife to the hilt. (Loud cheers.) I trust that those who have staggered away from this resolution because of the opprobrium that a hiring press has applied to the word 'boycott,' will withdraw their opposition and the resolution be adopted by a rising vote." (Applause.)

At the conclusion of Mr. Donnelly's address, Messrs. Powderly, Hayes and others grasped him warmly by the hand.

A Kansas delegate moved the previous question, but the chairman stated that a colored brother desired to say a few words.

"I won't yield to any brother," said the Kansan, and on rising vote the motion to strike out the boycott clause was overwhelmingly defeated and the resolution adopted by acclamation. The colored delegate protested against the action of the convention in ordering the previous question.

"I don't think it is right," said he, "after you all had spoken that you should call for the previous question. You expect us to help you out with our votes."

During the Knights of Labor discussion the Gresham movement received a coup de grace by the following DISPATCH FROM JUDGE GRESHAM.

CHICAGO, June 4, 1892.

To J. B. Weaver, Ignatius Donnelly, Ben. Terril, John W. Hayes:

"I have just returned to find your dispatch of the first. I must stand by my dispatch to Mr. Orr of the second. Accept my grateful acknowledgements. W. Q. GRESHAM.

Immediately on receipt of this the Gresham boomers accepted the inevitable.

"That settles it," said Donnelly, "Gresham will not accept."

Powderly, Hayes, Terril and others expressed the same opinion. The resolution declaring against the presence of public officers at the convention was prepared by Mr. Cator of California, and was reported from the resolution committee. It provided that no person holding any office or position of profit, trust or emolument under the Federal or any State or municipal government (including Senators, Congressmen and members of the Legislatures of the States and nation) be eligible to sit or vote in any convention of this party. It was adopted with a whoop.

General James B. Weaver was placed in nomination by Delegate Manning of Alabama. The nomination was seconded by Morris L. Wheat of Iowa and Mrs. Lease of Kansas. S. F. Norton of Chicago nominated Senator Kyle of South Dakota. The nomination was seconded by Messrs. Washburn and Schilling. General Weaver was nominated on the first ballot, receiving 965 votes to 265 for Senator Kyle. Dr. Field was nominated for Vice-President. Weaver and Field each made spirited addresses and at 8 a. m. the convention adjourned, sine die.

RETURNED ELDERS.

Elder Carl Hansen, of Salina, Sevier County, returned to Utah today after an absence from the Territory of a little more than two years. He left home for a mission to Europe on March 15th, 1890, and labored continuously in the North German Mission until his release to return home.

Elder Hansen reports that part of the European Mission is in excellent condition. He enjoyed the best of health and spirits.

Today we had the pleasure of meeting Elder James Cook, of South Weber, Davis County, who returned a few days ago from a mission to Great Britain. He left home for that country on the 4th of June, 1890, and was appointed to labor in the Scottish Conference, part of the time in the Edinburgh district and the balance of the time in Aberdeen and surrounding country. He reports the prospects in Scotland as not encouraging for additions to the Church, the people as a rule turning a deaf ear to the Gospel. He succeeded in tracing the genealogy of his forefathers back for several generations, however, and will be able to do some work for the dead. He was also successful in obtaining considerable information of that character for other members of the Church. Elder Cook returns in good health, after performing a faithful mission.

ST. GEORGE.

On the 9th of April last, I "descended" from the cool and elevated regions of Pine Valley, where

The pure breezes blow
And the clear streamlets flow to the lower country, where St. George, the metropolis of Southern Utah, with its beautiful gardens and green lawns, nestles amid the sands and black, volcanic formations of "Our Dixie." The descent was a most interesting one to me. Leaving Pine Valley, covered with snow, I crossed a ridge, from the top of which the traveler, in looking in a northwesterly direction, sees the rough mountain road winding its way over the rocks and dugways down a steep grade for miles ahead. As I went down I was obliged to take part of the mountain with me in the shape of dark sticky mud, which fastened itself upon the wheels and other parts of my vehicle with such a grip that when I finally, a week or ten days later, "navigated" the Rio Virgen for the express purpose of getting rid of it, it took along polish and paint with it. On reaching Foster's place on the Santa Clara the roads were dry and dusty, and before getting to St. George, the heat and burning sands of Dixie almost made a person wish himself back in Pine Valley.

St. George, the headquarters of the St. George Stake of Zion and the county seat of Washington county, Utah, is divided into four Bishop's wards. The First ward embraces the southeastern part of the city, including the Temple and grounds, and consists of 312 members or 67 families, presided over by Bishop Thomas Judd, Jr., member of the well known firm of Woolley, Lund & Judd. Walter Granger, a Church veteran, presides as Bishop over the St. George Second ward, which embraces the southwestern part of the city and numbers 33 families or 167 souls. Over the Third ward, which embraces the northwestern part of the city and consists of fifty-six families, or 258 members, young Andrew N. Winsor, son of the pioneer, A. B. Winsor, presides as Bishop; and Elder Thomas P. Cottam presides as Bishop over the Fourth ward, embracing the northeast part of St. George, including Middleton; this ward has a population of 105 families or 625 souls, and includes the business part of the city. From the foregoing it will be seen that the total "Mormon" population of St. George foots up to 261 families, or 1362 members, which represents nearly all the inhabitants in the city, as there are only a very few non-"Mormons" there. In the good old times, when the late President Brigham Young and others of the general authorities of the Church spent part of their time in southern Utah, St. George was a more prosperous place than it has been during the last fifteen years, but the prospects are brighter now. The famous St. George and Washington canal and dam, on which already nearly $50,000 has been expended, bids fair to become a decided success, in which case the farming facilities of the place will be very much improved and extended and prosperity necessarily follow. Also the further development of the mines located in the Beaver Dams mountains west of St.

George (now being worked successfully by Woolley, Lund & Judd), will give employment to a large number of men, and thus introduce more ready means into this part of the country.

Among other matters of interest to which my attention was drawn while in St. George, was the model of a new and novel water lifting machine, invented by Brother Samuel L. Adams. It is a strange but simple combination of mechanism, and, according to the explanation of the inventor, it will lift water from the deepest well or shaft and raise it to the highest level required by man. There is no suction in this device, and it will never need priming as other pumps do, to start its operation. It can be utilized for all needful purposes, both on a large and small scale, and will lift water as readily hundreds of feet as it will a short distance, the only difference being a matter of strength and bulk in the material of construction. It will also have this advantage that it can be built for 40 per cent less than ordinary pumps, and its different parts are so plain and simple in their construction that they will not easily get out of repair. As soon as the patent is obtained the pump will be exhibited in Salt Lake City, and, if means can be raised for the purpose, at the worlds fair in Chicago. It is a well-known fact that inventors seldom realize any financial benefits from their devices, but in this case it would seem an easy matter to turn the wheel of fortune in favor of Brother Adams, who challenges the world to exhibit anything in the pump line to excel his invention in point of simplicity, durability and adaptability.

St. George townsite is watered from springs rising at the base of the mountains lying immediately north and northeast of the city, but the supply of water obtained from them is not sufficient to irrigate half the city lots in the town survey. However, by a very systematic and minute distribution of what little water there is, a wonderful number of gardens and orchards are kept alive and made profitable to the owners. The farming lands, which lie in three different fields at some distance south, southwest and southeast of the city—some of it across the river—are watered from the Santa Clara and Rio Virgin; but owing to the lossing of dams no water to speak of has been obtained from the Virgin during the last three or four years.

St. George can boast of quite a number of fine, neat and comfortable residences, and everything about the city has an air of comfort and cleanliness; good health prevails, and the inhabitants seem to be happy and cheerful, notwithstanding their many reverses, in past years, and are generally looking upon the bright side of life.

St. George, as well as most of the larger settlements of Utah, numbers among its best and most thrifty inhabitants, a larger number of veterans—such as Pioneers of 1847, Mormon battalion boys, survivors of the Missouri and Illinois persecutions, etc.—than any other part of the country, and it is indeed very interesting to hear these veterans relate their strange experiences in connection with the early rise of the Church, and also hear them tell of their trials and adventures as missionaries in Southern Utah of from thirty to forty years standing. Many of them came south in response to calls made upon them by the late President Brigham Young in 1860 and 1861; and they are still considering themselves missionaries, never having been released, by the authorities of the Church.

By the shortest wagon road St. George is about 110 miles southwest of Milford, the nearest railway station, and consequently about 230 miles from Salt Lake City. The town lies in the north end of a small valley hemmed in on the east and west by black volcanic ridges and on the north by mountains of a grayish hue. Through the south end of the valley flows the Rio Virgin in a southwesterly direction, while beyond is seen the mountains of northern Arizona, the city being situated only eight miles north of the Arizona line. Westward it is twenty-seven miles to the eastern boundary line of Nevada.

ANDREW JENSON.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 1, 1892.

PREMATURE PYROTECHNICS.

THE boys could not wait until "the glorious Fourth" to explode their fireworks, but wasted a great deal of powder and desecrated the Sabbath in their hurry and impatience. In the same manner, O. W. Powers and the Salt Lake Tribune indulged in premature pyrotechnics and exploded fire crackers at the DESERET NEWS on Sunday. The "Liberal" organ jumps at the conclusion that this paper has been referring for days to something about the Bullion-Beck litigation and pronounces "every allegation and hint used by the NEWS in that matter a willful and malicious lie;" and Mr. Powers wants the NEWS to "bring on its proof," proposing that "either the NEWS shall be shown a liar and defamer or he will go down."

Phiz—Bang—Phut! Powder, smoke, noise. And all premature and puerile.

What is it that the DESERET NEWS has alleged, that is "a willful and malicious lie?" Methinks these rampant people "protest too much." They rush forward to deny before the charge is made. "Claim everything," was a noted politician's instructions after an election. "Deny everything," seems to be their policy before there is anything to deny. Here is the paragraph from the DESERET NEWS that has set them wild:

"As to the Bullion-Beck litigation, if it wants the record of Judge Powers' action in that matter and all the circumstances connected with it, we have the particulars on hand and will be ready when necessary to give them in full. We repeat, we have no wish to make any personal assault on any one connected with the affair, or to which the 'Liberal' organ has drawn attention, but when it comes to a needful issue we will be found to the front."

This was said in reply to the following, which appeared in the Tribune on Saturday:

"We advise the NEWS not to grow too confident or to try by a bluff to silence a record. We say again that one of the committee set apart to down the Tuscaroras was old Carlton's partner; we say that the chairman of that committee was a man whom the Mormons paid thousands of dollars to have him go to Washington to defeat the confirmation of Judge Powers as judge, and we refer the NEWS to John Beck of the Bullion & Beck company to confirm the truth of what we charge."

It will be seen from these extracts that it is the Tribune that has been making charges; that it is the Tribune which has brought up the Bullion-Beck matter; that it is the Tribune that should "bring on its proof." And when it does we will, as we have said, be to the front and ready with "the particulars in full." But the Tribune, as usual, dodges and wants the DESERET NEWS to furnish the proof which the accuser should bring forth, and attempts to put us in its own place. It will not do. We are too well acquainted with its tricks and traps to be caught or fall into either of them.

A lady asked a gentleman at the time of the Beecher trial, "Do you think Mr. Beecher is guilty?" Guilty of what, madam?" was his rejoinder. Mr. Powers now protests his innocence. Innocence of what? He proclaims the charges of the DESERET NEWS to be "a lie." What charges? Name them first and deny them afterwards, if he wants to, but don't let a lawyer plead "not guilty" until the charges are preferred. Fudge! His protest is fourth of July fireworks let off on the third.

The case stands thus: The Tribune, speaking for O. W. Powers, called Senator Calvin S. Brice "a liar" because he did not play into the hands of the bogus delegates; charged that gentlemen who heard and decided the Utah contest at Chicago were "bought" with "Mormon" money; libelled one of them because he has been a law partner of a former Utah Commissioner, and another because he was instrumental in bringing Judge O. W. Powers' Michigan record before a Senate committee of the United States; and in its customary billingsgate assailed everybody connected with the rejection of the bogus Tuscaroras.

The DESERET NEWS showed the folly of all this, and as the Tribune had brought forward matters that we had good reason to believe O. W. Powers would prefer should be kept silent, we proposed, if it came to an issue, to produce the record. If it is necessary to bring up all the affidavits submitted to the Senate committee, they are ready. If it is necessary to ventilate the Bullion-Beck matter, the particulars are also ready. But the Tribune and Mr. Powers must make good their charges first. Then if it becomes necessary in the issue, as we have said, we will be to the front with the evidence of what we have to offer in rebuttal and otherwise.

The discharge in Sunday's Tribune is mingled bombast and threats. It is a flizzle and a feint. We are not to be shifted from our ground. We are not to be scared with a squib. Nor shall we descend to the language of the person and paper that fired it. If he wants to "go down" that is his affair. But how much lower can he go than the level of the mud-throwing against the Chicago committee and the touching off of these premature pyrotechnics!

A cablegram of late date carries the information that the Norwegian Cabinet has resigned.

THE END APPROACHING.

The following editorial paragraph is taken from the Helena Montana Independent:

"A correspondent asks for the date set by Lieutenant Totten for the end of the world. We do not know, though we believe the Salt Lake Tribune can furnish the information. It's warfare on the 'Mormons' will close about the same time."

Correct, providing its own end does not come first. Its occupation will soon be entirely gone and with that it will probably go too. But the "Mormons," though they fatten on its opposition, will learn to live without it and are already with very few exceptions indifferent as to its existence.

COLOR, SEX AND NATIVITY IN THE UNITED STATES.

ACCORDING to bulletin 194 of the eleventh census the aggregate population of the United States in June, 1890, was 62,622,250. Of these the males numbered 32,067,880, and the females 30,554,370. The native born numbered 35,372,763, and the foreign born 9,249,547. The white population numbered 54,988,890, and the colored 7,638,360. These figures show that there were at the date of the census nearly 1,500,000 more males than females, that nearly one-sixth of the total population was foreign born, and nearly one-eighth colored.

Summing up the figures of the census in brief it is found that in 1890, 73.24 per cent. of the total population were native white and 14.56 per cent. foreign white. The colored, including Chinese, Japanese; and civilized Indians, as well as persons of African descent constitute 12.20 per cent. of the population. The native white of native parents in 1890 represented 54.87 per cent., and the native white of foreign parents 18.37 per cent. of the entire population.

THE NATIONAL REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN.

HITHERTO Indiana has been for some time the great battlefield in national campaigns. This year the scene of strife moves further west. Illinois is now a great prize which both parties will strenuously contend for. It has the candidate for Vice-President on the Democratic ticket. The successor of J. S. Clarkson as chairman of the National Republican Committee is an Illinois man also, Mr. William J. Campbell, a prominent lawyer of Chicago, and one of the ablest politicians in the State.

Mr. Campbell is not a new man in public life. He was in the State senate when General Logan was chosen United States senator, after one of the bitterest fights in the history of the legislature. It is recorded by both sides that the Republican party in Illinois has not a more active, competent, industrious manager in its ranks than Mr. Campbell. He has demonstrated this in several local battles. What is still better, from a party sense, he is entirely outside of factions, and people of opposite views willingly abide by Mr. Campbell's advice in party matters.

Campbell is only 41 years of age, and in the full vigor of manhood. He is the senior member of the law firm of Campbell and Custer, who are the legal advisers of the great meat-packing company of Armour & Co.

JUNE WEATHER IN SALT LAKE.

MR. GEO. N. SALISBURY, director of the Utah weather bureau, has issued his report for June pertaining to the Salt Lake station. The mean temperature for the month was 65.3 degrees. The highest was on the 30th, when 98 degrees was reached, and the lowest on the 4th, when the glass marked 58, only 6 degrees above freezing. The greatest daily range, 35 degrees, occurred on the 28th, the least, 11 degrees, on the 3rd.

The mean temperature for the month of June, every year since 1874 inclusive, is also given. The highest, 71 degrees, is shown for 1889; the lowest, 62 degrees, is shown for 1891. According to these figures, June, 1889, would be the hottest in seventeen years, and June, 1891, the coldest. The mean average temperature for June during seventeen years is 63.1 degrees. This shows that on the whole the month of June in Salt Lake is equable, temperate and pleasant.

The total precipitation for the month was 1.21 inches. In 1885 it was 2.67 inches, the highest in seventeen years, and consequently the wettest. In 1880 and in 1889 the rainfall was only .01 of an inch, the lowest, and of course the driest in seventeen years. The average precipitation for June since 1874 was .75.

June, 1892, has seventeen cloudless days, seven partly cloudy and six cloudy. No frost is recorded, but thunderstorms occurred on the 10th, 14th and 15th.

STANLEY, THE EXPLORER, IN LONDON

HENRY M. STANLEY and his wife Dorothy, begin to find out that electioneering in London is a much more difficult task than exploring in Africa. In attempting to address a meeting of the Lambeth electors one evening last week, he had to procure the aid of fifty policemen. He would not be heard, then his wife tried to speak. The dispatch to the New York papers which described the scene reads as follows:

"Mrs. Stanley then took the platform. She was received little better than her husband. Her references to his loyalty to Great Britain were received with laughter, and her attempts to discuss political issues were rendered futile by uproarious demands that her husband speak for himself and shouted inquiries as to what constituency she wished to represent. A fight was started near the platform and another in the rear of the hall.

"Mrs. Stanley became nervous and embarrassed, lost her line of thought, and in response to a gesture from Mr. Stanley turned to sit down. The instant she turned all restraint in the meeting vanished, and the crowd became a howling and fighting mob. Stanley hastily started with Mrs. Stanley for the door, and his few supporters in the audience tried to hurry after him. They had to fight their way through blows and abuse, most of them coming out with their hats smashed and their clothes torn.

"The mob broke from the doors of the hall with a rush and swept down on Stanley's carriage. He had barely got Mrs. Stanley inside when they were upon him. Somebody grabbed him by the arm to pull him back, but he tore loose, jumped in and slammed the door. The driver started up and the mob followed, pulling at the carriage doors and trying to stop the horses. They wrenched off one door, but before they could do more the driver got his horses into a gallop and was beyond their reach.

"Mrs. Stanley was badly frightened. She was almost in hysterics when she left the hall, and she screamed several times during the mob's attack upon the carriage."

A POLITICAL CONUNDRUM.

THE Traveler's Record contains an article worthy the attention of every intelligent citizen, especially those who take an active interest in affairs of State. We do not expect the mere political self-seeker to be concerned about anything which does not relate to his own personal profit or advancement. Here is the article:

"Lord Salisbury, in a late speech which was a masterpiece of acute political analysis, set forth one of the most embarrassing problems which voters in any free country have to deal with. How can a national vote installing one of two great political parties in power convey any instruction as to just what parts of its policy the voters express approval of, or what parts of the other's policy they condemn? Each of them has done, misdone, or left undone a score of important things. Which of them are included in the judgment, and how far? Thus for example there may be at one and the same time a tariff question, a currency question, a negro-vote question, a civil-service-reform question, a question as to privilege debate in Congress, and a question whether one of the candidates is corrupt and the other immoral. Each of them may decide, and very likely has decided, votes otherwise wavering; but the result gives the victorious party absolutely no clue to public feeling on any one of the points, and leaves it free to adopt any course it pleases on anything, on the ground that the victory was probably due to some other question. Nothing could prove this better than the violent disputes in the press after every election, as to what the people intended to approve or condemn; and the voter often finds, to his helpless disgust and rage, that his party goes to work carrying out the very policy he has voted against. He votes for a certain tariff policy, and his vote is counted as a verdict on a currency policy or a force bill; or he votes for a currency policy, and strengthens the party's hands for a tariff policy he regards as iniquitous and stupid; or he merely votes against a candidate he believes to be a buccaneering scoundrel, unfit for any office, and puts in a party which proceeds to do everything he regards as injurious to the welfare of the country. An Lord Salisbury said, it is as though a jury had been at the same time a murder case, a libel case, and a patent-right case, and could only give one verdict, Yes or No, on all those at once. This would be identical with, and no more absurd than, what every voter has to do here at every Congressional and Presidential election. It shows that political methods are yet very rough and barbarously inefficient for civilization, and that reformers have a great work to do in this direction."

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held at the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, June 26th, 1892, commencing at 2 o'clock p.m., Elder H. P. Richards presiding.

The choir sang the hymn beginning:

Lord, Thou wilt hear me when I pray,
I am forever Thine.

Prayer was offered by Elder Prime Coleman.

The choir and congregation sang:

The Spirit of God like a fire is burning,
The latter-day glory begins to come forth.

The Sacrament was administered by the Priesthood of the Eighteenth ward.

ELDER JOHN MORGAN

was the first speaker. He expressed his earnest desire that, during the time he was led to occupy that afternoon in addressing the Saints, he might have an interest in their faith and prayers so that he might be blessed with a portion of the Spirit of the Lord to instruct them. He realized that none could know the things of God except by the Spirit of God, and that it is necessary to be endowed with this Spirit when speaking to the Saints of God.

The speaker now read a portion of the book of the Revelation of John, chapter xiv, 6, 7:

And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to Him; for the hour of His judgment is come; and worship Him that made heaven, and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters.

The revelator had been told that the Lord was about to show him "things that were and things that should come to pass," and among the latter were this glorious vision of an angel flying in the midst of heaven, having an everlasting Gospel. At the time when this vision was spread before the Apostle John, the Gospel had been preached to that generation, by Jesus Christ and afterwards by His Apostles, by Seventies and Elders. It had spread in the land, and churches had been established in various places. The Gospel was then extant on the earth. But John saw that a time would come when it should no longer be on earth but be taken away and consequently have to be restored by a mighty angel. The speaker recognized the fact that the great body of the Christian world held that the Gospel has been on earth since the appearance of our Savior or even since the first preaching of John the Baptist. To this it is a sufficient answer to say that there has always been truth on earth. There have always been good men and women, desiring to do right as far as they understood it. Many were even willing to suffer martyrdom for what they considered to be right and for the principles they held to be true, but the power and authority of the Gospel have not always existed among men, and this fact was admitted by many of these men themselves. They declared that the scriptures were completed and that the voice of revelation had been silenced, never to be heard again. Roger Williams declared that the true church did not exist anywhere, but he expected that it would be again established and that Christ should come and reign as King of kings and Lord of lords.

Many reformers have left similar expressions on record as Roger Williams, the founder of the Baptist denomination on this continent. Yet, these men were all moved upon by the Spirit of the Lord. They were necessary in the work of the Lord to prepare the way for the Gospel when it should be restored in its fullness and power.

When in the providence of God, Martin Luther stepped forward as a reformer, he did not recognize the fact that he should be the instrument of bringing about a revolution in human thought, the effects of which should go down through generations for all time to come. He had but a faint idea of the grandeur of the work he was about to commence. But so it was. The Latter-day Saints see in all such men the instruments in the hands of the Almighty to prepare the way for the coming of the mighty angel with the everlasting Gospel, which should be preached to all nations, kindreds and tongues on the whole earth.

The speaker then wished to refer to a passage in the Book of Mormon. He had recently read an account published in the newspapers, of the discovery of what was called prehistoric remains in Wisconsin, proving that there had been a highly civilized people upon this continent, but the whole race had gone, no one knew whither, leaving only the evidences of their existence behind. The Book of Mormon, the speaker said, contains the history of these ancient people. It shows who built the cities and highways, the ruins of which still remain in various parts of North and South America. In the preface to this volume we read the following:

"And we declare with words of soberness, that an angel of God came down from heaven and he brought and laid before our eyes, that we behold and saw the plates, and the engravings thereon."

Here is recorded the fulfillment of the prophecy uttered centuries ago on the Isle of Patmos.

The Gospel had suffered many changes during the past ages until it was no longer the Gospel preached by Jesus Christ. Now the time had come for its restoration.

In accepting these renewed revelations from God, the Latter-day Saints have but been keeping pace with the plans of God in His dealings with His people. It is the world that is lagging behind. It is with the world today as it was in the time of Noah. It is with the world today as it was in the time of our Savior, when they cried, Crucify Him, crucify Him, and His blood be over us and our children. It is with the world today as it was in the time of John the Revelator, who was sent an exile to Patmos for the testimony he bore. The world is lagging behind. Nor is this strange, in view of the history of the world in these matters. There is a remarkable similarity between the circumstances surrounding the Saints today and those of former days. History repeats itself.

History also teaches what the results have been of rejecting the message of God. Have the purposes of the Almighty ever failed? Has man prevailed? Never. We read the results of man's failure to recognize the power of his Maker in the legends of the nations that have been handed down from generation to generation; in the devastations of whole countries and the ruins of cities. Christ prophesied that a time would come when there should not be left a stone upon another in the magnificent temple of the city of Jerusalem. And it was fulfilled to the very letter. As it has been in times gone by, so it will be in times to come. God lives. He rules the destinies of men and of nations.

In accepting the principles of the Gospel, the Saints have accepted the teachings of Jesus Christ. They have accepted the doctrine of repentance, of baptism, of laying on of hands and of gathering. The everlasting covenant has been renewed in their midst.

In accepting the principles of the Gospel, the Saints have had but one thought, and that is a desire to bring about the salvation of the human family. No people have labored more assiduously than the Saints to save and redeem the human family. Our Elders have gone to the world, suffering all manner of contumely and persecution, but faithfully testifying that this work is the work of God. Temples have been erected for the purpose of having ordinances performed for the dead. These things testify to the earnest desire of the Saints to save mankind. That the Saints have been misunderstood is not strange. The servants of the Lord have always been maligned by the world.

In promulgating the principles of the Gospel, the Saints have followed the rule laid down in the Bible and in the revelations given in these days.

The Saints are not surprised at the situations with which they have found themselves surrounded from time to time. All these things have been foreshadowed by His servants. Not one movement has been made but by the sanction of God and for the good of His people. We have a God who is not far away, but one who is living and hearing, to whom the children of men can go and ask for and obtain information. No one need be in doubt or falter or waver because of anything that surrounds us. The purpose of all is that we shall be tried and receive an experience which will be for our good not only in this life, but in a life to come. What we do reaches behind the veil and has an influence over us for good or for evil. Here we sow, and as we sow we shall reap. As we build so we shall be in the life to come.

The speaker said he was aware that in the circumstances now surrounding the Saints there were things, the tendency of which was to lead many astray from the pure principles of the Gospel and induce them to look with allowance upon many things which were formerly abhorred. The profanation of the Sabbath was one of these things. It has become almost a mania. The Sabbath is the day when people think they can go to the lake, to races and all sorts of pleasure resorts. People who have covenanted with God in holy places violate those covenants and set injurious examples to the youth, walking in forbidden paths. There are many things which thus tend to blind the eyes of the unwary. Yet, when we stop and reflect we find that this is the work of God which shall triumph in the end, notwithstanding all vicissitudes.

The Saints knew these things, although sometimes they waver and ask, What shall the end be? I answer, It shall be victory to God and the Lamb. It shall be victory to the Saints. It shall be victory to the principles they have espoused. Their work shall not be in vain. The blood they have shed shall not be in vain. The end shall be that the earth shall be redeemed. The human family shall be lifted up and hold communion with God, the Father, rejoice in His favor and mingle with the righteous who shall return to the earth. Men may come and men may go; nations may come and nations may go; governments may come and go, but God's work is eternal, and as years roll by it shall grow and become stronger and stronger by reason of its growth. The Saints should, therefore, be encouraged and encourage others to do good and bless the members of the human family, seeking to lead them to embrace the principles of truth.

The speaker now referred to the state of affairs among the nations of the earth, and said, we can see the necessity for the establishing of the work of God to lighten up the hearts of men and bring harmony and unity among the disturbed elements. It can be accomplished, not by cursing, but by pointing to the truth as proclaimed by the Son of God, and this is the work of the Latter-day Saints, from the midst of whom it shall go forth and shine upon all the earth.

There are many things to try our faith, but these are to strengthen us for the work. No power exists that can overthrow those who are willing to walk in the commandments of God. Let us be thankful that we live in the time when God has established His work; that we are partakers of the blessings connected therewith, and may God bless us that we may grow daily, until all Israel shall be redeemed.

APOSTLE HEBER J. GRANT

was the next speaker. He was pleased to have the opportunity of meeting with the Saints. He rejoiced in the many testimonies he had of the divinity of this work. He knew of no joy equal to that of keeping the commandments of God. It is the duty of all to obtain a testimony, and, having obtained it, live so as to continually keep it. We are variously constituted in every respect, and have various avocations, but we should always see that we do nothing on which we cannot ask God's blessings.

The speaker had visited several cities in the East and West and had found people surprised to hear that the "Mormons" believe in the Bible. The idea has spread that the Saints have rejected the Bible, when as a fact, we are the only ones who really do believe in the sacred record.

Henry Ward Beecher had investigated our faith and said publicly that if people must believe in the Bible alone as a guide of their faith, they would have to become Mormons.

The speaker testified to the divinity of this work. He had listened to those who had spoken in tongues and seen promises given by the Spirit of God fulfilled. He knew that the Gospel has been restored and that it was able to save all who would live in accordance with it. The Spirit of God had been given and the Saints as a people had received the divine gift, but the only way to grow was by being humble and faithful. None need wander in the dark, for we can all have the guidance necessary to lead us right. We cannot expect that the world at large shall accept the testimony of the Gospel, but we should all strive to live so that, at home or abroad, we give credit to the cause in which we are engaged, and let our light shine in all our works and all conversation.

The choir sang the anthem,

The gathered Saints.

Benediction was pronounced by Apostle Abraham H. Cannon.

DEMOCRATIC RATIFICATION.

The Democratic ratification meeting at the Knutsford last night was a large and enthusiastic one. Music filled the air and vast crowds of people thronged the streets and were addressed by prominent Democratic speakers from the balcony.

COLONEL LETT

announced that the meeting had been called for the purpose of ratifying the nominations that were made at Chicago, and also to welcome that band of patriots that did such yeoman service for the people of Utah and the United States of America. (Applause.) Someone said there was not room enough out doors to accommodate all the people who would want to come to ratify these nominations. "We are here," he said, "as Democrats. We understand that term, and we propose that the people of this territory shall understand it according to the light that is in them. We want to say to these men, well done, good and faithful servants. We have not come here to say a word that will offend the most sensitive. We say to all Democrats who believe in the principles of Jackson, Jefferson and Cleveland—(Applause,) we feel there has been some differences on local questions, but these are of minor importance and they have been settled at Chicago. (Renewed applause.) We believe we ought not to have any sectional local strife to interfere with our local prosperity. It will not be long after Grover Cleveland and Adlai Stevenson take their seats until they shall welcome Utah into the constellation of the States the brightest of all the jeweled commonwealths."

JUDGE JUDD

said the Democracy of Utah today is the Democracy of the nation. When the Democracy assembled at Chicago with pride announced that Democracy covered all that which came down from Jefferson to Grover Cleveland, it took in all of Utah. Democracy knows no sect, no creed, but only asks loyalty to the government. (Applause.) So far as those who opposed us at Chicago are concerned, we recognize them as Democrats. Our differences were local and they had a right to their opinions. But after they carried them to Chicago and the great arbiter of party differences decided against them they should abide by the decision. They made the best fight they could and we must respect them for it. Many of them told me they would hereafter act with us in supporting Grover Cleveland. (Applause.) The Democratic convention at Chicago came as near saying that they favored statehood for Utah as they could. Give the people of Utah the right of self-government and the people will take care of themselves. (Applause.) The Democracy of Utah will never cease this fight until they place Utah among the galaxy of States on the flag.

Let us put our shoulders to the wheel and on the 4th of March, 1895, Grover Cleveland will be inaugurated President of the United States.

MUSIC AND TELEGRAMS.

The Logan band played a stirring selection, after which the following congratulatory telegrams were read:

ODDSEN, U. T., June 20.

Hon. H. C. Lett:

I am unfortunately prevented from attending your ratification meeting tonight. Please express my regrets and you speak for our committee. C. C. RICHARDS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29.

Hon. H. C. Lett, Chairman:

Utah does well to ratify the nominations of the great convention in whose councils the representatives of her Democracy were given unanimous welcome and who contributed their full part in the selection of the great winning ticket. Utah's Democratic friends here propose to fight it out on the line of home rule, justice and freedom for Utah until victory is won if it takes all summer.

CALDER W. WEST.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 28.

To H. C. Lett, Chairman:

I congratulate Utah Democrats upon the recognition given them by the National convention. Democrats can always be depended on to extend equal rights to the people of Utah. I regret I cannot be present and participate in your rejoicings. The election of Cleveland and Stevenson means much for our Territory. Hurrah for Utah and statehood.

JOHN T. CAINE.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29.

To Hon. H. C. Lett:

The Senate has voted 23 to 24 to continue the Utah Commission at a reduced yearly salary of $2,500—every Democrat but one voted to abolish the commission and every Republican but three voted to continue it. JOHN T. CAINE.

COLONEL MERRITT

made repeated humorous references to the Tuscaroras at Chicago and how hopeless and undeserving their cause was and how they were completely vanquished by the Straight Democrats. He closed by saying that Grover Cleveland was the greatest and best man who had been nominated to the Presidency since the days of Abraham Lincoln.

PARLEY L. WILLIAMS

said: I apprehend that the convention that assembled at Chicago was never excelled in the personnel of the delegates in the history of the world. In this convention vital questions were decided against which no true Democrat will dare dissent. It declared its adherence to the principle of local self-government. [Applause.] It decided against the force bill. [Applause.] It asserted against the party in power from perpetuating itself in power indefinitely. [Applause.] It spoke against unnecessary taxation. It said that the least government consistent with order was the best government. The people's will spoke in that convention. They nominated the man the people demanded; a man first and foremost in the heart of the people, a man who is the embodiment of Democratic principles and is a platform in himself.

HON. MOSES THATCHER

said: The day of heroes had almost passed, but when the delegations began to gather with lightning speed about the name of Grover Cleveland, [great applause] until it became like the rolling of the sea. This great man wrote his tariff measure of 1878, when he knew it would defeat him, but patriotic as he was he signed it without a tremor in the interest of the people. His name overcame Boies and Gray and all the other favorites, and he will roll on to victory in November.

SAM GILSON

said he believed that everything in the United States should be free. Protection only makes millionaires and tramps. He would rather have a traveling sand-biller, or a floating iceberg. Another reason he was a Democrat was because he wasn't a Tuscara. [Laughter.] Next November when the Tuscara's will be hovering over the darkened path they will have to shift for themselves.

HON. W. H. KING

said the Democratic party was the greatest friend the people of Utah had. The Democrats voted to abolish the Utah Commission and the Republicans voted for it. I tell you that the Democrats have always been the true friends of local self-government all over the world. Republicans believe in the centralized and paternal views that all along the sands of time have led to oppression.

J. B. TIMMONY.

"If I am billed to speak on the Liberal party." (Voice, "It's rotten.")

"I want to say that with the thermometer bobbing up at the 90's and without a sanitary inspector, I do not propose to stir up the pool." (Great laughter.)

"There is no people from ocean to ocean that are interested in the election of a President as much as the people of Utah. The election of Cleveland means the end of Peeweeism. It means the end of the Utah commission. It means the end of election registrars who carry elections as they please. It is the first time in twenty-five years that I have not been out at them. With the election of a Democratic President next fall we will have a Democratic Senate within two years, and you will hear of Utah being admitted as a State."

B. A. KENNER.

Mr. Kenner's theme was the "Practical Politician," and he demonstrated his capability of handling the subject. He was given a welcome that amounted to an ovation. In years gone by we had but little use for the practical politician, but now he was ubiquitous and indispensable; the theoretical politician was like the carpet warrior—very fine on dress parade but no account in action. Alluding to the unfavorable weather at Chicago, he reminded the audience that Satan was the power of the air and he never did like Democrats; the ticket was storm-born and might be storm-beaten, but it would never be Republican beaten, not by 500,000 votes. At this juncture a street car came along, and while it was passing through the crowd the speaker said: "This seems to be a case of metaphysical against applied science; that car is like the Republican party, it bothers us for a while but soon disappears and goes the way of its predecessors." Referring to the local situation, he said: "We took our case to the Supreme Court of the party—the National Convention—and won it. Will the discontents now cease their folly and join us against the common enemy?" In conclusion he said that Mr. Cleveland, on the expiration of his term, revived the atavistic but commendable custom of the outgoing and incoming President riding to the White House together; it will be repeated on the courts of next March and by the same men. [Applause.]

HADLEY D. JOHNSON

spoke on the subject of "State Rights." We are assembled here to ratify the nomination of Grover Cleveland and Adlai Stevenson. I was not an original Cleveland man, but when over six hundred delegates favored him that settled the case with me as it does with all good Democrats, and I came here to ratify with a big R. Colonel Lett and I fought for statehood in Nebraska and we are here tonight to advocate statehood for Utah. We as sovereigns ought to have the privilege of electing our own officers. Some of my friends chided me when I favored statehood instead of home rule. Grover Cleveland was cheated out—yes, cheated out, for he received a quarter of a million more votes than "My grandfather's hat." [Laughter.]

The end of the Liberal party has come. "I tell you," he said, "there won't be a Tuscara kid in the Territory in four years. You will find O. W. Powers making good Democratic speeches four years hence. If he won't, you will find him in the Republican party—if they'll have him."

"We organized a Democratic party twenty years ago, but some of the weak-kneed feared that if we would allow the Mormons in, they would be forced into polygamy. [Laughter.] I have been here twenty years and they haven't forced me. [Great merriment.] Since the President of the Mormon Church said there should not be any polygamy these men are not afraid of being forced in—there is no force bill to do it with now." The speaker closed with marked tokens of approval from the crowd.

C. M. NIELSON

spoke on American homes for foreign citizens. He said that his countrymen had fought nobly to sustain the American revolution. They fought in the Revolutionary war and had the courage to sign the Declaration of Independence. We want to become your equals, not your superiors. We have come here not because we had to, but for the love of liberty. Most of my people have the same views as I have politically—they are Democrats. [Applause.] We have telegrams from the East that ten of our newspapers will support Grover Cleveland. [Applause.] These were Republican four years ago. The reason of this is that the emigration commission appointed by Harrison made a report that reflected against the Scandinavian people. They will see Harrison before they will come to his support. [Applause.]

After three cheers for Democracy, Cleveland and Stevenson, the meeting adjourned.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met in regular session June 28, President Loofbourrow in the chair. The aldermen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Hardy, Horn, Lawson, Ewing, Simons, Beardsley, Wantland, Heles, Moran, Bell, Karnick, Evans.

Absent—None.
The minutes of the previous regular session and the journal of the executive meeting held on Monday afternoon, in regard to paving on State street were read, amended and approved.

Before proceeding with the regular order of business Hardy called for the reading of the minutes of Council meeting of June 21st. Assistant Clerk Vandenberg was sent down stairs after them, and on his return the following from the report of the street committee was read:

Concerning the paving work on State street, we report that investigation shows that the work has been carefully watched by the board of public works and the city engineer, and that on sundry occasions the city officials have condemned stone and curbing and the same has been placed by the contractors. We believe that any attempt to cast discredit on the work is unwarranted and we are assured that the resolution was not offered by Mr. Hardy with the intention of reflecting on the quality of the work. We are satisfied that the State street paving work is a great credit to the city.

Hardy—I think that report is wrong and is virtually a recommendation of the paving work done on State street, which we know is not done according to contract. I had no intention whatever to reflect upon any officer of the city, but upon the work itself. I therefore move a reconsideration of the action of the council in adopting that report, and that it be expunged from the records.

Folland—I second the motion.

Hardy—I am informed that it is on the adoption of that portion of the report that the paving company hinge their proposed suit.

Wantland—I believe that the paving work referred to is a great credit to this city and as good as any in the west, and I don't think we should charge our minds in reference thereto.

Hardy—This work is not first-class and I know it. I have seen and examined pavement in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and other large cities of the United States, and I know that the work is not equal to that done in those cities.

On the motion to reconsider being put it was carried on a vote of nine to three. The report was taken from the files and referred to the committee on streets.

The Salt Lake City railway company submitted its map and profiles for the extension of its Centre Street line. Committee on streets with city engineer associated.

A. E. Farmer asked that certain watermain extensions be made. Committee on waterworks.

The West Side Hotel company asked to be allowed to do paving in front of its property. Committee on streets.

Joseph S. Richards sent in a communication in which he tendered his resignation as a member of the city board of health. Resignation accepted.

F. H. Auerbach and others asked that certain portions of North Temple street be put in passable condition. Committee on streets.

T. E. Torkelson asked that Oak street be graded. Committee on streets.

William Langton and others asked for a foot bridge across the Eighth West street canal. Granted.

The Mountain Ice and Cold Storage company asked permission to connect its plant with the city water mains with a larger plant than that now used. Committee on streets with power to act.

Julia Carlson asked for a rebate of watermain tax. Committee on waterworks.

Dr. J. W. Taylor asked that his sidewalk be accepted. Committee on streets.

Chief Stanton of the fire department asked the council to appropriate $400 for the purchase of a span of roan horses which were raised in Cache Valley and which were now in this city for sale. Committee on fire department with power to act.

STREET MATTERS.

In the matter of the correspondence concerning difficulty between the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company and Salt Lake City Street Railway company, the street committee recommended that the matter be referred to the city attorney and city engineer; that the petition of H. W. Lawrence and others concerning curbs on State street between South Temple and First South streets be granted; that the petition of C. W. Higgins for repairs on First West street be granted; that the petition of Robert Thompson, A. W. Oliver and W. R. Gibbs be not granted; that the city marshal be requested to notify proprietors of all stands now on the sidewalk that as soon as the permits heretofore granted by the council expire they will be expected to move their stands. Adopted.

LICENSE REVOKED.

The committee on license recommended that the Sullivan saloon license be revoked. Adopted.

NATURAL GAS ORDINANCE.

On motion of Alderman Lawson the natural gas ordinance was taken up and read by the recorder. It provides for the construction and maintenance of street mains and services of utilizing and manufactured fuel gas in the city of Salt Lake.

Lawson moved that the ordinance be read the second time by title and the third time in full.

Folland moved to amend by referring it to the committee on municipal laws with the city attorney associated.

Lawson said that it was very important that the ordinance be passed forthwith. There was a representative of the company from the East here with plenty of money to do the work and thus give employment to the idle men of the city.

Wantland endorsed everything that Mr. Lawson had said.

Folland contended that he was not opposed to capital, but he wanted it understood that he was opposed to the passage of any ordinance on the night of its introduction. He didn't even know who this company was.

Wantland volunteered the information that it was the American Natural Gas company (which was recently granted a franchise) reorganized.

Rich said he did not believe that the company's former franchise had expired. That company had not even held a directors' meeting. They, too, claimed that they had plenty of money when their franchise was granted, but nothing more had been heard since that time.

Karrick said with emphasis that there seemed to be a disposition to railroad the measure through and he was going to oppose it.

Evans, too, was opposed to any great haste in the matter. It was absolutely impossible for the Council to understand the matter thoroughly on the evening of its introduction. It was an ordinance of great importance and should be carefully quired into.

Some discussion here arose as to whether the measure was a committee report. Bell denied that it was.

Folland—How did it come in here?

Heise—The street committee introduced it by request.

Wantland moved that it lay on the table until the next meeting.

Rich moved that it lay on the table for one week.

Ewing moved that it be referred to the committee on municipal laws.

Bell said that it had already been disposed of.

The chair said that such was true in part but that the action was not so definite as to prevent its reference.

GALLAZZI'S VAGRANT DOG ordinance came up and was read the third time.

Lawson moved that it be referred to the committee on police for report and comparison with recommendations made by that body about two months ago.

Simondi Wanted to know the reason for its reference.

Folland replied that the matter had been before that body in a different form which arose out of the dog tax collector asking the city to purchase him a wagon for capturing and hauling away unregistered dogs.

Lawson moved to strike out that portion of the ordinance which provided that the recorder be given 50 cents for every cur dog captured by him.

On motion of Wantland the ordinance went over for another week.

AUDITOR'S HELP.

The report of the finance committee with reference to employing additional help in the auditor's office came up.

Bell moved that it be referred back to the committee on finance. Carried.

STREET SPRINKLING.

An ordinance providing for the assessment of property and the levying of tax in sprinkling District No. 1 was laid over till the next meeting after having been read the second time.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following appropriations were made:

A. H. Hall.....	$100 00
Sullivan & McDonald.....	340 75
P. V. Coal Co.....	79 75
N. O. Pansy & Co.....	34 63
A. W. Cane & Co.....	1 35
P. V. Coal Co.....	19 00
A. L. Hamlin.....	32 25
Geo. M. Scott & Co.....	118 84
Hemington, Johnson & Co.....	21 00
Mountain Stone Co.....	158 00
Total.....	$927 77

A special meeting was held by the City Council last night, President Loofbourrow in the chair. The following councilmen were in attendance: Hardy, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Ewing, Evans, Simondi, Beardale, Heise, Rich, Wantland, Folland.

MUNICIPAL CREMATORY.

President Loofbourrow announced that the business would be taken up where it was left off at the previous meeting and under that heading submitted a communication from Mayor Baskin, announcing that a contract had been entered into by him for the city with the Engle Sanitary and Crematory company of Des Moines, Iowa, for the erection of a municipal crematory.

THE CONTRACT.

The contract which covers several pages of typewritten manuscript was read in full by the recorder, after which Chairman Beardale of the sanitary committee offered a resolution ratifying the contract. It was unanimously adopted. The cost of the crematory is $15,000.

CITY WATERWORKS ORDINANCE.

An ordinance in relation to the city waterworks, fixing the rates for the ensuing year was read the third time and passed.

MORE WIND.

Alderman Folland offered a resolution authorizing the committee on improvements to have two electric fans put in the Council chamber to secure a more thorough system of ventilation. Adopted.

THE NATURAL GAS ORDINANCE

came up on its third reading. It occasioned a great deal of unimportant discussion, and it was nearly 12 o'clock when it was decided to postpone further action until next week.

Moran moved to cut down the price per 1000 cubic feet from 40 cents to 35 cents.

Lawson said he could not understand why the gentleman made such a motion. We were now paying $3.25 per 1000 feet for gas.

Evans interrupted by saying that $3.25 per 1000 cubic feet was the price paid for illuminating and not fuel gas. He moved to amend by making it 30 cents.

Wantland seconded the amendment and spoke at length in favor of the motion.

Lawson considered 40 cents little enough and was opposed to any reduction.

Folland—I am sorry there seems to be a disposition to push this measure through as I should like to have time to investigate the matter. It may be all right but it looks to me like it is a great encouragement for monopoly. We are here in the interest of the taxpayers and not as representatives of the people and should make a thorough investigation of the question. He moved that the measure lay over until Tuesday night next.

Lawson—I am certainly opposed to any further delay. The measure should be passed tonight. We are growing old while thinking over this matter.

The thirty-cent amendment finally carried and there were several motions to adjourn. Considerable parliamentary sparring of an amateurish character was indulged in when Moran became disgusted and moved to strike out the enacting clause.

This brought Lawson and Simondi to their feet like a flash and the latter angrily and sarcastically cried, "Go back to Chicago."

Moran made no oral reply but sat down and darted furious glances at the gentleman who so vividly called to his mind the defeat the Tuscioras had met with at Chicago. The motion received no second.

A motion to adjourn at this juncture of the proceedings carried and further consideration of the ordinance for the present was thus cut off.

MEMORY IN ANIMALS.

[Vienna Stein der Welten.]

The proof that experience is the guide of life among the lower animals may be found very low in the scale of animal organisms. The razor shell, or mollusk, as soon as the tide retreats, buries itself in the sand, often to the depth of several feet. The fishermen who hunt them use a long, thin iron rod, hooked at the end, or they sprinkle a little salt in the hole to drive out its occupant. This generally succeeds; there is a movement in the sand, and half the creature appears on the surface. With a quick movement the fisherman tries to seize him; if this fails the mollusk vanishes into its hole, and all the blandishments of the fisherman's art would fail to tempt him out a second time—the mollusk has profited by experience.

Similar conduct of animals which can not be regarded as other than the result of experience may be noted among the most diverse species.

A fox that has once been caught in a trap, and fortunately regained his freedom, will profit by the experience and beware of traps in future; the same is true of many other animals, and the birds also. Quail which have once been netted by the allurements of the "call," if they regain their freedom, will never be allured by it again. Every hunter is familiar with the fact that it is much easier to outwit a young animal than an experienced one.

Bortase tells a very interesting story of how a lobster got the better of an oyster. The lobster several times inserted his claws in the half-opened shell, but the oyster always closed in time to save himself. The lobster then seized a stone, and inserted it quickly into the cautiously opened shell and devoured the oyster. Monkeys secure oysters by the same trick, but there is nothing so remarkable in that, as their intelligence is well known. Kirby tells of the bees, that after repeated raids of the "death's head" upon their store they build a sort of bulwark of wax about the hole of entrance to keep them out. Duges observed a spider which had seized a bee from behind, and thus hindered it from flying. The stronger bee, however, had its legs free, and walked off with the spider, which tried to drag her into his den. The struggle lasted some time, when the spider lowered itself with its prey by a thread. The bee's legs were useless in mid air, and the spider clung to her until he had accomplished his full purpose.

It is impossible to argue that these are exceptions, which afford no proof of a general intellectual capacity of animals. Every such experience is individual, and, from circumstances of its origin, cannot extend to the species. We must concede, too, that, even among animals, there are individuals much more highly gifted than the general run of the species. Innumerable instances are seen among horses, dogs, elephants and monkeys. To deny the fact would be to deny the capacity of animals for further development. The possibilities of such advance are, of course, limited, but so, also, is the possibility of human advance, although the boundary line is not yet in sight.

The higher animals are much more ready to meet exceptional exigencies than the lower, both because their capacities are greater and because they have been more highly developed by a wide range of experiences.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The city School Board met last night, Vice-President Nelson presiding. The members in attendance: Alf, Young, Baldwin, Pratt, Pike, Raybould and Newman.

THEY WANT TWO FOR ONE.

The Salt Lake Building and Manufacturing company sent in the following:

"We hereby notify you that we have not up to date been placed in possession of the premises upon which to erect the Twentieth school building, and therefore we will and do hereby claim two days for each and every day we have been delayed or the premises have failed to be given into our possession owing to the difference in the condition of the weather now and when the work of plastering will have to be done."

Committee on sites and buildings.

It was stated that the delay was owing to the old building not having been removed from the site, but the contractors were now in possession of the premises.

HE DECLINED.

T. C. Armstrong, Jr., sent in a communication declining the offer of $80 per month made by the board for two floors in the Armstrong building and offering the said rooms for the ten school months at $750, or monthly at $50 per month. Committee on sites and buildings.

WANTS TO BE A JANITOR.

Joseph H. Newton applied for the position of janitor for the fourteenth school for the next school year. Committee on school supplies.

NIGHT SCHOOL.

The committee on finance recommended that the clerk return to the forty-four pupils of the night school, first named the $2 paid by each and that the balance of the funds remaining in his hands, to wit: $112, be turned in to the treasurer to be credited to the general expense account, the night school expenses having been paid out of that fund.

The forty-four pupils are: F. Arnold, J. Parks, C. Kimball, Alfred Ball, A. Seal, J. E. McKendrick, F. Brown, S. Yates, D. Hall, J. E. Canton, A. Adams, T. Skidmore, H. Clark, J. Bengstrom, L. Larsen, C. Cannon, F. Ball, G. F. Ensign, R. W. Canton, J. Bolt, A. Johnson, W. Cartwright, G. Caltion, W. Miller, T. Francis, H. Carlson, A. Chandler, B. Gamble, B. Larsen, C. Petersen, J. E. Snellgrove, A. Showell, E. Mattox, Annie Ball, F. Brasler, C. Coggle, J. A. Clark, E. Downie, S. Julian, H. Lyon, J. A. Perkins, M. Sallis, A. White, M. Coffinson.

The tuition of the following was

TO BE RETAINED:

S. Arnold, J. F. Ensign, J. Gillendorf, L. Jones, W. Knowlden, J. G. Larsen, W. B. Lately, C. L. Newlan, L. S. Pettitt, E. E. Rich, W. A. Sallabury, C. Valentine, F. Webb, C. L. Weist, E. Brown, W. Everitt, J. W. Gray, N. James, F. Knudsen, B. Larsen, M. A. Miller, K. Ould, S. Powell, Elsie Rich, C. Showaker, J. Worthen, William Webb, F. Wilson, A. Chipman, O. Elchorn, A. Halladay, J. Johnson, G. W. Kingsbury, H. Lind, H. Morris, J. Pitts, J. Parnell, S. D. Roggles, W. H. Stockdale, E. Webb, H. Walquist, N. Williams, C. Dawdle, A. Gillendorf, C. P. Held, B. Kelly, M. W. Listron, J. Laflitt, F. S. Morton, J. Peterson, J. Plamstead, St Reynolds, W. Silverwood, W. Webb, T. Walquist, Woodmansee. Report adopted.

THE TONIC SOLA-FIA SYSTEM.

The Tonic Sola-fia society asked for an opportunity to discuss the merits of the system before the committee on school work, and stated that Professor J. Daynes would attend for that purpose at any time and place convenient for said committee. Professor Daynes also asked that he be allowed to introduce an 11-year-old pupil to practically demonstrate the superiority of the tonic sola-fia system. Referred to the committee specially appointed on the question.

REINSURANCE APPROVED.

The committee on sites and buildings reported having examined the policies and claim for balance of premium presented by Louis Hyams & Co. for the insurance of $5,000 on the Fourteenth school building for three years from May 27, 1892, and recommended that said balance of $53.90 be paid. Of the $5,000 originally placed by Hyams & Co. $2,500 was insured in the Hekla Insurance company and the risk afterwards assumed by the St. Paul German Insurance Co., which company made an assignment of April 14, 1892. To prevent loss to the board and to avoid having to put in a claim to the assignee for the unearned premium Messrs. Hyams & Co. renew the insurance for three years and credit the amount due from the defunct corporation, namely $38.10, on account of bill. Report adopted.

WANT TO BID ON SCHOOL SUPPLIES.

The following was received:

Board of Education:

Gentlemen—We would like the opportunity to bid on supplies for your schools this year.

Kindly send in specifications of articles and quantities required.

If you forward samples of special forms of ruled or printed forms of ruled or printed paper stationery, etc., we will cheerfully reimburse all incidental expenses.

We believe you will find our quotations satisfactory and of advantage to you.

CENTRAL SCHOOL SUPPLY HOUSE.

Referred to the committee on furniture and supplies.

ANOTHER SITE PURCHASED.

Hon. Board of Education:

Gentlemen.—Your committee on sites and buildings report that as a result of their negotiations with Mr. W. W. Riter, that gentleman is now willing to accept the sum of $16,000 for the whole of lot 8, block 36, plat B, Salt Lake City survey. This lot faces 10 rods east on the Fourth East street and runs 20 rods back and is situate 10 rods north of Fourth South street. Mr. Riter reserves the privilege of removing all improvements except the fence enclosing the lot. Your committee recommend the purchase of this lot at the price above stated, provided the title shall be found to be perfect and free of incumbrance, on the following terms: $8,000 cash on delivery of deed and $8,000 as soon as Mr. Riter removes the buildings from said lot and delivers up possession thereof, provided further, that he shall vacate the premises and deliver up possession within thirty days from this date. We further recommend that a twelve-class room building be erected on this lot as soon as the plans can be prepared and accepted. Adopted.

THE TITLE O. K.

The committee on sites and buildings further reported and presented the abstract of title deed and opinion of Williams & VanCott relative to the title of lot 7 in block 19, plat A, Salt Lake City survey, and inasmuch as the title is declared to be in Thomas Maycock in fee simple free and clear of incumbrances, etc., recommend that the sum of $12,000 be appropriated in payment of the lot and the deed accepted and filed for record. Adopted.

LEASE CANCELLED.

Mr. Raybould, of the committee on sites and buildings, reported that the lease on the rooms formerly occupied by the board would not be up until September. There was a bill for $450 for rent up till the present and Mr. Roberts had agreed to take $500 and cancel the lease.

AN ASSISTANT SUPERINTENDENT.

The committee on school work made an informal report on Superintendent Mills' recommendation that an assistant superintendent be appointed to take charge of the lower grades. The report recommended that the suggestion be adopted.

Newman opposed it. Said there was no necessity for an assistant unless Mr. Mills' recommendation was adopted.

assistant out of his already very high salary, higher than that of any other superintendent in the West. He thought the superintendent should earn his money like any other employee and not have a substitute to do his work at the expense of the board. Pratt moved to refer the report back to the committee so that the report be made in due form. Motion lost. The question of adopting the report was voted on and adopted. Yeas 8, nays 1.

SCHOOL TEXT BOOKS.

The question of selecting school text books came up. Pike wanted more information and thought the matter should lay over for a week to give the committee on school work time to make a full report.

Superintendent Mills' report said the committee on books could not report until the committee on school work reported.

Dooley said the question seemed to resolve itself into whether the city would supply the text books free or not.

Raybould moved that the board now consider the question of furnishing books free. Motion lost and matter laid over for one week.

TEACHERS TO BE RE-EMPLOYED.

Young, on behalf of the committee on teachers, recommended the employment of the teachers as per list furnished by Mr. Mills' report. Adopted.

WON'T LEND THE SCHOOL BENCHES.

The Ladies' Hebrew Benevolent society asked for the loan of benches from the Seventh ward school for the evening of July 7, at which time the society intended giving a lawn party. Refused.

The question of consolidating the committee on school work and the committee on teachers went over for one week.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following appropriations were made:

Wm. Hurd for removing furniture from Twentieth to Twelfth.....	$ 8 00
Twentieth ward Ec. Cor. rent for May and June.....	60 00
B. F. Allen, rent for June, Sixth.....	35 00
T. C. Armstrong, Jr., rent for June, Sixth.....	30 00
Henry Hicks, rent for June, Second.....	20 00
J. B. Moreton, stamps for office.....	14 00
L. G. Hardy, furnishing of persons who paid special tax of 1890.....	75 00
J. Auerbach Bros., supplies.....	2 30
Harvey Bros., chairs.....	5 00
C. J. Mitchell, moving desks.....	5 00
Boliver Roberts.....	600 00
Total.....	$ 924 30

Adjourned for one week.

ANDREW BURT'S DIVORCE SUIT.

In the Third District court this morning, Helen M. Burt brought suit for divorce from her husband, Andrew J. Burt, sheriff of this county.

The parties were married at Logan, on September 19th, 1888, and there is one child, Wallace J., aged two years and two months. Plaintiff alleges that ever since their marriage (and particularly since the birth of the boy) defendant has continuously and habitually treated her in a cruel and inhuman manner, causing her great bodily injury and extreme mental distress. Her husband has been, and is still, she asserts, guilty of habitual drunkenness, that on repeated occasions within the past two years he has violently assaulted her, striking, bruising, and otherwise mistreating her; that without provocation, just cause or excuse, he on the 21st day of February, in the present year, assaulted her with a pocket-knife and violently cut the clothing from her person. It is further alleged that on the day previous (February 20th) he "choked her with such violence as to seriously injure her," at the same time threatening to kill both her and the child. That "on numerous occasions, both when under the influence of liquor and otherwise, defendant has assaulted plaintiff with pistols, at the same time using violent, profane and abusive language and threatened to kill plaintiff and their babe. That defendant habitually uses toward plaintiff, not only in private but in the presence of others, profane, insulting and abusive language, at the same time falsely and maliciously accusing her of unfaithfulness, and applying to her opprobrious epithets, indicating want of chastity. That the violent, abusive and cruel treatment of plaintiff by defendant has increased to such an extent that she is now in fear of her life and of the life of her child at the hands of defendant. By reason thereof, on or about June 1st, 1872, plaintiff left the dwelling of defendant and took up her abode with her parents, at the house of her father, John Morgan, in this city. That since said date defendant has on numerous occasions come to said house, where plaintiff now is, flourishing a deadly weapon, and threatening the lives of the plaintiff and her child, and of the other inmates of the premises. That particularly on June 27th, about 3 o'clock a. m., defendant came there and with force and violence obtained admission, and then and there threatened to kill both plaintiff and her child. That plaintiff has always conducted herself towards defendant as a faithful wife, and his acts and conduct are entirely without cause or excuse.

For more than three years past, she adds, her husband has been sheriff of Salt Lake County, and, as such, is in receipt of an annual income of not less than $6000. He is also the owner of certain stock of the Utah Commercial and Savings Bank, or the proceeds of the sale thereof, to the amount of not less than $1450. Upon information and belief, plaintiff further alleges that he is the owner of stock in the Utah Stove & Hardware Company of no less value than $4000; also the owner of an undivided one-half interest in certain real estate, consisting of eighty acres owned by him jointly with his brother, situate on the west side of Jordan river, the value of said half being not less than $2500; also the owner of a parcel of land on F street, in the Twenty-first ward, valued at $1500. Plaintiff alleges that, unless restrained by order of the court, defendant will sell or dispose of said property. Plaintiff has no property, nor means of any sort, either to prosecute the present suit or for the support of herself and child.

She therefore prays for a dissolution of the bonds of matrimony, that she be awarded the custody of the child, that a division of the property of defendant be made and a reasonable part thereof be set aside by the court for her use and for the maintenance of herself and child. That pending this action, a reasonable allowance be made her as counsel's fees ($100), $25 for fees and court costs, and like fees that the sum of $25 per week be decreed to be paid her by defendant, as temporary alimony. That pending the trial of this suit the defendant be restrained from visiting or otherwise interfering with plaintiff at the house of her father, or from otherwise disturbing the peace, from taking the child from her custody; and that he be also enjoined from in any way disposing of any of the real or personal property named in this complaint.

Rawlins and Critchlow are the plaintiff's attorneys.

THE DEFENDANT'S ANSWER.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon Sheriff Andrew J. Burt filed an answer to the charges brought against him by his wife, Helen M. Burt, denying absolutely the whole of the allegations.

By way of cross-complaint the defendant alleges that since their marriage the plaintiff has treated him in a cruel and inhuman manner, in particular as follows: Within two months after their marriage, he being about to visit Provo, was requested by plaintiff to allow her to accompany him and spend the time with relatives at Springville. This was acceded to. This occasion being a Wednesday, it was agreed that she should meet him at the station on the following Friday. She failed to do so, but finally made her appearance on Saturday in company with some gentlemen who were strangers to him. Together, the defendant and plaintiff returned to Salt Lake, and while his wife was derobing herself he discovered written on her arm the word "Mort," this being the name by which one Mort Snow, of Utah, was commonly known. When asked to explain, she averred that it was the name of a young gentleman of Springville, and that it had been written there by a young lady named Rhoda, her cousin. Afterwards he learned that his wife had falsified in this regard, and that the name was placed there by the man himself, at a time when she violated her marriage vows.

Defendant further alleges that, since their marriage, he has learned to his sorrow that his wife uses language of a profane and obscene character. When home was reached on one occasion, after they had been out together, she complained of a severe headache. She asked him to obtain a wet cloth for her from a room above, and bled it about her head. In looking for the cloth a letter fell upon the floor addressed to Miss Geraldine, Menoreville. In substance it said:

"My Darling Geraldine: I finally received your letter, after waiting many days. I was in town and could have called upon you but was afraid to do so, thinking that I might meet him. I am working up a scheme by which we can outwit him. When will I have another chance to hold you in my arms?"

Your loving Hugo."

He confronted the plaintiff with this letter, and she solemnly took her oath that it belonged to her cousin Rhoda, but afterwards confessed it was her own, and that it was written by Mort Snow.

Defendant avers that about a year ago, their babe becoming very sick, and the chances for its life were small if it remained in the heat of Salt Lake City, he sent his wife and child into the mountains at Wasatch. Afterwards he learned that his wife, "although the babe was sick unto death," would leave it and ride to Draper and back, a distance of thirty-six miles, in order to attend balls and parties with a man named Smith. The child was then in a precarious condition, needing constant care and attention; and the heartlessness displayed by his wife when it became known to her caused him intense mental pain and sorrow. The plaintiff, while their child lay at death's door, also took pleasure trips to Alta, and when a rumor of the fact came to him she calmly looked him in the eye until she was confronted by such proof that she broke down and confessed that for male society she had neglected her little one. Defendant further alleges that on the eve of New Year's day of 1892 they had a talk concerning the conduct of his wife, he having learned that she had exchanged photographs with a stranger. She denied everything at first, but finally admitted the flirtation, insisting, however, that there was nothing criminal in the relations.

Defendant further declares that about the month of November, 1892, she visited Logan and there met Mort Snow, with whom her conduct "was scandalous for a married woman." In male attire she went to a photograph gallery and had her picture taken. She visited Mr. Fulmer in men's clothing. Upon his going to Logan and compelling her to return home, she opened a correspondence with a man named Clayton, the letters being filled with endearing expressions.

Defendant next alleges that in the month of February, 1892, his wife, with her baby, visited Springville and opened a flirtation with one Claude Gates, neglecting her infant shamefully and sitting up with Gates as a lover until three o'clock in the morning.

In the month of January, 1892, he says, she became acquainted with a man named Weatherby, an electric light employe, who frequently visited her, at unusual hours, and the acquaintance ripened into criminal intimacy. He shows that on the 27th March, 1892, she visited Weatherby at Ogden, on which occasion she presented him (Weatherby) with a diamond pin, and went with him to the Hot Springs. On the 7th May, 1892, he himself found her in the arms of Weatherby, on the porch of defendant's house, in Salt Lake City. May, 1892, his wife met Weatherby in room 21 of the Broom Hotel, Ogden, where she allowed him to take improper liberties with her, the actions there being too obscene to detail. When she learned that she had been detected in the escapade last mentioned she promised to reform, and urged him to forgive her. After much pleading on her part he did so.

(The remainder of the paragraph is totally unfit for publication in the News.)

After accusing his wife of drinking wine with men at his house, during his absence, at all hours of the night the defendant says that since the birth of their child his wife has not appeared to have for it the affection of a mother. She has neglected and abandoned it for hours at a time, when it needed tender care, and has thrown discredit upon its paternity. She uses, in the child's presence, vulgar, obscene and profane language, and is utterly unfit to have the care or custody of the infant.

Defendant goes on to allege that his wife committed adultery with one Richard Weatherby on the 27th day of March, 1892, on the 25th day of May, 1892, and on divers other days in Salt Lake City and the city of Ogden since the 1st day of January, 1892. He says also that she has committed adultery with other persons in the city of Salt Lake, between the 1st day of December, 1891, and the 1st day of June, 1892.

He alleges that she is an unfit person to have the care, custody and education of the child, and prays that the bonds of matrimony existing between them be absolutely dissolved, and a decree of divorce granted to him.

Powers and Hike are Mr. Burt's attorneys.

GOSSIP FROM THE ATLANTIC.

If ever I carried a prayer to a throne of grace, it was my wish that the Democratic convention in Chicago would not recognize the Utah savages calling themselves "Tuscaroras." It is gratifying to know that my prayer was answered. An old proverb speaks of people "going for wool and coming back shorn." The Tuscaroras went for hair and returned scalped! Where are they now? A vessel was sunk a few nights ago off Long Island and none were left to tell the story of the lost. But a white hat, a duster, an umbrella and a very large mouth were found floating. It is thought they belonged to one of a band of savages that was very noisy in Chicago a few days ago. Did they have sense enough to go and drown themselves? If so, nothing in their lives so became them as the leaving of it. Too bad, though, that they lost their dusters, as they will need light clothing now.

Boston is very wet and the air is abominable. I had no idea the old place could behave so badly. New England is busy everywhere graduating boys and girls. I called on President Eliot yesterday and found him busy. Tomorrow is "Commencement" at Harvard. He spoke laughingly of the treatment he had received on account of his address in Salt Lake, and has not changed his mind. I met J. M. Tanner and several other Utah men, and have a pressing invitation to visit them on Friday.

I have also met Hon. P. A. Collins, who chatted interestingly about Utah in Congress. For his part there some years ago in reference to the Edmunds-Tucker bill (I think it was), he received many letters from ministers, lawyers, laymen and other old women in Utah denouncing him for daring to assume in any wise that the Mormons were not beasts of the field. Mr. Collins was the first to inform me of the fate of the "Tuscaroras." The Eastern papers never condescended to even mention the existence of the band. I have met representatives, editors and managers of the leading dailies here and have engaged to furnish them matter from Utah, with the understanding that I am working only for fair play and equal rights for the Mormons. I can see a great change among paper men since I began to coax them two years and a half ago to publish something that had a kind word for a misunderstood people. The press can do grand work where it can afford to be brave and independent, and it is the press far more than the politicians that is breaking down the prejudices against Utah through more intelligent public opinion.

I went to church twice last Sunday! In the afternoon to hear Rev. Justin D. Fulton on "Romanism." If he had used the term "Mormonism" his discourse would have been exactly of the anti-Mormon character so often heard in Salt Lake. In fact, it seemed to me that the speaker was reading Tribune editorials against the Mormons.

His attacks and denunciations were very severe, but they suited the anti-Catholic rabble that heard him. A pamphlet was circulated purporting to be letters from an eminent Catholic to the Catholics, in which the most open defiance of the government was urged. I saw that it was a fraud, clearly a "Bishop West" affair, and I saw that people were deceived by it. Hence I asked the preacher who was the author of the pamphlet. He did not know, and declared he had nothing to do with it. Then I asked two of his deacons. They both denied all knowledge of it. Yet the papers advertised Fulton's sermon and added that "a pamphlet of valuable information that should be in every home will be given to all present." All this was in the same advertisement, yet neither the preacher nor his right hand men knew anything about it! Do you imagine I believed him? Not a minute. It was simply a bit of fraud, just such fraud as has been played hundreds of times against the Mormons by unscrupulous men and women.

In the evening I went to hear a Unitarian on "Emerson." There was no fraud about it, but it was the most tame and insignificant treatment of a grand subject I ever heard. The man Fulton was a mountebank. The Unitarian a dupe! Of all the hypocrites to be found in the pulpits of today the greatest is this pretended religion that is every thing and nothing. Its ministers are intelligent fellows. They are generally atheists, when judged by the Bible; they are "up" in modern science, (the younger ones) but neither young nor old has the courage of his convictions or the manhood to rise above the theft of the name "Christian" to cover their infidelity.

CHARLES ELLIS.

SHOOTING STARS.

[London Public Opinion.]

The shooting stars are small bodies, weighing, at most, a few pounds, and consisting mainly of iron and carbon. They traverse space in swarms, and also revolve around the sun in long, elliptical courses like the comets. When these little bodies enter the earth's orbit, they are deflected toward the earth, and great numbers are seen in a single night. Their brightness is due to the heat engendered by the energy of their motion. Their speed is enormous, viz: 424 kilometers a second, while the speed of the earth on its orbit is only 25 kilometers a second, toward. Consequently when a shower of them approaches the earth in the direction opposite to its course, the initial speed is 72 kilometers a second; when they follow on its course they gain 164 kilometers a second on it, their mean rate of approach being 80 to 40 kilometers a second. The friction engenders a temperature of 3,000 degrees Celsius, subject to which they burst into flame. If under these conditions their substance is not vaporized, they pass through and beyond the upper strata of our atmosphere and pursue their proper course around the sun; but as a rule they are vaporized, in which case the vapor mingles with the atmosphere, to fall later as meteoric dust. In this manner we come in contact annually with 146 milliards of shooting stars, which add considerably to the earth's substance.

Every year shooting stars present the most interesting spectacle on the night of August 10th, and frequently also on the two following nights. If the night is clear, and the observation is not disturbed by the moonlight, one may count hundreds and even thousands of falling stars during these three nights, all coming from apparently the same quarter of the heavens—the constellation of Perseus. The fact that the earth takes three days to pass through the shower of shooting stars affords a measure of the enormous space the occupy, the more so that they cross our orbit at right angles to the earth's course. Their orbit is a long one, and corresponds with that of the great comet of 1842, which reaches a distance of 7,104,000,000 kilometers from the sun, approaching it at intervals of 121 years. This immense orbit appears to be full of shooting stars. Another date equally interesting for the observation of shooting stars is November 14th. On this date they are even more numerous than on August 10th. At intervals of thirty-three years they fall on this date as thick as snowflakes. Two hundred and forty thousand are estimated to have fallen on November 14, 1888; the phenomenon repeated itself in 1895, and we look forward to its recurrence in 1899. The November shooting stars appear to come out of the constellation Leo. The course of this group corresponds to that of the comet of 1866, near the orbit of Uranus, at a distance of 2,840 kilometers from the sun, which it approaches every thirty-three years. In the year 125 A.D. this comet, under the influence of the attraction of Uranus, was deflected from its original course, and made a member of the solar system.

The two dates above mentioned are not, however, the only ones on which shooting stars in considerable numbers may be observed. Among others, November 27th may be mentioned; for on this day, in 1872, and again in 1875, at least a hundred thousand shooting stars were observed. In Rome, where I was on the latter date, the phenomena excited great interest, and even the Pope was evidently not wholly unmoved; for some days later, when I had the honor of being received by his Holiness, his first words were: "Did you see the golden shower of Danne?" The shower of fixed stars of 1872 was entirely unexpected by the astronomers. They had been much disturbed at the loss of Bela's comet, which, after its discovery, steadily made its appearance at intervals of six and a half years until 1846, in accordance with its computed course. On this occasion, while pursuing its course on the night of January 13th, it split into two pieces, diverging from each other as they pursued their several courses. Both comets were visible on their return in 1852, but they were pale and faded, and more than 2,000,000 kilometers apart. It was the last sight; from that date the Bela comet has never been seen again. It is vanished, annihilated, burst up into shooting stars. Were this not so it must have bled the earth's orbit on November 27, 1872, and actually have come in contact with it. In its stead there appeared unexpectedly the above-mentioned shower of stars, and the conclusion was that these small bodies were the remains of the Bela comet, a conclusion unquestionably confirmed by the observations of November 27, 1885.

This, then, is one of the latest conclusions of science: Shooting stars are the fragments of shattered comets. Comets, in fact, are comparatively short-lived bodies, few of them persisting beyond a few thousand years, and the smaller ones for a much less period only, while the duration of a planet like our earth extends to millions of years. The great comets which frightened our ancestors would doubtless be found to have lost much of their brilliancy if we could see and identify them; for, during their course around the sun, they continually throw off vapor and fragments, and are thus constantly subject to diminution.

DEATHS.

CORBITT.—In this city, June 35th, of general debility. Daniel Corbitt, in the eighty-sixth year of his age.

HICKS.—In the Second ward of this city, June 27th, James M. Hicks; aged 57 years. Born in Michigan, June 29th, 1835.

MILLER.—In Salt Lake City, June 27th, 1895, of hysteria, Ann Pearson, daughter of Ebenezer and Esther Miller, in the 23rd year of her age.

LINDSEY.—This morning, at their residence, 465 a, Fifth East street, at 7 o'clock, Alice, beloved daughter of J. H. and Alice A. Lindsey.

CLIVE.—Wednesday, June 29, 1895, of Diphtheria, at 3 a.m., Everett C., son of J. H. and Mary Clive. Funeral at the cemetery at 5 p.m.

FITZGERALD.—At 416 West Second North street, Salt Lake City, July 1st, at the residence of the late John Nebeker, Barbara Fitzgerald, of old age.

PENROSE.—On Monday, June 27th, in the Second ward, of anemia, Charles William, infant son of Ernest S. and Maria Penrose, aged three days and six hours.

MCKENZIE.—At St. George, Washington Co., Utah, June 22, of disease of the kidneys, Mrs. Fannie Grace Miller McKenzie; born in Her Devonshire, England, December 24th, 1827.

OWEN.—At Maryvale, June 12, 1895, the son of the late Archibald and Mary A. Bell, of Pangnitch, Garfield county, Utah. Death resulted from the deceased falling off a wagon. He was born at Pangnitch, Oct. 15, 1881.

BLACKBURN.—At Nephi, Juab county, Utah, June 10th, 1895, Joseph, son of Joseph and Ann Blackburn, born at Hingham, Lincolnshire, England, November 24th, 1827; joined the Church in 1861; emigrated to Utah in 1874. He lived and died a faithful Latter-day Saint.

THE DESERT WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION.

ESTABLISHED 1850. TRUTH AND LIBERTY.

NO. 4.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, JULY 16, 1892.

VOL. XLV.

IN SOUTHERN UTAH.

On the 17th of April last, I finished my historical labors in St. George, Utah, and proceeded to visit all the settlements of the Saints situated on the Rio Virgen and its tributaries above St. George.

At Washington, located about five miles northeast of St. George, on the north side of the Rio Virgen, I spent the Sabbath very pleasantly, and learned from the old residents that the place was first founded in 1857, as the first agricultural settlement of the Saints in Utah Dixie, Santa Clara, having up to that time, and for some time afterwards, been established as only an Indian mission. At one time Washington contained a population of more than 800 souls, while the present total membership of the ward only consists of 312, or 60 families. This decrease in population is due to a number of causes, but the principal one is the washing away of the dams and ditches which the settlers have constructed year after year for irrigation purposes. The treacherous Rio Virgen has taken them all away and for the last three years the place has had no water, save the very scanty supply obtained from the springs on which the town is situated—not sufficient to irrigate half the city lots. But now there are fair prospects ahead, as the St. George and Washington dam and canal on the south side of the river are nearing completion. This dam, on which the future prosperity of both Washington and St. George depend, consists of a natural ledge of solid rock which crosses the river about five miles above Washington. By blasting a tunnel through a mountain point the constructors of the canal obtained a safe and solid place for a head gate, and then commenced their ten-mile long canal, which, when it reaches the old Washington field 4½ miles below, brings the water 45 feet higher than the old ditch. The canal is four feet deep and ten feet wide in the bottom, and is out in the side of the mountain, part of the way through solid rock; there are also five tunnels, the longest of which measures 112 feet in length. Waste gates are constructed at proper intervals, by means of which the sand masses which will naturally accumulate in the bottom of the canal can be washed out whenever it becomes necessary, and thus save a very great amount of manual labor, such as has been bestowed upon other ditches in order to keep them clean.

After visiting the dam, I continued my Journey via Harrisburg to Leeds, where I held a meeting in the evening of the 18th of April.

Harrisburg is almost a town of the past, all the inhabitants except half a dozen families having moved away, but most of these have located at Leeds, two and a half miles to the northeast, which has a most pleasant situation and is also now a prosperous place in a financial point of view. The people there are perhaps better off as a whole than any of their Dixie neighbors, which is owing, no doubt, to the close proximity of their town to the mining camp of Silver Reef, situated over a ridge northward about one and a half miles distant. But Silver Reef, like most mining camps in Utah, has apparently seen its best days; the mills have all stopped work, except one or two, which make an occasional short run, whenever a sufficient quantity of ore is obtained for this purpose by the few miners and proprietors who still linger around the camp. The numerous business houses and dwellings which once constituted a part of this prosperous mining town are now being hauled away, principally to Leeds where the people are using the material in the construction of barns, stables, fences, etc. The Leeds ward, embracing Harrisburg, numbers two hundred and thirty-eight souls, or thirty families of Saints, presided over by Bishop Brigham Y. McMullin.

From Leeds I proceeded to the famous Toquerville, situated on Ash Creek, twenty-three miles east of St. George and thirty-nine miles southwest of Cedar city. Toquerville was first settled in 1855, and has at present a "Mormon" population of two hundred and eighty-seven souls or fifty-seven families. Here, as well as in St. George, I made the acquaintance of quite a number of old "stand-bys"—veterans in the Church, who have borne the burden of the "kingdom" until their hairs are white as snow and their faces furrowed with wrinkles of care and age. Brother William A. Brimham is the Bishop of this interesting place which has an air of comfort about it that attracts the attention of most visitors, although it is hemmed in by a black ridge or mountain on the east, and a dreary sandy desert on the west. It is truly an oasis in the desert, beautiful and fertile, while the surrounding country is a desolated and dreary as anything possibly can be.

Leaving Toquerville April 20, 1892, to visit settlements further up the Rio Virgen, I found myself traveling near the edge of the deep gorge through which Ash Creek finds its way to the river below; thence I descended a steep rocky hill to the La Virgen, one of the main tributaries of the Rio Virgen and partly used by the people of Toquerville for irrigation purposes; thence I followed up the famous "Johnson Twist" for miles, and finally passed over a broken desert country to Virgen City, situated on the right bank of the Rio Virgen, nine miles southeast of Toquerville. Virgen City, first settled in 1858, was once a prosperous and growing place, but the river having washed away most of the farming land belonging to the settlement, its facilities are now very limited, and a number of the inhabitants are at present on the eve of moving to other "pastures" where they can secure homes that will not float away. The Virgen City ward, presided over by Bishop Leroy W. Beebe, consists of 300 souls, or 53 families; but this includes the pleasant little settlement up North Creek called Mountain Dell, about four miles northeast of Virgen City; and the once prosperous, now almost deserted, Duncan's Retreat, situated up the river about three miles east of that place.

Seven miles above Virgen City, on the left or south bank of the river is situated the village of Grafton, with 16 families, or 75 souls, and James M. Ballard as Bishop. This place has also suffered terribly from the floods which have washed away the greater portion of the farming land, and years ago the whole town (Old Grafton), of which there is now hardly a trace left, went down stream. The new town or present location is a beautiful little spot, but the river is continually threatening its existence, as every flood that comes down the river diminishes the area of the adjacent farms and destroys same and ditches in regular succession. The village itself, however, is quite secure. Old Grafton was first settled in 1859, the present town in 1861.

Above Grafton, about two and a half miles, on the north bank of the river, lies Rockville, which the late President Brigham Young called the finest location for a town on the Rio Virgen. It was first settled in 1861, and during the time of the Indian troubles, when the surrounding settlements were temporarily abandoned, and the people fortified themselves in Rockville, that place contained over three hundred families. Now it consists of the narrow valley, in which it is situated. It has a number of comfortable residences, surrounded by beautiful orchards and vineyards. As in the other lands the farming land is very limited, as most of what once was long ago went down stream to augment the sandmasses along the Gulf of California. The Rockville ward consists of 37 families, or 251 souls, under the presidency of Bishop Gottlieb Hirschi. It includes the little village of Shubensburg situated on the south fork of the Rio Virgen, about four miles above Rockville.

Springdale is the upper ward on the Rio Virgen (the settlements in Long Valley excepted). This ward consists of 18 families or 119 souls, living in a scattered condition along the north fork of the Rio Virgen. It is quite a prosperous little place, as the people here have not the trouble in controlling their irrigation water like their neighbors who are situated on the main stream. Springdale is a very romantic spot in the mountains, the surrounding canyons, perpendicular bluffs, lofty peaks and innumerable other natural formations, forming one of the wildest and most interesting landscapes in America. The central point of Springdale (first settled in 1892) is about four miles northeast of Rockville and 4½ miles northeast of St. George. Wm. R. Crawford is the Bishop, and he is the only official of that grade in the Church that I have met so far who wears his hair so long that it rests upon his shoulders in regular cowboy style. The now almost defunct settlement known as Northport, situated at the junction of the north and east forks of the Rio Virgen, two miles above Rockville, belongs to the Springdale ward.

About Springdale about seven miles, is the place designated on some maps of Utah as Zion. It consists of a lovely little place shut in on all sides by lofty perpendicular mountains, but nobody lives there now. The people in the south call it "Not Zion," owing to a circumstance connected with one of the visits which President Young made many years ago to the settlements on the Rio Virgen. Having learned of the existence of this romantic spot, the President set out with his company from Rockville to visit the same, but after traveling several miles up the canyon through which the north fork passes, he suddenly stopped, and, addressing his traveling companions, said: "Brethren, this is not Zion." He then turned around, followed by his company, since which the place has been called "Not Zion."

Having spent a pleasant time with the good people in the settlements named, holding well attended meetings in each place, I returned to Toquerville, and in there started for Harmony in the morning of April 25th. About eight miles north of Toquerville I passed through Bellevue, which years ago was quite a village, but now only occupied by three families, over whom Elder Andrew Gregerson presides in a branch capacity, the place being under the jurisdiction of the Toquerville ward. Continuing my journey up Ash Creek, over the famous Black Ridge, which separates the lower Dixie country from the colder and higher regions, I soon reached the old John D. Lee location on Ash Creek, where there is only one ranch at present, thence I passed the site of Old Harmony to the present town of that name, which is pleasantly situated in an open valley, at the base of the Pine Valley mountains, at an elevation of about 5300 feet above the level of the sea. This place is cool and healthy, and the people prosperous. Thirty-one families and 119 souls constitute the strength of the ward, and William A. Redd is the Bishop. Harmony is forty-two miles, by roundabout road northeast of St. George, fifteen miles from Bellevue and twenty-one miles southwest of Cedar City. A public meeting held at Harmony, and another special meeting with the older settlers of the place finished my historical labors in the St. George Stake of Zion, which of all the Stakes I have visited so far, has been the most difficult to write up, owing to the very extensive territory over which its numerous wards and branches are scattered.

The St. George Stake of Zion embraces all of Washington County, Utah, a part of Lincoln County, Nevada, and the extreme northwest corner of Arizona. It consists of twenty-one fully organized wards, some of which are divided up into a number of branches. Whenever the members of the Stake Presidency or others have to visit all the wards and branches in the Stake, it means a journey of nearly five hundred miles over the worst roads imaginable. The numerical strength of the Stake last February was as follows:

One Patriarch, 224 Seventies, 175 High Priests, 315 Elders, 36 Priests, 52 Teachers, 282 Deacons, 2157 lay members and 1416 children under eight years of age, making a total of 4658 souls, divided into 811 families. The largest ward in the Stake is the St. George Fourth Ward with 625 members or 105 families, and the smallest is the Price Ward with 64 souls or 13 families. I spent nearly seven weeks traveling in the St. George Stake, and was everywhere treated with that kindness and hospitality which is characteristic of genuine Latter-day Saints. The special meetings which I held were as a rule very well attended, and the instructions imparted appreciated and accepted in the true spirit and meaning thereof. For many years to come I shall hold the good people of Southern Utah in the highest esteem, and ever pray for their welfare and prosperity.

ANDREW JENSON.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 4, 1892.

COIN MONEY.

The American Banker, published in New York, in its issue of July 2, 1892, contains the proceedings, or official report, of the annual meeting of the Missouri Bankers' Association for 1892, held at Sedalia on June 9 and 10 last. Among the papers read at the meeting is one by John Cary Russell, cashier of the National Bank of the Republic, of St. Louis, on coin money—ancient, present and future. The paper is well considered, contains much information of general value and interest, and as published in the American Banker is as follows:

"It is recorded in the Bible that 2000 years B. C., Abraham sent out one of his servants to secure a wife for his son Isaac; he gave him earrings of gold and bracelets of silver; these the servant gave to a beautiful young woman and asked her to become the wife of Isaac. The gold earrings and silver bracelets proved so great a temptation that she accepted Isaac and forthwith became his wife; Abraham purchased the Cave of Machpelah for 400 pieces of silver—the first commercial transaction with silver as a medium of exchange, on record. Abimelech gave Abraham 1000 pieces of silver, and a woman came out of Egypt rich in cattle, silver and gold. We also read that the Israelites on their coming out of Egypt 'borrowed' silver trinkets, earrings, plate and jewelry and gold of the Egyptians and thereby received pay for their years of slavery.

"From the first a great deal of silver and gold was used in the shape of jewels, earrings and bracelets, which were made of standard weight, which could either be worn or sold as the necessity of the owner demanded. From the Egyptian monuments we learn that they weighed gold, had balances to weigh it in, and that their silversmiths were wonderful workers in the precious metals.

"The Egyptians were great traders with other nations, their own country not producing metals; they would sell corn and receive their pay in silver and gold. The Egyptian records show that they were not among the early coiners of money (Marc Antony probably introduced coinage into Egypt).

"We read in the Bible where Jacob sent his sons down into Egypt to buy corn, and after they had bought the corn that Joseph put their pieces of silver back into their sacks, thereby returning to them the price of the corn. We also read that in the Temple service money was used to purchase doves and animals for sacrifices and to redeem the first-born son. All this money was used as merchandise, being cut up into pieces of certain weight, and for a long time called pieces of money, afterwards shekels and half shekels. The word shekel meant weight. Silver and gold were used in all the known nations at this time as a medium of exchange and as merchandise, and it went into the manufacture of plate, decorations of houses, Temples, jewelry, etc.

"It was not long before the image of the ruling king was stamped upon the coin, and this was what led to its extensive use as a circulating medium. It came to be taken as representing the government of the period, and it began to circulate on account of the image of the king and the name of the kingdom which was stamped on it. When the kings saw this, they being a little vain, concluded that any kind of metal would circulate with their image and the name of their great empire upon it; so they put their image and their government stamp on copper, tin and other base metals, and tried to circulate it as money, and to a limited extent it did circulate; but the people were not disposed to take it in any great quantities, and it was used as a subsidiary coin.

"It appears from investigation that coin money came into existence in some country near Palestine and Lydia, as the earlier records are from this immediate section of the globe, with the exception of China. The Chinese claim to have used coin money 800 B. C. I think they got their knowledge of the use of money from the traders who made the great roads through Palestine. We read in the Bible of there being roads for foreign traders passing from the section of country which is now China to Egypt and the ancient cities of South Europe. Silver and gold were surely coined in a small way 1,000 years B. C., but were mostly given correct values by actual weight. Lydian coins were called staters, and a gold stater of Miletus 800 B. C. is of record. By 720 B. C. the Lydian kings were trying to circulate base coin in the shape of electrum staters of different standards. Croesus ascended the throne of Lydia B. C. 568, and reorganized the coinage of Lydia. Croesus saw a good thing in issuing money, and he put it on a solid basis and issued coin money at a profit to his country and to himself. History proves that he became the wealthiest man in the then known world, and that he must have made something by the coinage and issuing of money. He also circulated copper and other subsidiary coins. Croesus was a great banker and became the leader of the world of finance. About this time the Grecian empire came into power, and having copied the coinage system of Croesus, circulated its money over the known world, and other nations were not slow to recognize a good thing, and from this date, 500 to 600 B. C., coinage spread rapidly.

"The earliest coins mentioned in the Bible were called drachma, B. C. 538. Shekels and half-shekels are first mentioned in the Bible under Ezra, B. C. 458, and were of Palestine.

"Copper coins were struck by the Herodian family 139 B. C., and were considerably circulated, and were called by the Jews base money, which shows they did not like to use it. At the time of Croesus, copper coins of small denominations were used by most of the nations to a limited extent as subsidiary coin. From the first, silver coin was the principal money used, as it is at the present date. Gold was the most precious and was not found in sufficient quantities for the circulating medium. The drachm of Sybaris was issued 800 B. C. On each side of this coin was an ox. The tetradrachm of Alexander I., of Macedon, was issued 500 B. C., and on one side of this was a horse and a man. Hieron, of Syracuse, 475 B. C., issued a piece of money called drachm, with his picture on one side and a chariot driven by a man with four horses attached to it on the other. About this date came into existence the first bank of which we have record. This institution was established at Babylon, B. C. 518, and existed over one hundred years, as shown by its records. Its name was Egithe Bank. This bank probably used coinage of this period, and we think that it had considerable Macedonian, Hebrew, and coinage of its own country, Babylon, in its vaults. Some of the bills receivable or notes due this bank are now in the British Museum. The notes were written on little round clay cylinders, which were put in stone jars. These records were lately unearthed at Babylon.

"We also find Athenian didrachm coined 470 B. C., and Syracusan tetradrachm, of Dionpeios, 408 B. C. During the prime of Macedonian Empire, about 336 B. C., coins were very common. We have also record of shekels of Simon Maccabaeus, 140 B. C., and gold coins of Augustus, 37 B. C., also gold coins of Brutus, 509 B. C., also coins with picture of Marc Antony—a clear pattern—33 B. C.

"At the time of Christ we are well informed in the Bible about coin. Silver was the principal money, but considerable gold was imported into Palestine from the Roman empire. We know that the principal currency at that time was silver, because the blood of Jesus Christ was bought for thirty pieces of silver, and the piece of money St. Peter found in the fish's mouth, a d with which he paid taxes, was also silver. The latter fact shows that silver was the legal tender at that time. The thirty pieces of silver were worth about $20 of our money, and a shekel was about 33 cents.

"Payment of money at the Temple for the services, and receiving money as a ransom of the first-born, etc., is mentioned many times, and the common expression about coin was, "As much as the value thereof." From the time of Christ until the present day our history is complete on coinage, and it shows that silver and gold have been used for ages as the principal money of the world.

"We see that all the civilized nations are either using both of the metals or either one, and where gold is used, silver is generally in use as subsidiary coinage. Iron, tin and copper coins were made, but failed to receive much of a circulation. The Herodian dynasty used silver, gold and copper at the time of Christ, and it has been used from that day to this—silver as the principal circulating medium and gold as the more valuable, and most of the time too dear to circulate; copper as subsidiary coin.

PRESENT COIN MONEY.

"Gold, silver, nickel and copper constitute our present coin circulation. The principal money used is silver. There are 600,000,000 people who use silver almost exclusively as a circulating medium. There are 200,000,000 who use gold as their standard of value, but even these 200,000,000 use more silver than gold. Among the greatest nations of the earth is our own, and we use more silver as money than we do gold. We have been using silver in one sense of the word as subsidiary coin, but, in fact, use it as standard money. Our law has made it almost equal to gold as a legal tender. We see the same thing in England and France. England uses a great deal of silver in her provinces, such as India and Australia, and in these provinces silver is almost the only money known. The Bank of England is a large owner of silver; and the Bank of England notes, which circulate so largely in England, are based largely upon the silver reserve. The Bank of France also has a silver reserve. The other coins that we use are nickel and copper. These are used as subsidiary coins, which are the promise of our government to pay coin, and are not extensively used.

FUTURE COIN MONEY.

"The great question for years has been to establish an international coinage system. This can only be done through fraternity of nations; and if we could get the principal nations of the world to agree on a uniform standard of weight, measure and coinage, we would have the problem settled forever. For instance, if all the nations of the world would agree to take one grain of gold as a value of twenty grains of silver, we could make a standard piece of money. Coinage, weights and measures adopted by an international conference would make it very little trouble to carry out this scheme. The next improvement would be an international clearing house, the nations to clear through the Bank of England probably. Suppose we put on one side of coinage a national stamp and on the other an international stamp. In this way gold or silver of one country could be exchanged or returned, or balances paid to another. The old plan of undervaluing silver and making it a subsidiary coin was and is a great mistake. We ought to put as much silver into a dollar as a dollar in gold will buy, even if we have to put twenty-five to one. We must use up large quantities of silver and in this way take it out of the market. If we make silver dollars as large as cart wheels we can build a large treasury and put them in, and issue silver certificates in place of them. Cart wheel silver dollars would be bought for speculation by bankers who would figure on other nations following our example. An international silver world, by buying silver with gold and putting all the silver that gold dollars would buy into silver dollars, would soon decrease the world's supply of bullion to such an extent that the ratio would have to be lowered to have enough silver for money. We have seen that silver has been used for such a number of years, and at the present day, 90 per cent. of the people of the world use silver as a medium of exchange in transacting their business, and not more than 10 per cent. is done in gold. For that reason I do not see how we could spare silver.

"I think that we ought to go forward and urge our Congressmen to use their utmost endeavors to have this international system of coinage, weights and measures adopted, and that we ought to bring this matter before all our State bankers' associations and get their recommendations and urge them to work for this earnestly. I think money is not only a political question, but is one for every man, and that we, as bankers, should urge politicians, farmers and others to support this measure."

THE "LIBERAL" FORCE.

The recent discovery by certain newspaper representatives and members of the City Council of Ex-Chief of Police Janney, Ex-Sergeant George A. Sheets, Ex-City Detective Al. Ecklund and Police Justice Keeler in a disreputable den on Franklin Avenue, the sensational disclosures which followed, the dark lantern inquisition which was held by Mayor Baskin in his executive chamber, and the removal of the offending officers, together with attending events continue to be the main topic of discussion.

Mayor Baskin's reflections upon the councilmen who unearthed the rottenness existing in the police department is almost unanimously denounced by Federal officials, prominent business men and citizens generally irrespective of their political or religious views.

The Mayor's communication which was spirited away at the Council meeting on Tuesday night has been returned to the recorder's office and is now on file among the other papers of the meeting. Following is the document in full:

SALT LAKE CITY, July 5, 1902.

To the President and City Councilmen: Gentlemen—I hereby remove Edgar M. Janney as chief of police, and appoint in his place Samuel Paul; also, remove Policeman Ecklund and Sergeant Sheets from the police force and submit my action in the premises for your confirmation.

The facts upon which I base this action are contained in the testimony herewith attached and which was taken in the presence of the officers removed, as, also, in the presence of Fred Keeler, police justice, and Councilmen Folland, Rich, Horn and Evans.

An inspection of this testimony will show that the persons removed have been guilty of conduct unbecoming officers of the city. It will also show that Police Justice Keeler and Councilmen Folland, Rich, Horn and Evans have likewise been guilty of conduct equally unbecoming. But as the Police Justice does not belong to the police force, and received his appointment at your hands, and as I am not authorized by law to deal with the cases of the councilmen, I submit this matter together with the facts, for your consideration, that you may take such action as in your judgment the facts demand. Respectfully submitted,

R. N. BASKIN, Mayor.

A well known business man of this city and a "Liberal" member of the police committee of the preceding City Council said today: "As a member of the police committee during the last administration I was frequently called upon to make similar tours of investigation in the interests of the city, and had Mayor Scott interfered with our plans or reprimanded myself or associate councilmen for our work in this respect, we would have told him to take a trip to the regions where his Satanic majesty presides and where his imps hold high carnival. The Mayor has absolutely no right to prevent the councilmen from doing their duty and the insult he has offered them should, in my opinion be resented."

The Whole Story.

Fragments of the unwelcome affair have been published in the local dailies for the past two weeks, but as the narrative is somewhat difficult to understand in a disconnected form, we herewith publish a concise and correct statement of what the reporter and councilmen saw and testified to and how the discovery was brought about.

On the night of June 17th last a representative of this paper determined to ascertain the correctness of certain serious charges which had come to his ears concerning the actions of Officer Albright. Accordingly, after the adjournment of the City Council at 11 o'clock on the night designated, he started out on his journey alone. Suspecting that the character of the place to where his mission would take him was not the best, he hesitated at going unaccompanied. He accidentally met Mr. Ed. Evans, city editor of the Salt Lake Evening Times and asked him to go with him. That gentleman readily consented and the place to which they went (on Fourth South street) was soon afterwards reached. Both gentlemen were admitted into the house and after stating their business were ushered into the east parlor. A few minutes later Miss Rose Miller, who had made the charges against Albright, entered the room. She refused to repeat them except on condition that her name and place of residence be withheld from publication. This was assented to providing certain developments would not arise, and with tears coursing down her cheeks the woman told the story of Albright's alleged cruelty and threats to her as published in the News and Times on the evening of June 18th last.

Miss Miller's version of her troubles with Albright was reduced to writing when there was a vigorous knock at the front door. It was responded to by the landlady and the following gentlemen entered: Councilmen Lawson, Folland, Evans, Rich, Horn, Deputy United States Marshal Glenn, and Street Supervisor Hines, who had met the councilmen on their way to this place and followed them without knowing where they were going or their object. Rumors regarding Albright had also reached the ears of the police committee and they had also determined to make an investigation for their own information and for the benefit of the city. Of course they were very much surprised when they found that they had been anticipated by the reporters. Councilman Lawson requested the latter to keep the matter quiet but was informed by them that they had the story; that the charges were serious and that it was their province to expose and not cover up iniquity and consequently the facts in the case would be made public. No further protests were made and the Miller woman related the same story to the councilmen that she had just narrated to the reporters and appealed to her auditors for protection, which they promised to give her.

The entire party left the house after having been there not to exceed half an hour. At the gate Messrs. Lawson and Glenn started east saying they were going home. They did not join the party again that night.

In the meantime it became known that Marshal Janney and other officers of the police department were at Hattie Wilson's on Franklin Avenue, and someone suggested that the visitors go home via that thoroughfare. When they arrived in front of the establishment designated, the sounds of piano playing, singing, dancing and laughter were heard from within. The party hesitated in the darkness on the sidewalk for two or three minutes and then touched the electric bell. The sounds of revelry were immediately hushed and there was a grand rush of the inmates from the south to the north side of the house, which is separated by a long hallway.

The councilmen and reporters were given seats in the south parlor. Inquiries were gratuitously made as to whether Marshal Janney and his men were there. Evasive or negative replies were given and the councilmen left. As they went out of the house one of their number declared that he had seen Janney peering through the window and suggested that they go back. They were at their wits ends to know how they could see the chief, even if they went back, and asked the reporters to return and make arrangements with the proprietress. This was done and the plan worked admirably. To say that the chief and his men were surprised does not express it.

Justice Keeler was lying full length upon his back smoking a cigar, and Councilman Rich humorously referred to him as "blind justice." Janney, Sheets and Ecklund were on the floor mingling and carousing with the inmates of the place. Janney called for beer but the proprietress refused to accept the money from him when it was tendered as payment. Janney drank and so did most of the others. It is positively known that Evans, Folland and the reporters did not drink. It is also believed that Sheets and Ecklund did not drink. Beer was ordered and drunk probably three or four times, the gentlemen named refusing each time with the exception of Janney, who drank whenever the tray was passed to him. The latter implored the councilmen not to injure him, and one of his officers wished to know if the party came as friends or enemies.

At Janney's solicitation all of the party excepting Mr. Evans, who went to the Kaufman for a few minutes, visited No. 5, a similar resort on Plum Alley. Here beer was ordered and drunk as before, the same gentlemen again attaining. Here Janney became intoxicated and went through the movement of a kind of go-as-you-please dance with the proprietress. A good deal of singing was indulged in. Mr. Evans reappeared at this stage of the junketing trip, and the party disbanded and went home. Horn and Hines did not visit the last place.

The foregoing is a synopsis of what was testified to before the Mayor and its accuracy can be relied upon.

A great deal of dissatisfaction is expressed regarding the stenographic report of the testimony as published in this morning's Tribune. Some of the gentlemen who testified say they are made to give negative replies when they answered in the affirmative and vice versa. The effect that this would have can thus be imagined. In justice to the stenographer it can be said that the fault is not all his. The mistakes, however, have been made and in consequence those who gave testimony are placed in an improper light before the public.

IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Kindly give me space in your columns to show the narrowmindedness of some of our enemies in South Carolina. The News has some circulation in the South, and through its medium would be a good way to get the true facts before the people. I have written to two of the papers here, but they are too one-sided for any use; seemingly they are afraid of the truth concerning the Latter-day Saints.

One of the "citizens" of Harry County, South Carolina, made an attack on "Mormonism" in the Harry Herald, which is misleading and the cause of new and persecution. I attempted to reply to the article wherein the writer accused us of "preaching polygamy to the people private," "of putting our converts under iron-bound oaths" and "wearing them to eternal secrecy," also "holding in our doctrine that women have no soul," and the "only way she can avoid annihilation is to immediately form a bond of union according to the Mormon Church;" that those who have accepted the Gospel and emigrated, dare not send a letter home to friends without first submitting it to a vigilant committee and all objectionable matter stricken therefrom;" that we "Elders are agents employed on large salaries by the Mormon Church to play upon the passions of the ignorant," and a great deal more such stuff as that which is utterly false and they have refused to publish anything in favor of us.

Here is a copy of what I sent to the paper named, but the editor instead of publishing it, threw out more insults and lies about us.

"Editor of Herald, Harry Co., S.C.

I feel in duty bound to make a reply to a piece recently printed in your paper on 'Mormonism' and I trust to your honor as a gentleman that you will publish the same; and "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

This is a free country; its Constitution was framed by inspired men, and sealed with their blood; and why do men who pretend to be Christians try to prohibit the exercise of freedom in religious matters? Why do they try to take from us that which our parents so nobly fought and died for? Our parents came from the old countries to escape the hand of oppression, and here found laws guaranteeing the right to everybody to worship God according to the dictates of conscience; and those who try to prohibit people from that exercise are rebels unto the government under which we live.

The accusations made against the "Mormons" are calumnious and libelous, and it is not just on the part of any person to judge and condemn a man or a community without hearing both sides. We do not preach any doctrine we are ashamed of, and I will assure you we are willing to "pass it around and herald the good news abroad." Give us a chance and we will herald it, and from us one can get the truth about the Mormons and their doctrines, but from our enemies or from the enemies of any people you can expect but little truth. In receiving the history of Christ do you accept the testimony of the unbelieving Jews or the testimony of the believing ones and His friends? The testimony of the believing ones or his followers you accept, then why not accept the evidence given by our friends?

Yes, the United States did enact laws prohibiting the practice of polygamy anywhere in the territory; and the "Mormons," being a law-abiding people, abandoned that practice. The "Mormons" believe in being subject to kings, presidents, rulers, and magistrates, in obeying, honoring and sustaining the law." When the law was passed prohibiting polygamy, and proven to be constitutional, the "Mormons" also passed laws in their Church, a manifesto, which debarred its members from practicing that principle, therefore making it a Church crime.

Why not give the "Mormons" credit for what good they do? If they are not a good people, why not take steps to convert them from their evil ways and not kick them because they're down, but lend them a helping hand God will forgive you your trespasses as you forgive those that trespass against you. "Mormons" do not preach nor teach polygamy in public or private, but hold it as a dead issue, and would be willing for it to remain buried in circuit riders and some liberal (?) politicians would not rake it up. Myrthen that, it is unfair to condemn a people for what a few have done.

We do not put our "converts under an iron-bound oath," and they are free to accept or reject the Gospel as the people of any denomination on earth. There have been upwards of seventy John the so-called "Mormons" in this section of the vineyard which have been baptized at public baptisms where hundreds of people have witnessed it and no "wearing to eternal secrecy" took place.

We do not claim that the "good women haven't any soul." The accusation is utterly false and without foundation.

Women converts who have emigrated to Utah or other localities are free to write what they will to friends or relatives in any country. There are hosts of people in Utah who are not "Mormons," and I wish to say also that Utah is in the United States too. I have had people, who pretended to be intelligent, ask me how many days I was on the water coming to Utah, and some think the vessel only sails from Utah about every six months.

We are not sent out as "agents employed by the 'Mormon' Church to play upon the passions of the ignorant." We come to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ unto the people and warn the wicked of their evil ways and do good to our fellowmen, and I can assure you we bear our own expenses and look to the Lord for our pay and not to man. The "disgusting romances" published on "Mormonism" are written by our enemies, and if you want the truth, go to a friend and not to some narrow-minded enemy.

We appeal to the world for justice and fairness to be meted out to us, and all other people in our great republic. If we are a free people let us prove it by our works. Even here in this "enlightened" country people know but little about the Latter-day Saints outside of the exaggerations and misrepresentations of our opponents. Therefore I ask you to investigate from an unprejudiced standpoint into the "Mormon" question; for "Mormonism," as it is called, is actually the same identical Gospel that was taught by Jesus Christ; exactly the same as the apostles were sent out to teach which caused so much contention, strife and opposition. They were everywhere spoken evil of, whipped, imprisoned, their names cast out as evil, and many other outrages heaped upon them; always misunderstood by the majority, yet they accomplished what the Lord sent them to do, and it should be a reminder for people today, that Christians don't persecute; but are the ones who receive the persecution, and if they call the "master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?"

HENRY S. TANNER.

THE INDIAN MISSION.

A word from the Indian Territory may be of interest to some of your readers.

Since the visit of President Kimball and Elder Dolton the Elders have labored energetically, endeavoring to present the truths of the Gospel to the people. All have enjoyed good health up to the present time, with the exception of President Merrill, who has had a short spell of chills.

The work on the meeting house is progressing favorably and is now nearing completion. Much credit is due to Elder Rawlins for his untiring energy, especially considering the many difficulties he has had to contend with.

The labors of the Elders during the last six months have been principally in the Cherokee and Choctaw nations. Many public school houses have been built of late. To many of these the Elders have had access, and opened the way for us to hold public meetings. These have been well attended on nearly all occasions. The principles of the Gospel have thus been presented to many persons whom it would otherwise be difficult to reach during the busy season of the year.

The Elders have been treated with kindness and hospitality. Much prejudice has undoubtedly been removed from the minds of the people, many of whom knew nothing of the true status of the "Mormon" people, their doctrines or motives, their minds having been poisoned from what they had read or heard previously. But when truth is brought to bear error flees away.

Reports from Elders Allen and Woodbury who recently returned to the Chickasaw nation, show that the opening made last winter is still favorable. Many warm friends remain true to them, and are glad to welcome them back again. They will visit the Seminole nation and endeavor to make an opening while there. Some of the Elders will also visit the Osage during the summer.

The recent high waters and floods have done more or less damage to crops, more especially to cotton. More rain fell during one season than the oldest settlers could remember before.

The mission, generally, is in a prosperous condition. Several baptisms have taken place. The Elders are in the enjoyment of good health, and are unitedly laboring for the spread of truth and the welfare of the mission.

The News comes regularly to hand, and is gladly received. When we have read it, it is promptly mailed to others. We thus find it a great aid to us in our labors, assisting to remove the prejudice from the minds of the people and to sow the seeds of truth.

P. H. PETERS.

THE DESERET WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED BY
THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY.
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, . . . $2.50
Per Volume, of Twenty-six Numbers, . . . 1.50
IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. FENROSB, EDITOR.

Saturday, . . . July 16, 1892

INFORMATION FROM MEXICO.

We have received a letter from President A. F. Macdonald, of the Mexican colonies of Latter-day Saints. It is dated at Colonia Juarez, Chihuahua, June 24th, 1892, and as the communication and enclosures will be of considerable interest to many of our readers who have friends in the region from whence they have been sent, we here give their substance. Following is the major portion of the correspondence:

"Enclosed are clippings from El Paso Times of June 14th, and from the Headlight of June 15th. The first brings us notice of the death of our friend, Consul Escobar, who will be remembered by many of the Elders who have visited Mexico, for his uniform kindness, liberal and enlightened views and the pleasure he experienced in the progress of his country.

"The second clipping relates to American Consul Willard, of Guaymas, Sonora. He will be remembered by Apostle B. Young and party who visited the Yaqui country in the fall of 1884. He was the only man who spoke an encouraging word for that mission, from the governor of the State down to the captain of the port of Guaymas and the Romish priest who invited us to confess our sins and prepare for death if we persisted in going to visit the Yaquis, as they would kill us. However, we made the trip and returned, yet a lying spirit is still prevalent against the native tribes for war has continued against them through misrepresentation and abuse they could not endure. As a whole they are the most industrious and hardworking people in the State of Sonora, and deserve better of their government.

"Yesterday we had a rain and a prospect for more, which is much needed, as stock are poor and some dying from scarcity of feed; yet the wheat crop proves better than was expected, as the cool nights favored it, although the days were dry and warm. We anticipate good crops of corn and, if we have plenty of rain, grass and hay will be abundant.

"The early starting of railroad work on the Deming and New Mexico road and paying for the work already done would release many of our people, who are cramped for means, realizing nothing as yet for their labors and for having neglected their crops in order to do the work on the railroad, which it is hoped they will learn to avoid in future."

The following is from the article referred to as having appeared in the El Paso Times of June 14th:

"The funeral of Con. Josue Escobar Armendariz, who died of chronic Bright's disease Saturday, took place from his residence in Juarez Sunday. He was not buried with religious services owing to some little mistake relative to a compliance with the rules of the church, but eloquent and fitting services were made at his grave by Senor E. Provencio and Senor Romulo Escobar, a son of the deceased.

"For years the deceased has held the position of Mexican consul at El Paso. He enjoyed the confidence and esteem of President Diaz and was admired by his people here. He was a man of decided ability, of commanding appearance and most pleasant address. In his death the Republic of Mexico has lost an honorable and patriotic citizen."

Herewith is presented an extract from the article from the Deming Headlight, relating to the late U. S. Consul Willard:

His death has cast a painful gloom over a large circle of warm and admiring friends to whom his many noble qualities of head and heart had endeared him. He was but in manhood's prime, and being endowed with talents of a very high order, his career was one of usefulness crowned with honor.

"He filled the office of U. S. Consul at Guaymas, Mexico, for a period of over 20 years. The changes in the administration during that time did not deprive him of office, this being entirely due to his popularity with the Mexican authorities and the American residents at Sonora. He exercised his authority with dignity and honor, keeping peace and good fellowship between the two nations. Ever considerate and self-sacrificing, his chief pleasure was sought in advancing the interest of his people, and illustrating the dignity of his country.

The following from the paper last named, in reference to the resumption of work on the Deming-Mexico road, will be eagerly read by many people who are more or less directly interested in the subject:

"On yesterday's Santa Fe train there arrived in Deming a party of well known railroad men, prepared to resume construction on the Deming-Mexico road at once. The party comprised George M. Huss and George Townsend, of the firm of Huss, Townsend & Co., contractors; George L. Davis and A. J. Huss. Mr. Huss says the firm has been awarded the contract for the entire construction of the new road, and in view of the license allotted by the concession from the Mexican government for the completion of the work, are here to push matters with all possible speed.

"In conversation with a Headlight reporter Mr. Huss stated that the engineers would begin the preliminary work of surveying this morning, and within the next thirty days he would have a large force rushing the immediate work of construction.

"Mr. Huss expresses the utmost confidence that every thing will be arranged satisfactorily, and the work now constructed by the new management, that all differences have been adjusted and the money advanced by the stockholders for the work—that all the old concessionaires have signed their interest over to the English syndicate, and nothing remains to be done save to commence the work of construction. That is what Mr. Huss and his party are here for. Mr. Huss will remain here for some weeks, until everything is well started, and will thenforth divide his time between Deming and his home interests."

THE SILVER CONTROVERSY.

THE passage of the silver bill in the Senate of the United States was a great surprise to the country. The object of its passage just now is evidently political. Both parties fear the silver bill and its effects on the presidential election. That there are sincere silver men in both parties must be conceded. That each party contains men vehemently opposed to the free coinage movement cannot be disputed. But what does the country want? It must be clear to every unbiased mind that has given attention to both sides of the matter, that while the West and South demand an immediate return to the bi-metalism of the early days of the republic, the East, which has the vast majority of voters, is not converted to the western idea, but views free coinage as threatening financial disaster instead of promising the good thing which the silver men predict for its adoption.

Whatever the politicians of either party may claim to the contrary, neither Harrison nor Cleveland favors the policy embodied in the bill that has so unexpectedly passed the Senate. They each have too broad a comprehension of the divided feeling of the public, and an understanding of the preponderance of popular sentiment against free silver, to openly espouse its cause. And it seems to us that while free silver Republicans and Democrats should be urgent in pressing their claims upon Congress and the country, they should not close their eyes to the fact of the Eastern sentiment, nor to the difficulties which confront both of the candidates for the Presidency.

It is probable, however, that the silver bill will be so manipulated by its opponents of both parties in the House, that it will not reach a vote on its merits before the great political contest which is to culminate in November. This will relieve the present Administration greatly, and do no damage to the opposing party.

CHURCH AND STATE.

ABOUT three years ago the Legislature of Illinois enacted a compulsory education law, the main feature of which is that the English language be made the medium of education in all schools, public and private, throughout the State. The Germans raised an active agitation against the law, but it still remains on the statute books. A similar law was enacted in Wisconsin about the same time. The Germans there opposed it. Mr. Beck was then publishing a "funny" paper entitled Beck's Sun, in Milwaukee. He took up the school law, and made opposition to it one of the planks of the Democratic party platform. He was elected Mayor of Milwaukee, and later on Governor of Wisconsin, which office he still holds.

The Democratic party, by the aid of the German vote obtained control of the State legislature, and the obnoxious law was soon repealed. In fact the Republicans were afraid to make an issue of it, though several Democratic papers urged them to do so, and promised them active support. Notably the Chicago Herald was prepared to bolt its party on the question if the issue were raised.

The Germans of Illinois are now actively at work for the repeal of the law in their State. At a Lutheran conference held at Freeport three or four days ago, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"We, the German Evangelical Church, for our conscience's sake, demand of our government the absolute control of our school and educational system. Therefore, we demand: First, the repeal of the present unjust school law; second, the enactment of a new and just compulsory school law which shall declare against the following points:

"A. That the compulsory period for parochial schools begin at any certain time.

"B. That the child attend any certain school.

"C. That parochial schools be approved or supervised by any State official.

"D. That instruction be given in certain branches or a certain language.

"E. That State officials be empowered to take truants anywhere, but to their parents as long as the parents fulfill their lawful duties.

"F. The infringement upon the rights of parents in any manner.

"G. Allowing public money to be used for private purposes.

"H. Connecting Church and State in any manner.

"We solemnly protest against any class legislation pertaining to our parochial schools. We desire for ourselves to keep this question out of politics as long as possible. We will instruct our committee, however, to watch the evolution of the whole matter with due care and keep us posted, so that we can act intelligently."

The matter has been placed in the hands of a special committee, and the members of the church have pledged themselves to vote for the candidates and party which comes nearest to realizing the spirit of resolutions. The candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket, Judge Altgelt, is a native born German, but a Roman Catholic in religion, and is pronounced against the law. The Democratic party is as neutral as it possibly can be on this question. It would greatly oppose the law, but that it would run the risk of losing its Irish and American support.

AN ENEMY IN DISGUISE.

THE "Liberal" organ is still posing as the champion of O. W. Powers, and doing its best to stab him in the back. Everything it says concerning him attracts attention to things he has no desire to be discussed, and stirs up to activity proceedings that had better for his sake remain quiet.

In all this the organ exhibits its chronic infirmity of blindness as to logic, and its impudence in requiring an opponent to prove its own assertions or accept its bald statements as admitted facts. When we challenge it to give evidence to support its rash and groundless charges, it wants us to hunt for and develop that evidence, and when we announce that we are ready with the record of certain matters it accuses us of trying to "silence a record."

As to the Bullion Beck litigation, if it wants the record of Judge Powers' action in that matter, and all the circumstances connected with it, we have the particulars on hand and will be ready when necessary to give them in full. We repeat, we have no wish to make any personal assault on any one connected with the affairs to which the "Liberal" organ has drawn attention, but when it comes to a needless issue we will be found to the front.

We return its advice not "to grow too confident or try by a bluff to silence a record," and draw its attention to the fact that we have nothing to silence, but that silence is its own best policy, unless, as we believe, it is eager to pillory instead of shield the Chief of the Tuscaraoras.

ONLY JUSTICE DEMANDED.

FROM the testimony adduced in the investigation before the Mayor, it appears that he was perfectly justified in removing the officers charged with conduct incompatible with their official positions. His strictures on the magistrate who seems to have shared in their orgies seem also to be warranted by the evidence. But his assault on the City Councilmen who obtained the proofs, simply because they did so, does not strike us as very consistent or fair to those gentlemen. Does the Mayor mean to say it was unofficial or wrong for public men to investigate for themselves the conduct of police officers suspected of gross improprieties? Does he mean to say that a private citizen would have no right to satisfy himself on that point? It is altogether probable that if it had not been for the vigilance of those Councilmen, the evil complained of would have gone on unrebuked and perhaps unknown even by the Mayor. Let us have light on this matter. But let us also have justice. If these gentlemen did their duty they must not be blamed for it even by the Executive of the city. The committee in this matter are expected to do what is right and nothing more.

CONGRESS. AND PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS.

THERE are two instances in the history of the United States in which the President and Vice President were elected by Congress. The first was in 1801, when Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr were so chosen. The second in 1824 when John Quincy Adams and John C. Calhoun were the choice. Twenty-four States participated in this election. There were four candidates, Henry Clay, W. H. Crawford, John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson. The total electoral vote was 261, necessary to a choice 131. Jackson received 99, Adams 84, Crawford 41 and Henry Clay 36. The election was thrown into the House and John Quincy Adams was elected President, but John C. Calhoun having received 182 electoral votes for Vice-President, there was no question about his place.

If Calhoun had not received a majority of the electoral vote the Senate would have elected the Vice-President. The Constitution provides that the House elect the President by States, a majority being necessary to a choice, while the Senate must take the two candidates having the highest number of votes for Vice-President and elect one by a majority of that body. There is considerable speculation about the probability of the next choice for President and Vice-President being determined by Congress.

Forty-four states are represented in the present House of Representatives.

The unit rule prevails, a majority of the State congressional delegation decides. The successful candidate would require twenty-three states, but there are thirty states in which a Democratic majority prevails. Hence the Democratic candidate would be certain of election unless the Farmers' Alliance men in the House should develop more strength than they at present seem to possess.

The Senate would elect the Vice-President, and as that body is Republican by a decided majority, the election of the Republican candidate would be assured. So that if the selection of President and Vice-President should go to Congress next winter, it may safely be stated that Grover Cleveland and William Reid would be the chosen ones. This would be an anomaly, and the situation would be decidedly unique, as both parties would thus have representation. At present, however, the subject is merely conjectural, but such a result appears within the range of possibility.

A FUNNY AFFAIR.

AND NOW O. W. Powers wants some money from the DESERET NEWS. Not at all surprising. There is no "Liberal" election at hand and prospects are not good for presents. We do not think he expects to get anything from the NEWS, but he does want to make a sensation. Even that will not work. It is one of the flattest things of the kind ever attempted. It is even thinner than the "Chief Justice Lochrie" affair. All that is necessary now is to refer our readers to the "complaint," which will be found in another part of this paper and which, but for its length, ought to have been placed in the funny column. However, a joke that needs explanation does not contain much humor, and if Powers had not explained what the DESERET NEWS "intended to convey" there would not be much point to his protest. As it is, people are wondering while they smile, what it is that he denounces as "false" and what in creation he "intends to convey" as a ground for damage. The only thing about it that surprises us is, why he didn't make a really serious matter of the thing and take the case before Lochrie.

IN A SAD WAY.

THE Tribune is still in a bad way. It is not only excited over the DESERET NEWS—an old source of irritation—but strikes right and left, above and below, and calls names at everything and everybody within reach.

THE DESERET NEWS is called "a coward" because it wants the Tribune to prove its charges against the gentlemen who sit down on the Tuscaraoras. The sub-committee are called "scrubs"—a pet epithet of the Tribune, because they were unflinching by anti-"Mormon" chestnuts. Senator Brice is again called "a liar" because the hearing was referred to that sub-committee as all other hearings on contests were. Senator Stewart, who used to be the Tribune's silver idol, which it worshipped almost daily, is now called "mad on the coinage question." The Third party or People's party is stamped as "the work of cranks, and not very honest cranks either." Mr. Clarkson, late Chairman of the National Republican Committee, is described as "not a level-headed man," but "grossly partisan," and "not a shrewd, all-round politician," or "a great party leader." Bourke Cochran's famous speech at Chicago is made out to be "w rds without great thoughts," "obtaining a prominence they never deserved;" and nothing in politics or in private or public life seems to suit the disturbed "Liberal" organ, except the "demand of O. W. Powers for knowledge" which the News is to be made to supply, and even that gives it but feeble gratification.

Why does not the Tribune stir itself a little, and give us some of the proofs and the "recor," which it said a day or two ago the DESERET NEWS wanted to "silence?" Can it do nothing more than generalize and throw mud in the shape of unspecific charges and epithets without facts to justify them? Poor thing! It is upset, evidently, by the fire-crackers and bombs and noisy enthusiasm which it once praised as "patriotism" but which it now petulantly calls a nuisance and plaintively demands shall be suppressed. The Tribune needs a straight jacket and an ice hat.

THE TWENTY-NINTH SCHOOL DISTRICT.

THERE is a petition before the County Court to divide the Twenty-ninth School District. On its face it looks reasonable. The district is very large and the distance from its northern to its southern, or from its eastern to its western boundary is great. The Forest Dale people naturally desire that their children shall have the benefits of tuition as near to their homes as possible.

But we are informed that the plans provided for the good of the district in its present form will include all that is needed in every section of the district. Also that if the division asked for is made, the trustees of the Twenty-ninth District will be materially injured financially while the plans devised for grading the schools will be spoiled.

It seems that in December, 1890, a tax was levied according to law for the erection of a school house, and this was supplemented by a further tax in December, 1891. This building is approaching completion, and the trustees have made contracts which will require further expenditures, for which they have become responsible. And it will require the taxes for the whole district to relieve them of the obligation.

There are primary schools in three parts of the district. The trustees propose to build a school house for the Forest Dale children. The building now in process is for a higher school to which the primary scholars in the sub-districts may graduate. This will save the necessity of sending them into this city or elsewhere for advanced education.

It is to be hoped that the County Court will take into consideration the welfare of the whole school district as at present constituted, and not make any divisions that will be a detriment to any part of it. And it is to be expected that the people of every section in that district will unite for the general benefit and promote harmony and progress in all its educational interests.

A REVOLUTIONARY SENTIMENT.

DISCONTENT and despair are increasing alarmingly in the great Republic. The evidences of these threatening conditions are multiplying all over the country. Some of the symptoms of dissatisfaction border on the anarchistic. One indication associated with the convention of the People's party is a powerful pointer. A banner was carried by one of the delegations emblazoned with the inscription:

"Congress — not the People — be Damned."

So far as reports go, no fault was found with this revolutionary sentiment, which practically means that the government of the country ought to be sent to perdition. When the size of the People's convention is considered, together with the large body of people the delegates represented, the significance of this indication of discontent can to some extent be measured. Not a voice was raised in protest against the hoisting aloft of this evidence of a revolutionary feeling. On the contrary the inscription was regarded with "great gusto." This feeling of antipathy is spreading. It is growing in intensity. It is not too much to expect that, in course of time, it will ripen into appropriate action. We believe that breakers are ahead of the ship of state. Every patriot should do his duty in seeking to preserve her from disaster.

THE GOVERNOR ON THE SITUATION

WE have come across the following in the Washington Post, published in that paper while Governor Thomas was on his recent visit to the East:

"Governor Thomas is an active and persistent worker for the interest of his section. He said yesterday that Utah was without question the most prosperous of the Western Territories, with a thrifty, industrious population of nearly a quarter of a million people. The Mormon question, according to the Governor, is rapidly settling itself, and sooner or later Utah will be in position to assume her proper place in the sisterhood of States. There is no doubt in the Governor's mind that the renunciation of the practice of polygamy by the leaders of Church is a finality and cannot be revoked, and the ultimate tendency of the dissolution of the Church party will be an honest division of the people on party lines everywhere throughout the Territory, and political education upon national issues, which heretofore have been of little importance, except where they touched local interests. Governor Thomas says that the appeal of the Church authorities for general amnesty came from the heart, and met with an universal response from the Gentiles of the Territory, who are confidently awaiting a favorable answer from President Harrison, while fully recognizing the causes of the delay in his decision. The material prospects of the Territory, according to the Governor, are in a magnificent condition. Salt Lake City is making phenomenal strides. Her great avenues are being paved with asphalt mined in the mountains of Utah. Splendid business blocks are going up in every direction, and the former antagonisms between classes of citizens are wearing away in the face of a common desire to advance the progress of the community."

THE CHOLERA SPREADING.

EUROPE is agitated by a dread of the spread of the cholera over that continent. The accounts of its extension over Russia are necessarily alarming, because thus far the plague is traveling over the route it has taken in times past in its devastating marches. One eminent Parisian physician expresses a belief that it will run the course it took in 1831 and 1837, when all Europe was in mourning in consequence of its ravages.

In reaching Europe this fearful plague has generally passed from Persia to the steppes of Tartary, Russia and the Baltic—extending also to Egypt and Turkey—thence through southern Europe.

An authority gives the following description of the disease:

"After some hours or days of simple relaxation of the bowels, vomiting commences, and occurs again and again, accompanied by frequent and extremely copious discharges downwards, at first of matters colored with bile as usual, but in the end of colorless and turbid fluid resembling water in which rice has been boiled. These discharges (often to the extent of gallons of liquid), succeeding each other with the most alarming rapidity, act as a drain upon the fluids of the body generally; and by the changes they effect upon the blood, contribute to bring about the state called collapse. In this condition, the patient lies motionless and apathetic, except when tormented by cramps, which are of frequent occurrence; the surface is cold; the finger-ends, lips and tip of the nose become livid; the eyes are deeply sunk in the sockets, and often bloodshot; the tongue is clammy; the breath without any sensible warmth when caught on the hand; the pulse is suppressed at the wrist, the breathing extremely slow and feeble, the heart just audible through the stethoscope. Purging and vomiting have ceased; even the urinary secretions are dried at its source. In fact, all the vital processes are nearly brought to a stand, and unless reaction comes, a few minutes, or at most a few hours, suffice to bring life to a close. Reaction in the most favorable cases is gradual and without acidities; it is not unfrequently, however, accompanied by fever, closely resembling typhus, and constituting at least in the temperate zone, one of the chief dangers of the progress of cholera."

Medicines are almost powerless in the treatment of the malady, except in the first stages. The leading preventives consist of cleanliness of person and surroundings, strict attention to diet and the avoidance of impure water.

The cholera plague visited the United States on June 21st, 1832, appearing first in New York City and extending rapidly to other populous centres. It appeared in this country in 1834, since which time it has not existed in epidemic form in this republic.

When it was prevalent in New York the leading physicians of that city agreed upon a prescription for the prevention of the disease and its cure in its incipient stages, as the best formula within their knowledge at the time. It was, for the benefit of the public, first published in the New York Sun, and in consequence has ever since been known as "the Sun cholera mixture."

A good many years ago the formula was published in the News. Numbers of people used it with excellent results in cases of ordinary cholera morbus. The preparation is probably too powerful for use in the cases of very small children, but excellent results have been derived from it by persons of more advanced years. The demand for it became quite extensive, and since the time referred to the drug stores of this city have generally kept it regularly on hand.

It has been held by some physicians that the real Asiatic cholera could not exist in our western climate. It is to be devoutly hoped that this view is correct. In this inter-mountain region we have, by the mercy of God, been free from many causes of devastations that have afflicted the world at large during the last few years. If the plague is destined to sweep over many portions of the globe, may the same immunity enjoyed here with regard to other calamitous conditions be accorded by Divine Providence in relation to that dreadful visitation.

Conviction seems to be settling down upon the minds of a great many people that the world is about to be swept by Asiatic cholera. This view is not only based upon the fact that the plague is taking the old route which has characterized its travels on previous visits, but because isolated cases are appearing in different parts of the globe simultaneously. It has appeared to a limited extent in London as well as Paris. While outside of Persia and Russia the cases may be designated as sporadic, yet these outcroppings of the disease indicate that the conditions are favorable for its assuming an epidemic form. It may be that this is the "desolating sickness" predicted by the Prophet Joseph Smith that is to pass over the earth "day and night," and the report of which will "vex all people." Many others of his prophecies are in course of fulfillment now, and this one will be verified in its time. Its fulfillment was to occur in the generation in which it was uttered. That is to say, there would be some of the people who were living at the time it was given who would not have passed away before the coming of the scourge.

THE BATTLE AT HOMESTEAD.

The details of the battle at Homestead, Pa., constitute one of the most thrilling stories in the history of our Republic. In real dramatic effect it throws sensational fiction into the shade. In contemplating the leading features of such a furious exhibition of ungoverned human passion, the emotions are naturally awakened, and then the light of thought flashes upon the danger of the situation, which exists in various stages of intensity in every quarter of the Union, threatening a popular revolution.

The casual reader of current events omits to mentally retain the lucid circumstances which lead up to occurrences of greater moment. It is one of the functions of journalism to recall them, and thus make a complete account at the moment when it reaches the point of absorbing interest.

Some week since the country was informed that a great strike was imminent at the Carnegie Iron and Steel works, at Homestead, Pa., and that many thousands of workmen would soon be out of employment in consequence. The basis of this expectation was the fact that the company had prepared a scale of wages, making a sweeping reduction, stated to vary from twenty to sixty per cent. The employees were informed that unless they acceded to the proposed terms by July 1st their places would be filled by non-union men. The company also declined to recognize the Amalgamated Association of Labor Unions. Mr. Frick, the manager of the works, was burned in effigy by the people, and in order to head off a strike, the establishment shut down, thus instituting a lockout.

The discharged employees were determined to prevent the introduction to the works of non-union workmen, and prepared to use force if necessary. In the meantime the company adopted measures of the most extraordinary character. The purpose of them was evidently to protect the works against attack and probably to run the establishment by non-union labor. Hence the building of a high fence, perforated with portholes, the laying of steam hose so that people approaching from without could be scalded by people in the interior, and the stringing of electric wires that assailants might be violently shocked by electricity.

These were the preliminaries for the establishment of a state of siege. All that was now necessary was to "mash the fort." A feint was made in this direction by the appearance upon the scene of the sheriff and ten deputies. They were informed by the people that they were not needed as there was no disposition on the part of the men to molest the property of the company. The sheriff and his forces then discreetly withdrew. To have done otherwise would have doubtless cost them their lives.

It appears that while the company made a pretense of protecting its property by the aid of the local officers, it had already engaged the services of about 300 Pinkerton men, who were located about six miles below the town ready to be brought on to the works in barges. They made the attempt, and the bloody conflict, the details of which are given in the dispatches, was precipitated.

We believe that the sympathy of the people of the country will go with the workmen as against the Pinkertons, without reference to which party fired the first shot. Those who had been subjected to the lockout regarded the advent of the hired fighters as an invasion, and, as they came from other States, there appeared to be ground for this view of the subject. Besides these improvised alleged detectives are necessary objects of popular detestation under any circumstances. They are warts on the social body of the Republic, a means by which the enemies of fair remuneration for labor can subjugate the masses to their decrees. They are a menace to the peace of the country, because their existence and employment is in direct opposition to the civilized method of settling labor disputes by means of arbitration. They and those who employ them usurp the functions of local and general government and unless the Pinkerton system is wiped out bloodshed and misery untold will be the inevitable result.

The battle is the most remarkable of its class on record, and exhibited the overwhelming power possessed by the masses when they are organized and ably led, as was the case in yesterday's conflict. The means employed on the part of the workmen constituted a unique combination, considering that the force was mobocratic. They brought into play a wide variety of weapons, including a cannon, dynamite bombs, burning oil, etc. It is unusual in such conflicts for the people to be victorious, but such was the case yesterday, and that outcome is apt to have a tremendous effect on future disputes. We have always held that when once the masses learn that they possess a power that is capable of sweeping everything before it, they will not fail to use it when they deem that the situation demands its exercise. The outcome of the terrible struggle at Homestead will doubtless act as an object lesson in that direction.

The barbarity of the populace, their tremendous rage and horrible cruelty were exhibited in the treatment accorded the Pinkerton men after the latter had surrendered and were being taken through the streets in custody. It afforded an illustration of the facility with which mankind pass from the condition of a thinking being to that of a bloodthirsty wild beast. This disgusting feature of the riot was relieved by one gleam of magnanimity. This was in the case of one of the detectives who stepped aside and, in a few words, stated to the mob that he had been deceived by those who employed him, otherwise he never would have engaged in the work he had undertaken. The crowd cheered him and permitted him to go unmolested.

In considering such a subject as that under treatment, one is naturally amazed at the paralysis of legal authority. It does not appear that even an attempt was made by regular officers to prevent or put a stop to the sanguinary struggle in which the combatants engaged for an end to slavery. Does this mean that the government is impotent to suppress an uprising of this description, and is compelled, through sheer weakness, to allow such a war of violence to be waged until one of the parties engaged surrenders to the other? If this be the situation one may well ask, "Are we drifting onward toward the breakers of mobocratic anarchy?"

Everything is being turned into account for political purposes. In a demand for investigation into the subject of the Homestead difficulty, the occasion is used for partisan effect. It seems to us that all considerations ought to be subordinate to the work of curing the evils with which our country is beginning to be seriously and threateningly afflicted. To wit, at least, be the position of patriots. How singular it seems, in a situation so serious, for our national lawmakers to ask for an investigation of the causes which led to the conflict, and in the same breath pretend to enumerate them! Let the causes be exhibited by the proposed congressional scrutiny of the subject. When they are fully and clearly determined, let an adequate remedy be formulated and applied.

There is a spell of peace at Homestead, Pa., the scene of the late terrible labor conflict. There is no assurance, however, that the pacific situation will be permanent. The struggle is liable to be resumed under new aspects and conditions at any moment.

A step that is sure to be taken in the near future is to place the works in possession of the company. The Governor of Pennsylvania announces that this will be done if it should require the entire resources of the State and General Governments to accomplish it. Whether the workmen will permit this possession to be attained peacefully remains to be seen. If they do, then comes the struggle which will in all probability ensue subsequently, when the company begins to carry out its determination to fill the places of the locked-out workmen by non-union men. Any step in that direction would be apt to precipitate a renewal of the conflict. There are several thousand people thrown out of employment by the present dispute. They well know that except they struggle their occupation is gone, unless they submit to the terms of the company, not only by accepting of the proposed wage reduction, but also by withdrawing from the labor unions, with which the company refuses, under any circumstances, to treat. It seems that they are confronted with the alternative of fighting or submitting.

In viewing this grave question, it must not be considered as merely local. It is largely national. The interests of labor and capital in the United States are involved in the outcome. Should the company be ultimately victorious, labor organizations will receive a stunning blow. This is well understood by the working classes, who are everywhere passing resolutions of sympathy with the workpeople of Homestead. Should the workers, on the other hand, triumph in this struggle, capitalists would receive a set back, and their dollars would be in increased danger.

It will be seen that the incentives are strong on both sides to refuse to yield anything, and that recent events indicate that the scruples about resorting to extreme and desperate measures are not very formidable. The end is evidently a no distance away yet.

THE CAUSE OF IT.

"There is a good deal of complaint in the city of dull business and poor collections. There are a good many idle men here and property values are not increasing."

That is from the Salt Lake Tribune. "Open confession" is said to be "good for the soul." But why is this? Salt Lake City in "Liberal" control was to fairly boom with prosperity and bribe with public improvements which were to triple the value of real estate.

The ten thousand dollars given to O. W. Powers for carrying the election, is claimed to have been a just reward for increasing the value of property. Yet it is a fact, demonstrable from the public records, that from the time when the steal of the city was accomplished, real estate transactions declined, and that while fictitious values were placed upon property for taxing purposes, the actual values decreased as well as the moral status of the municipality.

What a record, too, the "Liberal" police department has made! From its beginning to date it has been too shameful to publish in detail.

The present depression is the result of the "Liberal" policy pursued through the "Liberal" organ. It stands in the way of Utah's liberty and Utah's progress. It continually announces to the world that this is a country menaced by the "Mormons" who are in the majority. It proclaims to capital that this is no place to invest with safety, for statehood is imminent, and that means terrible things from the "Mormons" and the Priesthood!

"Dull times!" Yes, and we shall have dull times, men out of work and property values decreasing, while the "Liberal" organ and the adventurers it supports go through the land lying about the "Mormons" and discouraging all attempts to place Utah where she belongs. The Tribune may well lament, but it would do better to repent.

CONCERNING UTAH AND THE "MORMONS."

In The Church at Home and Abroad for July, the official organ of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, appears a generous article by the editor, Rev. Henry A. Nelson, on his visit to Salt Lake City, and one on the services in the Tabernacle which he attended. Dr. Nelson was one of the large company of Presbyterian ministers who came here in May on their way to the Assembly at Portland, Oregon. He gives a very fair description of this city, illustrated by a good engraving of the Temple block and its vicinity, and closes the article as follows:

"I cannot think that whatever is wrong or evil in this city and Territory will be more easily remedied, or avoided elsewhere, by ignoring what is good and desirable. It looks to me as if this remarkable people had made some valuable contributions to sanitary and economic science. By observing, honoring and imitating these, we shall not make them less willing to accept our help to the acquisition of any moral and religious truths which they need us to teach them."

Of the services in the Tabernacle the gentleman gives an accurate summary with some comments, to the spirit of which no exception can be taken. Referring to the remarks of one of the speakers on that occasion he says: "The testimony that he knows is not sufficient to make us know and to justify us in believing so much as he rests on his mere assertion." And in the closing paragraph of the article he says:

"Meanwhile let not our fellow-citizens who name themselves 'Latter-day Saints' ask of us acknowledgment of the Book of Mormon as of equal authority with the Bible until we see evidence of it such as that on which we thus accept and revere the Bible."

It was not claimed that the testimony of one man or more was sufficient to make other men know the facts testified of. But the testimony of sincere persons is very powerful in creating belief in the minds of other sincere persons as to the truth of that which is testified. And no one is asked to believe anything in the creed of the Latter-day Saints simply upon the statements of others. Yet Paul thought it part of his duty in his day to testify that he knew certain things in reference to Christ and His Gospel, and all the Apostles claimed "We speak the things we do know and testify of that we have seen." Reason, argument, statements of facts and Scripture quotations, followed by testimony as to personal knowledge of their truth, together form an array of evidence which thinking people may rationally consider, and all are consistent in a doctrinal discourse.

As to the Book of Mormon, the Latter-day Saints do not ask any acknowledgment, without evidence. And if there is not at least as much direct evidence that the Book of Mormon is a divine record as there is concerning the divinity of the Bible, we ask no man to accept it. The difficulty in the way is that the clergy of the age either refuse to investigate the claims of that Book, or examine them with minds made up against them. And usually the investigation is superficial as well as prejudiced, and the grounds alleged for its rejection would be equally applicable against the Bible which they accept.

As "one swallow does not make a summer," one discourse does not expound "Mormonism." And if the reverend gentleman's liberal advice in relation to the "good and desirable" contributions of the Latter-day Saints to "sanitary and economic science," be followed in regard to their contributions to theology, to inspired literature and to religious doctrine, we are of the opinion that many of the wise men of the day will greatly change their views as to the faith and books which are popularly classed as "Mormonism."

In the same magazine we find under the head of "Utah," a communication from Rev. Jas. Thompson of Smithfield. This forms a striking and unpleasant contrast to the frank and fair contribution of the editor. Mr. Thompson makes a vigorous effort to misrepresent the people among whom he lives, their acts and motives and their principles. To prove this we make a few extracts from his article.

"It is my opinion that the political movement on national lines is a scheme for Mormon power as far as they are concerned, and that every man that has gone hand and glove with them from the Liberal party has done so for mean, selfish purposes, and such can no more be trusted than the Mormons themselves."

"The Mormon people have no respect for the Sabbath day and in that respect there is no disagreement among them."

"They are open advocates of intemperance, holding that it is right and proper that a man should drink liquor as a beverage. In this there is no split among them and they most practically demonstrate their belief and are staunch and faithful supporters of the rum-sellers. As for their veracity and charity, they are well known and need no comment."

"The Mormon religion is a human religion, and is most admirably adapted to men in his corrupt natural state. (1) It takes for granted that man by nature is a religious animal. (2) It takes for granted that he is an irreligious animal. (3) That these two characteristics of the natural heart must be fully satisfied, and nothing but an absolute Priestcraft could complete the harmony of such a religion."

There are "wolves in sheep's clothing" among all religious flocks. If the Rev. Jas. Thomson, of Smithfield, is not one of them the saying is without meaning. If the Father of Lies had set himself to the task of completely misstating and perverting the beliefs and endeavors of the Latter-day Saints he could not have succeeded any better than has this professed preacher of the gospel. What object he could have in making statements that every well informed person knows to be utterly false, is a question that at once presents itself. Here is his own explanation for writing such stuff:

"I want to impress the Board that the missionaries of Utah have something to contend with."

We "want to impress the Board" with the fact that this particular missionary is unworthy of credence and totally unfit to occupy any position under its auspices. There is not a word of truth in all his assertions which we have quoted. There is no excuse for them except that which he has given and the rancor that springs up in a secured and chagrined soul. He says:

"I have attempted special services twice but am unable to report any definite result."

"I had hoped to secure a hearing from the leading Mormons, but they would not enter our chapel."

He goes on to state that he has been teaching a commercial class and obtained thirty pupils, but he says:

"While I gained their respect and confidence I did not secure their attendance at public worship."

"They are not unlike the Indians lying in ambush. They will sail forth as by magic until they fill the house and yard and then again scarcely one can be seen anywhere."

The probability is that one preaching from this person was sufficient. The people sized him up. If they had discernment they perceived his insincerity and beheld the blackness of his false heart. The Rev. Jas. Thompson with a p is not likely to prove a success in Utah or anywhere else where truth is valued and slander is despised. His proper place is described in Rev. xxii v. 15.

We are pleased to turn from this disagreeable reference, to a letter we have received from one of the Reverend gentlemen who visited this city with the Presbyterian delegation and who with many others have spoken favorably of our services and our people. He has since been reading the works of the Church. We do not know that he would like us to use his name, as he is the pastor of a Presbyterian church in Ohio, therefore we merely quote one passage in his letter without designating the writer:

"My whole idea as regards the Latter-day Saints, or 'Mormons' as they are called, have undergone a complete revolution. I had been led to look upon them as ignorant, bigoted, narrow, selfish, sensual, devilish. But I found them intelligent, cultivated, devout, generous, charitable, consecrated, worthy of both place and position among the other religious denominations of the world. I base my conclusions upon what I saw and heard while sojourning in your far-famed and beautiful city."

Such just appreciation from cultured and Christian gentlemen more than compensate for the perversions of the small-souled, ill-bred and disappointed pulpituers who seek to spread scandal and foster prejudice among the uninformed. We hope that many more of the religious teachers of the sects will come to Utah and see the "Mormons" as they are, and that they will look into our doctrines, and find out what we believe not from our enemies but from the authorized expositions of our Church. Those who do this will find that good can "come out of Nazareth."

THE REPUBLIC OF MEXICO.

In the New England Magazine for July there is an instructive article on "The Republic of Mexico," by Don Cayetano Romero, first secretary of the Mexican legation at Washington. As he shows, to the student and historian Mexico florids varied and wonderful points of interest.

History throws but little light on the primitive settlers of Mexico. It is supposed that the Toltecs and the tribes which succeeded them came from the north. Scholars who have investigated the habits and institutions of the Aztecs claim that they came originally from some Asiatic country, but no similarity can be found between the Mexican languages and those of the Oriental nations. The Toltecs were learned in the arts, in agriculture and in computing time. Owing to internal strife they were expelled from the country by other tribes, it is said, about the fifth century of the Christian era.

The Chichimecs followed the Toltecs. They were followed by other tribes, and finally the Aztecs, who are the progenitors of the present Mexicans, obtained control of the country. It was during the reign of Montezuma the Second, eighth king of the Aztecs that the Spanish expeditions of Velazquez, Hernandez, Grijalva and Cortes took place. The latter landed at Vera Cruz April 21, 1519, marched through Mexico and entered its capital November following, escorted by Montezuma.

The conquest of the country was not complete until 1525, when Cortez was made the first governor under Spanish rule. After Cortez Mexico was governed by Royal councils, technically called Audiencias. Later on that form of government was abolished and a system of viceroys adopted, which prevailed until 1821, when after some desperate fighting the country was organized under a regency, and later on an empire under Iturbide. Santa Anna next appeared on the scene and inaugurated a revolution. This resulted in the establishment of a republic in 1824, Guadalupe being the first President.

From 1828 to 1846 Mexico was the theatre of a series of sanguinary revolutions. During the latter year "the United States of America declared an unjust war on Mexico, and succeeded in wresting a large extent of territory." From 1862 to 1867 the Mexicans fought nobly against European dictation, and finally executed Maximilian at Queretaro.

Porfirio Diaz was inaugurated President in May 1877. He was succeeded by Gonzalez in December, 1880. In December, 1884, Diaz was inaugurated a second time, and a third time in December, 1888. He is a candidate for re-election this year, and his inauguration next December is wished for by the vast majority of progressive Mexicans. Under his administration progress in that country has been marvelous. Agriculture, mining, railroad building and manufacturing have made wonderful strides. The relations between that country and the United States have grown closer and more amicable.

The gold, silver and copper produced in Mexico from 1821 to 1884 is estimated at nearly $4,000,000,000. The annual production of silver is now over $30,000,000; that of other minerals $5,000,000.

Public lands open for settlement are found in Chihuahua, Coahuila, Durango, Sinaloa, Sonora and other States. The Diaz administration offers liberal inducements to bona fide settlers. So far it is not being rapidly populated. The number of colonists introduced during 1890 amounted to only 6500.

THE "HOME RULE" BILL.

The "Home Rule" bill passed the House of Representatives on Friday evening, by a vote of 166 to 41, after much filibustering on the part of the Republicans, and considerable misrepresentation of its provisions and the purpose for which it was framed. Whatever may be urged against the bill—and we have pointed out what appeared to be its defects—the statements that it is a "Mormon" measure and that it was intended to throw the Territory into the control of the "Mormon" Church, are both untruthful and absurd. Equally false is the assertion that it takes away from the Federal authority power to punish offences under the anti-polygamy acts and to regulate legislation in the Territory.

When men resort to such misrepresentations as those, it argues badly for their cause and is tantamount to a confession that they have nothing very strong that is truthful to argue against that which they fight.

The "Mormons" had nothing to do with the framing of this bill, nor with its presentation to Congress. The Delegate from Utah introduced it in the House when Senator Faulkner presented it in the Senate. But he did so as a Democrat with a measure framed by his party, and also because he believed it as good a measure as could be obtained at present. Its projectors were of the same opinion. They proclaim themselves ready to work for statehood complete, as soon as there is any prospect for its attainment. They also believe that the Home Rule bill, if a law, would hasten instead of retard statehood.

There are others who do not think the measure beneficial for two reasons. One is, that it is neither liberty nor vassalage; that it is anomalous; that it is only "statehood with a string to it." The other is that it would hinder statehood and postpone that proper deference which may be obtained at once by diligent work.

We give the two sides of it, so far as they are taken by contending parties at home. In Congress it is evident that the gentlemen who have spoken in opposition to "Home Rule" are equally opposed to statehood at present, and to any measure of relief for Utah. They use the old intolerant arguments and the old untruthful stories. However, they are in a hopeless minority in the House.

It is not probable that the bill will succeed in the Senate. We do not think it will come to a vote. It will be referred to a committee and most likely stay there till the close of the session. Should the issue come, we do not think it will find enough supporters to insure its passage, and even if it should pass the Senate, it is improbable that it would receive the signature of the President.

GOING DOWN WITH ITS PARTY.

THE editor of the "Liberal" organ is exhibiting himself in his true colors, and voicing daily the venom that rankles in his seared and sordid soul. Things are going wrong with him. Failure is written upon most things he touches. It is branded on the brow of the faction in which he poses as a leader. "Liberalism" is going to pieces and its organ is going down with it. So he is reckless as well as spiteful, and tries to be as personal as he dares in touching upon questions that he cannot handle from his standpoint and keep to the truth.

Scold, storm, slander and spit froth as he will, the records show by figures that do not lie, that ever since, by tricks and frauds made shameful and vile, this city was stolen by the "Liberals," the real estate market has declined, property has decreased in value, and public morals have deteriorated so rapidly that even "Liberals" have had to cry "Shame!"

The editor, who betrays his personality in attempting to lie about somebody who opposed him at Minneapolis, may cast about mire and dirt in his ill-humor at the DESERET NEWS, but that will not change or cover up the facts we have set forth nor turn away the force of the argument they present against the "Liberal" promise of increased values, a great boom and a better administration of civic affairs.

And what an illustration of his peculiar logic he offers once more! To prove that our statement of the decline in the value of real estate under "Liberal" rule is untrue, he says that a man who opposed him at Minneapolis had a third wife and a baby one day old. Could there be any stronger argument than that? We believe the statement is untrue and manufactured for effect, after the regular Tribune style. But if it were true, what does it prove as to the fall of real estate, or the employment by "Mormons" of "Gentile" workmen, or the alleged dictation of voters, all of which he mixes up in an editorial hotch-potch seasoned with venom and mingled with gall?

It was terrible was it not, that he should be "opposed at Minneapolis?" We will promise that all such maligners and retailers of old state scandals about the "Mormons," will be opposed whenever they attempt to deceive public men and empty their slop buckets of slander; and the "opposition" will have a chance from this time forward to be heard. The old vile Tribune warfare will not answer. "Conditions have changed." Goodwinism and Powersism are played out. Those who continue to fight with their weapons will find themselves left out and behind. All who want to share in the good times to come had better drop the campaign of lies and the faction of bitterness; and align themselves with the parties of progress in which the living issues of the present are to be found.

"The old toothless News" has given that befuddled editor more trouble than all the toothed and tusked roarsers of the press in the country. It has exposed his falsehoods and his folly—journalistic not individual—but has refrained from the paltry and contemptible personalities which he has made his refuge when, like a cornered rat, he has turned savage and spiteful. And while he continues his slanderous policy he will find the News will still make it warm for him.

Of course he would like "the Mormon Church to repudiate the DESERET NEWS." But this paper, which has had "Truth and Liberty" for its motto over forty-two years, and has seen many sheets like the Tribune go down into dishonored graves, will live and flourish when the "Liberal" faction is no more and when its former organ will be repudiated entirely, as it is being repudiated now by many of its former supporters. We repeat our advice: It has cause to lament but it had far better repent.

THE HOMESTEAD RIOTS.

PITTSBURG, July 6.—The great look-out in the iron industry in this vicinity has borne its first bloody fruit. Between a dozen and twenty Pinkerton officers and locked out iron and steel workers are either lying dead or are more or less seriously wounded as the result of an encounter between them early this morning. The battle is still in progress and there is no telling what dreadful results may come before the close of the day.

The following is the story of the battle and its antecedents: Early this morning three hundred Pinkerton detectives arrived at Pittsburg from the East and marched quietly to Monongahela, boarded the barges and started for the Homestead Works, towed by steam tug "Fido." At 2:15 this morning the look-out employees were notified of this move, and when the barges arrived at Homestead, five thousand people, including men, women and children, were waiting to meet them. As soon as the Pinkertons attempted to land they were warned off by the men and a battle followed. The Pinkertons were armed with Winchester rifles and the opposing crowd chiefly with revolvers. The Pinkertons opened fire, and at the first volley two workmen fell. This enraged the crowd and they bore down on the Pinkertons with relentless force. The Pinkertons fell back but continued firing, and finally the crowd on the bank retreated and climbed over a heap of rubbish toward the big trestle leading to the Penick railroad bridge. Three hundred armed workmen, however, stood the ground, and a desultory fire was kept up. Finally they too were compelled to fall back before the withering fire of the Winchester.

The first shot came from the barge. The first man to fall was Martin Merry, a heater in one of the mills. He was shot in the side and fell with his face forward. A big Hungarian, standing beside him, stepped over and was in the act of raising the prostrate body when he too was struck by a bullet and fell beside his comrade. Others rushed to the spot, picked up the bodies and carried them behind the trestle. One of the rescued, a Welshman, name unknown, was wounded in the leg. Merry and the Hungarian were taken to a physician's office, who examined the wounds and said that both would probably die. Five more strikers were wounded, two severely, but they were spirited away and their names are not obtainable. Five Pinkertons are reported wounded, four dangerously, including their captain.

The day was just breaking when the lights of the steamer with its barges on either side flashed through the gray vapor over the waters before the eyes of the people on the bank. The crowd ran pell mell toward the works, coming to the high fence which surrounds the works. The men used their shoulders as battering rams and in a twinkling threw down the barrier. Men, women and children rushed pell mell toward the point on the shore of the river for which the flotilla headed and gathered in a mass at the water's edge. Slowly the boat edged toward the landing and when the keels of the barges grated on the sand, the grim faces of the invaders were within a few feet of their opponents on the shore. There was an instant of awful silence, then a bright flash and a sharp report announced the commencement of the dreadful work. The firing became general on both sides. The strikers retreated for a moment, but quickly rallied at a short distance from the boat, and held their own by sheer weight of numbers, and compelled the deputies to proceed cautiously. Suddenly forty or fifty detectives attempted to jump on shore. The strikers responded with a sharp volley, driving the invaders back to the semi-shelter of the lower deck. Their captain was carried to the pilot house of the steamer. One of his men informed an Associated Press representative that although the wound was serious, it was not fatal. A number of others of the detectives were more or less seriously wounded in this encounter.

Then there was a lull in the battle. The Pinkertons were gathering on the lower deck of the steamer and the workmen on the shore were sending a committee to scour Homestead for ammunition.

The fighting was renewed shortly after 7 a. m., and the battle continued for half an hour. This second conflict was precipitated by another effort by the Pinkertons to land. A number of workmen were injured in the second encounter, but their names cannot now be obtained. The wildest excitement prevails. Thousands of workmen from surrounding places are supposed to be marching to reinforce the strikers.

William Fry, who was shot in the first engagement, is dead. The workmen have built fortifications of steel bars on the river bank and there are over a thousand men behind it. It is supposed that there are several Pinkertons killed on the boat.

At 8:30 the firing was resumed in a desultory manner. A workman named Wallace was fatally shot. The crowd on the shore is constantly increasing. All trains are watched, and all means of entrance to the work guarded by the men. All along the river and railroad men are stationed to give warning of the approach of trains or boats.

Before the second attempt was made to land, the officer in charge announced to the workmen on the bank that his men were Pinkertons and would land if they had to mow down every body in sight. He then ordered his men to advance. They were met by a shower of lead from the rifles and platoons of the scattered workmen. The officers fell back for an instant, but rallied; marching eight abreast they endeavored to get ashore but were driven back again.

Already four look-out men are killed. John Morris was killed in the last effort of the officers to land. Another man was killed but he was carried away before he could be identified. People seem to be crazed by the bloody work. Men, women and children are running through the streets, crying for REVENGE AND BLOOD.

At 8:30 the men began rolling barrels of oil to the river, intending to set fire to it on the water and burn the Pinkertons out. Sheriff McCleary has wired Governor Patton that he is unable to cope with the mob. The situation is very grave. Five thousand workmen are on the ground. Unless something is done promptly there will be great loss of life. It is now known that six more workmen were shot at the second attempt to land. The captain of the tug and one Pinkerton man are dead. There are non-union men aboard the barges as well as Pinkertons.

The battle continues. The Pinkertons have made two attempts to land, but were repulsed both times.

It is reported that the captain of the Pinkertons is dead. He fell in the first assault, and has not been seen since. The men have entrenched themselves in the mill behind the machinery. They have received guns and ammunition, and swear that the Pinkertons will never be allowed to land, while one man remains in Homestead. The situation becomes more critical momentarily.

Reuben Forrest, who was shot through the heart at 7:30, and another Hungarian who was taken to the temporary hospital, are dying.

At 11 a. m. the strikers fired a car of oil standing near the works, for the purpose of burning the boat in the river. They expect to set the river on fire. The men placed a cannon on the hill on the north side of the river and are firing into the boat. Balls and scraps of iron are being used. At every shot the boat's side is penetrated and pieces thrown into the air. No move has been made to stop the shooting. Not a soul can be seen on the boat, no word can be gotten to or from it. The strikers claim that at least five men on board are killed or fatally wounded. One man says he saw six men fall. On every hand the men are gathering ammunition, and every possible sort of firearms are being collected. Shotguns are being loaded with buckshot.

The steamer "Little Bill" came down the river about 11 o'clock, to take of the Pinkerton's imprisoned on their barges. There were a large number of new men on the boat. The moment it reached the shore a regular fusillade occurred. The workmen say it had assistance for the Pinkertons. In the fight, the strikers, the Pinkertons and persons on the "Little Bill" took part. The cannoners across the river fired three shots at the "Little Bill." Their aim was bad, one ball entering the open hearth department of the mill, took off a man's head. The number of killed now is ten and eleven wounded. The strikers claim besides that the captain and lieutenant and four other men were shot and fell from the barge. One of the Pinkerton men jumped off the barge and was drowned. The pilot of "Little Bill" was killed. The boat was driven off and proceeded down the river. The workmen telegraphed to have it held at the locks.

In an interview this afternoon he said: "The men were picked up in Chicago and New York. They are a very fair lot and numbered 200. I gave them strict orders not to shoot until fired on. When we proceeded to land the whistle blew and the strikers immediately commenced to shoot. To protect ourselves we had to return the fire. Seven or eight of our men are hurt. I do not know their names."

Hein said he had been ordered to protect the property and did the best he could. He regretted very much that any shooting was done.

Charles Hoffman, brother of J. G. Hoffman, one of the injured men, corroborated the statement of Captain Hein that the strikers fired first. The sheriff and representatives of the Amalgamated Association and of the Carnegie Steel Company have held a long consultation, after which the sheriff's counsel went to consult with H. C. Frick. It is hoped that the matter will be arranged without further bloodshed.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Cammett of California introduced in the House a resolution authorizing the Speaker to appoint a committee of five to investigate the report on the cause of the strike at Homestead, Pa., and the conditions producing the same.

PITTSBURG, July 6.—Four workmen came from Homestead this morning. They say that five Pinkerton men and five workmen are killed, and a number of others are seriously injured. As reported, there are four men here to buy dynamite and nitro-glycerine to blow up the boats on which the detectives are, but the story is not generally credited. The steamer "Little Bill" returned to this city shortly after noon. Captain Rogers is very indignant at the action of the strikers. He said, "I never saw such a cowardly attack. The strikers had a fortification of pig iron. The minute we arrived they commenced firing. Not a shot was fired by the Pinkertons until their comrades were shot down like dogs."

At one p.m. a flag of truce was displayed by the Pinkerton's and shot down; it was hoisted a second and third time with the same results. The workers have heard that the militia have been ordered here and seem determined to rid the place of every Pinkerton before the troops get here. Men are lying in wait on both sides of the river opposite the barges for the detectives to show themselves. Every moving object on the barge is fired on. An occasional shot comes from the barges. It is thought that some of the Pinkertons have been wounded during the skirmishing. The car of oil set fire to, to fire the boat failed in its object. All sorts of wild rumors are afloat. One says the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans have turned over their arms to the workmen and that two cars of ammunition have gone to the strikers from this city. The Amalgamated officials deny this. The rumor that the strikers are coming here to take Captain Hein is not credited; but the police authorities are prepared for such an emergency.

The conference between the sheriff, Amalgamated officials and Carnegies was fruitless. The outlook is far from encouraging.

At 1:10 this afternoon eighteen men were taken from the yard of the mill. Three died, two of whom were Pinkertons. The wounded men were taken home or sent to the hospital here. The dead were removed to undertakers.

The flames are now spreading along the river front and the mills are threatened. Several explosions are heard and people are fleeing to the hills to escape the fire.

At 2 p. m. one of the Pinkertons raised his head above the edge of the barge. He was immediately shot in the head and fell backward.

J. W. Kilze, a wounded Pinkerton man, has just died in the hospital. The superintendent of the City Poor Farm, near Homestead, has just telephoned the mayor that burning oil is coming down the stream that surrounds the pumping station, and unless assistance is rendered the station will be destroyed.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 6.—The riot today was the culmination of the troubles which have been brewing at Homestead for the last month. The Carnegie company submitted a scale which was to govern the workmen in the steel plants and announced that it was their ultimatum scale.

It made a sweeping reduction in the wages of the skilled men, and it was officially announced that unless its terms were complied with before July 1st, the places of the workmen would be filled by others. This was followed by the peremptory refusal on the part of the company to recognize the Amalgamated association. The men announced their determination to resist any effort on the part of the Carnegie to run the plants with non-union men.

The trouble was precipitated by the workmen at Homestead hanging H. C. Frick, president of the company, in effigy, in retaliation the company ordered and immediate shut down of the big works. The employees at once proceeded to organize for the defensive, and the company erected a high board fence around the entire works, giving the appearance of an immense stockade, the sides being pierced with port holes. Yesterday the Carnegie company announced their intention to get ready to make repairs and the officials asked the sheriff to appoint deputies to protect the property. The sheriff sent a small squad of men up to the works, but the strikers assembled in force and notified them to get out of town. No disorder was intended and no damage would have been done to property. They even offered to be sworn in as deputies and give bonds for the faithful performance of their duties as conservators of the peace.

THE DEVELOPMENTS OF TODAY showed that the applications made for the assistance of the sheriff was merely for the purpose of covering what was intended to be a coup de main on the part of the Carnegie company in clandestinely introducing a body of Pinkerton guards into the mill enclosure. These men had been rendezvoused some five or six miles below the city on the Ohio river, at which two model barges had been prepared for them. The barges had been fitted up with bunks, cooking arrangements and other accommodations, and as extra precaution, as if in preparation for the siege to which they were subjected today, were lined with heavy steel plates on the inside, while the whaleback deck was protected in a similar manner.

When it was found that little impression could be made by the cannon on the boats, efforts were made to fire the barges. These were procured and oil sprayed on the decks and sides of the barges. Barrel after barrel of oil was emptied into the river above the mooring place, the object being to allow it to flow against the boats and then ignite it. The terrible deed was attempted several times, but the boats did not burn, and then the mob became infuriated and buried dynamite bombs at the vessel with great effect. The situation of the detectives was such as to appeal to the stoutest hearts. Several times did they run up a flag of truce, but as many times was it stricken down by bullets fired by strikers. Then it became evident that the ammunition of the besieged detectives was either exhausted or they too much worn out to continue the fight, and for nearly two hours hostilities ceased. Towards dusk efforts were again made to burn the boats with their living freight, and they would doubtless have succeeded had it not been for the interposition of the leading officials of the Amalgamated association, who went to the scene of war. Through their efforts it was agreed to let the detectives surrender, but this was secured with the greatest difficulty against the objections on the part of the men, many of whom had lost friends and acquaintances during the day. Besides, there were thousands of turbulent characters attracted to the place who wanted to see the carnage go on, and it was not until some strikers had pointed guns at outsiders that a hearing was obtained.

At 5 o'clock the Pinkertons hung out

ANOTHER WHITE FLAG.

This time it was respected, and a committee of strikers went on board to prepare terms of capitulation. They guaranteed safe conduct for the Pinkertons provided they left their arms and ammunition behind, and it was agreed to leave the place under guard. The detectives had no alternative and promptly accepted the terms, some of the men saying it was the first time they had ever submitted to such a humiliating surrender. When the inspection of the boat was made it was found that at least seven Pinkerton men had been killed and twenty or thirty wounded, many so badly that they will die. As they were brought from the boat they presented a terrible appearance. Many were besmeared with blood, while all showed signs of exhaustion. The most shocking and dastardly deeds were committed while the prisoners were being escorted through the streets, and an escort of guards was appointed by the strikers. An angry mob lined the streets on both sides. As the men passed by, each in charge of two deputies, the mill men and their friends kicked them and threw some down. The unfortunate detectives begged for mercy. Some had pistol-shot wounds in their heads, and three had eyes shot out; several could scarcely limp along, the blood running in streams down their shirts and they fairly yelled with pain. Fully thirty injured men were taken to the town hall.

ONE HAD HIS EYE PUNCHED OUT by an umbrella in the hands of a woman. Band was thrown in their eyes and the mill hands struck the detectives over the head and shoulders with rifles, inflicting serious and in some cases perhaps fatal injuries.

As the procession reached the Amalgamated Association building the detectives had to remove their hats and salute the flag. When they removed their hats the men and women hit them with umbrellas and sticks and abused them in every way imaginable. There seemed to be a determination to kill the prisoners, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the demon like crowd could be restrained. The men were finally locked in the Opera House where they are to be kept for the night. The usuals, however, gathered around the building and the wounded men were kept in a constant state of terror, and it was long before their wounds could be dressed.

After the prisoners had been released from the barges the rioters had their revenge. They fired the boats, first securing them so they could not cause damage at points below. When the flames broke through the decks the cheers which rent the air were deafening and the noise could be heard miles away. The day was one that will be remembered with horror by the people of the borough and the citizens of the entire country who for a second time will be called upon to pay an enormous amount of money entailed in the shape of riot losses. The Pinkerton men were not sworn in as deputy sheriffs. During the afternoon fully five thousand men walked into Homestead. They came from the south side of Pittsburgh and many were armed. In one delegation there were about two thousand mill workers. They carried flags and proclaimed that they proposed to stand by the Homestead workers in defending the mill at any cost.

THE SCENES IN HOMESTEAD

today are hard to describe. The streets were filled with men and women, particularly the narrow roads leading to the mills. Here congregated thousands of men, women and children, many of the latter weeping and wailing. On a hill back of the works a crowd of fully three thousand people viewed the battle without running risk. The proclamation requesting all saloons to close was religiously obeyed but it was impossible to keep many excited individuals from gathering in the vicinity of the works. The steamer "Little Bill" came down from Homestead this afternoon. As she steamed into the landing with her new American flag flying from the flagstaff she showed the effect of the fusillade of bullets she had gone through. Many panes of glass were shattered and the woodwork was perforated in a dozen places. On board was John T. McCurry, who was shot in the groin. A reporter interviewed the wounded man as he lay on the lower deck.

"We made the landing at Homestead mills about 5 o'clock this morning. The shore was crowded with locked out men and their sympathizers. Armed Pinkerton men commenced to climb up the bank, then workmen opened fire on the detectives. The men shot first and not until three Pinkerton men had fallen did they respond to fire. I have my God to meet, and if I am to die now I am willing to take my oath that the workmen fired first. The Pinkerton men did not fire until some of them had been wounded. The workmen were so strong in number that it was useless for the 350 or 400 Pinkertons to oppose them further so they retreated to the barges, carrying the dead and wounded. One Pinkerton man was shot through the head and instantly killed, and five were wounded. We backed out into the river, anchored the barges and then took the dead and wounded men up to Port Perry, from where they were sent on to the railway to Pittsburgh. We then went down to Homestead again. When we reached the mills the strikers opened fire on the "Little Bill" from both sides. It was then I was hit. There was no one on board at the time we was fired upon but the crew, Captain Rogers and one Pinkerton man, J. H. Robinson of Chicago. When we approached Homestead from Port Perry we could see the attempts to set fire to the barge. The strikers had a load of what appeared to be oil and were pouring it upon the water and lighting it."

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 6.—After a lengthy conference of amalgamated leaders a meeting of locked-out men was called at 4 o'clock. It was attended by 1000 men, many of whom carried muskets. The national officer of the amalgamation made a strong appeal to the men while the cannons roared outside. President Welke pleaded with the men to withdraw and assured them that the barges containing the deputies would be immediately removed. P. H. Melver, vice-president of the Mahoning and Shenandoah valley district, said:

"There has been an awful slaughter of human life here today, and by all means a further sacrifice of human life should be avoided. I am a stranger in this town, but from today's action I know full well if you continue doing as you are, the militia will be ordered out before dark and you will be defeated."

At this juncture President Welke again attempted to address the crowd, but instantly there was a loud report and with one accord every man rushed pell-mell to the scene. Even while appeals were being made men were endeavoring to pump oil on the barges. It was useless to continue the meeting. An hour later, while the men were waiting for nightfall to burn the barges and the men in them, Hugh O'Donnell, a leader of the strikers, grasped the American flag and, mounting a pile of iron, made an impassioned speech for mercy for the Pinkertons, who were lying like caged wolves in the barges. The extraordinary power of O'Donnell over the strikers was manifest at once. A few people murmured and cried out, "Let's burn them," but they were silenced.

"Let's turn them over to the sheriff and make against them," said the leader. This was received with cheers, and when the strikers waived their hats and asked the Pinkertons to surrender there was an immediate response from the boat. In a short time the leaders of the strikers came on deck. Then began a strange scene. The strikers crowded the boats, captured the rifles and looted everything. They were mad with rage. The first man taken off the barge was dying, having been shot through the back. Then one by one the strikers followed in charge of an armed guard, each man carrying a valise.

AN INFORMATION FOR MURDER

The guards carried Winchester taken from the Pinkertons. Six Pinkertons were reported killed and many dangerously wounded. The guards took the men a mile to the rink. There were 200 of them, and probably two-thirds of them were beaten brutally by the time they reached the improvised jail. They claim that they were miserably misled; that they came from different towns, were strangers to each other and had been told they were wanted as watchmen. They huddled in the rink absolutely terror stricken, fearing lynching from the immense crowd of people gathered outside.

Among the scenes and incidents attending the surrender and landing of the discomfited guards from the barges was one specially worthy of note, as it shows the bravery of one of the Pinkerton men. As he reached the river bank with his companions they were assailed from all sides by the angry crowd. In a shower of stones and missiles of all kinds the man separated himself from the others and begged for a hearing. In the silence which followed he said:

"Fellow citizens—When I came here I did not understand the situation or I would never have come. I was told I was to meet and deal with foreigners. I had no idea I was to fight American citizens. I am a member of the Junior order and appeal to you for permission to leave and get myself out of this terrible affair."

The crowd cheered him and he proceeded unmolested.

THE SCENES IN THE AFTERNOON on the hills back of Homestead and as far as the eye could see were dotted with human beings. With every shot from the strikers they craned their necks, hoping only to see a ghastly result. The Pinkertons were horsed combat and their warring purely passive. The strikers had a cannon, which they tried to train on the boats, but each shot flew wide of the mark. Finally the cannon burst, and they resorted to dynamite. Great chunks of it were thrown at the boat, most of which only splashed the water. Occasionally it struck the roof, but exploded upward and only left a white breath of smoke. One lucky shot struck the stern end of a barge and made a gaping opening which served as an objective point for future throws, but was always missed. Other shots ripped great sections of the open deck. Previous to this they had tried to fire the boats by pouring barrels of oil on the water and igniting it, but after wasting half a tank they gave this up as futile. They took a long section of hose and tried to pipe Carnegie & Co.'s gas to the boats to blow up the company's protectors. Time and again they tried it, each attempt proving a failure, while the spectators and strikers awaited the result with bated breath. Meanwhile the Pinkertons were huddled under the deck, dragging in the dead and caring for the wounded, waiting for what seemed certain doom, as all overtures of surrender had been refused. Late in the afternoon, down the Pemickley trestle work marked 1000 hawny sons of toil, waving at the head of the column the American flag. They were workmen from Jones & Laughlin's mill coming to tender sympathy and encouragement to their locked out brethren. Then William Welke, ex-president of the Amalgamated Association, came with a true proposition from Sheriff McCleary, who offered to send the boat and low-barges away if the men would cease firing.

Finally they agreed to and at 5:30, as told elsewhere, the Pinkertons were allowed to come ashore. No sooner had the guards reached the river banks than the barges were charged on by the crowd of men, women and children. Cooking utensils, bedding, etc., were handed over to the women and children, while the men seized on a large store of rifles and ammunition. These rifles are all of the finest pattern and in perfect condition, and with a quantity of ammunition were a great acquisition to the strikers. After the barges had been thoroughly looted they were fired and soon burned to the water's edge.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 6.—Captain William Rogers, who contracted to tow the two barges down to Homestead, and Captain Wm. Wishart, commander of the towboat "Little Bill," tell thrilling stories of their experience up the river today. Both agree in the story already told by McMurray that the first shots were fired by the strikers and not returned by the Pinkertons until three of their number had been stretched on the deck of the vessel.

Captain Wishart, who was in the pilot house, says as soon as the men attempted to run out on the gangplank, a shot was fired from the shore. Volley after volley was fired. Wishart says he became angry, and seizing a rifle himself, began firing at the crowd on the shore. After the wounded had been taken to Fort Perry the boat returned, and Wishart says by that time the strikers had gained the vantage points in every direction and poured in shot in an uncomfortable manner. A number of them were on the bridge roof. When the boat reached the wharf in this city this afternoon hundreds of people surrounded her and began taking chips and digging bullets out for relics. Of bullets there are great plenty, the sides of the vessel having been literally riddled.

The imprisoned Pinkerton men say seven of their number were killed outright and eleven wounded. They believe several dead men were thrown off the "Little Bill" into the river. The number of Pinkertons now in the lock-up and rink is 234. The homes of the detectives are Chicago, 120; New York, 75; Philadelphia, 25; the remainder in the neighborhood of Brooklyn.

A visit to the Union station revealed the fact that the Pinkerton detectives who arrived in this city at 2:30 this morning will not be taken from the city but will be held at the Pennsylvania yards under strong guard until daybreak, when they will be removed to the county jail to await trial for murder.

This evening a lengthy secret conference was held between C. L. McGee, H. C. Frick, Sheriff McCleary, W. J. Brennan and others. At its conclusion a special train and the party, excepting Frick, went to Homestead. The object of the mission is not known. A dispatch just received says that one of the Pinkertons died in the lockup from the effects of injuries received on the march from the boat to the jail. Another is expected to die before morning.

PHILADELPHIA, July 6.—Among the different labor organizations a bitter feeling prevails over the introduction of Pinkertons at Homestead. From the headquarters of the American Federal Labor Union a card was issued this afternoon for an indignation meeting Friday evening.

OMAHA, Neb., July 6.—Before leaving for the East this morning General Master Workman Powderly was seen by an Associated Press representative, and speaking of the Homestead riot said he could not talk until he knew more about it.

CHICAGO, July 6.—Adlai E. Stevenson, Democratic candidate for Vice-President, arrived in the city tonight. When the above dispatches about the Homestead trouble were shown him he declined to talk about it further than to say it demonstrates the fact that high tariff affords no protection to the laboring men and never betters their condition.

HOMESTEAD, Penn., July 6.—At midnight a special train came in from Pittsburgh in charge of Sheriff McCleary, and the Pinkerton men were sent to the county jail. President Welke and Hugh O'Donnell counseled moderation and the strikers did not again meet the guards, most of whom were badly injured. Eleven were sent to the hospital on their arrival at Pittsburgh.

HARRISBURG, Penn., July 6.—Governor Pattison said this evening that he did not contemplate any further action at present. The feeling about the capital is that an attempt is being made to shift the responsibility. Adjutant-General Greenland is in communication with General John A. Wiley, commander of the second brigade of troops. If found necessary to restore order they will be concentrated at Homestead on short notice.

The feeling of intense excitement prevalent on the streets of Pittsburgh has not been equaled since the war times. Here and there knots of workmen are gathered discussing the situation and generally denouncing in no measured terms the employing of mercenary troops such as the Pinkertons to enforce submission on the part of the locked-out millmen. All business is practically at a standstill. Every one is conjecturing what the day will bring forth. When the news from Homestead reached the thousands of idle mill workers on the south side, it was like throwing a firebrand into a cotton field. They were up in arms, and the streets were thronged with men discussing the situation. The Sheriff and Frick especially came in for the condemnation. The officials of the Amalgamated association are depressed by the terrible tidings. Secretary Madden said tonight:

"This is mad business. The issue was clearly forced by the request of the Carnegie firm for deputies at the time when they did seem to be needed."

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 6.—The first official recognition in Congress of the troubles at Homestead was made today, when Representative Cammelt of California introduced a resolution calling for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the troubles. The resolution contains a long preamble reciting that the Republican party contended that one of the main purposes of its tariff legislation was the protection of American labor and to increase the pay of wage earners in protected industries; that contrary thereto the industries protected in many instances instead of increasing, actually have materially reduced the pay of their men; that the Homestead mills, controlled by Carnegie and his associates, operating an industry which received the fostering care of said legislation to such an extent as to typify it as an example of the results thereof, promulgated an order reducing the wages of employees. It is alleged, from 20 to 60 per cent; that contrary to the position assumed by said party the protection so afforded regulates the price of labor. It is stated by H. C. Frick, manager of said mills, that "we made scales to suit the trade and mechanical conditions, and gave no thought to political cause or effect, or to the tariff;" that following this announcement

THE EMPLOYEES REFUSED TO ACCEPT such reduction and a strike is on hand and it is asserted in the public prints that armed men, boats carrying guns, stockades having attached thereto poles enabling a hot current of steam to be turned on at a moment's notice, and surrounded with wires capable of being charged with electricity, all these supplemented with strong searchlights, have been resorted to by said company to enable it to enforce the reduced scale of wages, thus inaugurating the conditions of federal despotism. The resolution thereupon calls for the appointment of a select committee of five members to investigate and report upon the causes of the strike and the effect of such legislation on wages and labor.

The resolution was referred to the committee on rules.

The House committee appointed to investigate the Pinkertons will hold their first meeting Friday. The President receives frequent press bulletins during the day from Pittsburgh regarding the riot. He was seriously concerned at the grave turn the situation assumed. General Schofield said this afternoon that no appeal had been made to the military authorities for aid in repressing the riots at Homestead, and he did not think that it would be necessary. He said the government would not interfere unless the governor or the State informed the President that the case was beyond the control of the State and municipal authorities.

PITTSBURG, Pa., July 7.—Sheriff McCleary, in addition to his proclamation last evening calling on all good citizens to appear armed at his office this morning, sent out a number of personal summonses to the same effect early this morning. Neither proclamation nor summonses had much effect. At nine o'clock, the hour mentioned, only one man appeared under the general proclamation, and of 105 men personally summoned, only twelve responded.

As it was apparent that a sufficient large force could not be got together, the sheriff decided to postpone his trip to Homestead till tomorrow. In the meantime he will issue additional summonses. Much reluctance is shown by the citizens about going to Homestead, where they know a fight would await them. This city and Allegheny have three thousand members of the Amalgamated Association who, of course, would not march against their fellow workmen.

Figures at the sheriff's office show 16 killed and 62 wounded, six of whom will die, making the total larger than that in the riots of 1877. The names of the sixteen are not given, however, and it is believed to be inaccurate. What is believed to be a complete list of the dead makes a total of ten, of whom six are workmen and four Pinkertons, as follows:

Workmen—John Morris, Anthony Wayne, Thomas Weidin, Henry Striegel, John Fares, Joseph Soppo.

Pinkertons—J. W. Kilne, Edward Conners; two, names unknown, were shot and fell overboard.

Eleven workmen are severely hurt, six of whom may die and twenty-five others are lightly injured.

Those in danger of dying are: George Ketter, Richard Durham, Wm. Foy, Henry Rusaki, Andy Cudia, Chas. Daeska.

Nearly every one of the Pinkertons is mortally or less hurt. Seventeen of them are suffering from many wounds. The remainder bear evidence in cuts, bruises, swollen heads and faces, of the rough treatment they received at the hands of the workmen when they surrendered last evening and came out of the boat. The application of flats, clubs and stones and brickbats as they passed the crowd left them in a horrible battered up condition, but it is not believed that any of them will die from the effect of the beating they received.

They came mostly from Chicago, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Boston. All of them, except those in the hospital who were unable to go, left for New York this morning on a special train on the Pennsylvania road. Every man of them was only too glad to get out of the neighborhood.

A deputy returned from Homestead this morning and says the taking of a peace at that place would surely bring about a conflict. The men are flushed with yesterday's success and unreasonable. A double force of policemen are on duty in this city to provide for any emergency in the way of turbulence among the idle crowds in the streets. The home of H. C. Frick was guarded by private detectives last night. Others are keeping personal guard over Frick.

Lovejoy, the secretary of the Carnegie Steel Company, said this morning that the company could do nothing until the Sheriff had restored to its possession its property. He added, the time for a conference with the men has gone by, but those who wish would be given work individually.

Homestead is strangely silent this morning. It is the quiet of sober after-thought. The leaders are wondering what should be the next step. The men are bathing their wounds and preparing pouring lead. The leaders propose to have the fence around Carnegie's property rebuilt and repair all other damages by yesterday's riot with a view of preventing suits by the company. The guards to look after the interest of the company have been here. There is much surprise here over the release by the Sheriff and the sending away of the Pinkerton guards. When the workmen agreed not to kill them, it was understood that the guards would be placed in jail, until information for murder could be sworn out against them. The report of their release excited much angry discussion at first, but this quieted down when the men remembered that if they appeared against the Pinkertons as witnesses, they themselves would be liable to prosecution for riot.

The call of the sheriff for a posse was received with good natured derision, as they were confident a posse could not be collected. The men this morning removed the barricades and restored things to their normal condition as far as possible. The men are confident of their power and, while determined to preserve peace locally, will brook no outside interference.

PITTSBURG, July 7.—The sheriff again telegraphed the governor at noon saying that all his means were exhausted and he left the matter in the hands of the governor.

Three of the injured workmen are in a precarious condition. The death is expected any moment of Wm. Foy and Geo. Ritter and Richard Durham. The physician who examined the wounded Pinkertons says the hands of most of them bear evidence of hard work; several told him they were mill men who came here for the purpose of working and not fighting. There are now twenty-seven wounded Pinkertons in the hospital. Michael Conners, one of the number died of his wounds this morning. He came from New York city. Ed Jacobov, another, will also probably die.

Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie

Steel company, says a number of the strikers will be arrested charged with murder. He declared that the last outbreak has settled one thing, and this, that hereafter no union men will be employed by the Carnegie company and that other millowners will probably follow its example.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 7.—After the Carnegie fight yesterday and last night the town of Homestead today was almost as quiet as a sleepy country village. The workmen were pleased at the news that Governor Pattison had refused to order the militia here. Governor Pattison's action has made him very popular with the men, and this morning contributions were taken up for the appointment of a committee to visit the Governor and to lay the case of the men before him.

While peace reigned today, it was armed peace. A truce was forced by the fact that there was nobody to fight, rather than a permanent cessation of hostilities. No reasonable mind doubts that fighting would be resumed at once if another attempt were made to introduce Pinkerton men into town. Homestead, as far as the introduction of these men goes, is in a state of siege. The town is picketed, and no man can enter without his presence being noted.

There have been no deaths in addition to those mentioned. Several men are in a very dangerous condition, however, and it is doubtful whether or not they will recover.

The city was given a nervous shock about midnight, it being reported that a special train was on its way from Pittsburgh, filled with men coming to take the places of the men coming out. The electric light whistle blew sharply. This was the signal for the people. A crowd of men rushed from every house and every street. Shots were fired to attract the attention of the men. It was some time before the crowd calmed down and dispersed, while many remained on watch.

H. C. Frick, secretary of the Carnegie company, was interviewed this evening in regard to the basis of difference between the company and the men. He said skilled workmen in the Amalgamated Association worked under what was known as the sliding scale. As the price of steel advanced so did their earnings, and vice versa. While there was no limit to their advance there was a point at which the decline stopped.

"We believe if we can advance without limit the earnings of the workmen they should be willing to follow the selling price down to a reasonable minimum, and instead of $25 as a minimum we fixed $23. The reason for this was that we spent large sums of money in introducing new machinery, by means of which the workmen could increase their daily output, thereby increasing the amount of their earnings. A another point was that the date of the expiration of the sliding scale was June 30th. We asked that the date be changed to December 31st to permit us to take estimates, beginning January last, so we would be enabled to make contracts for the year accordingly. The Amalgamated Association declined. The third matter was the proposed reduction in tonnage. We are prepared to show that in every department under the proposed reduction skilled workmen would make more than they did when the scale of 1889 went into effect. As a rule, the men who are making the largest wages were the ones who most bitterly denounced the proposed revision, for out of 3800 men engaged only 325 were directly affected by the reduction. Finding it impossible to arrive at an agreement with the Amalgamated officials we decided to close the works."

Asked for the reason for the employment of Pinkerton men, Frick said he did not see how else they could have protection, doubting the ability of the sheriff to enforce order at Homestead and protect their property.

Frick's attention being called to the widespread interest about the investigation proposed by congressional request, said they welcomed the proposed investigation, and were prepared to submit to this committee evidence which would convince an unbiased man of the equity of their position. Frick further said regarding the political situation:

"We cannot afford to run our business and politics at the same time. We did not propose to reduce the earnings of employees below those of other Amalgamated men in other mills. We put in machinery other mills do not possess to increase the output and the earnings of the men. We asked that a reduction be made in the earnings of our employees to place them on a par with other workmen in other Amalgamated concerns."

LONDON, July 7.—A correspondent found Andrew Carnegie at Braemar, in Aberdeenshire, this afternoon. He was evidently laboring under great agitation, so much so that Mrs. Carnegie was endeavoring to soothe him and draw his thoughts away from the tragic affair at Homestead. Mr. Carnegie positively declined to make any statement. He has within the last day or two sent and received numerous dispatches by cable.

HOMESTEAD, July 8.—It is understood that the men propose, if possible, to have the question legally decided, whether the Pinkertons have a right to bring armed deputies here.

Another attempt by the Pinkertons is apprehended and there is a nervous dread of what is to come. Against such an attempt the strikers will array the power they have. The railroad men are in hearty sympathy with the men and for this reason it will be hard to surprise the strikers with an adequate force. They have plenty of money and the best legal counsel. Guards are on duty against surprises at every point and dynamite is stored along the trestle to cut off communication between the two shores of the river if necessary.

BOSTON, July 8.—General Benjamin F. Butler being asked to give his views on the Homestead tragedy, said: "Everybody has a right to defend their property, but nobody ought to pursue his rights except by process of law. If the governor knew that these Pinkerton ruffians were to be brought there thus armed for murder, he ought to have sent the troops if necessary to capture and punish the fellows for such an illegal expedition into the territory of his State. If the facts are as I understand them, such things ought never to happen in this country. More stringent laws of the United States, as well as of States, should be passed to prevent them. Pinkerton's body of out-throats should be disarmed by law if the law men get at Homestead will not disband them. No railroad under the act which the interstate commerce rights will protect should be allowed to bring them from one State into another under the severest penalties. The existence of such an organization under any form or pretext, should be made a felony in whomsoever taking part. I further as a lawyer believe fully that those having charge of Carnegie's organization for this riotous invasion could be indicted and punished with great severity under the present law for conspiracy to break the peace and commit murder, and hope they may be if there is any law or justice in Pennsylvania not overshadowed by political considerations."

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 8.—Hugh O'Donnell, the strikers' leader, was seen today by an Associated Press correspondent. When asked what he had to say regarding the assertion of Mr. Frick that only 325 of the 3800 men were directly affected by the reduction, he replied:

"I frankly admit the truth of the assertion, but the situation as it now stands is this: If the men concede the point it would open the way for a general reduction in all departments. It is a matter of strict principle with the Amalgamated association to stand firmly by its men, one and all, banded together for mutual support, and the cause of one member is the cause of all. If the men went back to work and consented to the reduction in wages of 325 of their number, eventually the wages of all others would be reduced. The men will, under no consideration yield to the expiration of the scale in December. The output at that season is much less and could ill afford to lay idle at that time of the year, as there would surely be suffering among the poorer classes. No, sir, the final adjustment must be made now."

NEW YORK, July 8.—From the very inside of the labor element in this city it is gleaned late this afternoon, and from the iron workers in particular, everything points to a general strike in this city within the next ninety days unless matters at Homestead are satisfactorily settled. The success of the strikers at Homestead won the sympathy of all wage-workers in this city, and the general opinion is that the Homestead men should be supported and given aid.

PHILADELPHIA, July 8.—A mass-meeting called for tonight under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor to protest against the introduction of Pinkerton men into Homestead was attended by about 2000 people. The principal speaker of the evening was Congressman Jerry Simpson of Kansas. Mr. Simpson said that the introduction of Pinkertons into the State came under the head of high treason, and that they, with Mr. Carnegie, should be tried and hanged for murder. A law was made for such men, and as soon as a workman came into collision with it, he found that he was beyond the pale.

"Nevertheless," said Simpson, "the law of right and the vindication of the people who shed their blood at Homestead is higher than the laws of man."

CHICAGO, July 9.—The building trades council in this city, representing 20,000 organized men, sent a message to the Homestead strikers last night, congratulating them on the "mainly stand taken," counseling them "to hold the pit at all hazards" and tendering financial assistance.

PITTSBURG, July 9.—The committee from Homestead which had a conference with Governor Pattison at Harrisburg last night returned this morning. The members, while saying they were not at liberty to report the results of the conference in detail, express themselves as thoroughly satisfied with the result of their mission. They are convinced that the governor will not call out the militia and intimidate the probability that he will try to bring about an understanding between the men and the Carnegie company.

The picket duty is beginning to tell on the men, many of whom on account of frequent alarms, have not had twelve hours' sleep since Tuesday, but the vigilance is unrelaxed. When it was reported this morning that the company was about to send in laborers and carpenters to make repairs, the guards around the works were doubled. There is a more pacific feeling toward the authorities this morning, and at a meeting today the sheriff may be asked to take charge of the works. This, however, will not prevent resistance in case non-union men are sent to the works. The strikers are just as determined in that direction as ever. They have enough money in private means to last for six months besides the money in the Amalgamated treasury and the contributions they could secure from outside labor organizations, so they are prepared for a long siege.

DENVER, Colo., July 9.—Various labor organizations of the city held meetings at which resolutions were adopted severely denouncing the part taken in the Homestead tragedy by the Pinkertons and calling upon Congress to enact laws preventing the employment of armed men by corporations for the purpose of intimidating and murdering workmen. Sympathy was expressed for the Homestead workers, and aid promised, if necessary.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 10.—The entire division of National Guards of Pennsylvania, about 8000 men, have been ordered to Homestead to support Sheriff McCleary in suppressing riot in that place. The action of the governor was taken on a dispatch from Sheriff McCleary stating that the situation at Homestead had not improved, while all the quiet strikers are in control, and openly express the determination that the works shall not be operated unless by themselves. The sheriff, after making all efforts in his power, failed to secure a posse strong enough to accomplish anything, and was notified that no posse raised by civil authorities could do anything to change the condition of affairs, and any attempt by an inadequate force to restore the law would only result in further armed resistance, and consequently loss of life.

"Only a large military force will enable me to control matters," he telegraphed. "I believe if such force be sent the disorderly element will be overawed and order will be restored.

I therefore call upon you to furnish me such assistance."

Governor Pattison, as commander-in-chief of the State guards, at once issued the following order:

George E. Snowden, Major-General Commanding the National Guards of Pennsylvania:

Put your division under arms at once with ammunition, to support the sheriff of Allegheny county at Homestead. Maintain peace. Protect all persons in their rights under the Constitution and the laws of the State. Communicate with me.

ROBERT PATTISON, Governor.

The following telegram was sent to Sheriff McCleary by Governor Pattison:

"Have ordered Major-General Snowden with a division of the national guards of Pennsylvania to your support at once. Put yourself in communication with him and communicate to me further particulars."

Tonight Major-General Snowden issued the following order to Brigadier-General Robert P. Dachtel, Philadelphia, commanding the first brigade:

"In compliance with the orders of the commander-in-chief you will concentrate your command in camp at Mt. Gretna by tomorrow (Monday) afternoon and there await further order. Take with you three days' rations and all the ammunition on hand. The first troop, mounted, would move on the first."

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 10.—There was intense excitement late tonight by the announcement that the Pennsylvania Militia, 8000 strong, had been ordered out and would arrive at Homestead tomorrow. The news was flashed over the wires to this city at 11:01 p.m., and a few minutes later it came to the ears of the strikers. At first the report was received with incredulity, but a few inquiries among the press representatives convinced them that it was right. Little groups gathered at street corners and the situation was discussed in low but earnest tones. Some hot-headed strikers were at first disposed to be a little defiant, and there were occasional declarations that even the militia would be opposed, but when it was learned that the division ordered out numbered 8000 men, these declarations promptly gave way to, "Oh, well, we have beaten the Pinkertons, anyway."

The opinion was freely stated by the rank and file that the militia would be received with no hostile demonstration and an armistice would be declared until after their departure.

"But they will have to go away some time," said the leader of a little group near the depot, "and when they do we would like to see them run the mill with non-union men."

This little sentence expressed as fully as could volume the situation that will be ushered in by the advent of the militia.

The chief fear of the leaders now is that Carnegie & Company will hasten to install non-union workmen in the mill immediately upon the arrival of the militia.

At midnight the horrible fear took possession of the strikers that the company might sneak in Pinkerton men in the disguise of workmen. Altogether the strikers are in a very uneasy frame of mind late tonight, and anxious faces give evidence of their excitement. A possible feeling of desperation over the prospects may cause the hotter-headed to counsel violence to the militia, but it is safe to say that such suicidal policy will not be approved by the leaders, and if endorsed by some ignorant workmen will be ruled out in the face of determined opposition from the leaders.

"Do you fear the presence of the militia will be taken advantage of by the company in an effort to install non-union men in the mill?" was asked of Bishop McClellie.

"I do not think Governor Pattison said the militia was to be used as guards and he is not sending them here for that purpose. They will be kept here a few days, and when it is seen how peaceable everything is I predict that they will be withdrawn. Our fight against the Pinkertons is against the invasion of our homes by an armed, illegal and disreputable private army."

McClellie's words were accepted by all as final and as indicating the tactics of the strikers.

But the strikers are religiously relying upon the government to afford no assistance to the company in the installation of non-union labor and trusting that the troops may be speedily withdrawn leaving the situation practically the same as before their arrival.

Shortly after midnight a hurried call was sent out for a meeting of the advisory committee to consider the attitude which should be assumed towards the militia and the intention is that the committee shall take definite action. The committee meeting is being held behind closed doors.

It is given out unofficially that at the meeting of the advisory committee it was decided to offer no resistance to the militia occupying the town or the Carnegie property.

The intense strain or excitement to which the strikers have been subjected for the past week is telling on the men. The anxiety has reached such a tension that renewed hostilities would be a positive relief. Alarm after alarm has swept over the town, and the men have so often responded that there is danger that when a true alarm does come it may be unheeded, and the enemy be within the city limits before the strikers can muster their forces. There is no doubt of a settled conviction among the strikers that another battle is inevitable. At least a dozen telegrams have been received stating that a Pinkerton mob, in detachments, is preparing to move on the city, and the leaders have concluded that the decisive struggle is not far distant.

The strength of the Pinkerton army is by a mysterious unanimity estimated at 800, and the strikers feel confident that they can easily repulse the force. One thing is certain, if there still be another invasion of Pinkertons it will be followed by a battle more sanguinary, more terrible and more decisive than the first. The strikers are perfecting organization today, and appear to be gaining strength in every way except with the press, which is spiteful on account of the espionage and restrictions imposed upon its representatives. But Hugh O'Donnell is protecting the newspaper men in every way from harassing interference and

It is safe to say that as long as he is the dominating spirit no more reporters will be ordered out of town. The spirit of toleration evinced by O'Donnell is not shared by many of the rank and file. Half a dozen newspaper men who arrived today were promptly approached by a self-constituted committee and marched off to headquarters where they were forced to remain an hour or two until they were satisfied as to the men's identity. Indeed there are representatives of the press in the city who maintain fear of subsequent visitations. This impels them to an excess of caution and their dispatches suffer from the consciousness that tomorrow may bring a reckoning from the irate committee who know no code of ethics.

This is the situation candidly expressed and the Associated Press but fulfills its function when it says it is only when temerity outweighs discretion that correspondents in this city exercise the perfect freedom of news expression which would characterize their dispatches from any other point, and which even the gravity of the situation at Homestead should not obscure.

The advisory committee is no longer in official existence according to the statement of strikers, but it is evident to any observer that directions are given by certain men. The reason for the failure to have an official organization seems likely to be found in the caution and desire not to get involved in court proceedings. O'Donnell this evening refused to admit the advisory committee of the force and said they were not yet considering the advisability of reorganization. He said if the Congressional investigation committee called upon them he supposed they would respond and give the committee all the information necessary.

Although the formal announcement was made at headquarters this evening that the advisory committee had reorganized with all its old officers the statement is now made that reorganization was effected Saturday. It seems to be quite certain that during the present lull an advisory committee is as good a way of preserving order as can be found, but if there should be any fighting the locked-out workmen will probably go to other leaders. The people seem to be generally glad that it has taken up its work again, but they do not believe it will be long before it will again be discredited and its records burned.

Arrangements have been begun, it is said, by which a temporary hospital for the care of the wounded will be erected near the scene of the battle in case another fight occurs. O'Donnell himself was very non-committal when interrogated upon the point this evening, and merely stated that Dr. Buchner of Pittsburgh Mercy Hospital had called and proffered his assistance and also offered to receive a wounded that might now be in the city.

All the churches were largely attended this morning in anticipation of radical expressions from the pulpit and the visitors were disappointed. At the Methodist Church Rev. Mr. Thompson made some forcible allusions to the existing strike. The manifestations of approval which followed the expressions amounted almost to applause, and the sentiments of the prayer of Rev.

Dr. McMillan also received cordial approval.

In speaking about the matter Father Ballou said:

"This is a peaceable community but a lawless one. They will submit to law, but they will not submit to what they deem illegal force. If another attempt be made to force the Pinkertons into Homestead I fear the very worst. The question cannot be settled that way. The firm and men must arbitrate."

"But if the firm refuses to arbitrate?" "Then I should doubt its honesty, but the opinion of the country can coerce them. Both sides must come together or we will have a most shocking and demoralizing sequel to the wild work of last week."

That there are at least a dozen Pinkertons in town is conceded by the committee, who thus explain the stringency of their press regulations, and stories told of extreme vigilance which everybody is watched. One man suspected last night was stripped of his underclothing. His papers were closely examined and nothing being found, his money and other things were returned to him. But he was taken to the track and pointed out the way to Pittsburgh. The fact is Homestead is as much in a state of siege as though a public enemy were camped on the heights around the town, and gun-boats lying in the river.

There is no promising indication that arbitration will be invoked to settle the existing difficulties. It is stated that the Carnegie company received the suggestion with depressing chilliness, and the leaders of the strikers intimated that they considered the Amalgamated Association more competent than any outsider to preserve the interest of labor in the present difficulty. O'Donnell received a letter from Alfred Love, president of the Universal Peace Union of Philadelphia, asking the men to submit their grievances to arbitration, and stating that the union address Carnegie in the same spirit. O'Donnell stated it was not customary to settle Amalgamated Association matters in that way.

A letter received today from Horace Stiles, a lawyer of Washington, D. C., urging the advisory committee to reorganize legally incorporated, and then filing a bill in equity to claim a legal lien upon the company's property. The letter was read with considerable interest and it is stated that it will be referred to the Amalgamated Association lawyer.

PITTSBURGH, July 11.—The committee of workmen who called on Frick of the Carnegie Co. this morning, were not from the Homestead men, but from the many mills of the Carnegie Co. who are working, and who asked the company to confer with the strikers. The request was refused on the ground that the strikers have taken possession of the company's property and murdered its watchman, for which they must answer to the district attorneys.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 12.—The night passed quietly, and Homestead was in holiday attire early this morning in anticipation of the militia. It was expected that the troops would arrive by day-break and the people turned out in anticipation of that event, ready to welcome the blue coated representatives of the State with a procession of brass bands, school children and flowers, but the situation became somewhat ludicrous as hours passed and the militia did not appear. The bands did their best to keep up the spirits of the multitude with indifferent success. It was after 9 o'clock when the cry went up that troops were coming. They arrived by train from the rendezvous at Greensburg, and consisted of the Second and Third brigades, numbering 3000 men under command of General Snowden, together with two Gatling guns and three field pieces. The sudden arrival, in the absence of the leader of the strikers, disconcerted the programme for the reception, and the soldiers evidently did not desire such treatment from the men whom they were sent there to keep in order. They were received with perfect respect and here and there an attempt at cheer was set up by the on looking populace. The troops descended from the train, formed silently and marched in perfect order, took possession of the mills, deployed artillery at the access of the Monongahela opposite the mills, set pickets all about the works, and settled the question of taking possession of the town by marching one company to the strikers' headquarters, another to the vicinity of the depot and a third to the slight eminence overlooking and commanding the commercial centre of the town. Then Homestead was in the hands of the military and martial law had succeeded the arbitrary reign of the advisory committee.

The citizens of Homestead are deeply disappointed that the militia thought it necessary to occupy the town instead of confining themselves to the mills, but they gave no open evidence of the fact. It was a complete acquiescence in the power of the State, and as gracefully as they could, the strikers accepted the inevitable. The batteries across the river commanded the whole town as well as the Carnegie works.

When the troops arrived the strikers' pickets located in the neighborhood left their posts and congregated to watch the soldiers. The strike leaders at once sent them back to their stations telling them that they had no business to leave their posts, and instructing them not to let any non-union man or detective through the lines. The leaders told them the troops would not interfere with them in this. Similar instructions were given to other watchmen and the whole strike picket line was re-formed outside the picket of troops.

PITTSBURGH, July 12.—H. C. Frick, chairman of the Carnegie company, said in an interview today that it was the intention of the company to resume work at the Homestead mills as soon as possible. There were many of the locked out men who were willing to accept the terms of the company and return to work, if they could be protected in doing so. It would be necessary, however, to secure additional outside non-union help. He thought it could not be long before the entire plant would be in operation.

New York, July 12.—A Philadelphia dispatch says a representative of Carnegie arrived here this morning to engage non-union men for the mills at Homestead. He says an attempt will be made to resume work at once.

ENCOUNTER WITH A BEAR.

By courtesy of Brother George C. Naegle, of Colonia Paibeco, Mexico, we are enabled to publish the following correspondence written by him to his brother and sister, descriptive of a terrible and tragic event:

My dear brother and sister, Joseph and Frances, Tiquerville, Wash. Co., U. T.:

This letter will surely be a shock and surprise to you and the members of our family in Utah and Arizona, and the pen will but feebly convey to you the sad intelligence of the fate of our dear brother Hyrum, who, from the horrible wounds inflicted by an enraged bear, died last night at 10 o'clock. This news will cause you to feel with us the bitter pangs of grief at his untimely death. I now send you the whole circumstance: Nearly all winter some of us boys have gone to the valley about fifteen miles from here, west, over the mountain on the Sonora side of the Sierra Madre, to the ranch. There we would stay the week and return home on Saturday night. On account of being so busy, and as father and some of the boys were over at the new purchase in Sonora, we were usually there only one at a time to look out for the stock, and especially to save the calves and colts from the bears, mountain lions and big grey wolves, which have been very destructive this spring. Already over three hundred dollars' worth have been lost. Brother Hyrum came home on Saturday night and said he had encountered a bear but did not get him. He also reported tracks quite thick; so we both went over last Monday; on Tuesday we hunted in different directions, and found several of our best calves gone. Then we decided to go together next day down the river Gabañen, back up North Creek, and gather up all the cows and calves. I believe that was the first day any of us had ridden together, the day through, during nearly the entire spring, and even when two were there we would ride in different directions, so as to get around among the stock and over more country. As we came up North Creek driving a little bunch of cattle, on turning a curve in the canyon and emerging from the point of a hill, Hyrum exclaimed, "There's a bear!" It was a monster, too. Instantly we jerked our guns and leaped to the ground. Hyrum had a 44-winchester and I a 45 70 marlin. We ran a few paces to a clearing where we had a full view and a fair chance at him. As bruin was going along the bottom of the canyon Hyrum put in the first shot, and I the next, both hitting him. In rapid succession we fired several shots and I think most of them struck the brute. As he climbed the hill on the opposite side, my third shot brought him rolling and bawling down the hill.

Hyrum said, "that's cooked him," but he only lay a second and gathering himself up he scrambled to the top of the hill for about twenty or thirty yards and fell under an oak. Hyrum suggested, "Let's take it easy," and started after him, but having only three cartridges in my magazine, in the haste and excitement of trying to put in more, unfortunately, the first one caught fast, and I could neither force it in nor out until I got my pocket knife. By that time Hyrum was across the creek and climbing the hill, following the bear. I locked up and shouted to him not to follow directly after the brute, but to come in below him, take straight up the hill and come out above or on a level with him. He did so, and as soon as he reached the top he fired three shots: bang! bang! bang! as quickly as he could. I think the bear must have been on the run while he was shooting, and with the third shot got out of sight over a little rise. In the hurry to adjust my gun and go there I did not look up again till I got the discarded cartridge out and there it was. Both Hyrum and the monster being then out of sight, I jumped on my mule—a fleet little animal—and with gun in hand dashed across the canyon. Fortunately I did, for had I taken the journey afoot I should have reached there too late, for when I arrived on the top of the hill I could not see nor hear anything of them. I called "Hyrum, Hyrum, where are you?" but received no answer, and sped on the course I thought they had gone but a few rods over a little rise, when I saw the bear above and a little along the hill side, but I could see no Hyrum. Rushing toward the bear, I could see that he had something bloody in his mouth, musing and growling. Not seeing Hyrum where I feared he had him down, and my horror no human tongue can tell when I first saw his blue overall under the bears body. He was gnawing Hyrum's hand. I shrieked: "My Lord! My Lord! he's got Brother Hyrum." The spurting of my mule caused the brute to drop the hand and pick up his head. For fear of making an accidental shot and hitting Hyrum, or perchance the shot might not prove fatal to the bear, I jumped off to make sure aim. Being then quite close, my jump to the ground frightened him, or at least instead of touching Hyrum again or making for me before I could level down to shoot, he started off. Hyrum rolled over on his face, and rose on his knees and elbows. Then I could see my brother was not dead, but oh such a bloody sight I am unable to describe. The bear was then about thirty yards from him. I fired and brought the brute to the ground, but he got up and started again. A second shot, however, brought him tumbling again, this time to get up a turn on me; but as he turned he fell, and grabbed in his mouth a dry pine limb about the size of my arm. That he crunched as though it were a cornstalk, and with it in his mouth he started off again. A third shot brought him writhing to the earth, and as my last cartridge was in the barrel I proceeded within six feet of his head and sent it through the brain of this huge brown bear. I then rushed back to Hyrum. All this was done in half the time it takes to relate.

Now came the trying ordeal for myself. There alone, with Hyrum's mangled body, fifteen miles away from home and help, how I cried and prayed. The poor boy was still resting on his knees on elbows, with the blood entirely covering his head, face and shoulders and still streaming to the ground. The first thing I did was to support his head and administer to him, after which he cried "Water." I galloped to the creek and brought my hat full of water, and washed his head and face the best I could. Such a mangled head and face you never saw. The skull was laid bare from the top of the forehead about four inches back, and there was one wound on the left side, three-cornered, about two inches each way, and one other wound that we did not discover until just before his death, when some portions of his brain oozed out, two teeth having penetrated the brain. On the back and other side of his head, and just at the corner of his right eye, were seven or eight terribly ugly wounds, laying bare the skull. There was a long gash down the right cheek and two under the jaw, which was washed; his upper lip was half torn off. In all, there were twenty wounds on his head, face, and the right hand was chewed through and through; his left was bitten through in several places; there was one fearful bite on the left leg, just above the knee, and one heavy imprint of the bear's paw and claws, though not deep, on the right breast. Of course these wounds on his body were not observable at first, but I could see his critical state, and knowing that God alone could help us in our lonely and helpless condition, I told Hyrum to exercise all the faith he had strength to do and I would again admit to him. After this he spoke, and I asked him why he went so near the monster. He said the bear got over a little rise out of sight and was lying down, and he did not see him until within two rods, when the bear sprang up and after him, his gun would not go off, though he kept it leveled on the brute, thinking every second it would act. When the bear was nearly upon him he started backward, still trying to pull the trigger, but it failed. The bear struck him with his left paw, the right one being disabled, breaking his jaw and knocking him down. The bear then jumped on him, grabbed him by the head with his mouth; and to protect his head and face he put up his hands. About eight feet from where my brother lay I found his hat and gun. The latter was cocked and contained three cartridges. I think, in the excitement, he failed to press the lever, and that that accounted for its not going off.

After tying up his broken jaw and getting him on his horse (which I led), to my astonishment he rode a mile and a half to camp, where I laid him upon the bed and washed and dressed his wounds, bandaged them in salt water cloths and gave him a little milk and cold water to revive him, as he had swooned a couple of times from loss of blood. He rallied and I asked him what I should do—go for help or try and get him home. He replied "don't leave me here alone," and the thought to myself of leaving him while I rode fifteen miles over a very rough trail and returned with help could not be entertained. Again, such a thing as Hyrum riding so far in such a condition, could not be hoped for or expected. But to my astonishment he had, by the help of God, ridden one and a half miles, and I told him that same God, and He only, could give him support and strength to reach home, and if he thought he could stand the ride we would make a start at once. So I quickly saddled him a fresh horse, and provided myself with a two-gallon syrup can of water (which I replenished at Bear spring), and with a cup and spoon. I put my coat and a slicker on him, as it was cloudy and threatened rain. Then for the third time I administered to him, helped him in the saddle, made a roll of a pair of blankets and a heavy camp quilt to put in front of him to support him, as I thought I would have to use these for a bed for him before reaching home. We started at a fast walk, I driving his horse along the trail, he handling the raies with his left arm. This went on till dark; then I led the horse through the timber and over the mountain, and by giving him every few moments a little water, which he called for, I arrived with him at his home at 10 o'clock at night, the accident having happened about 3 p. m. on Wednesday, the 22nd.

In passing through our little town I called up Patriarch Henry Lunt to get others to assist in administering to him and dressing his wounds. I sent for Franklin Scott, his father-in-law, who sewed up the worst of the wounds, and also Sister O. C. Moffatt to assist in caring for him, and we continued from that time to apply every remedy within our reach to allay fever and keep out inflammation, etc. We also sent word to Apostle Thatcher to come and have the doctor from Carolites sent for. We continued our prayers and supplications for Hyrum's recovery. To all appearance and to the astonishment of every one who saw him, he went on well until yesterday, when about the same time in the p. m. that he was hurt he was taken worse and had quite a bad spell of vomiting. His breathing became heavy and difficult and the brain began to ooze from two of the gashes in the head. He gradually sank, until just before his noble spirit fled he made a great effort to throw off the accumulation from his lungs. With two or three deep gasps he opened his left eye (which was not hurt) and looked as if to say "Good bye," and died calmly and peacefully. I think he was conscious to the last and denounced his suffering manfully, patiently and without a murmur.

To endure such a ride in his condition was characteristic of his extraordinarily strong constitution. Not a groan nor a sound did he make while the bear was on him; and not one man in one hundred, perhaps not in five hundred, could have borne what he did without complaint. The grief of those of the family who surrounded him at his death, and especially the anguish of his young wife was most heart-rending. Hyrum was only married in January last. He was 23 and his widow is 19.

I desire to add our gratitude to our Heavenly Father for His tender mercy in bearing him to his home, wife and family; it is a marvel to all how I got home with him. I tell them nothing but the power of God supported him to reach here.

Poor Hyrum has a record in the Mexican mission that will be a monument of honor to him. He was president of the Deseret Quorum for a while, and was up to the time of his death, and acting priest and one of my counselors in the M. I. A.

I remain, in sympathy and affection, your Brother,

Geo. C. NAEGLÉ.

THE FUNERAL.

On Sunday, the 23th, the funeral services were held at ten a. m.

In the absence of the entire Bishopric, Patriarch Lunt presided. The choir sang, "Oh my Father, etc." Prayer was offered by Father Jos. G. Hardy. "Mourn not the dead, etc.," was sung and Brother Lunt made a few sympathetic and condoling remarks.

Brother Heleman Prest, who was filling a missionary appointment in Cave Valley, came to pay his last respects to Brother Hyrum. He addressed those present and read appropriate passages from the Doctrine and Covenants (Sec. 29.) Brother Lunt also occupied a portion of the time. Each spoke words of comfort to the bereaved family and especial blessings upon the widow.

The choir sang closing hymn, "Thou dost not weep, to weep alone." Benediction by Elder Wm. W. Haws.

The dedicatory prayer at the grave was offered by Patriarch Henry Lunt and the choir sang "Unvett thy bosom, faithful tomb."

COLONIA PACIFICO, Chihuahua, Mexico, June 25th, 1892.

SUNDAY SCHOOL JUBILEE.

This has been one of the most interesting days of the year to us in the Junction city. The sabbath school students of the Latter-day Saints in Ogden city held a grand re-union in the Tabernacle, Superintendent R. Ballantyne presiding. On the stand, besides the superintendents, teachers and others, were Assistant General Superintendent Gossard, and General Secretary John M. Whitaker, of Salt Lake City, Presidents C. F. Middleton and N. C. Flygare, of the Weber Stake; also members of the High Council of Weber Stake, sabbath school superintendents, teachers and others. By ten o'clock the building was filled to its utmost capacity with students.

The exercises were opened by singing, "Merry, merry children sweetly sing." Prayer by Bishop R. McQuarrie. The school then sang, "We are sowing daily sowing."

Superintendent Ballantyne delivered the opening address, he congratulated the assembly on the happy and auspicious occasion on which they had met. He made a few pertinent remarks on the great importance which attaches to the Sabbath schools of the Latter-day Saints, and the manner in which the youth of Israel should approach and worship Him. He was thankful to see so many present, as it showed the great interest taken in Sunday school work.

A duet, "Hope beyond the shadow," was sweetly rendered by members of the Second ward school. This was followed by an interesting discourse by Elder W. F. Henninger on "The Object of the Sabbath Schools." Among many other things, he said the object of these institutions was to teach the young to revere the name of the Deity, to keep holy the Sabbath day, to impart true religious instructions, and to train them up in the fear of the Lord.

A quartette—"Crusade"—was then sung by the Third ward school.

Elder George E. Hyde delivered a short but interesting and instructive discourse, in which he showed how Sabbath schools can be graded. This could only be done effectually, the speaker said, by organizing classes consisting of pupils as nearly as may be of the same age and ability, and furnishing them with subjects to study suitable to their capacities.

"We are watchers, earnest watchers, for the better coming day," was sung in concert, after which Elder John M. Whitaker delivered an earnest address on the harmonious influences of the exercises of the Sabbath school. He spoke of the elevating power of music, both vocal and instrumental, and power of these sacred institutions generally, in preparing the youth of Zion to fill the responsibilities which they will be called upon to assume when elder ones have passed away to another sphere of labor. He exhorted the young men and women to be diligent and earnest in acquiring knowledge on all useful subjects and especially a knowledge of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

"Hope of Israel" was sung by all the schools.

Assistant General Superintendent George Gossard next addressed the meeting. His subjects were the proper conduct of Sabbath schools, prayer, taking and reading minutes, imparting instruction to the youth, and other matters pertaining to the government and progress of these excellent institutions. The speaker closed his address by singing "Utah's Best Crop." The schools then sang a selection. Benediction was pronounced by President C. F. Middleton, and the morning services closed.

At 2 p. m. the Tabernacle was again crowded, and some persons could not obtain seats.

"Our Mountain Home so Dear" was the first hymn sung. Prayer was offered by Elder Joseph Parry. "Lord, Accept Our True Devotion" was the succeeding musical exercise. After the sacrament had been administered, Elder John L. Herrick delivered a lecture on "Deportment" to be observed in the Sabbath schools and other worshipping assemblies. He said this should begin at home—where parents should teach it to their children; the officers of the school should observe it. It involves solemnity during prayer and a respectful attention to all school exercises and religious observances in any place of worship.

"Hark! what means those holy voices?" a mixed quartette, was sung by the Third ward.

"How best to develop part-singing" was dwelt upon at some length by Elder E. T. Woolley, but space will not admit of even a synopsis.

"How so Fair," a solo, was rendered in an effective style by Orson Griffin.

Elder James H. Douglass delivered an instructing discourse on prayer and preaching in the Sabbath schools, embodying many important items of useful instructions.

This was followed by singing "Zion Stands With Hills Surrounding," and then came an address by Elder George Gossard, in which he reviewed the proceedings of the day, and commended the many subjects which had been treated on to the earnest consideration and deep study of the members of the Sabbath schools. He also spoke of the "Book of Mormon charts" and "cards" and exhorted every family who could purchase a copy to do so. He closed by singing "Who's on the Lord's Side?"

Mrs M. D. Wilson, W. C. T. U., of the United States, was introduced, and delivered the following address (reported verbatim by Elder J. M. Whitaker) If any one had told me six months ago that I should stand face to face with a "Mormon" congregation so soon, I should have thought such a one a false prophet. This goes to show how little we know what a day may bring forth. In the early spring I had planned to go to the Pacific coast, to a business that had opened up to me, and as I had relatives here among the "Mormons" I determined that I would stop over and see for myself what the "Mormons" were like; for you know blucious representations get out. So I resolved that no prejudice of my own should deter me from my purpose of remaining here. En route here upon the train I met a lady whose white badge or knot of white ribbon, like my own, showed me that we were members of the same organization, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of the United States and the world. An acquaintance sprang up from this, and we talked on various topics, the "Mormons" included. I smile today when I think of our vague conjectures. Another lady who visited your Third ward Sabbath school wrote me of the agreeable surprise she experienced when here, and I still cherish the hope that I, too, might have that privilege. This lady, in writing to me, tells me what seemed to her to be my duty—to remain here among the "Mormons" and become acquainted with them as they are. For, she says, you are a temperance people, that you are not lacking in this virtue, but that we might assist you in your noble work, although you are misunderstood and much misrepresented and persecuted people. I wondered why these things were so, and while pondering in my mind, there came the "still small voice," "Comfort ye, comfort ye, My people." And I have this much to give if it is worth anything to you—that two eastern ladies have come among you with a determined purpose to investigate what we do not understand; for we recognize in you God's peculiar people, and, I say, be comforted.

I have recently sought to acquaint myself with your principles, and I find them founded where years ago I found my religious principles founded, and that is upon the simple Gospel of Christ. I find that your principles embody temperance, which is one of the fundamental principles of true religion. I learn also that when you established yourselves in these mountains, it was that a pure and holy people might grow up unto the Lord, and that your children and your children's children might flourish by the same fountains of truth in the purity of their lives. And as I look over this vast assembly of boys and girls of "Mormon" parentage, methinks I see that they bear the same trusts and are embodiments of these principles.

Temperance is not alone, but it is a many-headed and many-sided evil, and today over the broad land hundreds of thousands of fathers are dissolving, in their wine cups, gems more precious than diamonds ever set in a monarch's crown.

The speaker went on to say that the "Mormons" are not the people that she believed they were, that they are honest, pure, virtuous and industrious, and living exemplars of their principles. She, for one, would always speak of them as such, for she had seen them as they are, and believed them to be the most vilely misrepresented people of any on the face of the earth. She further exhorted the young to withstand the cup of the tempter, and the wily snares of the evil one.

JOSEPH HALL.

CŒUR D'ALENE RIOTS.

WALLACE, Ida., July 11.—The strained situation in the Cœur d'Alene labor troubles culminated this morning between 5 and 6 o'clock. The Gem and Frisco, non-union mines, were guarded by men behind barricades armed with Winchester. This morning a miner from the Gem started for Burke. When opposite the Frisco mine he fired upon some miners in town. They marched in a body toward the Frisco mills. When scarcely within rifle range a volley from the mine greeted them. They scattered and a regular battle ensued. One miner and one non-union man were killed and perhaps six wounded during the engagement.

The miners in the meantime loaded a Union Pacific car with two hundred and fifty pounds of giant powder and sent it down the track toward the Frisco mine. The car attempted did not work and miners got up on the flume, shut off the water and sent the powder in packages down the water pipe into the mill. A fuse was put in the last package and sent down. In an instant a terrific explosion occurred which shook the canyon for miles.

When the fight was going on at Frisco the Gem guards suddenly began firing volley after volley into the town of Gem, riddling the buildings with bullets. John Ward was wounded in the arm and Gus Carlson, a miner, killed. Attempt to recover Carlson's body met with a volley, and when the body was recovered, an hour afterward, he was dead.

At eight o'clock a truce occurred, and the Sheriff, District Attorney and Deputy United States Marshal appearing on the scene, peace negotiations were immediately set on foot and a truce declared. At twelve o'clock the mine force surrendered to the union men.

The number killed is far as learned is four and about ten wounded; though there may be bodies under the Frisco mill. Besides Carlson, Harry Cummings and two other unknown men were killed. Hugh Campbell, J. W. Gankard of Ogden, Will De Gamblers and George Pettibone were also wounded. There is still considerable excitement everywhere, but no further trouble is expected. About sixty men in the mines surrendered.

Later.—It is reported that twenty non-union men were killed in the explosion in the mill at the Frisco mine. No confirmation has yet been received.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 11.—The most reliable reports from Cœur d'Alene tonight places the number of killed in today's fighting at ten. It is not learned how many, if any, of the bodies were burned in the ruins of the Frisco mill. Five bodies are now lying in Wallace and sixteen wounded men so far are reported. Groups of armed men are leaving Wallace for Wardner late this morning, and trouble is feared there.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon about 300 miners from Gem, fifty of whom were armed with rifles, marched down to Wallace. They brought with them their prisoners consisting of about 100 non-union men and five dead bodies. Another man, James Hennessey, lately of Butte, Mont., being in a house at Gem, was shot through the breast. Upon arrival here the "scabs" were turned loose and the union men began a search for A. M. Ester, manager of the Frisco mine, against whom the union men have an especial grudge.

SPOKANE FALLS, July 11.—It is impossible at this hour to learn the exact condition in the Cœur d'Alene. It is known that nine men are dead, the Frisco mill destroyed by dynamite and that the Gem mine surrendered to the employees were taken to Wallace. A dispatch from the superintendent of the Gem mine says that one man was killed at the Gem and the other eight at the Frisco mine. To avoid further bloodshed he surrendered the mine and all his arms. The property is now in the hands of a guard appointed by the president of the union.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—Senators Shoup and Dubois of Idaho have received a number of dispatches in regard to the mining troubles in the Cœur d'Alene region. The first one came from Marshal Pinkham who transmitted a message from a man named John Pinch at Wallace, reporting fighting in Gem and Frisco mines and saying, "We are powerless to stop the conflict and fear that many will be killed and the mines burned."

With the telegram containing this information the Senators went to call on the President and Secretary of war, but were not able to see either, the President being out of the city and the secretary being away from the department. They then called on the attorney-general and after consultation with him telegraphed the governor as to the conditions under which the President could act in the matter of calling out the federal troops to aid in maintaining order and preserving peace. At midnight the senators received the following from Attorney-General Geo. H. Roberts at Boise, Idaho: "The governor is now preparing to call on the President for troops, if possible, have the military arranged so that orders can be issued from the war department to the commandant at Fort Sherman to move the troops by boat via Mission and Wardner. Many lives are already lost, and much valuable property destroyed. The mob is moving to Wardner. Everything now depends on promptness."

The latest dispatch received by the senators (signed by Governor Willey) report the casualties so far at six killed and seven wounded, and fear is expressed that the scene of violence may extend to other parts of the State, necessitating a proclamation of martial law. The union miners are described as an undisciplined mob of 400 to 500, armed with Winchester and revolvers. They are elated with their success and will not be satisfied until every new man is driven from the mines. Many preliminaries have been arranged so the president will be able to act promptly. When the formal requisition is received it will be sent to the President who is expected to be in Saratoga today.

BOISE, Idaho, July 12.—The following message was sent by Governor Wiley to President Harrison last night: "This morning riot and bloodshed by the striking miners of the Coeur d'Alene district commenced and a mill was blown up by dynamite. Many men were killed or injured. Inspector General Curtis I. N. G., informs me that four or five hundred armed men constitute the mob. The legislature is not in session and cannot be promptly convened; the civil authorities of the county and State are wholly inadequate to maintain peace. The immediately available military force of the Idaho national guard numbers only 196 men, which, in my opinion, are far too few to successfully cope with the mob, though I will order it at once into the field. In this emergency I deem it necessary to call for assistance of the federal troops. I therefore request that a sufficient force be detailed from Fort Sherman or elsewhere to act in concert with the State authorities in maintaining public order." (signed)

N. B. WILEY, Governor.

WALLACE, Idaho, July 12.—The following is a complete list of dead and wounded as the result of the conflict between union and non-union miners at Coeur d'Alene yesterday.

James Hennesey, Gus Carlson, John Starlick, Harry Cummings, Ivery Bean.

F. C. Wilcox, L. L. Abbott, Samuel Carver, R. K. Adams, Charles Smith, N. T. Haloron, Sam'l Carkup, Hugh Campbell, E. W. Putnam, John Whitney, Charles Peterson, S. C. Collins, John Gaukenager, George Pettibone.

The loss by the explosion in Frisco will be $125,000.

WASHINGTON, July 12.—President Harrison has ordered federal troops to be sent to the scene of the miners' trouble in Idaho, and General Schofield has ordered Generals Ruger and Merrill to send troops there.

BOISE, Idaho, July 12.—The opinion of Judge Beatty of the United States district court, in the injunction case against the Miners' Union of the Coeur d'Alene, was filed yesterday. The judge reviews the case at great length; reviews the granting of a temporary injunction on the prayer of the miners, restraining the miners from interfering with the property and, after citing the leading features of the case, the acts of violence alleged on the part of the men, the inquiry on the part of the governor and the proclamation of the latter, which is part of the record, warning the inhabitants of Shoshone county, the court says:

After a most careful examination, the conclusion that the foregoing is a correct statement of the facts cannot be avoided. Wrongs exist. Rights have been infringed on, unoffending citizens have been maltreated. The law has been overridden.

The judge then declares that the court has jurisdiction, and says the outcome of the acts complained of would be to give the miners control of the mines on their own terms. In view of all the facts, the court grants the provisional injunction, pending the final hearing of the case. Judge Beatty takes occasion to explain that his original temporary restraining order was not intended to apply to any newspaper. This explanation is rendered necessary by the fact that one or more newspapers in Coeur d'Alene have alleged that they have been officially served with copies of the injunction.

THE RACE WAR.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 12.—At 1 o'clock this morning a negro mob surrounded the jail at Paducah and a race war is threatened. The negroes refused to disperse thinking the whites meant to lynch Tom Burgess, a negro prowl. The governor has been asked for troops. Unless the negroes soon disperse the sheriff and citizens will charge. Both sides are heavily armed.

THERE HAS BEEN A CLASH

between the citizens and negroes. Seventy-five negroes opened fire upon the troops and citizens, and Private Elmer Edwards was mortally wounded. Several of the negroes were shot down by the troops. The extent of the injuries is not known. The sheriff is now trying to induce the negroes to disperse, but they refuse and more bloodshed is sure to follow.

CINCINNATI, July 12.—The Commercial Gazette of Paducah, Ky., special says:

Shortly after 9 o'clock this evening while the city council was in session, the chief of police threw a bomb in their midst by announcing that a report had just reached him that two or three hundred negroes, armed with Winchester rifles, had congregated in the vicinity of the jail prepared for an attack.

The council at once adjourned.

The mayor sent a dispatch to the governor asking him to order out Company C of the State guard located here. Every able-bodied man was now on the streets, and everybody that can obtain arms of any kind is doing so. The sheriff has charge of a posse of fifty or seventy-five men armed with shotguns and revolvers procured from various hardware stores. The underlying cause of the uprising is the harging of Charles Hill, a negro who made an assault upon Lydia Starr some weeks ago. The negroes have been secretly obtaining arms for some time and something of this kind has been looked for almost any time.

The immediate cause of the outbreak is the arrest of a colored man named Thomas Burgess.

At 11:30 o'clock the marshal and mayor returned to jail from a round of squads of negroes, who, when the mayor and marshal promised that no violence should be done to the prisoner in jail, promised to disperse and began to do so. The marshal addressed a crowd of white people and told them to go home as the negroes were dispersing and no violence need be feared. People began to do so, and in a few minutes the crowd was reduced to the militia and about forty armed citizens.

At 12 o'clock a band of seventy-five negroes suddenly appeared marching down Sixth street and opened fire upon the men collected at the jail. At the first fire Elmer Edwards, a young man of about twenty years of age, fell, shot through the abdomen. He is now dying. He was a member of the militia company. The fire was returned by the militia and armed citizens and the negroes beat a precipitate retreat. The militia also retreated in disorder back to the court house where they kept up firing until the negroes disappeared down the street.

The jail and court room were now filled with the militia and armed citizens. The negroes retreated to the Odd Fellows' Lodge, which had been their chief headquarters tonight. The police arrested and placed in jail over fifty negroes who were found carrying arms, and they were guarded to prevent any attempt to release them.

The mortal wounding of young Edwards aroused a storm of indignation that is kept from breaking out only with difficulty, and an attempt to avenge his death is almost certain to be made. The excitement is high and at two o'clock this morning the streets were filled with people.

THE NEGROES DISPERSE.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 12.—After the skirmish last evening between the troops and negro mob at Paducah, both sides returned, the whites to the court house and the negroes to the Odd Fellows' hall. It was decided to make no effort to dislodge the blacks until morning. No report is received since daylight. It is believed the negroes separated just before day.

CLUTE'S SHORTAGE.

The expose in last night's News of a shortage in the accounts of a "Liberal" ex-city official to the extent of more than $20,000 created a sensation that caused the police scandal to be temporarily forgotten.

Those who know most about the matter were very reticent; in fact, they refused absolutely to be interviewed concerning it, but in two or three instances they unwittingly committed themselves.

A couple of newspapermen called upon City Treasurer Duke at the Board of Education rooms last night and asked him if he knew anything concerning the alleged shortage of $20,885.85 in ex-City Assessor and Collector Clute's accounts.

He replied: "Only what I saw in the DESERET NEWS this evening."

As a matter of fact the News did not mention Mr. Clute's name at all.

Being pressed further he said, smilingly: "Boys, I have nothing to say now but will speak at the proper time and place."

City Auditor Raybould was next called upon but refused to divulge what he knew.

The Tribune makes the following statement this morning:

"The News last evening says that a deficit is shown in the accounts of one of the late city officials, of $20,885.85. The News overstates the amount, and it is also an error to say that the deficit is still outstanding, for it has been made good."

The above figures were obtained by a representative of this paper from a source that can hardly be questioned. A "Liberal" city official who is well acquainted with the facts in the case said to a reporter this morning: "The News has not misused the amount except by a very few dollars." As to the "deficit having been made good" there is a conflict of statements. The auditor declares that the money cannot be paid into the city treasury without his knowledge, and up to noon his books did not show that the amount had been refunded. City Treasurer Duke was silent concerning the affair this morning, but this afternoon he said a settlement had been arranged for.

It is said that the "expert" who discovered the discrepancy in Mr. Clute's accounts was none other than city assessor and collector Leonard. The discovery was told as a secret so frequently that it finally became a open one. The trusted members of the council took the matter in hand and the settlement talked of is the result.

Two reporters, this afternoon, asked City Auditor Raybould to allow them to look at Mr. Clute's bond which was on file in his office. That gentleman replied that he had left the combination of the safe at his home and consequently was unable to produce the papers.

This did not satisfy the reporters and Mr. Raybould finally admitted that he would not grant the request until he had consulted with the mayor. So far as he was personally concerned it made no difference, but that official must be seen first.

Two gentlemen employed at the city hall considered this effort to suppress information would act as a boomerang to the "Liberal" party and so expressed themselves, and through them the names of the bondsmen were obtained from another source. They are: Nicholas Treweek, $15,000; Jacob Moritz, $5000; C. J. Annett, $5000; J. K. Gillespie, $5000; Hugh Anderson, $5000; T. C. Armstrong, $5000; Jos. Geoghegan, $5000; Simon T. Pearson, $5000. Several of these gentlemen are absent from the Territory, and how the money was raised has not yet been publicly explained.

A News reporter made three unsuccessful attempts today to see Mr. Clute and obtain his version of the discrepancy.

In my interview yesterday with the reporters of the public press, having referred to discrepancies found in my accounts as assessor and collector, I erroneously referred to "my deputy." The name of Mr. S. T. Pearson having been identified with that office during the greater part of my term, and since said publication, it having come to my knowledge that among some people the impression has gone abroad that Mr. Pearson in some way was implicated, I hereby certify that so far as Mr. Pearson is concerned he had no knowledge of said errors and furthermore, he having left this city nearly a year ago, is in no way directly or indirectly implicated or responsible for said errors.

Mr. Pearson left the city before the board of equalization had concluded its labors upon the assessment rolls and consequently knew nothing whatever about the changes and reductions in said assessment roll, which I charge were the cause of said error.

DEATH OF LOT SMITH.

Lot Smith was killed by Indians on the 21st. He had been very busy cutting his hay and preparing machinery to go into harvesting wheat, which is now ready. Upon returning home he found a large herd of sheep in his pasture. Being on horseback he rode home and got a revolver, returned and began shooting the sheep. Seeing this five Indians rushed out and commenced shooting his cows, and he himself received a shot which took effect in the left side, just below the shoulder blade, coming out about three inches below the right nipple. This happened about 4 o'clock p. m. After being shot he rode home, got off his horse and walked to the house. He lived till 10 o'clock that night. He leaves a large family and a wide circle of friends to mourn his death.

I do not know what may grow out of this affair with the Indians, but at present there seems to be no excitement. But we are looking for officers from Flagstaff to take it in hand. I don't know how that may terminate, but as it now stands the Indians lost six sheep and Lot Smith lost five cows and his own life.

D. BRINKERHOFF.

ANDREW CARNEGIE.

Two labor trouble at Homestead, Pa., is evoking a great deal of criticism and comment. Andrew Carnegie is handled without gloves by many newspapers, and by several prominent politicians and agitators. It should be remembered that Mr. Carnegie is now in Europe, and ought to be heard from before he is held responsible for what has taken place in his absence. Hereafter he has been seriously embroiled in labor troubles. In his article on "Capital and Labor" in a recent number of the Forum, he speaks like a sensible, liberal, common sense capitalist. He says in that article:

"My experience has been that trades unions upon the whole are beneficial both to labor and capital. They certainly educate the workman, and give him a truer conception of the relations of capital and labor than he could otherwise form. The ablest and best workmen eventually come to the front in these organizations, and it may be laid down as a rule that the more intelligent the workman the fewer the contests with employers."

Further on in the same article he says:

"I have noticed that the manager who confers with a committee of his leading men has the least trouble with his workmen. I therefore recognize in trades unions, in organizations of the men who select representatives to speak for them, a means not of further embittering the relations between employer and employee but of improving them."

These utterances do not savor of absolutism or tyranny, and it may be that their author does not approve of the methods of those who have charge in his absence. It is true Mr. Frick, who is the manager of the Homestead works, is well known as an opponent of organized labor. He has already figured in troubles of this kind in the coke regions, and by the aid of Pinkertonism has been comparatively successful.

Pinkerton is not a new name in Pennsylvania. He it was who organized the Coal and Iron police of that region in the interest of capitalists. How far the State permitted him to use this constabulary by charter it is difficult to say. But it is certain that until recently the average workman regarded the Pinkerton police as a State constitution of some kind.

This perhaps accounts for much of the rabidity displayed in the recent troubles by the workmen. They have submitted for years to a power which now they learn had no authority of law, and it is not pleasing to a man's own self-complacency to find out that he has been for years a misguided dupe. He might feel like kicking himself, but more likely he would want to kick somebody else. Pinkertonism, we hope, has fired its last gun in the United States.

RETURNED ELDERS.

Elder Morosol England of Tooele arrived in this city over the Union Pacific yesterday noon on his return home from a mission to Great Britain, for which part of the world he left on September 1st, 1893. Elder England labored as a traveling Elder in the Norwich Conference during his entire mission. While there is more or less indifference manifested among the people as to religious matters, he reports that he met with fair success and the best of treatment. He allayed much prejudice and made many warm friends. He enjoyed good health and returns in excellent spirits.

Elder A. M. Porter, of East Porterville, Morgan county, Utah, arrived in Salt Lake City, July 6th, from his mission to the Northwestern States. He left for this field of labor on July 16, 1890, and has been laboring in the States of Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas the last six months as president of the Iowa conference. Elder Porter says he has enjoyed his missionary labor very much and has met with some success. He has been treated well and made many friends. The last six months he stayed with a relative, Mrs. Susanna Ireland, a lady who belonged to the Church in Nauvoo. She left the Saints shortly after the assassination of the Prophet Joseph, but she now feels kindly disposed towards the people.

This morning we received a call from Elder James M. Campbell, of this city, who returned on Wednesday from a mission to the Southern States. He left home June 4th, 1890, and was first appointed to labor in Nelson and Amherst counties, Virginia. He remained there ten months, at the expiration of which time he went to Appomattox and Campbell counties, of the same State, then to Buckingham county, and finally to Hanover, East Virginia. The last field was more prolific than the others, a spirit of inquiry being awakened among the people, and some additions to the Church were made. In the other fields indifference to the message of the Elders was the rule. Elder Campbell states that he received good treatment while in the South, and his health has been excellent throughout.

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, July 3d, 1892, commencing at 2 p. m. President Angus M. Cannon presiding. The choir sang the hymn beginning:

"Praise ye the Lord, my heart shall join
In woe so pleasant, so divine."

Prayer was offered by Elder J. C. Wood.

The choir sang the hymn:

"Behold the Great Redeemer die,
A broken law to satisfy."

The Priesthood of the Nineteenth Ward administered in the ordinance of the Sacrament.

BISHOP ORSON F. WHITNEY was the speaker. It was a requirement, he said, made of the Latter-day Saints by the God whom they served that they should meet together often and partake of the Sacrament and be instructed regarding the things of salvation. He trusted that all present could partake worthily of the emblems of a broken body and shed blood of our Lord; moreover, that those who were called upon to speak to that congregation would have the spirit of instruction upon them, that all present might be edified and blessed in meeting together.

When we partook of the Sacrament we bore witness unto the heavens that we were willing to take upon us the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, that we were willing always to remember Him and keep His commandments, that we might always have His Spirit to be with us.

We were required to have no hatred in our hearts, no ill-feeling against our brethren or our sisters. We were required to have pure hearts and humble spirit, thereby manifesting that we were in earnest in remembering Him who was pure and humble before all men, and worthy to bear His name.

The truth as it came from God was generally, if not always, distasteful to the natural man. It was contrary to the natural spirit of man, because it required him to make sacrifices of his opinions, his notions, his passions and predilections, and he rebelled instinctively against such things. The natural man loved to gratify self, to give way to his natural inclinations, to pursue those things which afforded him pleasure; and anything which required him to deny the indulgence of these was liable to be hated by him and opposed.

When Jesus sat upon the Mount of Olives teaching the multitude, it was said they were astonished at His doctrine. He taught them things to which their ears were strangers, as Israel had been schooled and disciplined for fifteen hundred years under what is known as the lesser law and under the dominion of the lesser Priesthood. Moses, in his time, had striven earnestly to sanctify his people by means of the higher law—the Gospel—and by the power of the Melchizedek Priesthood. He fain would have brought them to that condition where they could have gazed, as he gazed, upon the face of their Maker, talked with Him as friend with friend, as he conversed with Him upon the Mount. But it seemed that they were unwilling, unprepared, at that time to receive the higher truth, the higher law, and the powers of the higher Priesthood. So these were taken from them, and they were left with the Aaronic Priesthood and the law of carnal commandments. For fifteen centuries, then, they had been schooled under such a law, which permitted retaliation, revenge, the exacting of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth"—the application of the strict principle of justice which made every man answer to man for the wrong that he committed. So that when Jesus came, restoring the higher law, the gospel of mercy, and enjoined upon men that they should forgive their enemies and not seek to avenge their wrongs, they were astonished at what He said. And no wonder, when we consider after the lapse of nearly two thousand years, during which the world had basked, as it claimed, in the fulness of the light of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, how hard it is for the humblest and best of Christians to magnify this higher law, to learn to return good for evil.

He had heard men cast discredit upon this teaching of the Savior; he had known Latter-day Saints to argue, to strive to convince themselves and others, that the Lord did not mean what He said when He made this requirement of His people. He did not think, however, that this was a safe position to assume. It was more becoming in us to take the fault upon ourselves, to acknowledge that it was God's law, nevertheless, though we might not always be ready, willing, or able to keep it. We should forgive as we hoped to be forgiven; and this, he took it, was the love that the Lord meant—to be broad enough in our hearts to make allowance for the weaknesses of others and not sit in harsh judgment upon them. "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

It often happened that we only saw the outward manifestations. We saw that a man stumbled, fell, and committed a mistake, but we did not know how he struggled ere he fell; we did not know the weaknesses that men inherit, the burdens which they bore; and yet we brought them to judgment before the tribunal of our minds and hearts, and made them responsible, perhaps, for things inherited from their ancestors. We had only to measure the distance between the perfect law of God and our inability to keep it to see the chasm that we were expected to bridge, the journey we were required to make before we had accomplished that which God called for at our hands. The speaker was thankful to say he was not one of those who believed that God did not mean what He said, who would cast discredit on a law which required him to do unto others as he would they should do unto him, though he did not claim the power to keep such a law at all times.

He thought it might be stated, as a truth, that most, if not all, the wickedness and wrong doing and sinfulness of man was the result of ignorance. He made all due allowance for what was termed wilful wickedness, and that desperation which impelled some men forward into the very jaws of damnation, when they knew where they were going, to some extent at least; but if we analyzed this as far as we were capable, could we not recognize that those feelings of wilfulness and desperation which prompted some men to do wrong were the results of dense ignorance, which, as Shakespeare says, is the only darkness that is "There is no darkness but ignorance," says the immortal bard.

The Latter-day Saints did not believe that we sprang into existence in an instant, suddenly, but that we existed before we came upon this earth, and that we were reaping here, to a great extent, the results of our deeds in a previous life. This principle was recognized in the days of Jesus, who was asked by His disciples concerning a certain man who was born blind, and whom He healed. "Lord, did this man sin, or his parents, that he was born blind?" They asked—showing that He had been teaching them that it was possible for man to sin before he came upon the earth, and that here he might be made to answer for it by being born lame, or blind, or wanting in some other respect. But in this instance, it seems, it was not so, and we were not to infer that such always was the case. Because Jesus said that it was neither the man nor his parents who had sinned; but he was born blind that the Son of God might have the opportunity of showing forth His power in the restoration of the man's sight. The scriptures were, however, replete with doctrine teaching the pre-existence of the spirit—that this is not the first life man has lived. The Latter-day Saints believed that we had before lived in the spirit and looked upon the face of God, and that it was because we were faithful in keeping that estate that we were permitted, with all men who have tabernacled in the flesh, or ever would, to come here and take up mortal bodies, having been given the privilege of passing through a probation—a school—that should develop us and make us stronger, brighter and better.

But there was a third of the spirits which were not faithful enough to be permitted to take bodies upon the earth, and they, following after Satan, who rebelled against God, were cast out from heaven and were permitted for a wise purpose to wander up and down the earth as seducing spirits, tempting the children of men to go astray and neglect the things which God required at their hands. Misery loves company and fallen spirits find drag after them the souls of the children of God who were on the highway leading to salvation. In that pre-existent life we walked by sight, we saw God face to face; and the speaker presumed we knew many things that were hidden from us now. But a third fell away, unable to endure the test of walking by sight, while all the children of men who dwelt here in the flesh stood the test, and earned the privilege of coming here to be schooled and disciplined.

For a wise purpose a knowledge of the past was shut out. We no longer saw God face to face, and were called upon to undergo a higher test—to believe things which we do not see, things which we do not hear, which were not to be apprehended by means of our grosser senses. Our spiritual vision was called into play, that vision which pierced the clouds which shut us in, which went beyond the bounds of time, and passed over the horizon of temporal things. It was a greater test to walk by faith than to walk by sight. He thought it followed that the action of all men who sinned now and were faithful before, who fought against God here while they fought for Him there, was more or less the result of their ignorance, their lack of knowledge, having forgotten temporarily what they once knew, thus being left free to exercise their agency in the flesh. It was because he believed that it was men's ignorance that caused them now to fight against the work of God—which they would not dare to do if they knew what they were doing—that he thought we could afford to have charity for them.

When upon the cross Jesus said, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," He had heard it contended that Jesus did not, in this, mean to include the Jews, those who conspired to put Him to death, but the Roman soldiers who simply obeyed orders in crucifying Him. But he thought it would rob Him of half the credit for those noble words if it was claimed that He did not mean His murderers and all who consented to His death. Surely they did not know what they were doing—did not know they were killing the Son of God. No, it was their ignorance, and Jesus recognized it when He uttered those dying words on the cross. Another reason why we could afford to be charitable was that we were here to be buffeted and to suffer, to endure pain and death. To be robbed, to take a disadvantage, and persecuted. Why? Because this earth was a school, and these were among God's methods of educating his children therein. The Almighty enumerated to the Prophet Joseph, as he lay stretched in chains on the dungeon floor of Liberty jail, all the trials to which men might be subject—that men might persecute him, friends betray him, fierce winds become his enemy, the heavens gather blackness, the billowing surge conspire against him, and the very mouth of hell gape wide open for him; "but know thou, My Son," said He, "that all these things would give thee experience and be for thy good. The Son of Man hath descended below them all; art thou greater than He?"

We passed through these and experiences in order to become educated and made better men and women, and we could afford to be patient, to feel resigned and make allowance for those who caused us to suffer, who trampled upon us and wrought us—acknowledging God's hand in it working for our salvation, development and perfection. This truth was apparent to us in the spirit world, "when the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy." They saw the end from the beginning, and rejoiced in the very prospect of mortal pains and woes, that another world was being made, that the foundations of the earth were laid, or, if you please, that another school house was being built in which they were to receive their education.

But let it not be thought because Jesus taught men to be merciful and full of charity that He meant to do away with the principle of eternal justice. Justice goeth on and claimeth its own. There never was and never would be left, in God's economy, such a thing as an unbalanced scale, and the measure that we mete unto others should be measured unto us again. If we wronged each other we were simply heaping upon our own backs burdens that we must bear until we expiate our faults. What folly, then, to sin against each other, to wrong our neighbor, when we must answer for it and pay the principal with added interest.

Let us take these things to heart, seeking to practice the higher law, and may the day come speedily in the midst of the Saints when it will not be as it was in the midst of ancient Israel—a matter of astonishment that God should require us to love all men and forgive them have charity for them, keeping our hearts free from ill-feeling that we might partake of the Sacrament worthily and manifest our love for our Creator by loving the souls that He has created.

The choir sang the anthem—

Praise ye the Father.

The benediction was pronounced by Elder Joseph C. Sharp.

PRIESTHOOD MEETING.

The Priesthood of the Salt Lake Stake of Zion convened in the Assembly Hall, Salt Lake City, Saturday, July 2nd, 1892, at 11 a. m., President Angus M. Cannon presiding.

There were present on the stand: Counselors E. Taylor, of the Stake Presidency; William B. Preston, of the Presiding Bishopric of the Church; Elias Morris and William C. Dunbar, of the Presidency of the High Priests' quorum, and other prominent Elders.

The meeting commenced with singing and prayer, after which the roll was called, showing one High Counselor, three Patriarchs, eight Presidents of Seventies and five home missionaries.

All the wards of the Stake were properly represented excepting Farmers, East Mill Creek, Union, Herriman and West Jordan.

The First, Third, Twelfth, Fourteenth, Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Nineteenth, Twentieth and Twenty-first Quorums of Elders were represented by their presiding officers; also the Sabbath school by Stake Superintendent Thomas C. Griggs.

Upon the recommendation of the respective Bishops, a number of young men received certificates authorizing their ordination to the office of Elder, on promising to honor and magnify this office and calling if ordained.

It appearing that some of the Presidents of the Elders' Quorums had taken it upon themselves to ordain young brethren to the office of Elder without having received the customary certificate from the Priesthood meeting authorizing the ordinations.

PRESIDENT ANGUS M. CANNON advised the presidents of Elders' Quorums to require persons desirous of being ordained Elders to produce said certificates authorizing such ordination.

BISHOP WILLIAM B. PRESTON addressed the meeting for a short time.

He called the attention of the Bishops, particularly those residing in the country wards to be careful in the handling of hay and other products of the farm. As it is now the haying season, it should be attended properly. Great care should be taken with the stacking of the titling hay, so that if it is necessary to keep it over for a year or two it will be well preserved. Where the hay can be sold, sell it and send the money to the General Tithing Store House. You farmers are at liberty to sell all your products, not only hay but everything you raise. Let the market price, as near as possible, govern the Bishops in receiving produce. Also when disposing of the same sell according to the prevailing price.

Bishops take care of everything committed to your care; this is expected of you stewards of the Lord. Another thing, look after the poor of your wards and see that none suffer. Be fathers to the people, as your office implies. As you do this they will love and respect you in turn.

Granger, Draper, Sixth and Twenty-first city wards, also Sandy wards were reported by their respective Bishops, each saying that as a rule the people were doing as well as could be expected in regard to living their religion. These Bishops were also united in stating that they were seriously annoyed by great numbers of people in their wards who had moved into their districts without bringing notes of standing and asked what was to be done with such people. The question of round dancing was also sprung by one of the Bishops, who wanted to know if such dancing had the approval of the authorities of the Stake.

President Angus M. Cannon remarked that where people failed to bring their notes of standing from one ward or place to another, extra efforts should be made to procure their recommendations or when this could not be done renew their covenants and become faithful Latter-day Saints. Persons who desire to do right will take notes of standing with them.

Referring to the question of round dancing the speaker said: The late President John Taylor proclaimed against it as distasteful to him. The Twelve Apostles advised, inasmuch as excess of them tended to evil, that not more than "one or two" be permitted during one evening, while the High Council of this Stake knowing the feelings of the Prophet of God, decided: "That round dancing be discontinued in this Stake altogether, in the assemblies of Latter-day Saints."

It having been called to his attention that such a prohibitory resolution conflicted with the advice given by the Apostles—the speaker conversed with President John Taylor, before his death and suggested, he would advise the High Council to reconsider its action, relating to such dances—whereupon the President replied: "I am opposed to such dances believing them to be improper—and that they tend to evil, and I will advise you to let the resolution remain on record."

From that time to this nothing further has been said in this Stake, about restraining them, until today, when we see the older people withdrawing from our parties and round dancing is the rage—the young possessing the control.

I have washed my hands of the course that has been pursued by those whose pleasure it is to disregard the counsels of those who have given evidences of possessing wisdom inspired of God.

It is proper that we provide amusements for our people, but when they become the rule and religion and work are looked upon as an exception, I think it is time we call a halt, in the fear of God.

The sustaining of each other in every good word and act was advocated, and the attention of the Priesthood and people alike called to the word of the Lord contained in the scriptures, viz: "Be not only hearers of the word but doers of it."

Adjourned until the first Saturday in August at 11 a. m.

Benediction by Bishop Orson F. Whitney.

POWERS WANTS SOME MONEY.

The following modest demand, or complaint, or assault, or whatever it may be called, was filed on Tuesday and is herewith presented in full:

Territory of Utah, } ss.
County of Salt Lake, }

In the Third Judicial District court, Orlando W. Powers, plaintiff, vs. the Deseret News Publishing Company, a corporation, defendant.

The plaintiff above named comes and complains of the above named defendant and for cause of action alleges:

First—That the said defendant, the Deseret News Publishing Company, is now and was at all the times herein-after mentioned a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the Territory of Utah, and is now and was a publisher of the Daily Evening News, a newspaper published in Salt Lake City, Utah Territory, being a newspaper of large circulation in Utah and other Territories and States of the United States.

Second—Plaintiff further alleges that in or about the month of April, A. D. 1885, this plaintiff was duly appointed by the President of the United States an associate justice of the Supreme court of the Territory of Utah, and thereafter and for more than one year, or until the month of August, A. D. 1886, plaintiff held and occupied said office to which he was appointed as aforesaid, and performed the duties thereof.

That in virtue of his said office he during said time held and occupied and performed the duties of presiding Judge of the First Judicial District of said Territory.

Third—Plaintiff further alleges and shows that in or about the month of September, A. D. 1885, and whilst plaintiff was presiding judge of said district, there was called for trial in said court before plaintiff in his said official capacity, a certain lawsuit or cause entitled the Bullion Beck and Champion Mining Company, plaintiffs, against Eureka Hill Mining Company, John Q. Packard and John H. McCrystal, defendants. And thereafter the said cause was duly and regularly tried in said court before plaintiff in his said official capacity, and judgment thereon was duly given and rendered by plaintiff as presiding judge of said court.

That said defendant well knowing the premises did on the 2nd day of July,

A. D. 1892, knowingly and maliciously, and with intent to wrong and injure this plaintiff in the premises, compose and publish in said newspaper of and concerning the plaintiff and of and concerning the matter in his said official capacity the malicious, false, and defamatory matter of the tenor following, that is to say:

"AN ENEMY IN DISGUISE."

"The 'Liberal' organ is still posing as the champion of O. W. Powers, (meaning this plaintiff) and doing its best to stab him (meaning this plaintiff) in the back. Everything it says about him attracts attention to things he has no desire to be discussed, and stirs up to activity proceedings that had better for his sake (meaning this plaintiff) remained quiet. In all this the organ exhibits its chronic infirmity of blindness as to logic, and impudence in requiring an opponent to prove its own assertion or accept its bald statements as admitted facts. When we challenged it to give evidence to support its rash and groundless charges, it wants us to hunt for and develop that evidence, and when we announced that we are ready with the record of certain matters it accuses us of 'trying to silence a record.' As to the Bullion Beck litigation (meaning thereby the lawsuit hereinbefore referred to,) if it wants the record of Judge Powers, (meaning thereby this plaintiff,) action in that matter and all the circumstances connected with it (meaning thereby the conduct of this plaintiff in the trial and determination of said lawsuit,) we have the particulars on hand and will be ready when necessary to give them in full. We repeat, we have no wish to make any personal assault on any one connected with the affairs to which the 'Liberal' organ has drawn attention, but when it comes to a needless issue we will be found to the front. (Meaning thereby that the said defendant could and would if an issue of that sort were made prove that in the trial and determination of the lawsuit by this plaintiff he in his said official capacity had acted wickedly and corruptly and contrary to his official oath.)"

"We return its advice, 'not to grow too confident or try by a bluff to silence a record,' and draw its attention to the fact that we have nothing to silence, but that silence is its own best policy. Unless we believe it is eager to pilory instead of shield the Chief of the Tuscadoras, meaning thereby the plaintiff."

That by said words the said defendant did convey and intend to convey, to those who read said publication, the meaning that plaintiff acted dishonestly and corruptly in his official capacity aforesaid, in the trial and determination of said lawsuit, and did thereby publish the charge that plaintiff was guilty of wicked and corrupt conduct in the trial and determination of said cause, and that the defendant is now in possession of evidence to prove the same against this plaintiff, and that the plaintiff is afraid to have published certain matters and things now in possession of defendant.

Sixth—That said words were, at the time of publication, as aforesaid, well known by defendant to be false, and were as aforesaid, published with express malice; and by reason of the publication of the same, as aforesaid, plaintiff has been greatly injured and damaged, to wit: In the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars. ($25,000.)

Wherefore, the premises considered, plaintiff demands judgment against said defendant in the sum of twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000.00) and the costs of this action.

D. N. STRAUP,
OGDEN HILES, and
W. H. DICKSON,
Attorneys for plaintiff.

Territory of Utah, } ss.
County of Salt Lake, }

Orlando W. Powers being duly sworn deposes and says that he is the plaintiff in the above entitled cause that he has heard read the foregoing complaint and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true of his own knowledge except as to matters therein stated on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

ORLANDO W. POWERS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 5th day of July, 1892.

SEAL D. N. STRAUP,
Notary Public.

Commission ends Nov. 24, 1892.

In the Third District Court in and for the Third Judicial District of Utah Territory, County of Salt Lake.

Orlando W. Powers, plaintiff, vs. the Deseret News Publishing Company, a corporation, defendant, summons.

The People of the Territory of Utah send greeting:

To the Deseret News Publishing Company, a corporation, defendant.

You are hereby required to appear in an action brought against you by the above plaintiff in the District Court of the Third Judicial District of the Territory of Utah, and to answer the complaint filed therein within ten days (exclusive of the day of service) after the service on you of this summons—if served within this county; or, if served out of this county, but in this district, within twenty days; otherwise within forty days—or judgment by default will be taken against you, according to the prayer of said complaint.

The said action is brought to have judgment against defendant in the sum of $25,000 and costs of suit; alleged to be due as damages sustained by plaintiff by reason of wrongful acts of defendant, in knowingly and maliciously and with intent to wrong and injure plaintiff, published in a certain newspaper, to wit: The Deseret Evening News, certain false and defamatory matter concerning plaintiff, by reason of which publication, July 2nd, 1892, plaintiff has been damaged in said sum of $25,000.

And you are hereby notified that if you fail to appear and answer the said complaint as above required, the said plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded therein.

Witness, the Hon. Charles S. Zane judge, and the seal of the district court of the Third Judicial District, in and for the Territory of Utah, this 5th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

HENRY G. McMILLAN, Clerk.
By GEO. D. LOOMIS, Deputy Clerk

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met in regular session last night, President Loofbourow in the chair. The aldermen in attendance were: Hardy, Folland, Rich, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Simonds, Ewing, Evans, Beardsley, Heise, Wantland, Karrick, Moran.

PETITIONS.

were as follows:

L. L. Kinney and others complained of the killing of cattle at the Union Stockyards.

Simon Samberger asked that east, South Temple Street be improved. Committee on streets.

E. B. Tyson and G. B. Whitecar asked for an extension of time for the payment of taxes for the laying of watermain on Fern Street. Committee on waterworks.

W. B. Morton and others asked for an extension of watermain on Fifth South Street. Committee on waterworks.

G. Guccioni asked permission to erect a barber's pole in front of his shop on West Temple street. Committee on streets.

William Morris and others asked for watermain extension of Hazel street between Eighth and Ninth West streets. Committee on waterworks.

Vincent Shurtliff asked to be allowed to purchase the old lumber fence from the city which stands on the Eighth ward square. Committee on improvements.

Wigglesworth and Jones asked permission to sell buttermilk at the corner of Main and Second South streets. Committee on streets.

The Hospital of the Holy Cross officials asked to be allowed to make certain sewer connections with their property. Committee on sewerage.

Harriet A. Partridge asked to be allowed to pay certain taxes for paving and guttering and that a retaining wall be built in front of her property. Referred.

Wm. Schaffer asked for a rebate on merchant's license. Committee on license.

J. H. Jonson asked for a deed to certain lands in lots 10 and 11, block 28, 10 acre plat A, Big Field Survey, Salt Lake City. Committee on public grounds.

The Pacific Paving company sent in a communication in which it announced that the second block of paving had been completed on State street and requested that the city engineer be instructed to furnish an estimate of the same that the delay of receiving money for said work be thus averted. Adopted.

WANTS TO AMEND AND EXTEND.

The Bountiful and Hot Springs Railway company asked to be allowed to amend its franchise for the operation of a street railway in this city, in the following particulars to-wit:

First—That the word "street," wherever it occurs in the resolution passed December 16th, 1890, be stricken out between the words "track" and "railway;" that the word "dummy" also be stricken out of the same section; that sections 5 and 7 be stricken out of said resolution.

These amendments, the company said, were asked in order that it be allowed to operate an ordinary steam locomotive railway. The company said that its road was in operation as far north as Bountiful, Davis County; it passed a large number of brick yards, the product of which is used almost exclusively in this city. Application had been made to the company to build a branch line to these yards, a distance of two miles. It was now practically complete. Heretofore the brick companies have been compelled to rely for transportation on the Union Pacific and Rio Grande Western railways and by said companies have been subjected to a great deal of annoyance by delay in the shipment and the charge of exorbitant rates. These defects were low overcome by the petitioners' company.

Further, the petitioners' company seriously contemplate building its road westerly from the Territory; but in attempting to float its bonds to secure money it constantly met the objections that its terminal facilities were not such as to warrant the proposed extension and therefore asked for the amendments noted. Committee on streets and municipal laws.

CHIEF OF POLICE JANNEY ET AL. REMOVED.

The Mayor sent to a communication in which he announced the removal of Chief of Police Janney, Sergeant George A. Sheets, and City Detective Ecklund, and the appointment of ex-Supervisor of Streets Paul as Janney's successor. The removal grew out of the scandal that arose from the discovery of the removed officers in a den of infamy on Franklin avenue, with Police Justice Keeler, a short time ago. The Mayor also found from the testimony recently taken before him in the presence of the accused officers that the police justice was also guilty of unbecoming conduct and he recommended such action as the Council should see fit to take. His Honor also severely and unjustly reprimanded the councilmen who made the discovery referred to.

(The Mayor's communication disappeared suddenly and mysteriously and all efforts by the reporters to procure a verbatim copy were futile. It was last seen in the hands of President Loofbourow, but that gentleman disclaimed all knowledge of its whereabouts, saying that he had handed it to some member of the committee, but to whom he did not remember.

On motion of Hardy, the mayor's action with reference to the removal was confirmed, all members voting "aye" except Folland, Lawson and Ewing, who were excused, and Moran who voted "no."

On motion of Karrick, the appointment of Captain Paul as Janney's successor was confirmed, Moran alone voting in the negative.

Hardy moved that the part of the communication reflecting upon the councilmen be referred to the committee on police.

The matter was finally disposed of by referring it to a special committee consisting of one member from each precinct. The committee is composed of Ewing, Hardy, Karrick, Lawson and Moran.)

CITY ATTORNEY'S REPORT.

The city attorney reported as follows:

Gentlemen—I herewith submit a report of matters in my office having been commenced since April 1, 1892 and cases disposed of since said date to June 30th 1892.

John R. Wilson vs. Salt Lake City. Suit for damages, claim $1,750, filed in Third District Court April 25, 1892. Verdict against city for $50, costs $42, total $92. Reported to Council, appropriation made and amount paid to Lewis a attorney for plaintiff. Judgment satisfied on record.

Mary T. Kelly vs. Salt Lake City. Suit for damages for falling on ice. Damages $8,000.

Mrs. F. W. Snell vs. Salt Lake City. Suit for $29.99 commenced before Commissioner Greenman, transferred to Commissioner Norrell's court. Judgment in favor of plaintiff for amount claimed. Appealed to Third District Court. This case is damages claimed for falling on icy sidewalk.

Wm. M. Burns vs. W. A. Stanton and Salt Lake City. Case brought for damages in the sum of $2,000, alleged to have been caused by reason of the falling down of a barn condemned by the fire and building inspectors.

Edward P. Scoville vs. Salt Lake City. This is an action brought to recover $5,000 alleged to have been sustained by a minor child by reason of the mother and wife falling on the ice and sidewalk on east side of Main Street in this city.

Henry Carrigan vs. Salt Lake City and H. T. Duke. This suit was brought by plaintiffs to restrain the city and treasurer from paying an increase of salary to W. A. Stanton and other officers of the city. Case dismissed by plaintiff at his own cost.

Filed.

WATER RATES REPORT.

To the Hon. President and City Council of Salt Lake City:

Gentlemen—As required by ordinance I herewith present to your hon. body the following annual report showing the work of this office for the year ending June 30, 1892:

ASSESSMENTS.

The assessments for water rates for the year commencing July 1, 1891, and ending June 30, 1892, amounted to..... $62,961 95

COLLECTIONS.

Cash collected during the year..... $ 7,353 75
Rates paid by charging to credit accounts..... 54,676 27

Total..... $61,431 76

Paid by me to city treasurer as per bills and receipts..... $ 7,319 15

RECAPITULATION.

Original assessment..... $62,961 95
Charged to credit account..... $54,976 27
Cash collected and paid to treasurer..... 7,353 15
Cash on hand paid July 1st and 2nd..... 25 00
Rate on house in canyon paid by city..... 5 90
Duplicate assessments..... 18 05
Water shut off at 14 houses..... 118 50
Balance due and unpaid..... 10 09
Refuses for vacancies, house torn down, etc..... 1,572 94 $62,961 95

WATER TAPS.

On the 31st day of December, 1891, there were 5,452 houses supplied with water. During the past six months 410 taps have been added, making a total of 5,862 houses or business places supplied with city water.

WATER SCRIP.

The credit accounts on the ledger in my office on December 31st, 1891, were $167,258.15; today they are $14,964.40, being an increase in six months of $15,293.75. The several accounts are held by 3521 citizens. The several amounts range from $200.00 down to two cents.

I beg leave to request an examination of my receipts, accounts and books.

Respectfully submitted,

CHRISTOPHER DILL.

Assessor and Collector Water Rates.

Salt Lake, July 2nd, 1892.

Filed.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT.

To Hon. President and City Council of Salt Lake City:
Gentlemen—I herewith submit for your consideration my report for the quarter ending June 30th, 1892:

Number of deaths reported, 163.

Causes of death as follows:

Accident.....	4	Typhoid fever.....	1
Alcoholism.....	7	Heart disease.....	7
Anaemia.....	1	Hemorrhage.....	1
Apoplexy.....	1	Hysteria.....	1
Asphyx.....	1	Intoxication.....	2
Bleeding from brain.....	1	La Grippe.....	9
Disease of arteries.....	1	Disease of liver.....	2
Disease of brain.....	2	Malaria.....	3
Dropsy of liver.....	1	Measles.....	1
Bowel - inflammation.....	2	Meningitis cerebri.....	2
Bronchitis.....	2	Spinal.....	1
Bowel - obstruction.....	1	Meningitis tubercular.....	1
Breast.....	1	Nephritis.....	1
Pulmonary bronchitis.....	1	Operation.....	1
Cancer.....	2	Old age.....	11
Carbuncle.....	1	Paralysis.....	1
Cirrhosis of liver.....	1	Falx.....	1
Childbirth.....	1	Pneumonia.....	11
Convulsions.....	1	Peritonitis.....	1
Croup.....	1	Scabies.....	1
Croup.....	2	Falx.....	1
Croup - membrane.....	1	Rheumatism.....	1
Cut.....	1	Rheumatism, indom.....	1
Deafness.....	1	Scarlet fever.....	3
Diphtheria.....	19	Septhaemia.....	2
Dysentery.....	2	Suicide.....	3
Nervous exhaustion.....	1	Tetanus.....	1
Consumption.....	1	Uremia.....	1
Encephalitis.....	1	Whooping cough.....	8
Scarlet fever.....	3

Number of births reported 194.

Number of contagious diseases reported 14.

Diphtheria 28. Scarlet fever 15.

Complaints of nuisances received and attended to 548.

Number of wagon loads of garbage disposed of 93.5.

Number of dead animals disposed of 211.

Number of carloads of garbage, etc., shipped from city 241.

Notices mailed for the abatement of nuisances (in extreme cases only), 43.

Amount expended for the maintenance of health department (exclusive of salaries paid to officials):

April.....	$1999 30
May.....	2131 32
June.....	2436 67

Total cash expenditures..... $357 49

Amount charged health department by street department..... 127 40

Total amount chargeable against health department by auditor's office $684 89

CITY ENGINEER'S REPORT.

The quarterly report of the city engineer was read, received and filed.

LICENSE REVOKED.

The city attorney reported as follows:

In the matter of the revocation of the liquor license by the Council previously granted to Edward Norton to keep a saloon on the corner of Fourth West and First South streets, referred to the city attorney for an opinion as to whether the city should refund to Mr. Norton the money for the time the license would have run had not license been revoked. I will say I do not find any precedent to govern or to throw any light on this case, but I am of the opinion that the city ought to refund to the licensee the amount for the time from date of revocation to the date when said license would have expired by limitation had the license not been revoked. Respectfully submitted,

E. C. HOGG,

City Attorney.

Adopted.

THE DOG TAX FOR JUNE.

Dog Tax Collector Galluzzi reported that he had registered 183 dogs during the month of June and that he had collected $141 in taxes on canines for the same period. Report adopted and half the amount—$70.75—was appropriated to Mr. Galluzzi's credit.

$25 PER MONTH.

In the matter of the Kennedy ditch difficulty the committee on irrigation recommended the employment of some suitable person to distribute water on that water course during the irrigating season. Adopted.

FOR EXTRA MEETING.

The committee on finance reported adversely on the claims of Recorder Stanton and his deputies for extra pay for special meetings. Adopted.

On motion of Hells the recorder's stenographer was allowed $5 for all special meetings.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Hells offered a resolution providing for the appropriation of $2000 for the Mayor's contingent fund. Adopted.

STREET SUPERVISOR'S REPORT.

Street Supervisor Hines submitted his quarterly report showing an expense of $23,247.78, of which sum $382 was in prison labor, which report was referred to the committee on streets.

SEWER REPORT.

Superintendent Shelton of sewers reported for the quarter as follows:

Total amount expended.....	$2,907 14
Credits by material furnished.....	182 13

Total..... $2,724 99

Of this amount I have expended $973 48.

WATERWORKS SUPERINTENDENT.

The superintendent of waterworks made a report showing an expenditure of $30,514.55 for extensions; $3003.25 trench; $1449.60 pipe laying; $730.25, hauling pipe; $550.25, watchmen; $5733.45, labor.

SWEPPER WANTED.

A communication was received from the supervisor of streets recommending the purchase of a No. 1 Barnard Castle, wrought iron, four-wheeled street sweeping machine. Referred.

TO PERFECT THE TITLE.

From Wantland:

Resolved that the Mayor and city attorney be requested to examine the title of the city land located at the corner of State and North Temple streets, and that they be authorized to take whatever steps they deem necessary, including a conveyance of the property, to perfect the title to said land.

Adopted.

AS TO STREET OBSTRUCTION.

Bell offered the following:

Resolved, That the city marshal be instructed to enforce the ordinance making it unlawful to obstruct sidewalks by placing thereon any kind of obstructions such as barber poles, hitching posts and other unlawful obstructions.

Adopted.

SPRINKLING DISTRICT NO 1.

An ordinance for the levying of a tax for defraying the expenses incurred in sprinkling district No 1 was passed. The estimated cost is 7 cents per linear foot but abutting on the streets mentioned.

THE GAS ORDINANCE AGAIN.

An ordinance for the construction and maintenance of street mains and services for utilizing and distributing natural and manufactured and fuel gas in this city came up on its third reading.

There was considerable opposition to the ordinance from a minority of the members, when Lawson said—I cannot understand how it is that there is such strong opposition to this measure. There are people in this city, there are members of this council, who do not appear to comprehend the magnitude of this scheme. It is a benefit to this city; it is a boon to this Territory. Some people do not care, it seems, to get out of the old fashion way of living and farming our city lots. Business should be transacted in this city on a broad and liberal principle. Let us do that. I have a constituency to represent and wish to do so honorably by the encouragement of all legitimate enterprises.

Mr. Lawson was warmly applauded by friends and representatives of the Gas company at the conclusion of his speech.

Moran—This is the Council of Salt Lake City and not a real estate exchange. I call the gentleman to order.

Lawson—(warmly)—I have the floor.

Moran—I say this is not a real estate exchange.

The Chair—State your point of order, Mr. Moran.

Moran—I have stated it.

Wantland offered an amendment making the rate 29 cents and made a lengthy argument in favor of his amendment.

Moran moved to make it 19 cents, Lost.

Evans said the statement was made at the last session of the Council that the company would be favorable to the 20 cent proposition. Why they were now asking and contending for the 30 cent rate he could not understand. To him it looked suspicious.

Wantland at this point of the proceedings withdrew his amendment.

A vote was taken on Evans' amendment. That, too, was lost.

Hardy—I will say now that I am not in favor of discouraging the investment of capital in our midst, but I am certainly opposed to bolstering up any company which I believe is seeking a franchise for the purpose of swindling another concern.

On motion of Wantland further consideration of the ordinance was postponed until the next meeting of the Council.

APPROPRIATIONS.

S. Galluzzi.....	$ 901 00
People's Forwarding Co.....	12 91
G. M. Scott & Co.....	35 70
H. Heisching.....	215 60
Chas. Songen (deduct D. & W.).....	20 00
Herald Publishing Co.....	6 15
Tribune Publishing Co.....	6 75
Pacific Paving Co (deduct D. & W.).....	9 00
R. O. G. Howell.....	95 72
Mountain Stone Co.....	2631 39
Pacific Paving Co.....	13 00 15
Times Publishing Co.....	221 00
A. M. Woolley.....	12 35
O. Dell & Son.....	6 00
R. Gaylor.....	11 00
Brown & Carver.....	17 00
J. H. Bowman.....	141 73
H. M. Willard.....	18 00
Monheim Bros & Prodd Foot.....	351 37
Sullivan & McDonald.....	184 25
A. H. Hall.....	151 50
A. Dahl.....	200 75
S. L. F. & G. F. Co.....	200 00
Mayor's Cont. Fund.....	2000 00

RECONSIDERED AND PASSED.

Wantland moved a reconsideration of the vote whereby action on the gas ordinance was deferred until the next meeting of the council. Carried. Additional slight amendments were made after which the bill passed and the council adjourned.

THE MEANING OF ADLA.

The meaning of this name has been discussed lately by the press because it is borne by a candidate for the Vice Presidency. The DESERET NEWS a few days ago gave it as "The Just" which is the interpretation accepted by those who ought to know it best.

General Adlai Ewing Stevenson's mother is still alive; and though aged 83, is vigorous and bright. She is a devout Presbyterian and ought to be familiar with the Bible. Here is a dispatch from Bloomington written immediately after the family had been interviewed:

"Bloomington, Ill., June 25.—General Stevenson, Democratic candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the United States, gets his first name, Adlai, from the Bible. If you will turn to Chron. I., xxvii, 29, you will find something about Adlai. The word means 'The Just.'"

"It is an unusual name, and the Stevenson and Ewing families have had a monopoly of it for several generations."

The Tribune of yesterday with much abuse of the NEWS and perfect disregard of even the most rudimentary rules of Hebrew grammar, derives the word from Ahlat and says it means "my witness." How the H in Ahlat came to be D in Adlai does not seem to be a conundrum to the great oriental scholar of the Tribune. Nor does it strike him that he is sadly misled when he gives the form Adullam as the plural of Ahlat and translates it "their testimony," as if "testimony" were plural on account of being preceded by a plural pronoun. The whole effort is more than usually idiotic, surpassing even the ridiculous attempt, some time ago, to explain "Deseret" as a diminutive of "desert."

Concerning the meaning of the word Adlai, opinions differ. Under the circumstances it is safe to refer to cognate languages and particularly to the Arabic which is still a living tongue, with an abundance of words and derivatives. The three radical letters in Adlai are A (ayin), D and L.

This word is found in Arabic (adal), and its meaning is "to do justly," "to act rightly." It has numerous derivatives, in almost all of which this meaning is prominent. The noun adi is formed from it, and means "justice," "equity," "rectitude." This ought to be considered in fixing the true meaning of the Hebrew word in dispute with which the Arabic is so near akin. It shows that the DESERET NEWS in interpreting it as "the just" has strong facts to stand upon. The word adal is further very likely retained in the Latin adalingus, old German adaltine, and the Anglo-Saxon: ædel, all of which convey the meaning of "noble," since one of the characteristics of nobility was supposed to be to meet out impartial justice. The Anglo-Saxon ædel is found in names like Ethelwulf, Ethelbert, etc., and in several modern names. The German edel and Swedish adel are undoubtedly from the same source.

The profound scholar of the Tribune has found it necessary to make a few explanatory remarks regarding his first confused statements about the meaning of the word Adlai. The explanations are evidently made, not to throw any new light upon the subject, but to give the writer another opportunity of indulging in his favorite pastime—abuse of his opponents. But, in so doing, he displays his utter ignorance of the word he has pretended to explain, and the language and class of languages to which these words belong. The effort is significant, because it shows how unreliable the journal is in everything it undertakes to discuss.

The question of the meaning of the word Adlai would not seem important enough to again refer to in these columns, but for the fact that it is the first name of the Democratic candidate for the Vice-Presidency of the United States, and that the Tribune, with its usual want of amiability, deemed it necessary to attempt to assault him by referring to him as "The Spollesman"—or robber, we suppose—and then justify this by an alleged interpretation of his name. The public who take any interest at all in the discussion should know that there is no ground whatever for the "Liberal" organ's interpretation of the word.

The first statement of the Tribune, which we are accused of wilfully perverting, was that Adlai or Adalatah came from Ahlat and means a "witness" or "prey." Adullam was given as the plural—as near as we could make it out—of Ahlat and translated "their testimony," "their prey." We pointed out the absurdity of deriving Adlai, the second radical of which is d from a word with h as the second radical, and called the attention to the fact that, if, as the Tribune pretends to know, Adullam is a plural word it ought to be so translated.

Cornered in these particulars, the writer tells us that we pervert his statements. Well, here are his statements verbatim:

"ADLAI, or ADALATAH, or the kindred from AHLAT, mean primarily a witness or prey; thus, ADLAI, my witness, my sign or ornament (as to deeds done); ADALATAH, one that draws water; AHLAT, beseeching, sorrowing, expecting. The plural form, ADULLAM, their testimony, their prey, etc., is also found in the Scriptures, but as the name of a place, not of a person."

It is possible that we did not understand what he meant to convey in this miserable jumble of words, and it is very doubtful whether anybody else, including himself, does.

The explanation volunteered by the Tribune does not help it out at all. It involves the writer still deeper. He says:

"The NEWS returned last night to its silly definition of 'The Just' for the name Adlai. It is far less positive, however, than before, which is a sign that it sees the untenableness of its ground, and that is well, for that definition has nothing to do with the word or name Adlai. The NEWS further says that we derived a plural form, Adullam, from Ahlat, which is a wilful perversion. We said Adullam was the plural form of Adlai, not of Ahlat, and spoke of Ahlat not as the primary word under consideration, but as a word of kinship."

Now for the facts in the case.

The word Adlai, to commence with, to which Adlai and Adullam are traced, is a root not found in the ancient Hebrew records, but, as we formerly pointed out, is still used in Arabic and means "to be just," "equitable." From this root the words Adlai and Adullam are formed.

The "Liberal" organ thinks Adlai means "my witness" as if the final were the pronominal suffix. This is a blunder. The word is compound, from Adai (justice) and J which is a common abbreviation of Jah, or Jehovah, the correct meaning of Adlai therefore being "The Justice of God."

Our cotemporary next thinks that Adullam is the plural of adlai; that the ending am is the plural pronominal suffix of the third person. This is another blunder. Gesenius holds that Adullam is composed of Adai and am, people, meaning therefore "the justice of the people." Another eminent Hebrew scholar, Simons, takes a different view and considers it composed of ad (corresponding to the Arabic adun) "a place," and alam, "to hide," giving the meaning of a hiding place or resting place. The translators of the Septuagint wrote the word adulam.

Every one of these statements are based on Gesenius' Hebrew and Chaldean dictionary, and if there is any greater authority on Hebrew in this city, we should like to know it.

Further, the word Ahlat, on which the great Tribune scholar relies so much, is not found at all in Gesenius. The word he gives for ornament is Adah, the root of which means among other things "to put on ornaments," equivalent to the German "Aussehen," "uuebersehen." But this Adah has no relationship to Adlai and of course not to the Tribune Hebrew Ahlat.

We have established by the highest authority that the meaning of Adlai is "the justice of God" and that the Tribune edition is nothing but the clumsiest effort of shining in borrowed feathers, and we may now perhaps be permitted to ask, who is silly anyhow? Who is the "fess?"

The Tribune further says, "The Arabic is but a slight, uncertain guide to ancient Hebrew," and it sneers at our reference to Arabic in this matter. We believe that the learned scholar of our cotemporary has every reason to consider Arabic of very small value to him in determining the meaning of a word in any language. Nobody can use to advantage what he knows nothing about. Billingsgate would be more useful to him than Arabic, but alas! that is of no value in philology and so his resources are necessarily limited.

Scholars, however, consider Arabic in another light. But we will quote a few lines on this subject from the eminent English theologian, Dr. Joseph Angus. After having mentioned various languages cognate to the Hebrew he says in his Bible Handbook:

"Of all the languages yet named, the Arabic has by far the richest modern literature and next to the Hebrew it is the most important of the Semitic tongues. All these languages are of value in guiding the student of the Old Testament, to an accurate knowledge of the original tongue, and no Hebrew lexicon can be regarded as satisfactory authority unless accompanied with a constant reference to the meaning of the roots of Hebrew words in the cognate tongues. It is upon the knowledge and the use of these tongues that the superiority of modern lexicographers chiefly depends."

Does the Tribune want any more authority for the correctness of our position on the question under discussion?

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Some of the members of the Board of Education yesterday afternoon listened to the arguments of certain local musicians favoring the introduction of the Tonic-sol-fa system into the public schools.

Professor Joseph J. Daynes advocates its adoption in the city schools, for the purpose of training the children in vocal music, showing that by the Tonic-sol-fa method there is only one scale to be learnt, in connection with a few simple, indications for time, etc., while the staff notation is cumbered with fifteen different scales and a multitude of signs, all of which it is well nigh impossible for children to comprehend.

Prof. Evan Stephens argued for the adoption of the staff notation, to be learnt in conjunction with that portion of the Tonic-sol-fa system which designates the notes by names. He asserted that by this means the staff notation can be learnt in very little more time than is required for the Tonic-sol-fa method alone, and it prepares the pupil to understand instrumental music which the other does not.

After some further discussion of the matter by the members of the committee themselves, it was decided not to adopt the Tonic-sol-fa system in the city schools.

Bids for the construction of the Jackson school in the Sixteenth ward were opened, as follows:

H. E. Redfield.....	$92,471 00
DeVine & Robinson.....	62,500 00
W. H. Jay.....	50,000 00
F. M. Wright.....	$1,900 00
G. S. Sherrell.....	19,900 00
Salt Lake B. & M. company.....	59,900 00
William Lister.....	38,000 00
Wilson Bros.....	16,164 00
Tuddenham & Hryals.....	62,309 00
Commercial Mill & Building Co.....	50,000 49
A. Henggen.....	$1,485 00

Bids for steam heating and ventilating the schools named were also opened, as follows:

HEMSCH & ELLERBECK.

Eleventh building.....	$2,500 00
Water motor.....	125 00
Electric motor.....	500 00
Twentieth building.....	3,850 00
Water motor.....	100 00
Electric motor.....	500 00

V. J. MORAN.

Sixth school.....	$2,435 00
Eleventh school.....	2,380 00
Twentieth school.....	3,412 50
Nineteenth school.....	3,110 50
Sixteenth school.....	3,501 00

HENDRY & MEYER

Sixth school.....	$2,300 00
Eleventh school.....	2,300 00
Nineteenth school.....	3,200 00
Sixteenth school.....	3,500 00
Twentieth school.....	3,300 00

JAMES SPENCER-BATEMAN CO.
Sixth school.....	$2,066 00
Eleventh school.....	2,000 00
Twentieth school.....	2,750 00
Nineteenth school.....	2,750 00
Sixteenth school.....	2,781 00

MIDDLEY & SONS.

Sixth building.....	$1,877 00
Water closet.....	210 00
Changes.....	1,100 00
Sixteenth building.....	6,175 00
Changes, flush.....	225 00
Water closets.....	534 00
Nineteenth building.....	5,241 00
Changes, flush.....	70 00
Boiler changes.....	501 00
Twentieth building.....	5,801 00
Changing flush.....	1,135 00
Water closet and boiler.....	504 00
Eleventh building.....	3,725 00
Changes.....	250 00

The city school board met last night, Vice-President Nelson in the chair. The members present were Alf, Baldwin, Young, Pike, Raybould and Newman.

BRYANT SCHOOL BUILDING.

The following communications were read:

Hon. Board of Education:
I hereby submit the following item of this my first estimate for work and materials incorporated in the Eleventh district or Bryant schoolhouse to date as per agreement:

2000 yards excavating at 40c per yard.....	$800
20 cords of footing stone at $36.....	720
51 cords rubble stone at $25.....	1,275
7,000 brick at $11.....	770
Basement window frames.....	70
Lumber and Labor furnished in blocking of old building.....	260
at Stone.....	350
Respectfully

W. H. Jor.

Referred to the committee on sites and buildings.

APPLICATION FOR EMPLOYMENT.

O. H. Lancaster applied for a position as janitor of one of the school buildings. Committee on furniture and supplies.

Samuel H. Carlyle petitioned to be appointed as supervisor of stone work on the buildings about to be erected. Committee on sites and buildings.

INSURANCE RENEWED.

Whitemore, Cooke & Co. stated that the fire insurance on the Eighth ward school building expires July 8th, and asked to be instructed to renew with same. The insurance was placed with the North German Fire Insurance company of Hamburg, Germany. The amount of policy is $1850, ratio, $1.80 for three years, premium, $24.30. Renewed.

TO TEACH.

The following list of applicants to teach was read:

Nettie Reid.....	Freeman, Mo.
Elita Bennett.....	Litchfield, Neb.
Ethel Woodmansee.....	Salt Lake City.
Nellie E. Campbell.....	Litchfield, Minn.
Emma McDee.....	Wichita, Kansas.
C. M. Bittie.....	Loveland, Colo.
Mrs. Davis.....	Aux Vassa, Mo.
E. L. Enoch.....	Wichita, Kansas.
Kate Paul.....	Wichita, Kansas.

Referred to the committee on teachers.

TEXT BOOKS.

The committee on school work made the following report:

To the Board of Education:

Gentlemen—Your committee on school work have to report that for the past ten days they have been engaged each day in investigating the merits of the different books presented by the publishers for adoption by this board.

They have completed the presentation by the agents of the different houses, and at the next meeting of the board will be able to recommend the books they think should be adopted.

They heard the merits of the tonic sol-fa and the staff systems of teaching music presented by the advocates of the different methods and decided by a vote of 4 to 1 that we ought to adopt the staff system.

Adopted.

TO RE-RENT ROOMS.

The committee on sites and buildings recommended that the contract between G. A. Heide and the board be renewed until June 30, 1898, at $30 per month. They also recommended that the offer of W. H. Whitney of the rooms at Eighth West and First South be accepted, provided the rooms could be rented from month to month. Mr. Whitney donated the rent for July.

The offer of T. C. Armstrong of the two upper floors of the Armstrong building, on Second South street, was also accepted, provided they could be rented from month to month, and that the rent for July and August should be at the rate of $40 per month. Adopted.

THE LOWELL SCHOOL.

Mr. Young moved that the Board accept the proposition of the contractors for the Lowell school in the Twentieth ward contained in their letter of June 7, 1892, to build six two-story water closets and furnish inscription stones for the sum of $947, and that the Superintendent of Buildings be instructed to order said additional work done. Adopted.

THE NUMBER INCREASED.

On motion of Mr. Pike the Committee on Teachers was increased to five, to be the same in number as the other committee. Newman and Baldwin were appointed as the two other members.

SCHOOL CENSUS.

M. Pike moved that the members of each municipal ward at the next meeting, next Thursday evening, present the names of suitable persons from each ward to take the school census according to law. Carried.

Adjourned for one week.

AT ITS OLD BUSINESS.

The attempt of the Mayor to cast odium upon the City Councilmen who were the means of exposing the misdeeds of some of his police, while offensive to decent citizens of all classes, is of course endorsed by the Salt Lake Tribune. That paper, which puts the word of such a person as O. W. Powers against that of United States Senators and other men of national repute, and throws mud at the latter to vindicate the former, might be expected to assail gentlemen at home who bring to light the misdeeds of officers of its own party.

The doings of the officials entrusted with the care of the city have been known for some time. Their scandalous conduct has been whispered around, and among a certain class has been food for mirth. It is likely that anything more would have come of it if the councilmen who received positive information of these orgies had not determined to bring them to light? Why should the Mayor condemn their action, and exhibit so much anger over the exposure which compelled him to remove the offending officers? "Interfered with his prerogatives," did they? Why did he not exercise them, then, and relieve them of the necessity of action? If he ardently desired the purity of the city, he would have thanked those Councilmen instead of casting blame upon them.

But the Tribune goes much further. In its common vile and mean and paltry way, it seeks to put a "Mormon" color on the transaction. Two of those Councilmen were "Mormon Aldermen," it says, and proceeds to put upon them what blame it chooses to manufacture. It charges that they "were trying by imitating the methods of the Chief of Police to damn him and escape uncathed themselves."

If there is anything connected with his unenviable affair that is meaner and more contemptible than this Tribune effort to besmirch those gentlemen, we fail to perceive it. The evidence is clear that their object was solely to detect the evil doings of men in the public service, and the vile insinuations and assertions of the Tribune are simply characteristic of that sheet.

"Had they gone as Aldermen should have gone, had they gone and been and gone away, their conduct would have been above reproach," so it says. Well, how does that agree with the charge that in doing anything about it they were "trenching on the Mayor's prerogative?" As to "Aldermen," there are no such officers in the city, either "Mormon" or "Gentile." These Councilmen, as the evidence shows, went to detect crime. Some of them may have been unwise in their method; that is for the Council to determine. But that they went where they did for the purposes intimated by the Tribune, is a conclusion not justified by anything that has appeared in evidence and is virtually contradicted in its own columns. Speaking of the committee appointed to inquire into the matter it says, in another part of the paper:

"The opinion of this committee from interviews with a majority of its members is that the Mayor's criticism of the councilmen who were engaged in the so-called investigation of the police committee, was unwarranted. This seems to be the opinion of a majority of the members of the Council outside the committee, and whatever course the report may take, that part of the Mayor's message will in all probability not be concurred in by the Council."

If the "Liberal" organ wants to provoke comment on the "Liberal" administration of affairs in this city ever since the steal of 1890, it can do so by thus picking out two of the Councilmen who have served the public by bringing to light iniquity that even the Tribune cannot condone, and trying to throw slime at them because they are "Mormons."

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND EMIGRATION.

ACCORDING to the Buffalo Commercial, the authorities of the Canadian Roman Catholic church are very much exercised over the exodus of French Canadians to the United States. For some time the Dominion newspapers have been harping on the unpatriotic course of young Canada in thus abandoning its protecting aegis. The priests have also dwelt on the evils of expatriation from a spiritual view. The young Catholic who settles in the United States soon loses all respect for religion, and in time becomes lost to mother church.

Recently a Church convocate was held to discuss the matter. It was agreed on that some scheme should be adopted by which the emigrants could be settled in colonies, so that the religion would not be jeopardized. It was conceded that Young Canada could not be kept on the patrimonial homestead, therefore the best thing was to provide for his departure. A deputation of 20 archbishops and minor officials was appointed to visit the Northwestern provinces of Canada, to ascertain the adaptability of these districts for colonizing purposes. In fact, the secular authorities of Canada are adding the Church in this particular, because if the exodus continues the Dominion will likely soon become a thing of the past. The church deputation has just concluded its observation tour and the authority above quoted says:

"The Bishops will presently issue a joint pastoral advising all Canadians to keep away from the United States. Not only is the climate of the Canadian Northwest much superior to that of the Northwestern States, but the cost of living is cheaper, taxes are lower and religious tolerance is much more free. It is said, in a Montreal special, that this pastoral is expected to make a profound impression on the Roman Catholics of Lower Canada; and possibly it may, on the conservative element, that has no idea of leaving home under any circumstances."

THE PATRIOTIC ORDER BOYCOTTED.

The Democratic candidate of vice-president was the speaker of the day at the Fourth of July celebration at Peoria, Ill. In the morning there was a street parade over four miles long. People flocked into town in thousands from the adjoining towns and hamlets. It is estimated that over 50,000 strangers were in town on that day.

An incident occurred which is in many respects significant. It appears that the Patriotic Order Sons of America were given a place in the parade. When this was learned by the labor unions all except two withdrew from the parade, and absolutely refused to participate in the ceremonies of the day. Gen. Stevenson delivered a splendid oration, and the people of the town and county turned out irrespective of party feeling to honor both him and the day.

But the ill-feeling between the Patriotic order and the labor organization has been brewing for some time, and many of the labor unions dislike that order almost as much as they do Pinkertonism. It appears that the leaders of the order in the East are so offensive in their alleged patriotism, that they have come to claim that there is absolutely none outside of their organization. And they have denounced labor men as socialists, anarchists and rebels, even when agitating legitimately for their rights.

The action of the Illinois labor organizations at Peoria on the Fourth, was a practical demonstration of the feeling that is growing in the country. The order no doubt contains many truly patriotic citizens. But it also includes some injudicious and noisy blatherers who succeed in making themselves ridiculous and damaging their order in the public estimation.

INSOMNIA.

In Good Form for July Margaret Wallace has a readable article on "Insomnia." She says that this unfortunate malady arises from so many causes that no one plan of relief can be prescribed to meet all requirements.

One of the chief causes of sleeplessness is overwork, either mental or physical, especially if carried on within doors. Irregular hours for retiring, and also for taking meals is another fruitful source. She prescribes many remedies, most of which are familiar to the average reader. But there is one which she recommends, and which might be tried by way of experiment, when one cannot woe the drowsy god by counting or by fixed gaze on some objective point. If the brain be filled with business thoughts, or cares of any kind, it plainly proves an excess of blood in that organ. She says:

"Rise very slowly on your toes from fifty to eighty times or even a hundred; the blood is drawn at once to the limbs, the point of activity, and you experience immediate relief, especially at the base of the brain. This exercise is most earnestly urged for both men and women."

TEMPLE NOTICES.

The Mount Temple will close on Friday evening, July 22d, and open again on Monday August 29th, 1892.

ANTHON H. LUND.

The Logan Temple will close for renovation and repairs on Friday evening, July 22nd and open again on Tuesday morning, August 23rd, 1892.

M. W. MERRILL,
President.

In Philadelphia they are talking seriously of the establishment of an open-air gymnasium in connection with the park system, an idea which is imported from Germany.

DEATHS.

WILKES.—At her residence in the Twentieth ward, this city, June 29th, 1891, of congestion of the brain, Elizabeth, widow of James E. Wilkes, (late of Portsmouth, England).
Millennial Star, please copy.

HOLLAND.—At Logan, June 23, of dropsy, Hannah E. Holland born Oct. 29, 1816, at Merthyr, Tiville, South Wales (England). She was baptized in February, 1840; emigrated to Salt Lake City in 1873, and remained there until April, 1874, when she moved to Logan, residing there until 1876. She next removed with her son to Joseph, Sevier County, returning on June 16th, 1881, to Logan, where she dwelt until her demise.

HALLAND.—At Logan, June 23rd, of dropsy, Hannah E. Halland; born October 29th, 1816, at Morristown, near Swansea, South Wales. She was baptized in 1833, emigrated to Utah in 1874, and lived in Salt Lake until April, 1874, when she moved to Logan and remained there until 1874, when she, in company with her son, moved to Joseph, Sevier County, returning in June 1882, to Logan, where she remained until her demise.

BURTON.—At Logan, on the 14th inst., of heart failure, the result of a severe cold contracted last fall, Sister Burton.

The deceased was the daughter of John and Helen Tregale, and was born at Sandy Gate, Devonshire, England, September 1, 1828. She embraced the Gospel and was baptized December 14th, 1843, by Elder W. C. Dunbar at St. George, Utah. She was married to William G. Burton, on May 9th, 1852, at Devonport, Devonshire, at the Lands End Conference, England.

She leaves three sons, six daughters and twenty-five grandchildren, of whom twenty-two are still living.

Millennial Star, please copy.

LISTON.—At St. George, June 22d, after an illness of twelve days, Elizabeth Keever Liston, widow of the late C. P. Liston, she was the daughter of Ephraim and Mahala Nottingham Revere and was born at Cynthiana, Ohio, June 16, 1827, and baptized Oct. 17, 1850, by Elder William Martin. She crossed the plains in the summer of 1857, arriving in Salt Lake City on Aug. 22d of that year; in the same year her husband died at Pleasant Grove, Utah County, and she shared with him the hardships attending the early settling of Southern Utah, living at Cedar City in 1858, Henry, Mo. in 1859, and in 1860 in the last named place she removed to the First Ward of St. George, where she resided until her death. Sister Liston had six sons, two daughters and thirty-five grandchildren. For years she has taken an active part in the Female Relief Society of that ward and was at the time of her death counsellor to Sister Hannah E. Cronley. She has been a diligent worker in the St. George Temple, and died as she had lived—a faithful Latter-day Saint.—[C.O.U.]

THE DESERET WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION

ESTABLISHED TRUTH AND LIBERTY JUNE 1850.

NO. 5.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, JULY 23, 1892.

VOL. XLV.

THE "HOME RULE" BILL.

Be it enacted, etc., That on Monday after the first Monday in November, 1892, and biennially thereafter, an election shall be held in the Territory of Utah, in the several election precincts thereof. That at said election the following officers shall be elected, to-wit: One delegate in Congress; one governor; one lieutenant-governor; one secretary; one auditor; one treasurer; one attorney-general; one superintendent of public instruction; three judges of the supreme court of said Territory, from the Territory at large; seven judges of the district court, one to be elected by the electors of each of the judicial districts hereinafter provided; and each district judge shall reside in the district for which he is elected; seven district attorneys, one to be elected by each of the judicial districts hereinafter provided, who shall reside in their respective districts, and shall be learned in the law and have been admitted to practice in the highest court of said Territory; also one probate judge; one county recorder; one county clerk, who shall be ex-officio clerk of the district court while sitting in his county and of the probate court; one sheriff; one assessor and collector; one treasurer; three selectmen; one superintendent of schools; and one surveyor and one coroner; to be elected in each county in said Territory; also one constable and one justice of the peace, to be elected in each election precinct of said Territory. All the foregoing officers shall be citizens of the United States and citizens and residents of the Territory of Utah.

Sec. 2. That the officers elected at such election, other than the delegate in Congress, shall qualify and enter upon the duties of their respective offices on the 1st day of January, 1893, and the term of office of the present incumbents of each and all of said officers shall expire on that day, or as soon thereafter as their successors shall be commissioned and qualified, and not sooner. And said officers so elected, shall hold their offices for two years and until their successors are elected and qualified.

Sec. 3. That there shall also be elected at said election twelve members of the legislative council and twenty-four members of the house of representatives, to be elected from the several districts as at present constituted, but the Legislative Assembly shall redistrict the Territory and re-apportion the members to the legislative council and house of representatives: Provided, That in such re-apportionment the members shall be apportioned among the counties of the Territory according to population into, as near as may be, equal and, wherever practicable, single districts.

Sec. 4. That there shall be a meeting of the Legislative Assembly herein provided for on the first Monday in January, 1893, and on the first Monday in January biennially thereafter.

Sec. 5. That the salary of the several officers elected as herein provided shall be as follows: the governor, $4000 per annum; the lieutenant-governor, $1000 per annum; the secretary, $3000 per annum; the auditor, $3000 per annum; the treasurer, $3000 per annum; the attorney-general, $3000 per annum; the superintendent of public instruction, $2400 per annum; the judges of the supreme court, each, $4000 per annum; and the judges of the district court each, $3500 per annum; the district attorneys each not to exceed $2500 per annum, the amount for each of the several districts to be fixed by the Legislative Assembly. All to be paid out of the Territorial treasury of said Territory. The members of the Legislature shall each receive $8 per day for a term not exceeding sixty days in any two years, and 25 cents per mile for each mile necessary to be traveled in going from their respective places of residence to the capital of said Territory, to be paid out of the Territorial treasury. These salaries, except the compensation of the members of the Legislature, may be changed by the Legislature, but such change shall not take effect until after the next regular election.

Sec. 6. That the executive power and authority of the Territory shall be vested in the governor. The governor shall be an elector of said Territory, over 25 years of age. He shall be commander-in-chief of the militia of the Territory. He may grant reprieves and pardons, and remit fines and forfeitures against the laws of the Territory. He shall commission all officers who are appointed or elected under the laws of the Territory, and shall take care that the laws thereof be faithfully executed. Every bill which has passed the Legislative Assembly of the Territory shall, before it becomes a law, be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for or presented to the governor; if he approves it he shall sign it, but if not, he shall return it to the house in which it originated, with his objection indorsed thereon, and that house shall enter the objections at large on its journal and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, two-thirds of that house agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house. If any bill is not returned by the governor within five days, Sundays excluded, after it is presented to him, it shall become a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Legislative Assembly by adjournment enclie prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law. The governor shall have the power to fill all vacancies in the offices provided for in this act until the next general election or until otherwise provided for by the Legislature. All the laws passed by the Legislative Assembly and governor, shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States, and if disapproved shall be null and of no effect. Where any judge of the supreme court is legally incompetent to sit in the hearing of any case coming before said court, or where from sickness or inability any judge of said court, may be unable to attend any session thereof, the governor upon such fact being certified to him by the court, shall have power to appoint a judge to sit in the trial of such cause or causes or to fill such vacancy for the time being.

Sec. 7. That the lieutenant-governor shall be ex-officio president of the legislative council; he shall not vote upon any measure pending before it, except when the council is equally divided. He shall perform the duties of governor in case of the disqualification, absence from the Territory, or death of the governor, and in case the lieutenant-governor shall from any cause be absent or disqualified, or shall be engaged in performing the duties of the governor, the president pro tempore of the legislative council shall perform the duties of the lieutenant-governor.

Sec. 8. That the secretary shall record and preserve all the laws and proceedings of the Legislative Assembly and all the acts and proceedings of the governor in the executive department. He shall transmit one copy of the laws and journals of the Legislative Assembly within thirty days after the end of each session thereof to the President, and two copies of the laws within like time to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives for the use of Congress. He shall transmit one copy of the executive proceedings on the 1st day of January in each year to the President. He shall prepare the acts passed by the Legislative Assembly for publication, and furnish a copy to the public printer of the Territory within ten days after the passage of each act. He shall be the custodian of the Territorial seal, and shall attach the same to all writs and commissions issued by the governor.

Sec. 9. That the auditor shall examine and audit all public accounts connected with the pecuniary affairs of the Territory, and shall report the same to the governor on or before the 1st day of November in each year, and oftener if required by the governor, and shall deliver to his successor in office all books, moneys, accounts and other property belonging to the Territory as soon as his successor shall become qualified. He shall draw warrants upon the treasurer for all claims and demands payable out of the Territorial treasury.

Sec. 10. That the treasurer shall receive all moneys and other property belonging to the Territory that may be raised by taxation or otherwise, and shall keep suitable books, in which he shall enter an account of his receipts and disbursements, to whom made, and on what account. The treasurer shall pay out all moneys that may come into his hands by virtue of his office, upon drafts or orders countersigned by the auditor, and shall annually report to the governor on or before the 1st day of December, or oftener if required by the governor, a full account of his receipts and disbursements, with the necessary vouchers for the same, and shall deliver to his successor in office all books, moneys, accounts, and other property belonging to the Territory as soon as his successor shall become qualified.

Sec. 11. That the attorney-general shall prosecute and defend all actions in the supreme court of the Territory, to which the Territory or the people thereof, or any county, may be parties, and shall upon request give his opinion in writing to any of the Territorial officers or district attorneys upon any matter touching their public duties; and shall have general supervision of the conduct of district attorneys under the direction of the governor, to the end that the laws may be strictly enforced.

Sec. 12. That the superintendent of public instruction shall possess and exercise all powers and duties now imposed by the laws of said Territory upon the superintendent of schools, and also the duties imposed by section 25 of the act entitled "An act to amend section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States," which took effect March 3, 1887.

Sec. 13. That the judicial power of the Territory of Utah shall be vested in the supreme court, the district courts, the probate courts, and in justices of the peace. The supreme court shall consist of three judges, elected as hereinafter provided, and they shall, upon the organization of the court, elect one of their number chief justice, who shall preside at their sittings. The supreme court shall have jurisdiction to review upon appeal any decision of the district courts or the judges thereof; and the supreme court or any judge thereof shall have original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus; the supreme court shall have authority to issue all writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. The supreme court shall have original jurisdiction to hear claims against the Territory, but its decision shall be merely recommendatory, and no process in the nature of execution shall issue thereon, but the judgments shall be reported to the next session of the Legislature for its action. The judges of the supreme court shall elect some suitable person clerk of said court.

Sec. 14. That the Territory shall be divided into seven judicial districts, as follows, to wit: The counties of Box Elder, Cache, and Rich shall constitute the first district; the counties of Weber, Morgan, and Davis shall constitute the second district; the county of Salt Lake shall constitute the third district; the counties of Tooele, Juab, Millard, and Sanpete shall constitute the fourth district; the counties of Summit, Wasatch, and Uintah shall constitute the fifth district; the counties of Utah, Emery, Grand, and San Juan shall constitute the sixth district; the counties of Kane, Washington, Beaver, Iron, Sevier, Piute and Garfield shall constitute the seventh district, and at least one term of the district court shall be held in each county once in each year.

Sec. 15. That the district court shall have original jurisdiction in all cases, both in law and equity, and such jurisdiction upon appeals from inferior courts and tribunals as may be conferred by law, and shall also have original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus, and all writs necessary for the full exercise of the jurisdiction hereby conferred. The county clerk shall be ex officio clerk of the district court and the custodian of its seal. Upon the request of the judge of any district, the judge of another district may hold the whole or any part of a term in a district other than his own, and both judges may sit and try causes at one and the same time, and the acts of such judge so called in shall be of equal force as if he were duly elected in said district, and upon the order of the chief justice of the supreme court any district judge shall assist the judge of another district to dispose of the business in such districts or to hold the court in his stead.

Sec. 16. That the probate courts shall be courts of record and shall have original jurisdiction in all matters of probate, settlements of estates of deceased persons, and the appointment of guardians, and other like matters; also jurisdiction to hear and determine all causes arising within their counties wherein the debt or damage claimed does not exceed $500, exclusive of interest. They shall not have jurisdiction of any cause where the title, boundary, or possession of land is in issue, but shall have concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace in criminal cases. Justices of the peace shall have jurisdiction in all civil causes in which the debt or damage claimed, exclusive of interest, does not exceed $300, but they shall not have jurisdiction in any action where the boundaries, title, or possession to any real property shall be called in question, and they shall have criminal jurisdiction of such misdemeanors as may be prescribed by the laws of the Territory.

Sec. 17. That the legislative power of the Territory shall be vested in the governor and a legislative assembly, consisting of a legislative council and house of representatives, and shall extend to all rightful subjects of legislation not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the United States, but no law shall be passed interfering with the primary disposal of the soil. No taxes shall be imposed upon the property of the United States; nor shall the lands or other property of non-residents be taxed higher than the lands or other property of residents. Taxation shall be equal and uniform, and the taxable property of the Territory shall be taxed in proportion to its value, to be ascertained in such manner as the Legislative Assembly may provide: Provided, however, That special assessments for local improvements may be levied upon such other just and equitable basis as the Legislative Assembly may prescribe. No law shall be passed except a majority of all the members of each house shall vote therefor, and upon the passage of every law the yeas and nays shall be called and the names of the persons voting for and against the law shall be entered at large in the journal. The Legislative Assembly, after the first election may, by general law, fix the qualification of voters and of holding office, but they shall not allow any person to vote or hold office who is not a male citizen of the United States resident for six months in the Territory; nor shall the right to vote or hold office be abridged or denied on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, nor shall the right to vote or hold office ever be conferred upon the soldiers or seamen of the United States except they be bona fide residents of the Territory before enlistment.

Sec. 18. That no member of the Legislative Assembly shall hold or be appointed to any office which shall have been created or the salary of which shall have been increased while he was a member during the term for which he was elected, and for one year after the expiration of such term, and no person holding a commission or appointment under the United States shall be a member of the Legislative Assembly or shall hold any office under the government of said Territory.

Sec. 19. That all causes pending in the supreme court of the Territory of Utah on the 1st day of January, 1893, arising under the laws of the Territory of Utah, both of a civil and criminal character, and all special proceedings pending in said court arising under the Territorial laws, shall pass over to and be heard and determined by the supreme court herein provided for; and all causes pending in the said supreme court of the Territory of Utah on the first Monday of January, 1893, and arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, shall be transferred to and determined by the circuit court of appeals of the United States for the eighth circuit; and said court is hereby declared to have jurisdiction of said causes.

Sec. 20. That all causes arising under the laws of the Territory of Utah, which may be pending in the district courts of the respective judicial districts on the first Monday of January, 1893, shall be heard and determined by the several district courts as follows, to wit: Those from that part of the fourth judicial district comprising the counties of Cache, Box Elder and Rich, by the first district court; those from that part of the fourth judicial district comprising the counties of Weber and Morgan by the second district court; those from that part of the third judicial district comprising the county of Davis by the second district court; those from that part of the third judicial district comprising the county of Salt Lake by the third district court; those from that part of the third judicial district comprising the county of Tooele by the fourth district court; those from that part of the third judicial district comprising the county of Summit by the fifth district court; those from the second judicial district comprising the counties of Kane, Washington, Iron, Beaver, Garfield, and Piute by the seventh district court; those from that part of the first judicial district comprising the county of Sevier to the seventh district court; those from that part of the first judicial district comprising the counties of Utah, Emery, Grand, and San Juan to the sixth district court; those from that part of the first judicial district comprising the counties of Wasatch and Uintah to the fifth district court; those from that part of the first judicial district comprising the counties of Millard, Juab, and Sanpete to the fourth district court; and all causes pending in the several district courts of the Territory of Utah on the first Monday in January, 1893, and arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States, shall be heard and determined by the Territorial district court hereinafter created.

Sec. 21. That there is hereby created a Territorial district court for the Territory of Utah; said court shall have and exercise the same jurisdiction in all cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States as is vested in the circuit and district courts of the United States, and shall have jurisdiction over all prosecutions in said Territory for violations of any laws of the United States. Said court shall hold two terms in each year, and its place of sitting shall be Salt Lake City, in the county of Salt Lake, in said Territory. There shall be appointed by the President, by and with the consent of the Senate, a judge of said district court, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor is appointed and qualified. The judge of said court shall appoint a clerk of said court. The salary of said district judge shall be $5000 per annum, to be paid in the same manner as the salaries of other district court judges of the United States.

Sec. 22. That the board of commissioners created by the ninth section of the act of Congress of March 22, 1882, entitled "An act to amend section 5352 of the Revised Statutes of the United States," is hereby abolished, and the duties prescribed by said section and the acts of Congress amendatory thereof shall, until some other different provision is made by the Legislative Assembly, be performed by a board consisting of the governor, secretary, and the three commissioners to select university lands in said Territory.

Sec. 23. That section 4 of the act of Congress, approved June 23, 1874, entitled "An act in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah," is hereby repealed, and until some other and different provision shall be made by the Legislative Assembly it shall be the duty of the district judges elected as provided in this act to appoint in each county three jury commissioners, who shall meet in each county on the second Monday in January of each year and prepare a jury list, which shall contain the names of two hundred electors of the county duly qualified to serve as jurors. From such list the probate judge and county clerk of such county shall, at least ten days prior to the beginning of any term of the district court, upon order of the district judge, draw the necessary number of names to constitute a grand jury or trial jury, or both, if so ordered by the district judge. No person shall be competent to serve as a juror unless he has resided in the county for six months next preceding, is an elector of the county, and can read and write the English language. If in any county there be less than two hundred qualified electors, then the jury shall be drawn from the whole number of electors in the county. This section shall not take effect until January 1, 1893.

Sec. 24. That section 1 of the act of Congress, approved June 23, 1874, entitled "An act in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah," is hereby repealed. All process issued by the supreme court of the Territory of Utah shall be served by the United States marshal of said Territory, and he shall be paid therefor out of the Territorial treasury the same fees and charges that are allowed for like service in cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States. All process from the district courts of said Territory shall be served by the sheriff of the county in which such process is to be served. Or, if the sheriff be a party to any suit, then process in such suit shall be served by such person as the district judge may appoint. This section shall take effect January 1, 1893.

Sec. 25. That it shall be the duty of the district attorneys elected as herein provided to attend upon the district courts in their respective districts and prosecute or defend therein all causes in which the Territory, or the people thereof, or any county, is a party, on behalf of the Territory or people of such county, as the case may be. Sections 2 and 3 of an act of Congress approved June 23, 1874, entitled "An act in relation to courts and judicial officers in the Territory of Utah," are hereby repealed. This section shall take effect January 1, 1893.

Sec. 26. That all prisoners in the Territorial penitentiary at Salt Lake City, Utah, and in custody of the United States marshal upon the first Monday in January, 1893, serving under sentence or commitment for violation of the Territorial laws, may thereafter be confined in said penitentiary, provided a contract agreeable to both parties be made between the governor of said Territory and the attorney-general of the United States; and all prisoners committed to said penitentiary after that date may likewise be confined in said penitentiary under such contract, provided that the Territorial Legislature may at any time provide any other or different place of confinement for said prisoners or any other or different arrangements for their sustenance and confinement.

Sec. 27. That all laws in the United States in conflict with this act are hereby repealed, and all laws of the Territory of Utah in conflict with this act are hereby annulled.

Mr. Payne—Now, Mr. Speaker, I make the motion that the House adjourn.

Mr. Joseph D. Taylor—I move to amend that so as to provide that the House take a recess until 8 o'clock p.m. The Speaker—A motion to adjourn is not amendable.

"MORMON" ENERGY AND THRIFT.

THE Illustrated News of July 9th, published in New York City, has the following article in reference to the "Mormon" settlements in old Mexico:

"Few are aware of the wonderful progress made by the Mormons who have during the last few years settled in the northern parts of Mexico, principally in the States of Sonora and Chihuahua. Hundreds of Mormons have taken up their residence in the valley of the Corralitos, above Boca Grande, in the latter State, and the results thus far attained bear witness to their energy and to the fertility of the soil. The Corralitos valley, throughout its length, is nearly level, sloping merely enough to effect its perfect drainage. The whole valley is one vast alluvial deposit, the rich dark loam being extremely fertile; and, with the expenditure of even less energy than that which transformed the desert above Salt Lake, Utah, into a garden, the valley of the Corralitos will quickly become a veritable paradise. Several colonies of Mormons are distributed throughout the valley; that of Diaz, established in 1833, is situated at some distance from the river. The soil is rich, and here the Mormons have wrought wonders. On all sides are evidences of their thrift and energy. What is seen on the fertile adobe houses, windmills for raising water—both for consumption and irrigation—well-filled barns and corncries, while thriving vineyards and orchards of the choicest fruit-trees are on every hand. In the background are cultivated fields stretching far out over the landscape and in place of the barren, treeless plains thousands of acres are under cultivation, and there are hundreds of comfortable homes and schoolhouses. History is, in fact, repeating itself, and the Mormons are repeating at Diaz what they accomplished at Salt Lake. Diaz does not, however, rely entirely on its wells for irrigation, the waters of a large spring in the neighboring mountains being conducted in a vast ditch, several miles in length, to their lands, so that they are now possessed of a water supply sufficient for both present and future colonies. What is destined for Diaz is true of other colonies; indeed, the first hundred miles of Chihuahua promises to become the most productive part of Northern Mexico.

THE DESERET WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED BY
THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY.
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, . . . $2.50
Per Volume, of Twenty-six Numbers, . . . 1.50
IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. PENROSE, EDITOR.

Saturday, . . . July 23, 1892

THE LESSON OF THE SUNDAY
"ORDER."

THE order issued by the new Captain of Police for the closing of all saloons on Sunday has been mentioned, if not with approval at least without dissent, by the newspapers of this city. We believe it is endorsed by the general public. And we have heard of no objections except from some of the saloon keepers and their Sunday supporters.

But is not the fact that this order of the new official was necessary, proof positive that the complaint about Sunday liquor-selling was well grounded? If it needed an order from the Captain of Police to close the business on Sundays, was not that good evidence that the city ordinances were being habitually violated?

It is not long since a City Councillor was insulted in the Council for introducing a resolution in which that fact was set forth. He was not only roasted by some of his associate members, but denounced and maligned in the "Liberal" organ. Yet what he set forth was the actual truth, well known to those who pretended so much indignation over his plain speaking and demonstrated now by the order of the new chief.

It is amusing to see certain individuals, who made a hobby of calling upon the "Mormons" to "come within the law," condoning, defending and supporting men who defy the local statutes and city ordinances, and flying all to pieces when respect for these laws is demanded.

Well, the order has been issued. We shall see how it will be honored, and how it will be enforced when it is ignored or evaded. And we shall see in much support the officers will receive in the enforcement of municipal laws and regulations, from the pretended supporters of law and order when their particular persons and cases are not involved.

LEGITIMATE FRUITS.

THE apologist for all "Liberal" defalcations, frauds and other indiscretions seems to think that because ex-Assessor Clute has made satisfactory financial arrangements with the city, to make up the deficiency discovered in his accounts, that establishes his perfect integrity and precludes all moral considerations. This was the sort of ethics it maintained when a similar transaction occurred with another of its particular pets, who had to step down and out with a city deficiency which was made up when its existence was to plain too be disputed.

We do not care to dwell much or bear down heavily on either of those cases. But the apologist for those "Liberal" "irregularities" needs to be reminded of them, and of the fact that the official who appeared in this unenviable light, received their offices as rewards for peculiar political work in the "Liberal" capture of this city in 1890, which the organ of that faction hates to hear called by its right name—a steal.

At the nominating convention, shortly after the Rio Grande train registration, it was openly claimed by a rather loud-mouthed "Liberal," that Clute had earned the nomination for City Assessor because of what he had done for the "Liberal" party during the city registration. The registration lists of the Second Precinct contained most of the names that were claimed to have been registered outside of the city. The registrar was not one of the persons who went on the train to get them, but his attempted explanation of how those names came on his lists, was about as lucid as the effort now made to account for the tax deficiency.

The two registrars who did the dirty work on the train are neither of them now in office. Time will develop the true character of all the "Liberal" sets who have been rewarded with office for services rendered to that party instead of the public, and we are keeping tally of their doings and note of their fate.

"The steal of the city!" Yes. However distasteful it may be to the "Liberal" apologists for the infamy, it was a steal, and the attempts at stealing which followed it are of the same character, and the legitimate and logical sequences of the original transaction.

"THE UTAH COMMISSION."

SMART and saucy Kate Field seldom says anything straight on the "Mormon" question. Her mind became warped and biased during a somewhat protracted visit here, from causes which we do not now care to explain. The sharp things she occasionally hurls from the point of her pencil lose force because of their fiction, and fall short of the intended mark for the same reason. She may believe some of the stories she tells because she believes in the persons who invented or repeated them for her delectation. But when she produces them in the shape of personal experience we lose faith in her good motives and confidence in her veracity. But Miss Field is in her right mind about one matter relating to Utah affairs, and we take pleasure in clipping her remarks, which appear in Kate Field's Washington of July 6th, as follows, with the warning that they will not be endorsed by her particular cronies of the Tribune in this city:

"If ever there was an unnecessary Commission at the present time it is that established for Utah. Five commissioners have for ten years drawn from the treasury of the United States five thousand dollars apiece yearly for doing next to nothing. Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, therefore, have been squandered in this direction, while Utah has asked in vain for a public building and more judges. The ways of national legislation are past finding out.

"Never was this Utah Commission really needed. The Governor and territorial secretary could readily have done the work, which consists in supervising the elections and making a yearly report to the Secretary of the Interior. The theory was that the Gentile Governor could not be trusted. If the Governor could not be trusted, he was unfit for office. As a matter of fact every Governor appointed since the Edmunds law went into effect has been the peer of the Commissioners. Appointed by the President outside of Utah, with no interests at stake, these five Commissioners, have not spent more than two months of every year in the Territory; yet they have drawn double the salary of the Governor, and almost double that of overworked Judges of the Supreme bench.

"For once, at least, the House has shown sense in its attempt at economy. In the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill Mr. Holman and his committee abolished the Utah Commission. Out of regard, perhaps, for ex-Senator Edmunds, the Senate refuses to accept this provision, but adopts amendments reducing the Commissioners' salaries to two thousand dollars and providing that future appointments shall be made from the residents of Utah. The House is nearer right in this matter and should prevail. It would be more sensible to increase the salaries of Governor and Territorial Secretary and hold them responsible for what they know far more about than estimable carpenter-jugglers living everywhere but in the seat of war. I have never believed in the Utah Commission. It has always disagreed with itself, being made up of both political parties and always having at least one Jack-Mormon to make a minority report. Unnecessary in the past, it is a needless extravagance in the present. The sooner it dies the better.

THE PINKERTON EVIL.

It is to be hoped that the rumor concerning the use of more Pinkerton hirelings in the Homestead dispute will prove to be incorrect. Whatever difference of opinion there may be as to the conduct of the workpeople or the position taken by their employers, it seems to us there can be but one view among unprejudiced people as to the wrong involved in this employment of hired fighters and their invasion of any State or town or village. That is contrary to the genius of our laws and ought to be stamped out by the power of legitimate local authority.

The employment of the militia of the State to preserve the peace when the local civil authorities declare themselves unable to maintain it, is a very different matter. That is in the line of the law. It can be respected by the people, even if they think themselves oppressed. But these men, hired in different parts of the country to go into a place where they have no color of official right, and by force of arms overawe workmen in a dispute with their employers, expose themselves to just such treatment as they met at Homestead, and their course almost justifies the severe handling they experienced. The whole system is wrong and it ought to be suppressed.

We do not care to discuss the question of right or wrong between the Carnegie company and the workmen. Both parties have rights which the law ought to maintain and which each ought to respect. If the differences can be settled by arbitration, that is the best and most satisfactory method. And whatever the employing company may claim of the rights of capital, by declining this means of satisfactory settlement it will not improve its position or gain the respect of the thinking public.

RAVACHOL EXECUTED.

RAVACHOL, the infamous French anarchist, murderer and grave robber, was executed, according to a Paris dispatch, at an early hour on Sunday morning. This person had been, perhaps, the most remarkable criminal of the age. Dealing, the Australian murderer, not executed. He was a type of the fierce extremist in anarchy. He confessed to counterfeiting, grave robbing, and even murder, justifying himself in all his diabolical enormities by his peculiar political doctrine.

Ravachol's real name was Henri Konigstein. It will be remembered that a few months ago a series of dynamite outrages were perpetrated in Paris which startled the whole civilized world. For these he was convicted and sentenced to penal servitude for life. At the time the leniency of this sentence surprised the average citizen as much as the heinousness of the outrage astonished him previously. The jury gave a verdict that there were extenuating circumstances, but the key to them was not given at that time. His conviction was celebrated by his comrades by blowing up the restaurant in which he was arrested for the dynamite offense. Very, the keeper of the place, had his leg blown off and died; Very's wife was hurt and subsequently lost her reason, and two patrons of the restaurant were badly injured. Threats were made that the judge, jurors, counsel and prosecuting officers would all suffer the same fate as Very, and for a time Parisian society was terror stricken.

In 1885 Ravachol murdered an old man and his servant at Varizelle. In 1888 he murdered a man and wife at Chomond, and in 1889 another old man fell a victim to his murderous axe, the weapon used in all his terrible deeds. He also collected spurious money, robbed the grave of wealthy deceased persons, and plundered churches of sacramental articles.

In 1891 an old man named Jacques Brunel, known as the Hermit of Our lady of grace in Chambles, was murdered. Three days after the police traced the crime to Ravachol, but he fought so vigorously that he escaped. He went to Paris, assumed another name, and eluded the police until he was arrested for the dynamite outrages. He confessed his crimes and said he committed them for money to advance the cause of society. On June 21st last he was placed on trial for the murder of Brunel the hermit, convicted and is now executed.

Ravachol was also accused of the murder of two old ladies near St. Etienne, but he did not confess to this crime, unless he did so shortly before his execution. Paris may felicitate itself that it is rid of a dangerous member of its society, though it appears he had a following there which endorsed all his crimes.

THE COMING ISSUE.

THE annexed special dispatch from Washington was published in the Chicago Tribune under date of July 8:

"Utah's deal for Statehood has not yet been consummated, but there are Republican Senators who seem bound to help it out. The other day in the Committee on Territories Stewart and Carey joined the Democratic members in agreeing to report favorably an enabling act for the Mormon Territory, so that it will go before the Senate with a majority report."

"Stewart's position is plain. He wants Utah admitted as a State so that the talk of dismembering the pocket borough of Nevada and joining it to adjoining States will cease. Senator Carey's action, however, seems to call for explanation. Some weeks ago, when the Democratic House passed a suspension of the rules passed enabling acts for Arizona and New Mexico, a chorus went up from the members who cried out 'Utah! Utah!' They wanted to let in the polygamous Territory, too.

But Speaker Crisp would not give them a chance and refused to recognize any member to make the motion and suspend the rules, so that an enabling act for Utah would be passed. It would be queer if a Republican Senate should have less regard for public decency than a Democratic House."

It is copied by the Tribune of this city, with comments containing a characteristic fling at Senator Carey, and the opinion that all the other Senators of the surrounding States favor the statehood movement. However, it does not accuse them of "a full understanding with the Mormon Church" as it does that gentleman, but it manifests a gloomy and sorrowful conviction that his efforts to prevent liberty for Utah will be abortive. It says:

"We refer to the matter that the Liberals may understand that with the election of Mr. Cleveland statehood will be given to Utah within a year, or certainly before the election in the fall of 1894. It is quite possible it will be the same with the re-election of Mr. Harrison, because it takes a strong man as President to refuse on a local question the endorsement of his party Senators in all the adjacent States."

This being the case, why should not the decent men among the "Liberals" fall in with the march of events, catch the spirit of the times, get out of their old and useless rut, and take part in the work that will soon be upon the people of this Territory? The "Liberal organ" says further:

"We are firmly convinced that the Republican Senators in all the surrounding States to Utah have an understanding which means statehood for Utah in the near future."

If that is the case, what is the use of fighting the movement and keeping up a struggle over dead issues? The miserable nonsense which the Tribune editor poured out before the committee at Minneapolis, and which O. W. Powers and his crowd repeated at Chicago, is behind the times. It did very well for Tribune purposes a few years ago, but it is too stupid and stale for the present. Anti-"Mormon" yarns are obsolete. Bugaboos about "Mormon" domination of the future State are understood to be stuffed dummies—"Liberals" scowled that only excite ridicule or disgust. What is the use of playing with them any longer? Nobody who has sense and information believes that there will be any other dangers in Utah than those which the respective national parties always picture as the consequence of the triumph of the opposition.

It is of no use to lie about the "Mormons" any longer. It is babbling to keep up the false alarm about "Church rule" any more. Why not stop this foolery and make a genuine and sincere effort to secure the coming State to that political party which each citizen believes to be the best?

The old issues are gone, the old strife should cease. Let us have Republican principles and Democratic doctrines in dispute, instead of religious beliefs against irreligious onslaughts and sharp retaliation against malicious misrepresentations and risible insinuations. Each party thinks its own success essential to the welfare of the community. Let each seek, in an honest way, to gain control of the coming State.

Those who linger and try to keep up the old conflict will find themselves left behind and counted as back numbers. A new epoch is approaching for Utah. Leaving the things that are behind, let us press onward to those that are before, and help to mould them for the best interests of the coming commonwealth.

INDIVIDUAL, STATE AND FEDERAL RIGHTS.

THE labor troubles in Idaho bring up a serious question. They also demonstrate a political principle. The question is, how far may labor combine without becoming destructive of true liberty? The principle is, that the Federal power cannot be exerted, whether under a Republican or a Democratic administration, in any State of the Union for the suppression of domestic violence, until the Governor or the Legislature of that State calls for Federal aid and declares the State unable to settle unaided its own internal difficulties.

The news from the north, contained in our morning dispatches, tells of a bloody conflict between the union and non-union miners at Cour d'Alene. It looks as though the actual fighting was begun by the non-union miners. But whether that was so or not, it is a fact that the union men have combined to prevent men from working who do not belong to their societies. They have gone so far in this direction as to resort to violence. That consists of attempts to destroy the mills where non-union men are employed and to kill those workmen.

With the dispute between the employers and the employed we have nothing to do just now. The union men may be fully justified in refusing to work or they may not. We concede their right to quit if they choose, to demand such wages as they think they ought to have, and to organize peacefully for the maintenance of their views and claims. But we do not think they have the right to prevent other men from working at prices they refuse, or to injure the property or persons of employers or employees.

One of the worst forms of tyranny is that which seeks by force to prevent workpeople from accepting labor at prices that suit themselves, or because they do not choose to join an order or society or union. It is a tyranny which will have to be met and put down. If men will not be reasonable and lawful in their combinations against capital, force must be met by force; and if the local authorities cannot maintain law and order and preserve life and property, the whole power of the Nation must be employed to accomplish what State authority fails to do.

It is bound to come to this, if the growing disposition of men organized for the control of labor to coerce their fellowmen who do not join them, and to commit depredations upon property, continues in its present course and tendencies. Observe, we concede the right of men and women to organize for self-protection, for the amelioration of their condition, for the raising of wages and the shortening of the labor day, to resist the encroachments of capital, and to better their condition in any way. But we are against the oppression by which some of them seek to force other people to their views and methods, and which would starve men and women and their children who seek to exercise their God-given liberty in a way that does not suit a combination or society.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has done right in calling out the State militia to keep order at Homestead. The Governor of Idaho has the right to employ all the forces at his command to quell the disturbances and protect life and property at Coeur d'Alene, and failing in that he does right in calling upon the President of the United States for Federal troops to assist him.

The Idaho Senators, however, have been misled by requests from mine-owners and prominent men in their State to obtain the aid of United States troops to quell the disturbances. Specialists from Washington show that those gentlemen were desirous of obtaining that aid but it was impossible for the President to act, although he was made acquainted with the situation, until the Governor of the State formally called for national aid and specified his inability to protect life and property with the powers of the State. This was concisely stated by Senator Shoup, telegraphed to the Tribune as follows:

"Nothing in the way of sending United States troops can be done until Governor Wiley shall make a requisition to that effect upon the President, under the provisions laid down by the Constitution and the statutes."

In the same dispatch Senator Dubois is thus reported:

"The situation has been and is now such that action by the Government can only be had upon the positive statement of the Governor to the President that the forces at his command are inadequate to preserve domestic peace. The basis for action on the part of the Government is plainly laid down in the Constitution of the United States.

"Has the delegation urged upon the President the necessity of sending troops?" I asked the Senator.

"No, it would be useless. The President, under the Constitution, can only send troops into a State upon the Governor's formal requisition showing that he has exhausted all the civil and military power of the State, and is then unable to preserve the peace."

The Governor, it appears, has at length telegraphed the President in proper form and troops will aid the State authorities in maintaining order. This is the only proper way to proceed, as anybody may understand who will read the Constitution. And in this action the labor organizations and capital combinations of the country should take notice, that when either takes a course to infringe upon the rights of man and place in danger either the person or property of others, the powers of the Government, local and national, where necessary will and ought to be employed to destroy tyranny and put down oppression even when it masquerades under the guise of liberty.

WAIT AWHILE.

THE Ogden Standard remarks:

"The Tribune and News have been holding an animated philological discussion over the front name of the Democratic Vice-Presidential candidate. The News says it means 'the just,' and proves it. The Tribune says it means something else, and proves it."

Mistake, neighbor. The Tribune did say "it meant something else" but did not prove it. It did not prove anything. It simply misquoted the News, ignored the authorities cited by this paper or declared we quoted none, and made up the rest of its "philology" with its accustomed abuse. The Standard quotations may do for party humor, but we will have to wait until November to see where the laugh comes in.

THE BEET SUGAR INDUSTRY.

THE developments in beet sugar production in this country are well illustrated in the case of California. There are in that State three large manufactories, one in Alameda County, one in Santa Cruz County and one in San Bernardino County. Last year bounty was paid on 8,000,000 pounds of sugar from these plants. This year, according to the Chronicle, the aggregate acreage in growing beets tributary to these factories is 9814. The estimates forwarded to the local collector of internal revenue for this year are put at 37,000,000 pounds of sugar entitled to bounty. These figures show an increase of 29,000,000 pounds of beet sugar in one year in the State of California alone. Enthusiastic dwellers around the Golden Gate claim that sugar-raising has only begun and that in a few years they will be able to supply the whole United States' demand.

DEPRESSION IN MELBOURNE.

NEWS from Australia in relation to trade and business is not of the most pleasant character. The condition in Melbourne is said to be deplorable. A correspondent says "the bottom has fallen out, and it only wants the sides to fall in to finish the job." The state of the labor market there is pictured as being fearful. There are 20,000 able-bodied men absolutely penniless and homeless, without the slightest prospect of employment of any kind. In the printing trade alone there are 700 persons unemployed. The situation is aggravated by the number of financial institutions that from day to day are being dissolved.

The Salvation Army has developed into a sort of restaurant for the hungry. It finds rations for one hundred persons daily, by means of its superior method of parveying. The other churches have also adopted systems of relief, by which meals are occasionally given to limited numbers. It is said the distress extends beyond the ordinary wage workers. People who a short time ago lived in luxury, owning carriages and living in large mansions, are now seeking relief the same as the common laborers.

It is expected that the depression will continue for some time, and trouble is apprehended. The police are instructed not to interfere with vagrants or persons found sleeping in parks, barns or vacant buildings. The anarchist agitators are beginning to rear their horrid front, and are telling the starving workmen to attack the stores, dwellings and warehouses of the wealthy, and take what they need. Verily these are troublous times.

THE SUNDAY SALOONS.

THE saloon men are up in arms over the Sunday closing movement. They take in earnest the order of the new Captain of Police. They talk of resisting it by protest to the Mayor and by legal process in the courts. Their attitude is convincing proof that the city ordinances and territorial statutes in relation to this matter have been violated with impunity. The liquor sellers have pursued their unlawful traffic without restriction so long, that they have come to consider their rights invaded when an effort is made to enforce the laws in good faith. What a comment this is on the administration of public affairs under "Liberal" rule!

We do not believe that the Mayor can be cajoled or influenced by these men into winking or conniving at the violation of the city ordinances in relation to liquor selling on Sunday. The Captain of Police would not have issued his orders without the Mayor's sanction. We believe the Mayor means business. He did not make the law, but he is in duty bound to enforce it, and from what we know of his character we think he will stand firm in the attitude he has taken. Therefore the boast of certain saloon men that they will be running along as usual on Sundays, in a short time, does not appear to us anything but talk.

As to their taking the matter into the courts, the idea is nonsensical. They haven't the ghost of a chance to make a case. They will have to close up on Sundays, and after awhile, when the noise about it is blown over, people who take interest in the preservation of the Sunday as a day of rest and quiet, will have to take measures to ascertain whether the "order" of the police authorities is being still observed. The saloon keepers must now "shut up," and they will do wisely to make that apply to their tongues as well as their doors.

ON OUR HONOR.

We do not know what the "Liberal" organ would do if blackguarding the DESERET NEWS and its editors was forbidden in its columns. Today it has nearly a column of rant and froth, which is merely a reproduction of form r exudations that need not be noticed. We shall only pay attention to one item, which is couched in decent language and is as follows:

"We leave it to the honor of the News to state whether to the knowledge of the editor there were not twice or three times as many men registered right here who had no more right to vote than so many Fiji Islanders."

On the honor of the editor, he has to say that to his knowledge a great many men were registered here who had no right whatever to vote, but will not say whether there were twice or three times as many as were registered on the Rio Grande Western train. If he had time to go over the records he could count up the number. But that does not matter as much as the fact of their false registration. Who did the work? Was it not the "Liberal" registrars, whom the Tribune lauded and defended and most of whom it helped with office as a reward, not for "services to their country," but for dirty work done for their party?

The editor of the News, on his honor, will say, further, that not one of those men was illegally registered by the connivance or consent of the People's party or its managers. He knows that every possible effort was honestly made to prevent the registration of any People's party man who had not a lawful right to be registered. Nor has he any knowledge of the unlawful registration of any one but "Liberals" or persons expected to vote the "Liberal" ticket. But he has knowledge of a great many People's party voters who were deprived of their right to vote by the "Liberal" registrars, and this can be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

The Tribune may rage and its editors may imagine and assert vain things. But the facts remain that this wholesale illegal registration, unwittingly admitted by its illogical editor, was the work of officials of its own faction, and that most of them received their reward for it with the aid and sanction of the editors who pour out their gall and venom upon the DESERET NEWS.

THE DEBATE ON THE BILL.

We publish today, from the Congressional Record, the full text of the "Home Rule" bill as it passed the House of Representatives on Friday, July 8th, by a vote of 183 yeas to 41 nays, on the motion of Mr. Washburn to suspend the rules and pass the bill, which required a two-thirds vote in its favor. Mr. G. D. Perkins, of Iowa, Mr. J. C. Burrows, of Michigan, Mr. E. B. Taylor, of Ohio, and Mr. Thos. Reed, of Maine, made diligent efforts by filibustering to consume the time so that the bill could not pass. They made many dilatory motions on which they called for a division of the house and also the yeas and nays, but were voted down every time.

Mr. Washburn, who had charge of the bill, abstained from speech-making so as to husband the time, until Mr. Perkins made some gross misrepresentations, to which he replied. Mr. Reed made one of his sarcastic speeches, in which he developed the same lack of understanding of Utah affairs as he suffered from several years ago, and the same anti-"Mormon" feelings and sentiments. One extract from Mr. Perkins' speech will be sufficient to show his animus and misinformation. He said, as reported in the Record:

"In May of last year the People's party, an organization under the domination of the Church in Utah, dissolved in a day with the avowed purpose of uniting with the old parties. The record of the vote since that time, however, shows that the Church in politics is as compact a body as ever before."

There is a great deal more of the speech in the same spirit, with an equal disregard of facts and assumption of information about Utah, which exhibit either extreme ignorance or utter indifference as to the truth. We quote the above paragraph because the errors it contains are part of the chief stock-in-trade of the opponents of liberty and justice to Utah, and were furnished by the "Liberal" boss and endorsed by the "Liberal" faction. Mr. Perkins' speech was made up from the misinformation supplied by O. W. Powers and his aides, when they appeared before the committees in Washington. And Powers signified his approval by sending the annexed telegram to the persons named, which is signed by him and seven other Tuscaroras:

SALT LAKE CITY, July 9, 1892.
To Hon. Thomas B. Reed and George W. Perkins, House Representatives, Washington.

On behalf of 5,000 American Democrats in this Territory, we hereby express thanks for your patriotic protest of yesterday on the floor of the House against the passage of the bill for the perpetuation of Mormonism in Utah.

The "five thousand American Democrats" are only in the Tuscaroras' telegrams. Powers could not scratch up five hundred to endorse his falsehoods. When he was drumming up recruits for his Tuscarora tribe a short time ago, he only claimed 515 followers, and to multiply them by ten now, casts a cloud of doubt over the claim of less than two months ago.

Now as to the mistakes of Mr. Perkins. We will not stop to say much about the People's party being "under the domination of the Church"—one of those old fictions which it does not matter much now whether it is believed or not, but which answered very well for "Liberal" campaign matter in its time. But the statement that it "dissolved in a day" is utterly and palpably false, and everybody who knows anything about the facts is aware that it is. The published proceedings of the various county organizations at different dates are sufficient answer to the story.

In the first place the subject of dissolving the People's party and its members aligning themselves with the respective national parties, had been discussed among them for years. Particularly had this been a matter of debate among them for three years next previous to the dissolution. But while it was admitted that this was inevitable at sometime, the majority of the party and of its influential members did not believe it was prudent to dissolve, until the events took place which occurred after the publication of the Manifesto.

Even then the work of dissolution was gradual. The party in Weber County and also in Salt Lake County resolved to divide as Republicans and Democrats. The county committees advised this in meetings called to discuss the question. Then the Territorial Central Committee met, on published call, and duly considered the matter, and decided to advise the party to dissolve. That advice was adopted and carried out in the respective county organizations, and the discussion which followed and in which so much strong party feeling was engendered, was the consequence of that gradual action. These are the simple facts. They have been distorted and lied about by the "Liberals" to prevent the establishment both of Republicanism and Democracy, and Perkins has but repeated the "Liberal" falsification.

We would like that gentleman to furnish a leaf or two from the "record" which shows that "the Church in politics is as compact a body as ever before." This statement is of the same character as the other and came from the same disreputable source. The record of the vote since the dissolution of the People's party proves the exact contrary of Mr. Perkins' assertion. He has simply been played upon by Powers and his tribe. Or, has he adopted these statements as the only excuse he could offer for opposing a measure which he claimed was proposed, "to turn the government of affairs into the hands of the Mormon Church?"

Of the merits or demerits of the "Home Rule" bill we do not propose now to treat. But we have this to say: The gentleman who opposed it in the House misrepresented its provisions and also the people whom it was intended to benefit. It would have been better for their reputation, if they had attacked it on its actual features and shown it up as an improper or inexpedient measure by fair statements and arguments. As it is, his remarks tend to help the bill instead of demoting it, and the filibustering which accompanied them indicates a weak cause and produce a similar effect.

NARROW ESCAPES.

PRESIDENTS George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith, and Elder George Reynolds of the Presidency of the Seventies, left this city on Tuesday evening, the 28th ult., to attend a general conference of the Saints in Arizona, commencing Sunday, July 3rd, at a place called Pine Top, a mountain retreat so situated as to make it a convenient gathering place for the people of the four States of the Territory. On the arrival of the party at Holbrook, on the morning of the 2nd inst., the following telegram was sent by President Cannon to President Woodruff:

"Engine and tender turned on side over embankment and two baggage cars fell through bridge Thursday night, which detained us. None seriously hurt. Reached here this morning in good health."

On the 6th inst. the following telegram was received from President Cannon:

"Conference adjourned yesterday. It passed splendidly. Camp commenced breaking last night. There were twelve hundred souls on the grounds. The Fourth was celebrated in fine style. All start for Snowflake this morning; hope to reach Holbrook tomorrow. All well."

This morning a letter was received by President Woodruff from President Cannon, dated at San Francisco, 10th inst., from which the following is taken:

"We reached here yesterday. Our journey has been marked by the escapes we have had. As you have heard, a part of our train fell through a broken bridge, and one bridge which we crossed was swept away five minutes after we got over. Returning from Pine Top to Snowflake we passed through a very violent storm. The rain poured down in torrents, accompanied by heavy hail and very sharp thunder and lightning. It seemed for awhile as though it would be impossible for us to reach Snowflake, because of the rapidity with which all the dry gulches were swollen with the angry water; but we succeeded in getting through safely, though somewhat damaged from the storm. Yesterday our train broke in two, all the cars behind ours separating from the train. Then we had a narrow escape from probable destruction through the explosion of a nitro-glycerine works at Berkeley, which occurred not many minutes before we came to it. Had our train been passing at the time of the explosion, it doubtless would have been blown off the track, and, perhaps, destroyed, as the nitro-glycerine works were quite close to the track. When we passed houses were in flames all around."

It is expected that President Cannon and party will reach this city, by way of Portland, on Saturday morning next.

OUR COUNTRY IN DANGER.

A FEW months ago anarchy reigned in a portion of Wyoming. A force of armed citizens, aided by armed auxiliaries from Texas, invaded a portion of the State for a lawless purpose. A number of people were killed, and a terrible wholesale massacre was only prevented by the timely intervention of Federal troops. Questions connected with that disgraceful affair are still pending in the courts, in which charges of murder have been preferred against a large number of persons implicated in the remarkable incident in the history of our neighboring State. The Wyoming matter is not yet settled.

Within the last few days, in three different States of the Union, as many outbreaks have occurred—two of them even more serious and much more bloody than the Wyoming affair.

In each of these uprisings it has been necessary to invoke the aid of the military—either that of the State or Federal government, or both combined. We refer to the horrible conflict at Homestead, the scarcely less thrilling tragedy at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, and the threatening situation at Paducah, Kentucky, where a race war is in its incipient stages.

In each of the uprisings outside of the one last named, the underlying cause of the disturbance is the same—moneyed interests. The cattle-men undertook, by unlawful means, to stop the encroachments of small landholders—that the public lands might be maintained as immense pasture grounds—and to prevent the stealing of stock by murdering those who they claimed were thieves. The Homestead trouble and that in Idaho were the result of a dispute between capital and labor. The cause of the revolt in Kentucky involves another question. It is a growing and dangerous one, and means rapine and murder.

We submit that these are dangerous times, and hold that those who cannot see future peril in existing conditions must be blind to the plainest indications. The causes that have produced such serious consequences within so brief a time will become more and more prolific in the production of such terrible scenes as have lately horrified the nation. The questions which spring from such conditions are sure to lead to disaster unless great wisdom is used by the thinking men of the nation.

Conflict between the forces of labor on one hand and capital on the other will naturally lead up to a struggle between labor and lawful authority. The latter will be invoked, as has been the case in each of the three conflicts referred to, for the protection of capital, and the struggle must therefore be largely transferred from a fight between labor and capital to one between labor and constituted authority under the law. This will lead to the creation of an impression upon the minds of the masses—rightfully or wrongfully—that the government is in league with money to hold them down.

Let those who imagine this view to be radical wait and be satisfied of its correctness. In the natural course of events one situation grows out of another, each successive one being more complicated than its predecessor. In all such disputes as those out of which these conflicts have grown, the resources of arbitration ought to be exhausted before any recourse is had to the law of force, which has no convincing efficacy. Enforced submission is not a curative process. This truth applies with more potency to the United States than to any other nation on earth.

AN EFFECTIVE CONTRIVANCE.

B. H. TOLMAN, of Honeyville, Utah, is of an inventive turn of mind. His faculty in this direction was exhibited a short time ago, when a boy was drowned in Bear River, near that place. A variety of means—including giant powder, etc.—had been resorted to for the purpose of recovering the body, but every effort failed in accomplishing the desired object. Brother Tolman, during the night following the unsuccessful attempt, set his brains at work formulating the idea of an effective contrivance that would accomplish the object, and by daylight next morning his plan was matured. By the aid of some neighbors his proposed machine was soon constructed. Following is the description of it, as given in the words of the inventor himself:

"First procure two long heavy log cable chains, making a length of about thirty feet. At the ends securely fasten a stake or piece of wood three feet long by about two inches by two. On top of these fasten a rope the full length of the chain, and between the rope and chain string common tie wire about every six inches or so apart, close enough to prevent the body from slipping through, and longer enough than the chain and rope to be slack enough to be cupping. Then fasten cross wires from chain to rope (fastening to the wires) as often as needed; fasten on several pieces of wood as floaters to keep the rope and wire up nicely from the chain or bottom of the river. Now on each side of the chain long ropes to be pulled by a horse, or otherwise, on shore, and after placing in the river, pull it to shore over the territory desired, after the manner of a seine. As the chain presses under the body it lifts easily and falls into the network. If the chains are considered too light to hug the bottom closely, weight it."

The body was recovered on the first application of this extemporized contrivance. We publish the description of the means thus successfully used because it is simple, can be constructed in any neighborhood, and the information may prove useful in instances of emergency, cases of accidental drowning being more or less frequent, and are liable to happen wherever bodies of water exist.

SILVER STILL AT THE FRONT.

NEXT to the excitement occasioned by the labor troubles, the silver question is the great topic of discussion at present. The National Mining Congress which assembled at Helena, Mont., a day or two ago, and is now in session, is handling the free silver issue in a rather robust form. Mr. Newlands of Nevada is permanent chairman of that body, and in his address yesterday spoke in no uncertain terms of the situation. He urged a coalition of all the silver States for the purpose of making a decided stand in favor of that metal, independent of both the old political parties: And it appears that his utterances received the approbation of 592 delegates present.

The action of the House of Representatives at Washington in virtually killing the Senate silver bill by postponing its consideration, seems to have a stimulating effect on its Western advocates in the way of urging them to independent action. Many of the Southern free silver Democrats voted with the anti-silver Democrats and Republicans of the North against consideration of the bill. It was not regarded as a good measure anyhow, and political considerations rendered its present passage unwise.

What may properly be called free silver States are Idaho, Wyoming, Montana, Nevada, Colorado and Washington. In the South the two Carolinas, Georgia and Texas are said to be free silver, but fear of Republican rule and a force bill keeps them within Democratic party lines. Idaho, Montana, Wyoming, and Nevada have 3 electoral votes each, Colorado and Washington 4 each, Texas 15, Georgia 13, North Carolina 11, and South Carolina 9. This makes an aggregate of 68 electoral votes, which if cast for a free silver candidate would seriously complicate matters next November.

The platform of the People's party adopted at Omaha on the 4th inst., demands the free and unlimited coinage of silver and a speedy increase of the circulating medium to not less than $50. for every person in the country. This plank might perhaps realize the requirements the average free silver advocate, but would he support the various other planks which accompany it? Would he endorse the government ownership of railroads, telegraphs, telephones, etc., and the establishment of postal banks, sub-treasury schemes and so on? Finally, would he accept Weaver and Donnelly? These are questions the average free silver man whether North and South will ask himself before voting.

AN UNWARRANTABLE ATTACK.

AN editorial in the Logan Journal of the 13th inst. makes a savage attack on the Young Woman's Journal and on the firm of George Q. Cannon & Sons, where that periodical is printed. The position taken by the Journal, apart from the personal reflections it casts upon honorable gentlemen, has a bearing upon every publishing house where printing is done for others. Therefore, and for other reasons, the DESERET NEWS has something to say on this matter.

The Journal states that "The Young Woman's Journal, published in Salt Lake City by the Mutual Improvement Association, is being turned into a political organ." It then refers to what it calls "a long republican harangue," and asserts what it claims to be the object of that "harangue," and claims that it is "an intensely partisan communication from a radical republican," and wants to know "why it should attack a man of the standing of Mr. Thatcher and attempt to justify the attack of Frank Cannon." Then it proclaims the discovery that "the magazine bears the announcement that George Q. Cannon & Sons Company composed its business management," and from this concocts the theory that "the Sons had something to do with turning the magazine over to the Republican party, in order to advance certain selfish interests and gratify certain selfish ambitions," and makes a vile and personal fling at the head of the firm, which all who have spoken to us on the matter have pronounced infamous. The Journal, in conclusion, announces what it will do in regard to "independent" organs "no matter which side they take," and intimates that religious magazines and newspapers must not take part in political discussions.

First, we will say that The Young

Woman's Journal is not being turned into a political organ. The editor, Mrs. Susa Young Gates, announced at the opening of the new volume, the addition of a department on "Constitutional Government" in which political principles would be discussed. We think this a most excellent method of instructing young people in the theory of civil government, and quite appropriate in a young woman's journal. The articles which have appeared in that department, forming but a small part of the magazine, so far as we can discover have been fair and impartial, giving the views of adherents of both the great national parties on various subjects. But the magazine has devoted much more space to matters that are not by any means political.

As to the present number: It contains three brief political sketches, by "Shurlock," who may be a lady or a gentleman, it matters not which, and we do not know or care. One is called "Republicanism at Home," and conveys some of the views of "a highly esteemed Republican leader"—name not given—which, summarized, amount to the opinion that while the theories of Democracy are fine and beautiful, they are impossible of application to the affairs of a great nation." These opinions are not strongly put, are open to easy criticism, and are only given as the views of an individual. The second is a review of some parts of the noted speech of Hon. M. Thatcher and the reply to it by Mr. F. J. Cannon, and on the whole appears favorable to the former while endeavoring to be fair to both. The third is a recommendation of S. A. Keuser's very capable book, "The Practical Politician," which is entirely unpartisan and very instructive. That is all the politics to be found in the July number.

Now we venture to say that there is no attack on Mr. Thatcher in the magazine, nor attempt to justify Mr. Cannon. The article relating to their dispute is not from the "radical Republican" whose views are confined to the first article, but the opinions of Shurlock. And, in any case, it contains nothing to justify the vile personal attack of the Journal writer upon gentlemen who had no more to do with its composition than he had. The editor, who is now in the East, is solely responsible for the articles in the magazine.

The Young Woman's Journal is printed at the publishing house of George Q. Cannon & Sons. Business communications for it are permitted to be addressed to their office. Does that make them its business managers or responsible for what it contains? We happen to know that the firm are not, either financially or editorially, associated with the magazine, and have no further interest in it than that which comes through printing it, for which they receive pay as for any other job work.

The DESERET NEWS Company has, for many years, printed papers and magazines in the same way and would not like to be considered responsible for what they have contained. If the Journal has a job office, would the owners like to be regarded as responsible for every sentiment or statement appearing in what they print for other people? If they should permit a person or a paper to have business communications addressed to their office, would they like to have that used as proof that they were the business managers of that individual and were responsible for all his views and sentiments? The idea is as silly as the insinuation coupled with it is unwarrantable.

Now as to "independent" and "religious" journals. Politics is a subject free to every citizen, and therefore to every paper, in the United States. The DESERET NEWS will exercise the right to comment upon any subject, religious, political or otherwise, that becomes a matter of public interest. The Young Woman's Journal has an equal right to do the same. Of course what either says is open to fair criticism. But no person or paper has any right to attempt to muzzle it, or to misrepresent it. And certainly, a personal attack upon an honored gentleman, because a publishing firm of which he is the head has printed a magazine for some one else which contains an article objectionable to a political advocate, is indefensible and discreditable from any point of view whether public or private.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

In the Young Woman's Journal for July are some political remarks by "Shurlock" which each party may endorse or criticize to its own taste. We have nothing to say as to the ideas and notions advanced, but only wish to deal with facts. "Shurlock," speaking of the time when Martin Van Buren was President of the United States says:

"It is well known that up to that time no amendments had been added to the Constitution and no changes made in national policy, but the republic stood just as its founders had reared it."

"Shurlock," we fear, is not "up" in political history. The editor must have been in a hurry for her trip to the East, to let that statement slip by uncorrected. There were ten Amendments to the Constitution proposed at the first Congress of the United States, held March 4th, 1789, and they were soon after ratified by the requisite number of States. Next, at the second session of the third Congress the Eleventh Amendment was proposed and afterwards ratified. At the first session of the Eighth Congress what is now known as the Twelfth Amendment was proposed. "Shurlock" was probably thinking of the later Amendments, but the twelve we have named were all added before the time mentioned and the events referred to in the article under consideration.

While our young people are learning politics it is necessary that they receive correct information. That is of more importance than mere party views or political affiliations.

LET THE CLEANING PROCESS PROCEED

MAYOR BASKIN is confronted with a situation that will prove a test of his quality. He has undertaken, according to statements attributed to him, to make the balance of his administration clean. This determination does not seem to be merely assumed. The stoppage of the violations of the ordinance against Sunday liquor selling indicates that it is genuine. Up to date the whisky men have, from the beginning of the "Liberal" reign in this city, had matters all their own way. They are enraged at the recent new order of things and will doubtless resist it.

There is one fact that favors the success of the effort of the Mayor in enforcing the liquor laws in this city—the influence of O. W. Powers is by no means as potent as it was a short time since. His star is waning and will finally wink out altogether. At one time he appeared to have the "Liberal" municipal government under his thumb. And when the clergy protested against the reign of whisky and gambling, he stated in effect that in the election previous the saloon keepers and gamblers had been consulted in the campaign as well as the ministers, and the wishes of the two former classes ought to be considered as well as those of the one last named. He also insisted that it was not desirable that Salt Lake City should be "too good." He was virtually running the city government at that time. We do not believe his sway is absolute now.

If anything in the form of a "Liberal" pledge was given to the whisky men during the last municipal campaign, we do not believe that the present Mayor was a party to the contract, and we have an idea that O. W. Powers could not sway R. N. Baskin. The disposition of the latter is not naturally one which inclines to easy forgiveness, and these two gentlemen have had some pronounced disagreements. At one time, during the investigation instituted in reference to the official doings of the late U. S. Marshal Dyer, Mr. Baskin became so enraged at Mr. Powers as to threaten the latter with personal violence. The dispute arose out of insulting remarks which Mr. Baskin claimed had been directed at him by O. W. Powers. He also accused the Tuscarora chief of having written some articles for the News which did not suit him exactly. Of course the latter accusation was foundationless. We do not believe, taking in the whole situation, that the mayor would be swayed from any purpose he might form by any interference on the part of Mr. Powers. Hence the liquor-men need expect no potent support from that quarter, however much the "Liberal" leader might be disposed to avoid it.

There is another point that seems favorable to the enforcement of the ordinance against conducting the liquor traffic on Sundays—the new chief of police is a man likely to perform his part of the programme in this respect. Consequently the prospect is fair for the rule of whisky to cease in this municipality. Besides, there is now no political incentive for its continuance by the "Liberal" administration. That party is, we believe, "on its last legs." Its demise, in the very nature of things, is near, and there would not be much risk in guessing that its present administration in this city will be its last.

A morning contemporary recently credited Mayor Baskin with having stated that he was determined to have a clean official administration, and that should he become convinced that this could not be, he would no longer be Mayor, meaning, we presume, that he would resign. We applaud this determination, and can assure his honor that in every attempt to carry out this laudable resolution he may count on the support of the News, which will not be reluctant to give him credit for the good he may accomplish. Should he succeed in, to some extent, redeeming the "Liberal" past, by making the last days of the brief reign of that party cleaner than it has been up to date, we will not hesitate to proclaim the fact in these columns. The purifying process is greatly needed, as is well understood by the people who have mourned for two years and a half under a rule of "Liberal" corruption.

THE CŒUR D'ALENE TROUBLE.

FURTHER news from the Cœur d'Alene country, Idaho, is awaited with interest and anxiety. If information concerning yesterday's doings of the striking miners proves to be correct, it will exhibit the fact that many of them are murderers and desperate criminals as ever went unchasing. The non-union men had been paid off by the companies who employed them. The reports are to the effect—they seem to be authentic—that many of them were marched into an adjacent canyon by a body of strikers. The latter there robbed them and shot them down like dogs. It is asserted that a search party subsequently succeeded in recovering twelve bodies of the slain.

If this story proves to be true, then the authorities will have to deal with a class of men whose instincts are no higher than those of the savages in the Interior of Africa. This alleged massacre combines with robbery, murder in its most cowardly form. The fugitive would go to prove that there is but one step from civilization to barbarism. We prefer declining to fully believe that such a terrible outrage has been committed by the Cœur d'Alene miners, until the report is so authenticated as to place the matter beyond a reasonable doubt. However, in these times, when the general situation is out of joint, one may readily believe many things that seem at first glance to be incredible.

Should the strikers actively resist the military, the situation will be serious indeed.

A WOMAN MEETS AN EMERGENCY.

THE New York Sun publishes a column under the head of "Women and Their Ways." In it was related, a few days ago, the following striking and pathetic incident:

"Friday evening a newsboy, in the endeavor to get off an Eighth avenue car, was thrown under the wheel. To extricate him the horses were started forward, but with the only result of a ripping his flesh to ribbons and his piercing screams. It was the passengers who, interfering, raised the car and lifted the boy from under. He was carried to one side, when one man among the passengers undertook his charge, and the curious gathered around. No one went for a policeman, ambulance or doctor. The conductor, with the instinct of self-preservation, betook himself to getting the names of the passengers and their addresses. He came finally to a lady on the other side of the car who had been warned not to approach the wounded boy on account of the ghastliness of the sight. She inquired if nothing had been done for the boy, if he had sent for no help. 'I haven't any time for that, madam. I've got to make my time. I want your name and address so that you can testify that it was not my fault.' The words that this woman addressed to that conductor were few but to the point.

"From that moment this woman, who is still young and pretty, took command. Her fainting she reserved for home. Ten minutes had gone by and nothing had been done for the boy. Unmindful of nerves she pressed through the crowd. She sent one direction for whisky, another for police. 'Fifty cents,' to a small boy, 'if you will fetch me a doctor. This boy is bleeding to death.' And the boy ran as 50 cents will make a street Arab run. The gutter was red with blood, and the boy's suit and conscience was livid. 'I want my mother,' he whispered as she fanned him. A policeman was finally found who telephoned for an ambulance, but the wrong one. The street boy came back with the message that the doctor said it wasn't his affair, to send for an ambulance. Another policeman appeared and began to take down names and addresses. Then this woman arose in wrath. 'A boy is here bleeding to death; is human life nothing in comparison to names and addresses? Go fetch me a doctor this minute.' and the policeman, appalled, dropped his pen and paper and started to obey her. Other men she showed how to improvise a tourniquet. A woman from a neighboring window brought some wine, somebody else brought an old quilt to shield the boy from the fearful sight, the Park policemen came to protect him from the crowding of the curious, paralyzed gazers. Finally, a physician was procured from the Skin and Cancer Hospital, and now the ambulance from the Manhattan Hospital arrived. Meanwhile the body had lain there fully forty-five minutes without help otherwise than was extended by one thoughtful workman, and that commanded by a woman, whom the sight of the curiously paralyzed crowd and selfish officials made forget that she had nerves, that she grew sick at the sight of blood, until she reached her own dinner table.

"The boy died the next morning at the Manhattan Hospital. The doctor said if he had had prompt attention his life could have been saved. His name was Peter Hayner and he was trying to earn some money for the Fourth of July."

SOMETHING ABOUT STEEL.

THE great strike, or lockout, at Homestead, naturally causes people to ask something about the steel market. In order to maintain prices the manufacturers of steel rails in the United States formed a sort of syndicate or trust about ten years ago, but it did not work satisfactorily to all concerned. About one year ago a second arrangement of a coal iron character was entered into for the special purpose of holding up prices and, perhaps, for keeping wages down. The corporations comprising this combination are the Illinois Steel company, Carnegie Brothers & company, the Pennsylvania Steel company, the Bethlehem Steel company, and the Lakawanna

Iron and Steel Company. As the price of manufactured steel is supposed to be governed by the price of pig-iron the following figures may be of interest. They are taken from Bradstreet's an acknowledged authority on trade particulars. In 1889 pig-iron sold for $18 per ton, in 1890 $18.85, in 1891 $16.95 and in 1892 $14. The price of steel rails for these years were, respectively, $29.25, $31.75, $29.92 and $30. That is, during the current year when pig-iron is selling for $14 a ton, steel rails are selling at $30. In 1889 pig-iron sold for $18 a ton but steel rails were sold for $29.25. According to these figures manufacturers have no need to lower wages. They say their profits are only $2.00 per ton. This seems anomalous. They are buying pig-iron for $14 a ton and selling steel rails for $30, whereas in 1889 they paid $18 for a ton of pig-iron and sold rails for $29.25.

The price of English rails, delivered in America, is about $35 a ton, so that competition from that quarter is out of the question.

SALTON LAKE.

ABOUT two years ago the mysterious formation of a lake in the Colorado desert occasioned a great deal of comment. It was generally supposed that the water came from the Colorado river, but it was not practically demonstrated until within a few days ago. The following special dispatch to the San Francisco Chronicle explains the "mystery."

"SALTON, July 10, 1892.—Charles Thieson will long be remembered as an explorer of the Colorado desert, for within the past few weeks he has made an involuntary trip from the mouth of the Colorado river to Salton, a distance of over 600 miles, and the greatest wonder exists how he lives to tell the tale. On May 10th he left Yuma in an eighteen-foot skiff, going down the Colorado river to the mouth of Hardy's Colorado to hunt for the plumes of the little white crane, which are plentiful there. Not meeting with success, he went up Hardy's Colorado to Volcano mountain, there camped and hunted for plumes.

He then determined to follow up the New river, which comes into Hardy's Colorado, two miles northwest of Volcano mountain, which place he left June 15th. Entering up the New river, he found a slow current running northwest, and after proceeding fifteen miles came to a lagoon with an increased current; from that into a channel with quite a rapid current, and thoughtlessly went on, cutting his way through the mesquites until he came to another lagoon. Then, realizing his dangerous position, he made camp and concluded that it was impossible to return by boat to Yuma through the channels on account of the rapid currents.

"The thought then occurred to push on and endeavor to reach Salton. After passing through seven lagoons he came to a channel which he estimates to be seventy-five miles long, the water running from four to five miles an hour, but with no great depth or width to the channel. This distance, he says, he made in two days, arriving July 8th at the south end of Salton lake, about opposite Volcano Springs.

"Here he found the water to be two inches deep and was compelled to push his boat some eight miles over the mud and shallow water, hunting for a channel that would lead to Salton, but was compelled to abandon the journey. He moored his boat and made for the railroad track barefooted and without water, walking the distance of eight miles through the hot mud and salt. He arrived at Durmid half dead, remaining there one day resting himself.

"The next day, thinking the water would rise, he went back to his boat and found, to use his own expression, that 'the water was being licked up by the sun.' There being no sign of a rise he went back to Durmid, and, not being treated kindly, started for Salton afoot to advise G. W. Durbow of his trip. At Salton he was taken care of, and today he was fitted out with provisions and water to return to his boat for his gun and baggage. Mr. Thieson will return to Salton and will be the guest of Mr. Durbow.

"The water shows on the margin about four miles from the track at Salton, but with the great evaporation there is but little increase to the water, which is accounted for by the fact that only one stream is running into the lake, and as the river will be falling every day it is not probable that the water will attain a depth of over six inches on the marsh, which Mr. Durbow says 'will be very acceptable.'"

AGITATING A CARCASS.

WHAT is the use of arguing with a person or a paper that does not seem to understand a simple argument or the signification of its own words, and that not only falsifies the position of an opponent but denies on every day what it said the day before? That is the common course of the Salt Lake Tribune. It is exemplified in today's issue, which contains another column and a half of abuse of the News, coupled with an effort to evade the logical deduction of its own argument and a denial of its own utterance.

Speaking in reference to the unlawful registration of 1890 it said on Wednesday:

"We leave it to the honor of the News to state whether to the knowledge of the editor there were not two or three times as many men registered right here who had no more right to vote than so many Fiji Islanders."

To this we made reply, showing how that registration was conducted, and asking whether that illegal and criminal registration, unwittingly admitted by the Tribune, was not the work of "Liberal" registrars? Now it says:

"There has been no admission, wittingly or unwittingly, of any such registration, except on the part of the People's party, and that by a deception."

If the first paragraph we have quoted is not an admission that a large number of persons were unlawfully registered, what does it mean? And as there were registrars but "Liberals," who but they could be responsible for the unlawful registration? The Tribune scribe must be suffering from softening of the brain, or he would not reel off day after day columns of such "reasoning."

We repeat, on our honor, to the knowledge of the editor there were a great many men registered who had no right to vote, and a great many others who were refused registration who had a perfect right to vote. That this criminal conduct was the work of the "Liberal" registrars, and that the lawful voters who were defrauded were People's party citizens, and the illegally registered were "Liberals" or persons expected to vote the "Liberal" ticket. We will say further that the test was satisfactorily made that when a man was supposed by the registrars to be a "Liberal," he could be registered whether he had resided here but three months or did not reside in the city at all. Also that by changing a People's party badge for a "Liberal" badge, a rejected voter could become an accepted voter.

The Tribune need not think by bluster and personal defamation of the editor of the DESERET NEWS it can accomplish what it fails to do by argument. The proofs are too clear and conclusive of what we assert. And as to the Utah Commission, we know that the majority of that body did not want the proofs when they were ready to be offered, and would not investigate the criminal conduct of the since disgraced men who were the chief conspirators in the plot. But that body is nearly defunct and we do not want to stir up a carcass. However, this seems to be what we have been doing for several days, judging by the emanations from the Tribune. That is all at present.

THE UTAH COMMISSION DEBATE.

THE result of the contention between the two Houses of Congress over the Utah Commission has resulted as all anticipated. The conferees have agreed to the proposition to retain the Commission but cut the salaries down from $5000 to $2000 each per annum, and to reduce the contingent fund from $8500 to $7000. This was adopted by the House by a vote of 160 to 65, and no doubt the Senate will agree, so that matter may be considered as settled for the present.

Hon. John T. Caine made a gallant fight for the abolition of the Commission and was ably supported by Mr. Washington, and both made speeches against the adoption of the conference report. We defer producing either until we can obtain the full text.

When the subject was debated after the Senate amendments were presented to the House, Mr. Henderson of Iowa spoke in favor of retaining the Commission with reduced salaries, and Mr. Washington of Tennessee replied. We take the following report of their remarks from the Congressional Record of July 10:

"Mr. Henderson of Iowa said: Now, as to the Utah Commission. The matter was discussed here yesterday to some extent; but I want to bring up especially the financial situation. The provision for the Utah Commission was struck out entirely by the House, our proposition being to abolish the Commission and select another body, consisting of the Governor, Chief Justice and the Secretary of the Territory to do the work which had been done by the Commission—the conduct of elections, etc. There was a contingent fund of $8,500 given by the current law for expenses of conducting elections by the Utah Commission. The estimate for the next year was $10,000. The House cut that down to $3,000; the Senate proposes to increase it to the amount appropriated in the current law; so that there is a difference of $5,500 between us in regard to this matter.

With reference to these contingent expenses I wish to say that the whole expense of printing tickets, notices, commissions, and everything pertaining to all the elections in Utah comes out of this contingent fund, and no matter what kind of work it will be impossible to do it for $3,000. To insist upon so small an appropriation would be simply knifing the election officers, whoever they may be, that shall take charge of the elections in Utah. The Delegate from that Territory were here to express himself would say, I think (though I have not consulted him), that $3,000 would be too little even for the board recognized under the House bill. The Senate has restored the Utah Commission, but reduced the salary from $5,000 for each member of the Commission to $2,000.

The question between the two Houses stands then in this position: The Senate contends for continuing the Utah Commission with all its powers as given by the Edmunds law, providing it with a sufficient contingent fund to do the work (the same amount given under the current law), but reducing the salaries of the Commissioners to $2,000 each and requiring that the Commissioners hereafter appointed shall be citizens of the Territory.

Then followed some questions and explanations from Mr. Forney and Mr. Washington.

"Mr. Henderson—Let me state that if you want economy in the administration of its affairs the Senate have given it to you with a vengeance, reducing the salaries of the Judges from $5,000 to $2,000, and if this is what you are after you have it right here, and you should adopt it at the double quick. If you want to nullify the system laid down in the Edmunds act, then of course the amendment of the Senate will be objectionable to the House. Now, that is all there is of this matter. If you want you might go on and explain the political features of it at length. But that I do not care to go into now. I will say this, however, while on the subject, that talking with those persons who favor the Mormon faith, as well as those who are opposed to it, I am satisfied that there is radical progress being made in that Territory. I believe the time will come, in the near future, when I will be swift to vote for admitting Utah to the privileges of statehood. But I do say that that time has not yet come, and until it does come I believe it is better to observe the caution and the system, wholly non-partisan, free from local influences, which was recognized and established by the Edmunds act, until we are ready to take Utah into the sisterhood of States."

Mr. Washington endeavored to get Mr. Henderson to admit that the continuation of the Edmunds Act was to continue the Commission for but one year, when the Legislature was to provide for elections.

Mr. Henderson of Iowa—I understand the purpose of the Edmunds act was to keep Federal control over that Territory in the elections by providing that they should be conducted by non-partisans.

Mr. Washington—Not through this Commission. The gentleman has not examined the Edmunds act, I presume.

Mr. Henderson of Iowa—I cannot say that I have made a study of the act except in so far as I have had occasion to examine it casually; but this is the understanding of those who undertake to interpret it on both sides. Now, the Commissioners under that act have only charge of the elections. They are non-residents of Utah, belonging to both political parties, and they are appointed for the purpose of securing fair elections in the Territory.

Mr. Washington—But what I am suggesting is that that Commission was created to last one year, or until the Legislature of Utah had created the necessary machinery for itself—not as a permanent institution.

"Mr. Henderson, of Iowa—Well, I do not know about that. But the Government has not yet seen the hour when it was willing to trust that Territory to have entire control of its own elections.

"Mr. Washington—What does the gentleman mean by 'the government'?"

"Mr. Henderson, of Iowa—I believe that should not be done until it is admitted as a State.

"Mr. Washington—I do not want to interrupt the gentleman.

"Mr. Henderson of Iowa—This is my judgment, and that is the judgment of the Senate. I am not a member of your Committee on Territories, but I think I understand the purpose and spirit of the Edmunds act, and I think I have fairly stated it. I think that the sides of this House will find that the country is not yet ripe for the change which was here inaugurated yesterday, or which was inaugurated before that on the legislative bill; but I believe this country is not inspired by any feeling against any citizen or any part of the citizenship of Utah; and as soon as the country becomes satisfied that they intend its good faith to live up to existing law, and to recognize the civilization of this country, I think there will be no trouble in securing their admission into the Union. Now that is all I desire to say on that subject.

Mr. Washington. Mr. Speaker, I send to the clerk's desk and ask to have read the ninth section of what is known as the Edmunds act. I invite the attention of the House to the reading of the section, because it is the section which created the Utah Commission, whose salaries are now under consideration.

The clerk read the section.

"Mr. Washington—Now, Mr. Speaker, that is the section of the Edmunds law which created what is known as the Utah Commission. By express terms that Commission was created to hold office until the Legislature elected under that act could meet and pass a law creating similar machinery to perform the duties of that Commission. To perform these duties that Commission was given, under this act, a salary of $5,000 per annum. Those gentlemen who have composed this Commission during the last ten years have found their duties so congenial, have found a junketing trip to Salt Lake City once a year so pleasant, that they have held on with death-like tenacity year after year, and on an appropriation bill some years since succeeded in having their salaries increased from $5,000 to $5,000 per annum, and their contingent expenses have more than equaled the sum paid them in salary.

When the Edmunds act was passed every office in the Territory was vacated and it was the intention of Congress that a new election should be held, that every office should be filled, from constable up; that no one should vote and no one should hold office except those only who could take that iron-clad oath prescribed in the act, that they were not engaged in the practice of polygamy or any of its kindred crimes. The Commission carried out its first duty. It appointed the election officers, supervised the election, counted the returns, and declared the result. Then upon its duties ended, and, according to the law, that Commission should have expired. The Legislature whose election they supervised, the Legislature which was elected under the registration officers, under the judges and clerks of elections appointed by this very Commission, met at the appointed time and did pass a law creating in Utah a new Commission to perform those services, and which would have cost the taxpayers of this country a trifle in comparison with the more than half a million dollars that has been expended by this Commission in the last ten years. But the Governor of Utah, who has an absolute veto power, a power possessed nowhere else in America, and under no constitutional government in the world, so far as I know, vetoed that bill, and thus continued the Utah Commission in office and existence.

Every Legislature from that day to this, except one, has passed a statute creating a commission or some kind of a board in the Territory, to do the work of the Utah Commission; but at each succeeding term the Governor has, by putting the bill in his pocket, or by absolute veto, defeated the will of the people and perpetuating the existence of this Utah Commission. Such, briefly given, is the history of this body of alien supervisors of elections, which has developed such amazing vitality in the Territory of Utah.

"When we recall the fact that this Commission and its appointees have in less than nine years drawn more than half a million dollars from the Federal treasury, we no longer wonder that it clings with a death-like tenacity to its term of office. I am not surprised that this House is assured that morality and decency, good order and Republican government alike demand that the Commission should not be abolished. Is it patriotism, is it philanthropy, or is it some baser bond which holds this holy band of brothers together? If you abolish the salary entirely, do you suppose a single member of the Commission will ask to be retained, and insist that if he were not continued in office for another year that polygamy would again rear its horrid front in Utah? Try it and see. Who is here from Utah asking for this commission? Is anyone from anywhere asking the Commission be retained save the beneficiaries themselves?"

"Sir, the members of the Commission are paid $5,000 per annum and traveling expenses for going once a year to Utah and spending there a few weeks on a tour of recreation and pleasure. The remainder of the time they are at liberty to remain at their homes in the several States where they reside, attending to their private affairs. But I am told that, with a truly commendable punctuality, they draw their stipends. I have no harsh word or criticism for the members of this Commission, individually. I understand that they are all honorable men. But despite that fact, being composed of three Republicans and two Democrats, I am informed that in appointing all election officers they understand to perfection how to work out in the most approved partisan style that political puzzle of three to two.

"That, sir, is not my objection to the Commission. I naturally expect three Republicans to outvote two Democrats. My reason for insisting that this Commission be abolished now and on this appropriation bill is that it has long outlived the period for which it was created. It has passed the day of its usefulness. It is now an expensive luxury. It is a board of pro-consuls, alien allies to Utah and to our republican institutions.

Sir, I assert that this Commission, which has been in existence for ten years, and which has cost the people over half a million of dollars, has never yet been the means of convicting a single voter in the Territory of Utah of any violation of the Edmunds-Tucker act. There has been made only one presentment for indictment, I am told, as the result of all their work, and as the outcome of the enormous salaries and perquisites which they have received. It is unnecessary for gentlemen to try to arouse a prejudice against the people of Utah on this floor. I do not condone the practices of the Mormon Church which have been condemned by all good men, and which have been rooted out by Congressional legislation; but I am here to say that from the testimony of Republicans and Democrats of Gentiles and Mormons alike, it has been clearly established before the Committee on Territories that today there are no polygamous marriages being entered into in the Territory of Utah, and that there is no record of any having been contracted for several years past.

There is further proof of this assertion on record in the office of the Attorney-General of the United States in the form of a petition for amnesty, sent to the President, which was signed by every Republican official in the Territory of Utah, including every Republican Federal judge, declaring that the Mormons have abandoned the teaching and practice of that doctrine which alone has for so many years kept them out of touch with the civilization of the American people. Let us wipe out this stigma that rests upon them in the shape of an alien carpet-bag commission, and for the next two or three years, by way of experiment, if nothing more, intrust its duties to a Commission composed of citizens of the Territory.

The bill which was reported from the Committee on the Territories, and which was passed here yesterday, provided for a Commission, which in my judgment, was better than the one proposed in the appropriation bill, but only in this, that it did not in any way conflict the judiciary with the conduct of elections. However, speaking for the Committee on Territories, what I have said before I now repeat, that we are willing to accept this Commission temporarily, because we believe that the Legislature of the Territory of Utah at its next session will again pass a bill, and that the Governor will sign it, creating a nonpartisan commission, which will conduct the elections in the full spirit of the Edmunds law, and at a trifling cost to the people.

The provision of the appropriation bill now under consideration proposes to create a local commission to consist of the Governor, the Secretary of the Territory, and the Chief Justice. These men are all Gentiles, as they are called out there. They have neither sympathy nor connection with the Mormon Church. They are all three appointees of the President, and, as it so happens, they are all Republicans. If you can trust a Commission of five nonresident Gentiles at a salary of $5000 a year each, why can you not equally well trust a Commission of three Gentile residents who are more than all others interested in good local government, who are all Republicans (I am appealing to my friends on the other side), who can and will serve without additional compensation, to supervise and conduct elections and to enforce the Edmunds law?

I hope the House conferees will be instructed to stand by this item in the bill.

The discussion of these questions is doing good, and the conviction is growing in the public mind, and has almost matured in the congressional mind, that the proper way to settle all these questions about Utah is to admit her into the Union, on an equal footing with all the States composing the republic.

THE United States Senate now consists of 85 members, divided politically into 47 Republicans, 39 Democrats and 2 Farmers' Alliance men.

Labor asks that the Worlds Fair be open on Sunday. The labor organizations of the country are fast putting themselves on record to that effect.

PROPOSED CENSUS JOB.

THE Salt Lake Tribune is booming a scheme for a new census enumeration for Salt Lake City. It publishes, in this morning's issue, a list of opinions on the subject, alleged to have been expressed by various citizens.

It is significant that about half of the gentlemen quoted are real estate men, whose views are given with conspicuous fullness, compared to the space devoted to the expressions of others. This is an indication that the proposed census is in the interest of a real estate boom, which, as experience as well as observation teaches, is an ultimate injury to business.

One of the gentlemen quoted states that if the right kind of census takers can be appointed so that the population can be shown at 65,000 it would be a good thing. This is a very suggestive statement, and, to our mind, exhibits the purpose of the scheme—deception by the process of inflation.

Let the real estate dealers pay for their own advertising. It is not the business of the people to meet their bills in that line.

Some are credited with expressing themselves to the effect that justice was not done by the last census. It was not stated which census was referred to—there were two almost simultaneously taken in 1890. Was it the enumeration taken by the city officials or that by the general government that was unjust? We are at a loss to know how anyone can know exactly whether a census is correct or otherwise except by the figures obtained by minute enumeration.

Some of the opinions are on the fence. For instance: "If a new census would be a benefit, I am in favor of it." In the absence of an opinion as to the beneficial effect, expressions of that kind are so much air.

We do not believe the people want another census. There is no reason for it so soon after the two last in 1890. Its only purposes are to boom the business of real estate dealers and give employment to "Liberal" barnacles at the expense of the people.

If the people as a whole were asked their opinion, the result would be an emphatic "no."

THE ONYX DISCOVERY.

THERE has been occasional mention in the local papers in relation to the discovery, by Mr. Cederstrom, of an immense body of onyx in Utah County. We have examined a number of specimens of this stone, which is susceptible of the highest polish, and is of surpassing beauty. It has been mentioned as marble, but this is a mistake; it is ranked as a precious stone. Its chief beauty is given to it by its translucent quality, causing it to show a combination of depth, transparency and brilliancy. We regard Mr. Cederstrom's discovery as one of the most important and valuable yet made in these mountains. The variety in shade and combination of color are practically endless, as no one piece so closely resembles another that the difference cannot readily be discerned, while many of the distinctions are strongly marked.

George Frederick Kunz mentions the onyx in a work entitled "Gems and Precious Stones," published by the Scientific Publishing Co., of New York. Mr. Kunz is one of the highest authorities extant on the subject treated in his book. He is gem expert for Messrs. Tiffany & Co., N. Y.; special agent of the U. S. Geological Survey; member of the Mineralogical Society of Great Britain and Ireland, and is connected with a similar society of St. Petersburg, Russia. In order to give the ordinary reader an idea of the nature of onyx, we make the following extract:

"Mexican onyx, so called, is really an aragonite. Prof. Mariano Barrena, of the Mexican Commission to the World's Fair held in Philadelphia during 1876, has recently published an account of its occurrence and chemical character. The principal deposits are located near the town of Tecali in the State of Puebla. It is essentially a carbonate of calcium, containing small quantities of the oxides of iron and manganese, to which are due the variegated colors for which the rock is so much admired. The specific gravity, 2.9, shows that it is aragonite. It was extensively used by the ancient Mexicans, specimens of whose handiwork we still have preserved in our museums in the form of masks, idols, and a variety of objects. The softness of the material (it can be readily carved with a knife) has tempted some of the modern residents of Mexico to imitate the ancient objects, to meet the demand of visitors in that country. This material is entirely stigmatic in its formation, and yellowish-brown and red oxides of iron have been deposited between the layers. It is generally cut across the layers, which gives it a beautiful veined appearance. When it is cut in the same direction as the deposition, the botryoidal structure is well shown, the mineral being so translucent that the markings resemble colored clouds. It is one of the most beautiful ornamental stones of any age, and has been used extensively for ornamental purposes in Europe as well as in the United States, where it was first introduced about 1876, when it brought about ten times its present price. The natives in the vicinity of Pueblo sell large quantities of this material, made into trays, crucifixes, reliquaries, inkstands, penholders, paper-folders and paperweights, in the form of single fruits or bunches of fruit, fish or other natural objects, which are copied, not only with regard to form, but often with remarkable skill in the utilization of the colors in the stone. So great is the variety of tints of color in which the material is found that there is scarcely a limit to its possibilities for such purposes."

Aside from the multifarious uses to which onyx can be put in the manufacture of smaller articles of a utilitarian and ornamental character, its effects, in combination with marble of lighter tints, in the embellishment of the interior of buildings, would be inconceivably beautiful. As an instance of the striking loveliness of marble ornamentation, the interior of the municipal buildings of the city of Glasgow may be appropriately cited. The grand staircase, including steps, banisters, walls and ceiling are all in marble of exquisite design and variegated hues. Many of the corridors are similarly constructed, and the effect is positively enchanting. In the marbles in use in that structure there is nothing approaching in richness and brilliancy the onyx stone recently discovered in Utah county, judging from the specimens we have seen.

As to the value of the deposit in question, it is only necessary to refer to the fact that oxyx is rated among the precious stones, and to state that the quantity of the article in sight is, according to reliable information obtained from persons who ought to know, not less than a thousand tons, and the quality improves as the discovery is developed.

It has been stated that an effort has been made to secure the aid of eastern capital with which to utilize this valuable deposit. This is an error. It is intended, at present at least, to effect this by home capital. Hon. Francis Armstrong is one of the gentlemen interested in it. He will doubtless bring to bear upon this important interest the push and energy for which he is noted.

WHAT IS FALSE?

"Should he succeed in, to some extent, redeeming the Liberal past, by making the last days of the brief reign of that party clearer than it has been up to date, we will not hesitate to proclaim the fact in these columns? The purifying process is greatly needed, as is well understood by the people who have mourned for two years and a half under a rule of Liberal corruption."

Of course that is the DESERET NEWS, and it is all false.

"Of course" the two last lines above are from the Tribune. "Deny everything" is its motto. Now what is false in the remarks of the DESERET NEWS? Is it the promise that if the Mayor succeeds in his present effort we will proclaim the fact? Or is it not true that the Mayor has started in to purify the city by enforcing the ordinances against Sunday liquor selling and houses of ill repute? Or is it false that the purifying process is needed? Or will it be claimed that the need of the purification is not understood by the people?

When the City Council was asked by one of its members to declare again at the Sunday liquor traffic, the Tribune joined in ridiculing him and in conveying the idea that what he stated was false. Now it is compelled to admit that all he said on that matter was true, by describing the consuetudine of the liquor-sellers and their anger at the orders received to close their business on Sunday.

Is it not a fact that purification is needed after the recent exposures of official winking at and actual participation in lawless vices? Deny and flounder and throw mud as it will, the Tribune knows that the accession of "Liberalism" to power, both in Ogden and in this city, was immediately followed by an increase of crime, the predominance of the liquor and lawless elements, and the demoralization of both cities.

The Mayor is doing what he can to purify affairs. Is the Tribune mad at that? The DESERET NEWS announces that it will give him due credit for his work. Is the Tribune furious at that? Well, it does not signify. We believe the Mayor will go on with the work. We are sure that, if he does, he will be applauded by the public. And we know that the DESERET NEWS will not hesitate to proclaim the fact, no matter how much it may displease the ultra-reputable Tribune.

THE LIBERAL "CONFERENCE."

THERE is great dissatisfaction among "Liberals" over the manner in which admission to the "Liberal" convention or "conference" as it is called by the "Liberal" organ, to meet in this city on Wednesday is being managed and limited. And all the pretended explanations of that manipulation are looked upon as exceedingly thin, or in other words decidedly Tribunish. If as is claimed the desire is to confine the conference to Liberals: that a full and free expression may be had upon all questions pending at present, why is it that the tickets are dispensed only by O. W. Powers and C. E. Allen, both notoriously opposed to the division movement?

Is it not a fact that the object of the "conference" is to stop, if possible, the drifting of "Liberals" to the Republican party of the Territory on the one hand and the Democratic party of the Territory on the other hand? Is it not to raise the old bugaboo and endeavor to frighten the timid with terrors of "Mormon" rule in Utah?

We find the following as the leading editorial in the Tintic Miner of July 15th and reproduce it for the edification of thinking "Liberals" who do not draw their inspiration from the decaying organ of their decaying party:

"The [Liberal] Republican Territorial Central Committee met in Salt Lake City last Friday. The committee was composed of fifteen members, fourteen of whom were present either in person or by proxy. The first question which came before the committee was whether or not to waive the sense of the committee that the Liberal faction disband. After two hours of discussion, a vote was taken and the proposition was voted down by a majority of two, the vote standing 5 for 3 against, and one not voting, but who was in favor of the resolution. Upon the vote being announced, the chairman, secretary and two other members of the committee tendered their resignations, which were accepted after some discussion. The committee adjourned to meet again on the 21st instant, the day after the Liberal convention.

"The senior editor of the Miner was one of the members who resigned from the committee, and by so doing severed his connection with that wing of the Republican party, (if they can be called Republicans), and in so doing believes he has done right for several good reasons, among which are, first, the Republican National Convention recognized both factions as Republicans, and admitted the delegates selected by the two conventions to seats in the National convention, with the understanding, either implied or stated, that after returning to Utah they would consolidate and make the fight for supremacy in this Territory shoulder to shoulder. Second, that when the majority of the committee refused to ally themselves with other Republicans, that there was nothing else left to do but resign or become a traitor to one's own convictions and to his party.

"This convention was forced upon us most strongly when we saw the Tuscarora Democrats of Salt Lake City button-holing the several committeemen upon their arrival in the city and laboring with them to stick to the Liberals, when it was for only one purpose, and that, to continue themselves in fat offices in the metropolis.

"When we considered the question and looked around for result, and found that out of all the city officials in Salt Lake, only one was a Republican, we came to the conclusion that the Liberal party was a very good thing for Democrats, but certainly not for Republicans. Then, again, the division has taken place, and the only thing to do was to make the best of it and join the party with which one has in the past or intends in the future to affiliate.

Nothing can prevent the open rupture, and careful students in political affairs in both parties see and recognize the truth of these words. This being the case, and our former affiliations having always been with the Republican party, we thought it our duty to espouse the cause again in an open manner, and while so believing, acted. We do not regret our action, but on the contrary, believe that with the advent of a political campaign with principle and not prejudices the dividing force, this Territory will experience beneficial results not heretofore felt. Should the Territory prove Democratic, and Democrats elected to fill all the offices by Democratic votes, we will feel better than with the offices filled by Democrats, the result of Republican folly."

NOT PROPERLY ENDORSED.

YESTERDAY afternoon an esteemed friend called and asked if we had observed a statement in the columns of a local contemporary to the effect that nine-tenths of the workmen of the country endorsed the treatment accorded the Pinkertons by the locked-out men at Homestead. He expressed himself in terms of strong condemnation of such an assertion by a public newspaper, as it was of a nature to injure the cause of humanity by inducing misguided people to perpetrate the most horrible excesses.

Our friend was right. The readers of the NEWS are aware that we agree with his position. We deem it a grave reflection upon the workmen of this nation to state that they endorse the inhuman treatment accorded the Pinkerton men at Homestead. If the claim of our contemporary were true this Republic could scarcely exist five years longer.

The most savage tribes on earth could have done no more than did many of the people at Homestead on the day of the terrible battle. Every civilized instinct was subjugated by the thirst for vengeance. The Pinkerton men repeatedly hoisted the white flag, the token of willingness to surrender, but it was several times shot down and efforts were continued to blow up the large or roast the beleaguered men alive.

The flag of truce is recognized wherever civilization exists. It is an appeal for mercy, and none but human fiends disregard it.

But worse still was the treatment after the proffered surrender was accepted and the men were in custody. The fact is, that all that was necessary to enable some of the people on that day to take on the worst forms of savagery was for them to eat their victims. They did their best to roast them.

We not only do not believe that nine-tenths of the workmen of the United States endorse such doings, but we are satisfied that even the great bulk of the locked-out people of Homestead regard them with detestation. Newspapers which condone such work take a responsibility that we hope this journal never could be induced to sume. It is the duty of every public journal and every good citizen to take a stalwart position against such deeds of blood as have disgraced our country during the last few weeks.

MARTYRDOM AND STATEHOOD.

It will be interesting to the public to learn that O. W. Powers appears in a new role—that of a martyr. His organ asserts that three days ago he was tortured by a crowd of small boys, and that journal points out that the alleged incident is proof positive that Utah is not yet ready for statehood. Our readers will pardon us for quoting from an editorial article which appeared in this morning's issue of our fast falling cotemporary:

"Three days ago Judge Powers moved from the Seventh ward to the Twentieth. His family consists of a delicate wife and a baby boy. Fatigued with the labor of moving, when night came the Judge's wife was trying to get a little rest, when suddenly the house was surrounded by between thirty and forty Mormon yahoos, and the little lady was entertained by a concert made up of the beating of tin cans, the blowing of horns, the ringing of bells and the firing of rocks against the house—a genuine charivari. It was the Judge's welcome to the ward.

"All this transpired within sight of the Temple, and it is interesting inasmuch as it shows how conditions have changed."

"It is only worth noticing as an answer to the argument of our morning cotemporary that it is full time we should have statehood and all its blessings, and that the people should no longer be put under the despotism of the federal government. Anyone can see how truthful all that is, because, could we have had a State government and full Mormon control of the State, when the boys tired of their serenade they could have closed it up with a present; they could have thrown the rocks, the tin horns, the tin pans and bells through the windows of the Judge's house—loaded it down with treasures, so to speak. A person who says that Utah is not entirely qualified for statehood must be crazy."

Suppose, for argument's sake only, that such an incident occurred. How was it ascertained that the yahoos were "Mormon" children? Did Mr. Powers take a census enumeration, and include in his minute inquiry, the religious opinions and church membership of the disturbers, or was the conclusion jumped at in the usual anti-"Mormon" manner. However, it is scarcely necessary to reason on that point, as we are prepared to state that no such incident occurred as that described by the "Liberal" organ quoted above.

Mr. Edward Taylor, (non "Mormon"), resides a few yards distant from the new home of Mr. Powers. The writer of this asked him the following question, this morning:

"Have you seen, in this morning's issue of the Salt Lake Tribune, a statement to the effect that a crowd of "Mormon" yahoos" disturbed O. W. Powers and family on the night in which they moved into their new residence, by the 'beating of tin cans, the blowing of horns, the ringing of bells and the firing of rocks against the house?'"

"Yes."
"Is there any truth in the statement?"

"None whatever, so far as I know. I was at home during the whole of the evening in question. I am certain nothing of the kind could have occurred without my being aware of it. There was no blowing of horns, beating of cans, ringing of bells or throwing of rocks against the house. There were a number of small girls on the street ranging probably between the ages of four and six years, engaged in a game of their own. They shouted gleefully as children generally do while at play. That was all. I guess Powers' imagination must have been lively and created the charivari."

The absurdity of manufacturing an incident of this nature and raising it as an argument against the admission of Utah to statehood is overwhelming. It is an indication that the opponents of the rights of the people are driven into the field of the ridiculous to find shadows of reason for their attitude.

As to the other feature of this article, our readers will agree with us when we state that there is no spectacle more contemptible than that of a man who takes on the role of martyr on such grounds as those herein detailed. The situation is not improved by the fact that the individual claims to have been the tortured victim of small children. Bah!

On Saturday we showed from the columns of the organ of O. W. Powers that the latter had gone into the martyr business, claiming that a number of "Mormon" children surrounded his new residence, blew whistles and tin horns, beat tin cans and threw stones at his house. This fabrication was published to show that Mr. Powers is a martyr; and that therefore Utah is not fit for statehood. We took pains to answer this drivel and proved, from a non-"Mormon" source that the charivari never happened. Here is the proof we furnished:

"Mr. Edward Taylor (non-"Mormon") resides a few yards distance from the new home of Mr. Powers. The writer of this asked him the following question, this morning:

"Have you seen in this morning's issue of the Salt Lake Tribune, a statement to the effect that a crowd of "Mormon" yahoos" disturbed O. W. Powers and family on the night in which they moved into their new residence, by the 'beating of tin cans, the blowing of horns, the ringing of bells and firing of rocks against the house?'"

"Yes."
"Is there any truth in the statement?"

"None whatever, so far as I know. I was at home during the whole of the evening in question. I am certain nothing of the kind could have occurred without my being aware of it. There was no blowing of horns, beating of cans, ringing of bells or throwing of rocks against the house. There were a number of small girls on the street ranging probably between the ages of four and six years, engaged in a game of their own. They shouted gleefully, as children generally do while at play. That was all. I guess Powers' imagination must have been lively and created the charivari."

The "Liberal" organ this morning comes back with this remarkable reply:

"The unexpected is what happens." The News has got down to the belief that there was no charivari of Judge Powers, and has got one Mr. Edward Taylor, a non-Mormon, to confirm it. But possibly Edward Taylor is deaf, or possibly the wind did not blow his way. It is said that at the battle of Perryville one wing of Buell's army and a half of the Confederate army fought for three hours one of the most sanguinary battles of the war, and the other wing of Buell's army did not hear a shot because the wind was in the wrong direction. It may be so with Edward Taylor. The noise was heard plainly on Brigham street a long way from the house. And that is not all. One old lady was asked the next day by Mrs. Powers, whom the old lady did not know, why the disturbance was made around the house, and the reply was, "Because we do not want Judge Powers to live up in this ward."

This reference to the battle of Perryville in connection with a charivari by small boys that never took place, shows how easy it would be for such a hyperbolic writer to describe an innocent game of a few gleeful little girls as a disturbance by "between thirty and forty Mormon yahoos." He leaps with facility from the sublime to the ridiculous.

But was it not too bad to resurrect that mythical "old lady," who has never yet been located? This poor old creature has been so frequently dragged into anti-"Mormon" scandals that she must be worn out by this time. This aged immaterial person is now brought out to show that Mr. Powers was persecuted by small boys, and to prove that Utah is not ready for statehood. This would be excellent evidence to place before a Congressional Committee. It seems, however, that this withered female must be the arch conspirator against the peace of Mr. Powers and not the children, the fabricated demonstration being accounted for "Because we (the afore-said aged female et al.) do not want Judge Powers to live up in this ward."

We meekly submit this question for public consideration: Is not this Powers persecution business and the shadowy anti statehood argument based upon it about as childish as anything ever perpetrated by grown people pretending to be possessed of a modicum of common sense?

WOMEN IN ENGLISH ELECTIONS.

A NOTICEABLE feature of the recent elections in England was the active part played in them by women. No less noticeable is the fact that the husbands of those women who were most active were found among the defeated. Mrs. Dorothy Stanley, Mrs. Cornwallis West, and Mrs. Richard Chamberlain worked hard at the polls and during the campaign for their husbands, but all three were defeated. The Princess Louise, though not taking the stump for her husband, the Marquis of Lorne, yet worked quietly and persistently for him to the last. He was defeated for the central division of Bradford by Shaw Lefevre. This was quite a setback to royalty, and it is said the Queen felt much chagrined that her son-in-law should be vanquished by a commoner.

Mrs. Gladstone took a prominent part in the elections, but not as a speaker or electioneering agent. She was constantly at the side of the Grand Old Man, and acted as nurse and physician for him.

Mrs. Stanley, judging from one of her speeches, did not help her husband's cause. Here is an extract from her address at Lambeth:

"I voted for Henry Stanley two years ago in Westminster Abbey, and I call on you to vote for him, not for myself, but for yourselves and in your interests, because he is a great and a good man, and when you and I have passed away and are forgotten he will be remembered as having been a great man, who has served his country well, and done noble things for it.

You can't make him a greater man than he is by putting M. P. after his name. Stanley is a man of his word, and when he says he will do anything he will do it. Stanley wants to extend your trade and to do all he can to develop commerce. Here is Stanley, and if you turn your back on him I say it will be a disgrace to Lambeth, for I think, and I do not say it because I am Mrs. Stanley, that he is the greatest man in England at this moment."

The crowd did not appreciate her effort nor endorse her sentiments, but both Stanley and his wife were forced to retire before the fury of the Lambeth mob.

Although the results of woman's active work in English elections appear to have been unfortunate, yet ladies have on many occasions accomplished wonders in behalf of their husbands or other relatives. But on the stump they have not been a pronounced success, and there are few advocates of woman suffrage who desire to see them engaged in that kind of political life.

Woman suffrage and woman stump oratory are two entirely different things, and one does not necessarily include the other. They ought not to be confounded in the minds of thinking people, as they often are in the words of unreflecting and prejudiced persons.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC CONVENTIONS

By special request of the New York Herald, the Hon. Patrick A. Collins wrote an article on the Chicago convention for the columns of that journal. It will be remembered that at Chicago he introduced a resolution providing for the exclusion of all persons from future National Democratic convention except delegates, alternates, press representatives and members of the National committee. He waited for some time hoping to hear objections made against the form of procedure, so that in his article he could touch on any that might be raised. But none, so far as he could ascertain, has been heard.

The strictures of Mr. Collins on the Wigwam are pretty severe, but it is conceded universally that they are not unjust. The building he describes as a monstrous drygoods box set in mud, ventilated through slits between wall and roof, with 25,000 human beings packed inside, only 1,500 of whom had any real business there. Over 20,000 of these could neither see nor hear, and the consequence was that the convention became a feeing, howling mob.

One of the ablest men in the United States attempted to preside. The foremost orators in the Union were not permitted to make sustained speeches. Only one man, Cockran of New York, made himself heard. But the loudest voice generally has not the most wisdom in it. There were orators and statesmen in that assemblage who, if given the proper environment, would speak words of wisdom and common sense, but in Chicago their worth and wisdom went for naught.

Mr. Collins describes the disasters to the building, and does not blame in any particular the people of Chicago. It is the system of permitting crowds of persons who had no right to be present to mingle among the delegates, waving banners and endeavoring to sway the delegations one way or the other that he condemns. The convention should be a deliberative body, and every member who had anything to say should be heard. The theory that the people should be present was all nonsense. Sixty-five millions of people could not be present, and no good reason could be advanced why 20,000 out of these 65,000,000 should assemble. By giving ample accommodation to the press, and facility for its representatives to do their work, the people of the United States of every sect, creed, party or faction could be fully and honestly informed of what transpired.

Mr. Collins adds:

"The people had their say in the 'caucus' or 'primary' meeting. There it should end. The French revolution simply shook the pillars of monarchy instead of replacing them with new ones, because it did not establish representative government. It ended, as it began, with France governed by one man with a crown on his head, instead of a government by all crownless Frenchmen. It was because the Paris mob was permitted to overawe by their presence and demonstrations the chosen representatives of all France in the legislative chamber.

"To liken the jeers and hisses and shouts of approval and the contrary at Chicago to the parading of the bloody head of Deputy Ferard on the point of a pike at the head of a drunken Paris mob in the French convention may seem a forced illustration, but the two scenes differ only in degree.

"The Paris mob had no true right or business there. Had they been excluded France would have grown into a permanent republic, for her representatives would have felt their way to it.

"More soberly our fathers constructed the wonderful system of government under which we live. It was constructed out of new material and they had no old structures to pull down.

"The architects of the American republic were representative men who met in convention and Congress without pressure or mob domination, because they were trusted by those who sent them, and their work lasts through the ages.

"When parties formed in the United States representative conventions naturally followed. These conventions for a long time followed the decorous course of the continental and the federal congresses—the delegates sat, consulted, deliberated, passed resolutions, made nominations and adjourned.

"It is only within our day that the insanity to admit 'the public' in greater numbers seized the national committees. The result is a Babel and not a deliberative body, a mob and not a convention, chaos instead of order."

IRRIGATION IN WASHINGTON.

THE last census bulletin in relation to irrigation in the arid States and Territories is devoted to Washington. In that State there are a total of 11,237 farms in the thirteen counties in which irrigation is practiced. Of these, 1046 farms are irrigated. The total area of land upon which crops were raised by irrigation in the year ending May 31, 1890, was 48,799 acres. The average size of the irrigated farms or, more strictly, of irrigated portions of farms on which crops were raised is 47 acres. The average first cost of water right is $4.03 per acre, and the average cost of preparing the soil for cultivation, including the purchase price of the land, is $10.27 per acre. The average present value of the irrigated land of the State, including buildings, etc., is reported as $50.00 per acre, showing an apparent profit of $34.47 per acre, less cost of buildings. The average annual cost of water is $1.75 per acre, which deducted from the average annual value of products per acre leaves an average annual return of $16.35 per acre.

A "LIBERAL" BOLSTER.

THE reason why O. W. Powers has been making a slokly attempt to make himself a martyr at the expense of truth and a number of little innocent girls between the ages of four and six years is being exhibited. The same evidence also shows why the Tribune's imperceptible "old lady," whose location is nowhere, has been once more trotted out to do service in the anti-"Mormon" scandal business.

The "Liberal" organ has been sending around its interviewer to obtain a list of expressions favorable to the continuation of that party organization. He got a lot of Park City men to speak their little pieces. Among them was Police Justice Lockbart, who is credited with saying this:

"Am in favor of putting up a straight Liberal ticket at the next election, including Delegate to Congress. If we are let alone for a few years the matter will work out itself. The reception given to the family of Judge Powers on his recent removal shows that the old Mormon spirit of revenge still prevails and indicates what the Gentiles might expect if the Mormons are again in power."

The "yahoo charivari," the mythical old female person and the bogus persecution of Powers were fabricated to bolster the "Liberal" cause. These fellows show that, notwithstanding their perpetual bluster, they are the merest mice compared with what men ought to be.

It occurs to us at this point that we ought to suggest that the Tribune's old woman, in consideration for valuable service rendered the "Liberal" cause, should be tendered a ticket of admission to the convention to be opened tomorrow. Why not trot her out upon the platform and have her make a speech?

The Indian exhibit at the World's Fair will include representatives of every tribe from the extreme north to Terra del Fuego.

THE HOMESTEAD RIOTS.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 12.—A representative of the Carnegie company quietly took possession of the mill about 10 a. m., so quietly in fact that his presence was not known till after noon. It is believed that the Carnegie company has over a thousand non-union men ready to run into the works as soon as safety is assured by having the Pinkerton guard now supposed to be scattered about in Pittsburgh ready to be ordered to Homestead.

As soon as General Snowden established his headquarters he was waited upon by a committee representing the Amalgamated Association and citizens. The spokesman said for them they welcomed the troops and offered the co-operation of the citizens in preserving order. General Snowden said:

"I thank you for the welcome, but I don't need any of your co-operation. The only way the good citizens can now co-operate with us is to go peacefully about their business." The spokesman said: "The citizens wish to know what time they may give you a public reception." Snowden replied: "I can accept no reception. It would be most improper. I thank you for your courtesy, but a formal welcome is not needed. It would be an amazing thing if the National Guard of Pennsylvania was not welcome to any part of the State." O'Donnell said: "On the part of the Amalgamated association, after suffering an attack from illegal authority we are glad to have the legal authority of the State here."

"I do not recognize your association," Snowden replied. "I recognize no one but the citizens of this city."

"But we wish to submit," O'Donnell said, when the general cut him short by saying: "Then submit to the gentleman behind you," indicating Sheriff McCleary.

"I do submit to him," said O'Donnell, "we have never at any time questioned the sheriff's order." O'Donnell appealed to the sheriff to say whether or not they had obeyed his orders.

"No, you have not," said the sheriff; "you refused to let my deputies enter the works."

After some further desultory conversation and an awkward pause the committee departed.

The committee, greatly crestfallen, returned to headquarters where an acrid discussion of the situation followed. General Snowden's reception was

A BITTER PILL.

Waiting was the campaign decided upon as being the only possible policy which could be pursued. The patrol of strikers outside of the town and the railroad depots will be continued and every effort made to keep the Pinkerton watchmen and non-union men out of town.

"We are not going to commit suicide," said O'Donnell, "and consequently have to come to the inevitable."

TROOPS WILL BE HERE

for about ten days, and it is said they will be maintained at an expense of $22,000 a day. How long will the taxpayers stand that and when the troops go away, as eventually they must, how will the situation be changed?"

O'Donnell and other members of the advisory committee are of the opinion that the works will at once be filled with non-union men, but they decline to discuss how they will meet and solve the problem.

"We will be beaten," O'Donnell remarked confidentially, "and the result will prove it. Now we will take a much needed rest and wait for the next chapter in the story."

No rations were provided for the soldiers and accordingly they are permitted to go into town and get meals and the result is that everybody is a soldier and strikers did a great deal too much drinking.

The congressional investigating committee began an inquiry this evening with Frick on the stand. He was the only witness examined tonight. The examination brought out many new features, notably, the plans by which the Pinkerton men were employed and arrangement for their transportation. The wages paid and the proposed reduction were all brought out. Frick was put under a severe cross-examination. He said the company was not a corporation, but formed under the Limited Partnership Laws of Pennsylvania. He said there were 3800 men employed at Homestead and the wages paid were as follows: Rollers, $250 to $272 per month; heathens, $185 to $199; heathens' helpers, $130; trainmen, $97 to $112; others average $30 per month.

The total amount of wages for May $2,020,295.

After making the statement as to the causes of the strike, Frick was questioned regarding the cost of production. He declined to answer, saying that it was not a fair question. He also said that after the sheriff failed to control the strikers he employed Pinkertons. Replying to a question he said he had not appealed to the governor as experience had shown it to be useless. Cross-examined by Representative Boatner, Mr. Frick stated that the arrangements for Pinkertons was made before negotiations commenced with the Amalgamated association. Frick read letters to the effect that he had instructed the captain of the Pinkertons under no circumstances to resort to the use of firearms except to protect their lives. An adjournment was then taken. Chairman Oates informed Frick that the committee held under advisement his refusal to answer questions relative to the cost of production.

This afternoon 1500 employees of Carnegie's Upper and Lower Union Mills in this city and the plant at Beaver Falls met in Lawrenceville to consider the Homestead affair. Resolutions were adopted appointing a committee from three of the mills to ask General Superintendent Dillon if the Carnegie Steel Company would not agree to enter with the Amalgamated association in regard to the Homestead scale. The committee waited on Superintendent Dillon later and he promised to make known their action to Mr. Frick.

PITTSBURG, July 13.—Lovejoy, the secretary of the Carnegie company, says the threat of the employees that several of the company's mills are to strike unless the company grant a conference with the Homestead men, will have no effect on the company, and that the company will under no circumstances hold a conference, even if every man in every mill operated by the company goes out.

THE INVESTIGATION OF THE CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

The congressional committee continued the Homestead investigation this morning with further examination of Frick, of the Carnegie company.

He detailed the arrangement with the Pinkertons to furnish guards for the Homestead property, and said the arms were consigned to the Union Supply company, who delivered them to Captain Rogers of the Pinkertons. Frick was not sure, but supposed he had something to do with the furnishing of arms, and could not be brought to answer more definitely. He believed the Pinkertons were advised that arms would be needed, but arms were not stipulated in the employment of guards.

Frick said the wages paid at Homestead were higher than at any other place.

Captain Boatner of the committee declared that the scale of wages paid as explained by Frick was the highest wages he ever heard of.

Captain Rodgers was then called, and told of his trip to Homestead, accompanied by the deputy sheriff, who went in an official capacity. He then detailed the story of the fight at Homestead, and said that the strikers fired first.

Sheriff McCleary testified that the Carnegie company notified him the week before the men went out that there would be trouble; and that they were arranging to send 300 men to Homestead and wanted them deputized.

PITTSBURG, July 13.—Captain Rogers was called and told of the trip to Homestead, accompanied by a deputy sheriff, who went in his official capacity. He then detailed the story of the fight at Homestead and said the strikers fired first.

Sheriff McCleary testified that the Carnegie Company had notified him a week before the men went out that there would be trouble; that they were arranging to send 300 men to Homestead and wanted them deputized.

In reply to Boatner, he said he felt sure the matter could have been settled if the conference could have been carried on. The objection to the termination of the scale in January was that past experience shows that when winter comes on and the scale expires, the manufacturer takes advantage of the cold weather to starve the men into submission. Roberts said he was in favor of compulsory arbitration. The witness further stated that during the scale conference, Abbott, the former chairman of Carnegie, said:

"Quotations on steel billets were $2 lower than the market price, and insisted the scale should be arranged on that basis."

An error in the statement of wages paid during May was made in last night's investigation. It amounted to $20.25. It should have been for the 119-inch mill, not for the whole Carnegie property, as indicated in the dispatches.

Had not offered to arbitrate until after the trouble; could not say whether or not the association is willing to arbitrate, personally in favor of law arbitration, but if compulsory, it should be made an exhibition.

O'DONNELL

was the next witness. He said: When the strike was ordered the lodges held a joint meeting and appointed an advisory committee to have the men placed around the fence to keep out irresponsible people. The men were instructed to use only moral suasion; they were not instructed to keep any one out of the mill. The witness repeated the story of the battle and efforts to prevent firing by the crowd on shore. His wages were $144 per month, eight hours, under the old schedule.

Replying to the question as to why the laboring men hate the Pinkertons, he said the chief objection to them was that it was feared they would bring non-union men.

WILLIAM ROBERTS,

ex-president of the Amalgamated Association, said there was a gigantic conspiracy somewhere, helped by legislation. His idea was that after the company based wages on the price of billets and had refused a rise on that article, and he charges this on the Union Pacific railway and the Carnegies, with H. C. Frick at the head. Roberts said Superintendent Potter had given as a reason for the reduction that some of the men were making too much money.

SHERIFF MCLEARY

detailed the attempted efforts to secure a posse. He was notified the night that the Pinkertons went up, and he tried to persuade them not to send them as he feared trouble. The sheriff said he had not authorized Colonel Gray to deputize the Pinkertons. He did not go to Homestead on the day of the trouble because it was useless.

DEPUTY SHERIFF CLUSEY

then took the stand and told a story of how the deputies had been driven out by the strikers.

President Weihe was the first witness on the side of labor. The reductions, he said, proposed in most of the departments, the men object to, because they did not think them necessary. The reduction would average eighteen per cent. as near as he could estimate. The labor cost of a ton of steel at Homestead was $155. In reply to Judge Taylor as to why the men thought they had a right to take possession of the mill, Weihe said there may be some who think so, but they are not in the society.

Judge Taylor expressed astonishment, and said there seemed to be some queer loss of rights of property among the workmen.

PITTSBURG, July 14.—The congressional inquiry into the Homestead trouble was completed today so far as this city is concerned. Today's evidence elicited little that was new. Manager Frick declared that the company asked for a reduction of wages because the reduction of the price of blooms, billets and slates caused the company to lose money on all outputs. The average cost in the country of producing steel billets is $146 per ton, exclusive of interest on the investment. He declined to say what the cost was at Homestead. Frick said the McKinley bill had nothing to do with the proposed reduction in wages. The lower prices of the product was the result of over production. It is stated that the committee will make a report of the character to help the passage of the compulsory arbitration law and anti-Pinkerton measure, both now before Congress.

At the conclusion of today's investigation Chairman Oates announced that so far as the labor branch of the inquiry was concerned it was concluded, but the Pinkerton system would probably be taken up elsewhere.

The committee leave for Washington this evening and will submit the report to Congress early in the week.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 14.—While martial law has not been officially declared in this borough, it has taken place, to all practical purposes. This is the result of illegal arrests by special policemen yesterday.

This morning two additional company troops, with twenty rounds of ball cartridges and fixed bayonets were detailed to patrol the town. They were instructed that in case of arrests by the police for any manifest breach of the peace, drunkenness, or the like, they were not to interfere, but in all other cases they were to take both prisoner and policeman before the provost marshal, and if the arrest is illegal, the policeman is to be punished.

General Suowden puts it euphemistically by saying the military will cooperate with the civil authorities in preventing the illegal arrests, and somewhat more certain preservation of the peace.

It was reported this morning that the town was officially declared under martial law, and the strikers were not at all pleased when they heard it, as they thought it presaged an immediate attempt to turn in non-union men not learned. The locked-out men are not entirely pleased with the action of Carnegie's men in the other mills, threatening to strike unless a conference is granted the Homestead men, as they believe the others can do them more good in case of a long struggle, by remaining at work and helping them financially.

PITTSBURG, July 14.—This evening both Union Iron plants closed down, and notices were posted by the company warning trespassers to keep off the property. About three hundred men are affected by the strike in the two mills. The Beaver Falls plant, which closed for repairs, is to resume operation on Monday next, but the men say they will not return to work unless the firm grants another conference to the Homestead workers. The closing down of the two mills will have a depressing effect upon all kinds of business, in that part of the city. The Keystone Bridge Works, Schefler Works and several other construction mills will doubtless be forced to close, increasing the number of idle men to twice that leaving the Union mills.

HOMESTEAD, July 14.—All day long everybody in Homestead has been expecting the arrival of four hundred non-union workmen. They were scheduled to arrive at 3:30 but up to a late hour the "black sheep" had not materialized.

At a special meeting of the advisory committee tonight it was believed that they would be brought by river, and the patrols were strengthened on the banks of the Monongahela to meet and argue with the incomers. It was argued that any resort to violence would be practically treason. The pickets were to ask the incomers if they were taking the places of striking workmen because they needed food for themselves and families. If an affirmative reply were returned the committee authorized a promise to help them until they could secure work.

The situation is to some extent critical, because the strict discipline of the troops is very liable to clash with the utterly fearless and determined strikers. The latter propose to speak to any one they please, so long as they are peaceable.

LEBANON, Pa., July 14.—Major Whelan of the Third brigade upon being questioned as to the situation at Homestead by Governor Pattison, replied that everything was quiet, but forebodings were very ugly. The strikers, he says, are heavily armed and there will be bloodshed before the final settlement of affairs. The present peace is enforced by the cloud of awe which has hung over the striking workmen since the arrival of troops.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 15.—A great change seems to have taken place in sentiment among the locked-out men since military arrived. They now say that they are perfectly willing for the sheriff to take charge, and declare that even putting non-union men at work would not incite them to violence.

There was a hurried beating to arms throughout the second brigade at 1:30 this morning on the rumor that the workmen were about to attack them from the rear. It proved a false alarm, but the guards were doubled and one regiment kept under arms all night. In the meantime the locked-out men were peacefully sleeping. Early this morning the guard around the mill was doubled. The locked-out men think it presages putting in non-union men today.

PITTSBURG, July 15.—Lovejoy of the Carnegie company, said this morning that the employees at the Union mill, having broken the contract by striking, would only be allowed to return to work when the company got ready to resume the old terms, but on terms to be fixed by the company. He said the company could get enough non-union men to run the works at Homestead in full, inside of a week. But it was only proposed to put in a part of the force in order to allow such of the old men as wanted, to return. At the proper time he knew that at least two thirds of the men would come back. He admitted that the company had men with photographic instruments so placed that they were able to take pictures of many of the men at the time of the fight with the Pinkertons, and that these portraits would be used when the prosecution of the rioters commenced.

SCRANTON, Pa., July 15.—General Master Workman Powderly has addressed letters to President Harrison and Governor Pattison calling attention to the fact that the laws of the United States and Pennsylvania were violated by the invasion of the Pinkertons on July 6 at Homestead. He calls attention to the fact that the men marched under the United States flag and says whoever usurped the functions of commander-in-chief of the army in ordering these men to invade Pennsylvania, is guilty of treason and should be punished accordingly. He therefore asks investigation. These responsible persons, he says, are Frick and Robert Pinkerton. Another point is that as the armed men came altogether from an outside State and as each could not hold offices, they could not be sworn in as deputies, and that the Homestead men were right in resisting them.

HOMESTEAD, July 15.—The laborers in the mines, not members of the Amalgamated Association, and made idle by the lock-out, are mostly Hungarians, and absolutely destitute, and the strikers are now holding a secret meeting to consider the question of providing for their maintenance. Some of the mechanics are preparing to leave the town, being promised jobs elsewhere.

The fire was started in one of the furnaces this morning. Nobody knows what it means, but it has given rise to a fresh rumor that non-union men are coming.

The servants girls at the hotel refuse to walk on the militia men.

PITTSBURG, July 15.—The situation at the upper and lower Carnegie mills was quiet and peaceful today, the men who left taking matters coolly. The minority, who were not in favor of independent moves yesterday, are fast growing in number and probably as the men calmly consider the measure of the move they have taken the dissatisfaction will be with themselves. There will be no attempt to start the mills until some settlement shall be made at Homestead and no trouble is expected until then. One hundred men were sworn in as watchmen today. The bridge works through lack of material will be closed in a few days. It is also reported that the Lucy Blast furnace will be shut down. There is no sympathy with the strikers in Braddock; although two thousand men are employed in the Edgar Thompson steel works owned by Carnegie, Phipps & Co. not one of them will quit the works, neither will there be sympathy with the strike at Duquesne works.

Frick of the Carnegie Company, having received notice from the employees in Beaver Falls mills that they will refuse to work unless the company will confer with the Homestead men, telegraphed to the superintendent of the Beaver Falls mills to inform the men that unless they go to work under the agreement on Monday next the company will cancel the agreement, and when work is resumed it will be with non-union men; that under no circumstances will the company confer with the Homestead men as members of the Amalgamated Association.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., July 16.—Today was the quietest that Homestead has known since the declaration of hostilities between the company and the men. It is not doubted that new men will be introduced into the works, but the number is small and the strikers are confident many cannot without great difficulty be brought in. If the men come they will undoubtedly have the liveliest time they ever had. Although smoke is rising from two of the smokestacks in the mill a visit to the yard showed about seventy non-union men busy—not fifty as originally stated. Burgess McLuckie tells a curious story about the manner in which the first armor plates were made.

"When the workmen came to the mill a lot of experts both from the government and the Carnegie Company turned in them to show us how nicklesteel should be made. The result was that fully $100,000 worth of material was wasted. We tried and tried under expert direction to produce nickle steel armor plate but could not do so. At last some boys got together and looked over the situation, and finally asked the Carnegie company to withdraw the experts and let the men see what they could do by themselves. It was done as we asked. Every one of the office force was sent away from the furnaces and Basic Lodge of the Amalgamated Association turned out the first completed nickle steel armor plates that would stand inspection. The result was that the Carnegie company got the reputation which really belongs to Basic Lodge. We made those plates under tremendous difficulties, and after the government officials and mill owners were in despair."

INVITED TO GO TO WORK.

Letters were put in the office today to every old employee of the mills with about forty exceptions reading as follows:

"Dear Sir:—Repairs will be resumed Monday morning, July 16th. We invite you to return to your old position; work to commence at the usual time.

Respectfully, J. W. POTTER, Gen. Supt.

Besides the letters posters were put up all over town stating that individual applications for employment will be received by the general superintendent until 5 p. m. July 21st. The poster says the desire of the company is to retain in service all old employees whose past record is satisfactory and who did not participate in the efforts made to interfere with the company's right to manage its own business. Old employees who do not apply by the time mentioned the company will consider have no desire to re-employ again and their position will be given to others. Absolutely no excitement followed the putting up of the notices, and members of the advisory committee said that neither they nor the letters would have any effect on the strikers. The men will go back readily as soon as it shall be settled as to the wages to be paid, and until then they will not go back. No violence is threatened. A prominent striker said:

"The Carnegie mills might restore all the men in the world outside of our ranks and they could not make nickle steel armor plate that the United States Inspector would pass. Our people know how to make it and nobody else does."

Shannon, who made the above statement, is one of the most conservative of the strike leaders. He said further that the men had sufficient funds to continue for five years.

IMPORTING LABORERS FROM EUROPE.

PITTSBURG, July 16.—This evening President Weihe of the Amalgamated Association, received word that the steamer "Switzerland," of the Red Star line, was on its way to this country with a shipload of European ironworkers for Homestead. The news created great excitement in labor circles, and President Weihe immediately wired his agents in Jersey City and New York to look out for the steamer. The replies state that the "Switzerland" had not arrived yet, but was overdue and would probably go to Philadelphia. The Amalgamated people in Philadelphia were notified to keep a lookout for the ship, and as soon as it reaches there efforts will be made to prevent the men landing under the contract labor and pauper laws.

PITTSBURG, July 17.—Affairs in the neighborhood of the upper and lower Union mills are assuming a serious phase. The skilled mechanics are endeavoring to induce the workmen to quit, and in numerous cases the latter have declared that they would. A secret conference of the Amalgamated workmen and laborers was held this afternoon in Union Hall. It is impossible to learn the result. It is safe to say that some of the strikers will accept the company's invitation to return to work. The men hold that they will remain firm to the last and the mills will never be operated by non-union men. The men are confident of winning and claim there are not enough skilled men in the country in the various plants now idle. There is an unconfirmed rumor to the effect that an order to railroad trainmen to join the fight has been issued and a meeting will be called to decide whether they would handle Carnegie's output if non-union men are employed.

PITTSBURG, July 18.—Dave Lester, a military, while drunk this morning, ran a bayonet into Frank C. Calhoun, inflicting a wound which will prove fatal.

A dozen of the best educated, and most conservative of the locked-out men at Homestead left for the East this morning with great secrecy. It is believed they have gone to labor with a lot of Belgians said to be on the way to take the places of the Amalgamated association men.

The Amalgamated Lodge of Workmen at Carnegie's Union mills met this morning, and resolved to stand firm in the strike, and tendered the Homestead men both financial and physical assistance.

PITTSBURG, July 18.—The Beaver Falls employees of Carnegie have kept their threat, and did not go to work this morning. Consequently the mill did not resume. Everything is quiet about the mill.

PITTSBURG, July 18.—This afternoon information was lodged before an alderman, charging murder against Hugh O. Donnell, the principal leader at Homestead; John McLuckie, Burgess of Homestead; Silas Critchlow, Anthony Flaherty, Samuel Birke, James Flannagan and Hugh Ross, all labor leaders in the recent Homestead troubles. They are specifically charged with the murder of T. J. Conners and Felix Wayne, Pinkertons, killed in the fight. All the accused will probably be arrested this afternoon except O. Donnell, who is out of the city.

PITTSBURG, July 18.—An attorney for the strikers said tonight that no information would be made against Frick, Lovejoy and Potter now, and it was possible that no retaliatory measures would be taken by the strikers. If it was decided to take such action the charge would probably be conspiracy. From a source close to Carnegie it was learned that the firm had the names of 215 strikers against whom they believe they have enough evidence to convict them as accessories to the murder of the Pinkerton men. It is their intention to enter informations every day until the entire 215 have been accepted.

The sheriff's officers called this afternoon to find those for whom warrants were issued, but this evening all of the accused except O'Donnell, who is out of the State, and McLuckie who has already given himself up at Pittsburg, assembled at the railway station in Homestead, intending to be unaccompanied by officers, and to voluntarily proceed to Pittsburg to face the charges against them. O'Donnell's wife says the report that he left town to avoid arrest is untrue and that he will be back in a few days. Gossip about this latest move on the part of the company was very free this morning. A rumor is current tonight that counter informations will be laid against Messrs. Frick and Lovejoy and Manager Potter. The general impression is that this is only the beginning of a great legal struggle here.

Speaking about the failure to resume today, General Superintendent Dillon of the upper and lower Union mills said:

"We did not start this morning because we were not ready to resume. When we are ready we will start. None of the men came back today, but for all that we do not anticipate any trouble in resuming."

PITTSBURG, July 19.—It was expected that Burgess McLuckie of Homestead would have a hearing this morning on his application for bail, but his lawyer failed to give the requisite notice, so he was remanded to jail until this morning.

The officials of the Carnegie company claim to have no fears of arrest on complaint of the men. They say the men are the aggressors and know that that they could not sustain a prosecution. Secretary Lovejoy admitted today that the company has the names of many men who took part in the attack on the Pinkertons, and will continue to cause their arrest from day to day. He declares there is no truth whatever in the reports that the company are about getting men from abroad. He asserts that there is no need for such a course, because the company can get all men it wants in this country. In fact, it already has applications from enough who have applied in person, not counting those who have applied by letter. He says the company is going slow to give the old men a chance, but after the 21st inst., the places will be filled with non-union men, of whom he avers the company will have all it needs. He further says non-union men have been going into the mill every day and night for some time, and this will be continued. It is not thought that any opposition will be made to McLuckie's release. When this is done it is believed the other men will surrender and give bail.

CEUR D'ALENE RIOTS.

WALLACE, Idaho, July 12.—The sheriff last night made efforts to collect a posse and go to Wardner on a special train. He summoned all the citizens known to be in active sympathy with the mine owners to report at 10 o'clock, but when the sheriff started only one citizen reported. Armed bodies of miners went from Wallace last evening and about 9 o'clock a large crowd went to the Union Pacific yards below town, took a flat car, put it on the main track and started for Wardner. Being all down grade there was no trouble experienced. The mine of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan company, located on the Union Pacific track five miles from Wardner, was taken possession of and word was sent up to the mine that unless the scabs would surrender before 9 o'clock this morning the mill would be blown up. Large bodies of armed miners went up to Wardner proper and toward the mines to await developments, and before 9 o'clock this morning all of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan forces walked out of the mine and surrendered. The Sierra Nevada forces also surrendered. Not a shot was fired. What will be done with the non-union men is not known. The Frisco and Gem companies paid off their men this morning.

TROOPS COMING.

BOISE, Ida., July 12.—Company A, Idaho National Guards, left today for Coeur d'Alene. Governor Wiley received a dispatch from General Schofield placing the troops at Fort Sherman and Missoula under his orders. He directed them to meet the militia at Wardner and also ask for additional troops. It is believed that a regiment will be needed.

WARDNER, Ida., July 13.—Outwardly all is quiet in the Coeur d'Alene district, but it is quiet of desperation. The strikers yesterday had a day of uninterrupted victory with the result of complete possession of the mines and the mills of Bunker Hill and Sullivan and Sierra Nevada. The non-union men have been driven out of the country and the strikers are flushed with victory and talking confidently of meeting the militia and the regular troops and fighting them with rifles and dynamite.

The Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill are now loaded with dynamite and could be destroyed on a moment's notice. The same state of affairs exists at Sierra Nevada. It is reported that dynamite has been sent down the railroad track to blow up the bridges to prevent the troops from crossing into the country. Armed men have left the town, it is supposed to intercept the cavalry from Fort Sherman.

A RAILROAD BRIDGE BLOWN UP.
SPOKANE, Wash., July 13.—The strikers blew up the railroad bridge at Mulian this morning to prevent the troops from Missoula, to effect an entrance. All the Coeur d'Alene mines are filled with explosives, preparatory to a general destruction. The strikers will have trouble to escape as the State and federal troops hold practically all the passes.

THE MINERS LEAVE WARDNER.
PORTLAND, July 13.—The following dispatch was received in this city at 10.30 tonight:

WALLACE, July 13.—4 p.m.—All trouble is over at Wardner. The miners have left and are on their way to Wallace. Two hundred men have just arrived from Wardner. Those interviewed say the trouble is over and all miners not belonging at Wardner will be in Wallace before 6 o'clock. No bridges are burned between here and Wardner. Trains are moving and mail trains from Spokane will arrive in an hour. This shows that communication has been established between Wallace and western points. The miners are completely worn out and many have scarcely had any sleep since Saturday night. One wounded man was brought up from the mission on a train. He was shot early this morning, and was one of the non-union men.

MINERS OWNERS AS HOSTAGES.

PORTLAND, Or., July 13.—It is now reported that the union men in the Coeur d'Alene district have taken Van H. DeLashmott of Portland, William Sweeney and other mine owners and will hold them as hostages until the trouble is settled. It is almost impossible to procure information from the mining district. The colored troops sent from Mulian have been ordered to Missoula. All is quiet at Wallace and no immediate trouble is anticipated.

TWELVE BODIES PICKED UP.

BOISE CITY, Ida., June 13.—Judge Helburn said that twelve bodies of miners out yesterday were picked up in the Fourth of July canyon. Particulars indicate that non-union men have received very rough treatment. Some were rescued hiding in the brush, and others swimming the river. All are reported as being robbed.

Miners of the union escorted 200 more men out of the town this afternoon.

NON-UNION MEN KILLED AND ROBBED.

SPOKANE FALLS, July 13.—E. S. Kenney, the bookkeeper for the Gem mine, near Wallace, arrived in Spokane today. He was present at Old Mission, when the mob charged the non-union refugees, and saw the whole affair from the window of the hotel. Kinney had been ordered out of the country by the strikers, and was helping some of his former employees to reach Spokane. In all, there were 132 men from the different mines. They had been entirely unarmed and were waiting for the boat which was late. Just at dusk last evening a squad of eighty armed men came charging down the railroad track, yelling and firing their rifles. The refugees scattered in every direction and ran for the river, mountains and gulch. Their pursuers followed them up, shooting and robbing them. Most of the fugitives were driven down the Fourth of July canyon, but a number made for the bush along the river bank and swam the river. When Kinney left it was known that two of the non-union men had been slain. George Robinson, who had been working in the Frisco mine and a Swede, name unknown, started in a boat down the river to the darkness and were hailed again by fugitives who had escaped the fury of the mob, and concealed themselves in the bushes. "An all we picked up eight or ten of these miserable wretches," said Kinney.

WALLA WALLA, July 14.—A special train consisting of seven cars, on the Union Pacific, passed through the city last night bearing companies B, C, D, E and F of the Fourteenth Infantry, from Vancouver, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Therker, comprising 250 men and bound for the Cour d'Alene mines. Orders have been received at Fort Walla Walla from the department headquarters to have the troops in readiness to move to Cour d'Alene on a moment's notice. Troops D and H, commanded by Captains Hayfield and Wilfer, are ready and will be the first ones to leave for the scene of trouble.

THE CRISIS PASSED.

Sheriff Cunningham arrived here last night from Wardner. He was accompanied by the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mine force to Cataldo on the Union Pacific, where he met Colonel Carlin and troops and General Curtis. Then Curtis read the President's proclamation, declaring Shoshone county under martial law. The sheriff sent the following to General Carlin: Cataldo, Ida. The miners have disbanded and gone to their respective homes. There is no trouble in Wallace or Wardner. The crisis has passed and peace once more reigns in Cour d'Alene, but the past twenty-four hours have been the most trying Cour d'Alene has ever experienced. Had the colored troops arrived at Wallace on Friday night there would have been a battle in the darkness among the clouds in the valley, as the mountains about Wallace are full of armed miners thoroughly concealed.

They did not want to fire on the troops unless in case of the utmost extremity, to prevent the troops from going to Wardner. The train with colored troops was delayed three hours. On reaching Mullan on Wednesday night it was found necessary to lay over till daybreak, probably because two bridges were burned this side of Mullan. When this became known, the miners withdrew from the hills and proceeded to Wardner. The colored troops had started for Wallace, but were suddenly recalled and returned to Missoula. Had these troops passed Wallace, it is hard to tell what would have happened. The Gem mill was magzined and ready for the match and the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill contained nearly a half a ton of powder with a fuse attached. Both mills were under strict guard and only as a last resort, the miners claim, would the match have been applied. Fortunately for all, the trouble did not need such extreme measures.

The miners kept close watch of the Bunker Hill and Sullivan mill, but when the mill was turned over to the company uninsured. The "scabs," as soon as they could be got to the depot, and all miners not belonging in Wardner, returned to Wallace and thence home.

THE "SCABS" SURRENDERED

The body of A. T. McDonald has been found in the debris of the Frisco mine. Abbott, the wounded man, was brought up from Mission and it is reported that twelve bodies have been found at the mouth of Fourth of July Canyon. The "scabs" from the Frisco and Gem mines left here by lake route on Tuesday morning with a guard. The boat not arriving, the guard at six p. m. ordered the "scabs" to walk through the Fourth of July canyon. It is stated the guard followed to the mouth of the canyon and when the "scabs" refused to walk any further, the guard shot them down. The report, however, lacks verification. Men have gone to Mission to verify the report and recover the bodies.

MINNEAPOLIS, July 14.—A special from Spokane says: General Carlin and infantry from Fort Sherman reached Wardner last night, and took possession of the town, and placed Spokane county under martial law. A score of refugees from the Mission slaughter strangled into town today.

They present a pitiable appearance with torn clothes and bruised bodies. They confirm the story of the slaughter. A report is in circulation that three thousand armed union men are on the way here from Montana and if the strikers are arrested blood is sure to flow.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 14.—Telegrams received by Major General Schofield this afternoon show that the labor troubles in the Cour d'Alene mining district are at an end for the present. The rioters have dispersed and the State authorities aided by Federal troops are in full possession of the field. General Schofield said to-night that people who are complaining because soldiers had not arrested the rioters had a very improper conception of the position of the troops in the matter. He explained that they were ordered there merely to support the civil authorities in the restoration of order and are acting altogether under the governor of the State. They had no independent functions whatever, and absolutely nothing to do with any disorders that may have occurred before their arrival. The duty of the civil authorities is to enforce the law, and all the troops could do was to protect them in so doing.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—J. J. Hammond, president of the Bunker Hill & Sullivan Mining Company, who is now in this city, said today that he had received telegrams stating that everything is quiet in the Cour d'Alene district. Hammond said the directors of the company had not yet decided what course to take regarding the future working of the mines. The company had gone to great expense in erecting a mill and making other improvements, and the shutdown was much to their disadvantage.

G. R. Smith, who was sent by the executive committee of the Wallace Miners' union to prevent the importation into that section of non-union men, said that while the origin of the present trouble could have been directly traced to the demand for an increase of wages, which was unsuccessful, last year, the direct cause of the trouble was the revolt by the men against the hospital tax of $1 per month levied by the company, and which the miners claimed was not productive of assistance to them at the time whenever needed. The union built a hospital at Wallace and adopted a rule that $1 per month instead of being paid to the companies should be paid to the hospital. The Bunker Hill and Sullivan company refused to recognize the justice of this rule and a strike resulted in favor of the miners. Smith claims the reduction of wages then followed.

THE TROOPS IN POSSESSION.

SPokane, Wash., July 14.—A special to the Review just received says that the Cour d'Alene country is now in control of the Federal authorities. Federal troops are in camp at nearly every important point. There was a general movement of troops this morning from Cataldo under the command of General Carlin. At noon today several companies from Vancouver and Fort Sherman arrived here and immediately went into camp. Inspector-General Curtis is in command, with Captain Judd as second officer. The town is now under martial law and a proclamation to the effect has been posted in all conspicuous places. Strikers have been orderly and quiet since the arrival of the troops.

Another Review special says: Wallace was in control of an armed rabid mob all night. The victory of the union at Wardner yesterday inflated the strikers with unusual excitement. Upon the arrival of the union men from Wardner yesterday many proceeded to get drunk. During the night the strikers held high carnival and ran things about as they pleased. This morning a number of scabs came down from the Granite mine to be paid off and leave the Cour d'Alene. They went into the Wallace Bank to get their checks cashed, but a number of strikers marched boldly into the bank, hustled them out and ordered them to leave town. They hurried to the depot and got on a train. The strikers then marched back to the bank and told the officials that if all the scabs were not out of town in an hour the bank would be blown up with dynamite. The excitement caused was intense, and the miners became more arrogant. Committees waited upon several people and told them to leave town. Among those called upon were the clerk of the Pacific Hotel, the manager of Holly, Mason, Marks & Co. and other prominent people. Mayor Dunn dispatched a message to Colonel Carlin and troops were hurried into the town before all semblance of reason had fled. The message was no sooner wired than one of the strikers came to the telegraph office and drawing a rifle on the operator ordered him to send no more messages to Wardner. The troops are now here and the people are thankful once more for the safeguards of society, which are never fully appreciated until they are gone.

WARDNER, Idaho, July 15.—The military began to arrest the leaders of the Miners' union this afternoon. This is now going on in all the camps. Among those arrested is Tom O'Brien, president of the Miners' Central union. The taking of the coroner's testimony in relation to the bloody battle begins tomorrow.

Spokane, July 15.—The military has arrested Jack Wallace of Cataldo. He is suspected of being the ringleader in the Mission massacre. The troubled district is to be closed to travel, nobody being permitted to go through the country without a military passport. The strikers are still ordering spotted individuals out of the country, notwithstanding the military. The correspondents are especially objectionable. Ad-voices just received state that the non-union men taken out to Tekoa for safety have been taken back to Wardner and placed at work. They were taken in under the protection of the regular troops. No disturbance was raised.

Fugitives from Missoula continue to straggle into Spokane. The first stories of the loss of life there are not yet verified. Troops are searching the canyon. It is not likely the truth will ever be known about this shocking affair. The country is wild and murderers could easily conceal the bodies of the victims and throw them in the river.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—General Schofield received a telegram today from Colonel P. Carlin of the Fourth Infantry, dated Wardner, yesterday, commanding the troops in Northern Idaho, saying:

"The arrests by order of the governor of Idaho commenced today and will continue until the governor stops it. No property has been destroyed here or elsewhere in consequence of my delay at Cataldo. It was most urgently begged by the manager of the principal mine owner, N. M. Clement, to delay until his surrendered miners should get out of the place. He believes his men would have been murdered and his mine and mill destroyed had I not remained. A ton and a half of dynamite was placed in the mill by the rioters to blow up and burn it. When the non-union men left the place on the cars the giant powder was removed from the mill, and all property placed in his possession. Everything is progressing favorably."

General Schofield telegraphed to General Ruger, commander of the Department of the Columbia, as follows:

"I have no doubt the circumstances and results fully justify the discretion Colonel Carlin exercised. He evidently understood that the duty of the troops is simply to support the civil authorities in the exercise of the laws."

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

The following general order was issued from the headquarters of the army:

WASHINGTON, D. C. July 16, 1892.—The following has been received from the War Department and is published for the information and guidance of all concerned:

WAR DEPARTMENT,

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16, 1892.

It is gratifying to know that any collision between the troops and the rioters have been avoided. As a measure of precaution and in the hope that it may tend to allay excitement you will cause to be published the following proclamation of the President:

S. B. Elkins, Secretary of War, by the President of the United States of America a proclamation:

To whom it may concern:—

Whereas, The governor of the State of Idaho has represented to me that within that State there exists an insurrection and a condition of domestic infelicity and resistance to the laws, to meet and overcome which the resources at his command are unequal, and

Whereas, He has further represented that the Legislature of said State is not now in session and cannot be promptly convened, and

Whereas, By reason of said conditions, said governor, as chief executive of the State, has called on me as chief executive of the government of the United States for assistance in repulsing said violence and restoring and maintaining peace. Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, by virtue of section 4, article 4, of the Constitution of the United States, and a law of Congress enacted in pursuance thereof do hereby command all persons engaged in said insurrection and in resistance to the laws to immediately disperse and return peacefully to their separate abodes.

In witness whereof I have set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 16th day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and of the Independence of the United States, the one hundredth and sixteenth.

[Seal] BENJAMIN HARRISON.

By the President.

JOHN W. FOSTER, Secretary of State.

By command of Major-General R. C. Schofield, J. R. Williams, Adjutant-General.

SEVERAL HUNDRED PRISONERS TAKEN.

SPokane, Wash., June 17.—A Sunday quiet hung over the 'Cour d'Alene today. The arrest of miners continued and several hundred are now huddled in school houses, empty warehouses and tobacco stockades. They are closely guarded and cannot hope to escape. The troops have not captured any of the rifles or ammunition of the strikers, which are hidden in the surrounding hills. A number of leading spirits of the insurrection are still at large. Among these are Breen and Dallas, who came here from Butte to direct the campaign. It is reported that the Montana unions are indignant at the way the fight has been carried on, claiming that Breen and Dallas have held back their cause for years. Other leaders still at large are Pettibone, Clover, Tobin and Sweeney. H. B. Scott, a special correspondent of the Review who came in tonight from the front, says he was informed by the officers at Cataldo that it was a positive fact that five bodies and a number of wounded men were picked up in Fourth of July canyon. Scott is the man who was ordered out of Wallace because his paper denounced the outrages.

WARDNER, Ida., July 18.—Nothing especially new developed in the 'Cour d'Alene district today. Bodies of troops are being moved from point to point to keep order, and but few arrests were made today. The soldiers have been kept in almost constant motion and they find the duty very arduous. Work was resumed at the Bunker Hill mine this morning. Colonel Carlin, commanding the United States troops, received a report today from Captain Thompson regarding the search made in Fourth of July canyon. It says no dead or wounded men were found there.

JUDGE COLLINS of the Chicago bar one day recently granted seven divorces, taking evidence in fifty two minutes.

"LIBERAL" JUGGLERLY.

"What a juggling fiend the old News is."

THAT is the argument offered by the "Liberal" organ in answer to the irrefutable conclusion that if, as the Tribune charged, there were hosts of men registered for the city election of 1890 "who had no more right to vote than so many Fiji Islanders," the wrong was committed by "Liberal" registrars because there were no others engaged in the work. The position is so clear that nothing is left for the organ but to grind out a little more abuse and call a few more names.

In reply to our statement that we knew of a great many legal voters who were refused registration, it says, "It does not add to a falsehood to repeat it ever and over." Very true, and the "Liberal" organ should profit by its own homily. But that is not a falsehood. It is a truth of which there are the most positive proofs. And they do not consist of affidavits procured by "Mr. Bonfield" either. It would not matter who procured them. But the parties who made them never saw Capt. Bonfield, to whom the organ refers—and he never saw them. Nor did he have anything to do with their affidavits, directly or indirectly. They were made by old residents of this city who were robbed of their rights by "Liberal" registrars, whose entire illegal and shameful and dirty work was endorsed by the Tribune.

That paper asks:

"If the News editor took a man to a registrar and had him swear he had been here the necessary time and was a lawful resident, what could the registrar do but register him?"

The News editor never took a man to a registrar. But he did advise men who had lived in this city from one year to twenty years and who had failed to get their names on the lists through "Liberal" jugglery, to go to the registrars and demand registration. "What could the registrar do?" Why, what he did do. Sneer at the voter and refuse to register him. It was done in scores and scores of instances. The residences of People's party voters were spotted and skipped, or the registrar called when he knew the occupant was absent, and then, when the skipped citizen called on the registrar, he refused to register him anywhere but at his residence, and would not call again.

At the same time, "Liberal" voters were registered in stores, in saloons, on the streets and elsewhere, and some had their names put on the lists without their knowledge, and others were registered who had not been in the city ninety days, while still others were registered who had never lived in the city at all. The proofs of all this are at hand and are indisputable.

It says further:

"As for changing badges, that was never tried in this city until last spring."

Not so. It was tried in a number of instances in 1890. We know where to put our hand on a carpet bag people that did this duty for several People's party voters at that election, who were old residents, and who had been refused registration when wearing the anchor badge, but got their names on the list when the carpet bag button appeared.

All the stuff that the Tribune threw at the time, to besmirch the People's Party managers, and cloud the eyes of decent "Liberals" who knew nothing of the jugglery by which the election was carried, will not cover up the facts and proofs, though the Tribune picks it up again and again and clumsily tries to use it for the purpose. We know that the chiefs of the People's Party used their best endeavors to prevent any but legal voters from registering and voting in February 1880. We know that hundreds of "Liberals" names were put upon the registration lists illegally; we know it was done by "Liberals" registrars who also excluded the names of many legal People's Party voters. And the proofs are at hand, the registration lists now existing furnishing corroborative evidence. They have been left unpurged of many of the names placed improperly upon them, so that other jugglery might be employed for similar purposes. And the whole dirty business was "Liberals" work, backed by the "Liberals" organ.

THE "RULE OF LIBERAL CORRUPTION."

THE "Liberals" organ took exception to our remarks in relation to the expressed intention of Mayor Baskin to make the balance of his administration clean. We commended the resolution of his honor, and expressed the hope that he would be successful, the people of this city having mourned during two and a half years of "Liberals" corruption already elapsed. We promised that, in the event of Mr. Baskin's efforts succeeding, this journal would record the fact and give credit where it would be due. We are informed, by the organ of that party, in effect, that the "Liberals" administration has not been corrupt. We will furnish some evidence from "Liberals" sources which ought to close up our cotemporary on the subject.

On the 29th of December, 1880, a mass meeting called by "Liberals," to protest against the misrule of their own city officials, was held in the Methodist church in this city. The large building was packed on the occasion, almost the entire audience being "Liberals," many of them prominent members of that party. We will let them answer the denials of the organ of the Tuscarora Democrats.

Here is an extract from the report of a speech made by Mr. Frank B. Stephens:

"Mr. Stephens used some very plain language condemnatory of the persecution of fallen women by dragging them before police courts and imposing heavy fines, merely to enrich the treasury of the city, and which only sunk them to lower depths of degradation to earn the money. One reason why they were dragged before the courts and punished for infractions of the laws while gamblers and lawless sellers were allowed to pursue a lawless course with impunity was because they had no votes. Gamblers and rum-sellers had votes; hence their immunity from prosecution."

Here is another of the same:

"George F. Wanless stated that the city authorities had failed to fulfill the promise of the 'Liberals' party—that it would give a better and purer government than the one which had preceded it. A few months ago, when he came from Denver, Sundays were so quiet and orderly that a stranger would not have supposed that there were any saloons in the city. Since then a great change has come. Saloons were multiplied all over the city. They were running on Sundays as on other days in defiance of law, and ladies and children could not walk the streets without their ears being shocked with obscene and profane language. The result of non-enforcement of the laws was the docking here of criminals from other quarters, seeking a field where they could commit crimes with impunity. Hence this city is flooded with loose and dangerous characters. We demand an enforcement of the laws. It is a slander upon the respectable citizens that brothels and saloons are so numerous. Their existence is opposed to the moral sense of the people. It is folly to say that the city government is helpless to cure these evils or at least hold them in check. Apply the laws that have been passed by the legislature and the city ordinance. If this shall be done the reformation demanded will be accomplished. Let the Mayor and Marshal go ahead with the work of reformation. If not, a few petty officers will not stand in the way of the enforcement of the laws made for the preservation and protection of society."

An extract from the speech of Mr. F. E. Gregg:

"Has any one a compliment to pay to the City Council? You perhaps have heard the story of the man who died, and whose character was such that it was thought that no one could possibly say a good word for him. Finally a charitable man, while gazing at the face of the corpse, remarked: 'Well, he had a good set of teeth.' This gathering is in the nature of a terrible rebuke to them, and is a strong weapon in the hands of the political opponents of the 'Liberals' party. It is time the city authorities mended their ways. Crimes are being condoned, highway robberies are being committed daily or nightly, licenses to sell whisky are granted without limit. The non-enforcement of the laws has brought many victims to our city. The councilmen must begin to understand that they are not in office as individuals, or as representing individuals or classes. The whole trouble lies in the fact that every member of that body has been approached by friends and interested persons who have said: 'Now you must do this, so that we must have so and so.' This has brought the city to the situation against which we most emphatically protest."

Dr. Cliff speaks, and pays a compliment to the People's party municipal government:

"Dr. Cliff said that never before had there existed in this city the necessity for a meeting of this character. He had a genuine respect for the mayor of the city and for certain other members of the city council. He had voted, and cast his vote for every member of the present city council, because the thought that in doing so he was working for the best interests of the whole people. But when he found that ordinances, which every good man believed were just and right, were ignored, he was before the audience to most earnestly aid vigorous action against such a state of affairs. Every lover of morals and good order should use all the influence which he had, and put himself squarely on the question under consideration. The situation not only involved the reputation of the Liberals in this city, but in the nation abroad."

This budget of proof that the people have mourned under a rule of "Liberals" corruption" is perhaps sufficient for one dose. We have plenty more salted away, ready to be brought out when needed. The evidence comes from the "Liberals" side, and ought not to be disputed by the organ of that party.

THE PEOPLE'S PARTY.

THE People's party is at present a subject of much speculation among politicians. Its convention at Omaha on the 4th inst., though a little disorderly in some particulars, was on the whole a well conducted affair. Its nominees, Weaver and Field, are well known public men. The former was a leading spirit of the Greenback movement, a dozen years ago. He was the candidate of that party for President in 1880, and polled over 300,000 votes. The latter is an ex-Confederate officer and has been identified with reform agitations for some time.

It is true the elements composing this new party are heterogeneous, but no more so than those which initiated the Republican party in 1856. One feature of the Omaha convention that cannot escape notice was its earnestness, and another equally significant was the disposition to ignore old parties and sectional issues. It was also observable from the speeches of the delegates that a disposition towards harmony and practical work prevailed, though the platform contains one or two planks wholly impracticable.

The history of this party, brief as it is, contains an instructive lesson. It represents discontent or dissatisfaction with existing conditions. Its strength rests on agricultural industry, and that is why the political philosopher should take cognizance of it. During the past fifteen or twenty years movements of various kinds have arisen among the farming classes. Some were political, some social benevolent and industrial, while some others had for their object education, co-operation and enlightenment. The names of many of these will be remembered by the average reader. There were the National Grange of Patrons of Industry, the Farmers Mutual Benefit Association, the Patrons of Industry, the National Colored Farmers' Alliance and Co-operative Union, the National Farmers' Alliance, and several others.

The birth of the People's party, though representing all these, cannot be traced directly to any of them, but to a little organization instituted in 1878, in Lampasas County, Texas. This at first was simply an organized effort to protect property and prevent cattle-stealing; it extended gradually until in 1886 it developed into a State alliance. Then it promulgated a sort of platform providing for education in economics from a non-partisan view. Similar movements were going on in adjoining States.

The Texas State Alliance held in Waco in 1887 had delegates from Arkansas and Louisiana. A new name was adopted entitled the Farmers' Alliance and Co-operative Union. The next convention was held at Meridian, Miss., in 1888. Other States were represented and some labor unions; then it became the Farmers' and Laborers' Union of America. The next meeting was held in St. Louis in 1889. The North and Northwest were represented and it became the National Farmer's Alliance and Industrial Union. A platform of a political character was here adopted and the movement became national. During 1890 it threatened to revolutionize American politics. In Kansas it elected five Congressional representatives, secured the State Legislature, ousted Ingalls from the United States Senate and sent Peffer to take his place. In Nebraska it carried two Congressional districts, secured majorities in both branches of the Legislature, and nearly carried the State for governor.

In Minnesota and South Dakota considerable strength was manifested. South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia and Texas became practically under the control of the Alliance.

At its convention of 1891 labor and trade organizations were represented, and the new movement was dubbed the People's party so as to make it comprehensive enough to embrace all classes.

AN ABSURD CITY ORDINANCE.

THE City Council will have to consider this evening the ordinance in relation to receptacles for ashes. We hope it will be thoroughly overhauled before it is acted upon. In the first place it needs changing in principle; in the next place it needs correcting in dictation.

As it stands, it requires every tenant or occupant of a building in this city to provide a receptacle for ashes, which must be "a close and secure metallic or earthen vessel or brick or stone room." This will entail great and unnecessary expense, if it means what it says. Why will not a good ash-pit answer the purpose, just as well as a metallic or "metallic" vessel, as the framer spells it all through the ordinance? If it is meant to make a pit of certain depth and dimensions, dug in the ground, meet the law's requirements, why not say so? If not, what reason is there for requiring some kind of a "vessel" when an ash-pit would be just as safe, if not safer, far more convenient and vastly less costly?

The ordinance says:

"Sec. 1. That it shall be the duty of the owner or occupant of every building within the fire limits of said city, and of the agent having the same in charge, to provide a close and secure metallic or earthen vessel or brick or stone room or bin as a receptacle for ashes; and it shall be the duty of such owner or agent or servant and of every tenant or occupant of any building within the fire limits of Salt Lake City to remove from each receptacle when the same is filled, and no ashes except manufacturers where ashes are used, shall be kept or deposited in any part of the city or anything other than such metallic or other earthen vessel, brick or stone room or bin, nor shall any person deposit any ashes upon the street."

Who is the owner of "every building within the fire limits?" Who is the occupant of them all? Must the owner or occupant and the agent in charge, each provide a "metallic" or other vessel? If so: why will it need two for "every building within the fire limits?" And is it necessary for every tenant or occupant, also the owner and agent, to get into the "metallic" or other vessel when the ashes are put in? It requires them to "remove from such receptacle when the same is filled." How can they get out if they do not get in?" Then, who are the manufacturers, that are classed as "ashes?"

Who are the "manufacturers where ashes are used?"

The ordinance makes it the duty of the chief or assistant chief engineer of the fire department, or any fire warden, or police officers or health officer of the city, "to give notice 'to supply such receptacle or remove such ashes.' It does not specify which of these is to perform this duty and we do not have 'any fire warden' in this city.

The whole thing is as crude and mispelt and badly worded as even the city attorney could make it, and if passed in its present form would not only prove a cumbersome, expensive and oppressive piece of city legislation, but would be the laughing stock of every intelligent person who reads it. Better refer it to a committee of revision, or make a new ordinance that will provide what is wanted in plain, common sense English.

THE RATE OF CITY TAXATION.

THE question of the rate of taxation, with which the City Council has to contend, is one of great importance to the people of this city. There are two propositions before the Council; one for five mills on the dollar, the other for seven. We do not wish to limit the managers of city finances so that needed public improvements cannot be made, or that the proper expenses of the municipality cannot be met. But the wise among them will take note of the public sentiment and the public capabilities.

We need not remind them that money is scarce; that is to say, difficult to get hold of, and that it is hard to make collections. Neither need we attempt to show that high taxes are unpopular; they always are. The high rate caused a storm of indignation last year. It is likely to do so now.

Money is needed of course to carry on the affairs of the city, but there is no necessity for overburdening the taxpayers. Moderation in expenditures and moderation in taxing will suit the public, and the city officers are supposed to be the servants not the masters of the people.

Give us as low a rate as is consistent with good government, economically administered. Don't heed the lavish and extravagant propositions of real estate boomers. Have some regard to property owners who are not rich in money. Do not oppress the taxpayers. Put the rate down as low as possible under existing circumstances and in view of inevitable expenses. Don't be extravagant.

KESLER AN OBSTRUCTIONIST.

MAYOR BASKIN has announced his intention to make the balance of his administration clean. He started in to carry out this resolution by ordering the enforcement of the ordinance against Sunday liquor selling. Up to that point the whisky men had been conducting their business in open violation of the law, unmolested. Chief Paul, Captain Donovan and their aids have been endeavoring to carry out the Mayor's instructions, and a number of violators of the Sunday liquor law have lately been arrested.

At this point an obstruction appears. A number of cases of persons charged with running saloons on Sunday were tried before Police Justice Keeler yesterday, and the highest fine imposed on any one of them was $15. Is this meant as a notification to this class of violators of the law that they can continue to conduct their business on Sundays with comparative impunity, as they can easily pay a paltry fine and still have a handsome profit? It is said one of the liquor men arrested informed a friend that he sold, on last Sunday, thirteen and a half barrels of beer, and that there were, on that day, as many as seventy-five men in his saloon. Another liquor man remarked to a News reporter yesterday: "Keeler is all right. He is standing in with the boys."

How can the ordinances be enforced under these circumstances? The chief magistrate of the city expressed his opinion of the police justice in his report on the recent police scandals. Keeler's conduct was exhibited in that connection in a manner that showed him to be unfit for the position he holds. His glingery treatment of the whisky men who violate the laws is another point in the same direction.

RETURNED ELDERS.

Elder Richard Williams of Ogden called at our office today, having returned from a mission to Great Britain. He left October 15, 1891, and was, on his arrival in Liverpool, assigned to the Wales Conference, where he has labored all the time, until honorably released. He arrived in this city July 10.

Elder H. E. Booth, Jr., of Grantsville, called at our office last evening, having just returned from a mission to the Samoan Islands. Elder Booth left his home to commence his missionary labors on May 25th, 1889. The first year was spent in the Tutuila district in studying the language and learning the customs of the natives. Upolu was the field of operations for the next sixteen months. After the expiration of that time Elder Booth was transferred to the Savaii district, where he labored until released to return home.

Elder J. J. Bennett, of Meadow, Millard county, returned with Elder Booth. He left his home for the same part of the world on the 29th of May, 1889. His ministerial labors were all performed in Tutuila district. Elders Booth and Bennett both enjoyed themselves very much during their absence. They labored faithfully for the spread of truth among the natives and did a good work. They experienced the best of health most of the time, though for seven weeks they laid aside by side suffering severely with fever.

LONDON, July 19.—Thomas Cook, the well-known tourist manager, is dead.

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held at the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, July 10th, 1892, commencing at 2 o'clock p.m., President Angus M. Cannon presiding.

The choir sang the hymn beginning:

Glory to God on high.
Let heaven and earth reply.

Prayer was offered by Elder James P. Freeze.

Th choir sang the anthem:

Glorious is Thy name.

The Sacrament was administered by the Priesthood of the Twentieth ward.

PRESIDENT ANGUS M. CANNON then addressed the congregation. He wished that, during the time he might be led to occupy, he might say nothing but what would be approved by God.

The world, he said, has many who propose to administer the word of the Lord without having divine authority to do so. They think, if they only feel that they are called to preach, that is all that is necessary.

By reading the Scriptures, however, we find that those who administered the Gospel in the name of Jesus were commissioned to do so. They could not go according to their feelings like men do in our age.

Cornelius, for instance, was a devout man, who gave alms and prayed much to God. A heavenly messenger came to him and told him that his alms were acceptable to the Almighty and his prayers were heard. It was indeed a great blessing to be favored with the visit of an angel, and yet this same messenger told him that there was something else to do. He was to send to Joppa for Peter who would give him further instructions in the Gospel and administer its ordinances with full authority in the name of the Lord. Peter did not, at this time, understand that the Gentiles were to be admitted to the blessings of the Gospel, but the Lord prepared him for it by a vision, and when the messengers of Cornelius arrived, he went with them and preached the Gospel in the house of the Roman officer. Then the Holy Ghost was poured out upon his audience and Peter baptized Cornelius and his household.

Another instance is Saul. He was persecuting the people of God and had letters empowering him to seize all Saints he could find. But God saw that he was honest in his heart and the Lord met him on the way to Damascus. Jesus appeared to him, rebuking him for his wicked course and directing him where to go to learn of the way of salvation. He followed this direction, glorified God and was baptized a disciple of Christ. But he did not commence to minister in the name of Jesus, until he had been set apart for this work under the hands of the servants of the Lord, who had authority to confer upon him.

When Jesus called His disciples to the ministry, He set them apart for this work and told them that as the Father had sent Him, He now would send them, and great manifestations followed this testimony, in as much as the sick were healed and even the dead raised up. He gave them to understand that they should be persecuted, for they were not of the world. The Lord had taken them out of the world. Therefore they were hated by the world. They were told to tarry in Jerusalem until endowed with the Holy Ghost, notwithstanding they had been set apart and called to the ministry by Jesus. They were not to administer in His name until the Comforter had been given whose special office it was to teach them what to say and guide them into all truth.

When the people on the day of Pentecost heard Peter preach they asked what to do to be saved, and were told to repent and be baptized every one of them for the remission of their sins.

As the work grew in extent the Apostles ordained men to the Lesser Priesthood, and entrusted to these the administration of the Sacrament and the preaching of the Gospel of repentance. Many were thus sent out to bear the message to the world. It appears that some had been converted and baptized in Ephesus, who did not have any knowledge of the gift of the Holy Ghost. When Paul found them and heard that they had been baptized only with the baptism of John, he told them to be baptized in the name of Jesus, and when they obeyed they received the Holy Ghost through the laying on of hands. Philip went to Samaria and preached to the inhabitants, and those who believed were baptized, but it was not until the Apostles came there and laid their hands on the converts that they had the privilege of receiving the Holy Ghost. The baptism in the name of Jesus Christ is the only one that is effective, as Paul shows in his epistle to the Ephesians.

The speaker now referred to the coming of Christ, and that Paul states in an epistle to the Corinthians that the day of the Lord should not come, unless there first was a general apostasy. To understand this the history of the churches of the world must be studied, both that of the Roman church and those of the various dissenting bodies. It is clear, he remarked, that pure water cannot flow from an impure fountain. It is clear that, if the Roman church, for instance, was as far away from truth as Luther claimed it was, it must have forfeited its right to the holy Priesthood long ago, and it is not to be expected that the ministers can be clothed with divine authority.

John saw in his visions on Patmos this apostasy, but he saw also the restoration of the everlasting Gospel through a messenger flying in the midst of heaven, exhorting the world again to give glory to God and worship Him, for the hour of His judgment has come.

Joseph Smith, in our time, felt moved upon to ask the Lord which of the many churches was the right one. The Lord heard him and appeared to him and communicated with him. A heavenly messenger appeared and gave him knowledge of the ancient inhabitants of this continent, of the appearance and administrations of Jesus in this country. It was made known to him that records had been kept and hidden. Joseph now was determined, by the grace of God, to be worthy to obtain these records. He was told not to associate with any of the existing religious bodies, as God no longer communicated with them as with His people anciently, and he was also told that if he would remain faithful, he would be an instrument in the hand of God to do a wonderful work among the children of men. He continued to plead with the Almighty and the Lord communicated His will to him, preparing his heart for the work about to be established. But Joseph, notwithstanding these wonderful manifestations did not commence to administer the ordinances of the Gospel before he received authority to do so, any more than did Paul anciently. John the Baptist appeared to him and conferred on him the Aaronic Priesthood which gave the right to baptize. Afterward Peter, James and John appeared and conferred the Melchisedek Priesthood giving the authority to impart the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. The Gospel now was to be preached to every nation on the earth, every kindred and tongue. The Elders went out with the message and wherever it was accepted, people were moved upon by the Spirit of the Lord to gather to Zion. Then the word of the Prophet was fulfilled that peoples should go to the mountain of the house of the Lord to learn his laws and to walk therein.

Blessed are we as a people excluded from the world. God has blessed us abundantly, even the soil in our valleys. And here we are taught principles by which we can be made more pure than we otherwise would have been. God has given us pastors after His own heart, many of whom now sleep in their graves, while we are left behind to carry out the instructions they gave.

The speaker illustrated the meaning of repentance by relating the meeting of Zacchaeus with Christ. The Lord went into his house and the Pharisees made a remark about the previous record of the chief publican. He, however, told Jesus, "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have wrongfully exacted anything of any man, I restore fourfold."

This is the right kind of repentance. It means to cease to do evil and to do that which is good. And then this well-doing must be continued in; otherwise, the last will be worse than the first. Judas is an instance of this. He was an Apostle of the Lord. Yet, when covetousness seized his heart, he went away and finally died the death of a sinner. Apostasy is always a consequence of transgression. Men love darkness more than light. Therefore they do that which is evil and if repentance does not follow, they perish in the evil.

It was predicted by the servants of God that this people should go to the mountains and become a prosperous people, and that many should be tried through riches more than they had been tried by poverty. This has come literally true, but it is well worth to strive to be faithful under the trials and all manner of temptations. For if we overcome in all things we shall be given to possess all things. Only we must have it and use it for holy purposes. President John Taylor, shortly before his death, spoke about the celestial law and said:

"This is the celestial law of God; I came not to do my will but His will that sent me." This is the celestial law to us.

The speaker here closed his remarks, wishing that God might help His people to keep this law and obtain the rewards.

APPOLE JOHN HENRY SMITH

said he had with interest listened to the remarks of the previous speaker on the first principles of the Gospel. During his remarks in regard to the conditions of the rich and poor, the speaker had been led to wonder whether it was necessary for earnest worshippers of God to remain in poverty. The speaker had learned that this should not necessarily be the case. It is not the earthly possessions that influence us to recognize our duties or moral obligations. He believed that it makes no difference in the eyes of God whether we stand before Him clad in the coarsest material, or whether we possess means to clothe ourselves in rich garments and enjoy choice food. It depends on the character of our hearts. A rich man can be selfish, and is, if so, beneath him whose heart is open to the need of his fellowmen. The opposite may also be the case. Our heavenly Father does not rejoice in our poverty. He knows what ability we have to do good with what we have.

All are not endowed alike. Some lack the ability of providing what is required for temporal comfort. Others have the ability of so doing. But on these much responsibility rests to do good with this gift. The same greed, the same selfishness can be displayed by those in humble circumstances as by the most successful financiers of the world. Christ taught a certain man, who claimed to have kept the whole law scrupulously, that he would have to dispose of his property for the good of his fellowmen. We are taught that in no other way can we so effectually show our love for God as in the manner in which we take care of His children, not by keeping them idle, but by placing within their reach the means whereby they can exercise their own individuality in providing for the continuation of their existence in legitimate happiness and enjoyment. These are problems on which it is well to reflect. The times require it.

The Saints in the past have stood very nearly on a level. None were much wealthier than others. Other circumstances surround us partially, now. Some of the new comers have less opportunity to secure to themselves comfortable homes than earlier settlers had. The responsibility remains, however, for those who are established here, to provide employment, if possible, for all, by establishing industries of various kinds. We should feel that all men are the children of the same Father, and none should feel that he is above his fellowmen. Every heart and every hand should go out in comfort and help to our fellowmen that we may be kept clean from the evils that are prevailing in the world. Every Christian should raise his voice against such evils, for true religion is not only a profession of belief in Jesus, but it is the practice of the doctrine which the Lord taught that wealthy had, who seemed to think more of his earthly possessions than of the association with the Lord.

The speaker warned the people against strife, selfishness and similar crimes, and closed with the prayer that all might be enabled to glorify God and prove their love for Him in the good they do and not in what good they promise to do.

The choir and congregation then sang the hymn—

Praise to the man who continued with Jehovah,
John anointed that Prophet and Seer.

Benediction by Elder Heber Romney.

A PRAISEWORTHY SOCIETY.

The ninth annual meeting of Zion's Benefit Building Society was held last night in Z. C. M. I. shoe factory. It was largely attended and the proceedings were eminently satisfactory. The new officers and directors elected are as follows:

T. G. Webber, president; Wm. H. Rowe, vice-president; L. S. Hills, treasurer; Thos. W. Sloan, secretary. Directors—H. J. Grant, Arthur Parsons, Elias A. Smith, W. J. Bateman, A. W. Carlson, D. A. Swan, Thos. Hull, Rulon S. Wells, Oliver Hodgson, Arnold Glaugue, Edgar Howe, A. Utters—J. H. Burrows, David McKenzie, Jas. M. Birlow.

A general statement of the condition of the society made the following exhibit:

ASSETS.
Bills receivable.....	$363,370.00
Cash.....	294.14
Delinquent interest.....	638.91
Delinquent fines.....	301.45
Total.....	$364,604.45
LIABILITIES.
Subscript ons.....	$209,619.00
Dividends.....	48,380.34
Reserve.....	5,490.05
Undivided profits.....	1,111.10
Total.....	$264,600.49

A dividend of 9 1/2 per cent. for the year was declared. This is placed to the credit of members, thus enabling borrowers to hasten the payment of their obligations, and aiding in the maturing of the stock of other members.

It was decided by the meeting that the by-laws be changed, for the accommodation of those members who are desirous of borrowing in order to erect homes but who are unable to do so owing to the pressure upon the borrowing capacity of the society. The contemplated amendment will enable the directors to hypothecate the trust deeds in its possession, and borrow on them an additional $50,000 in separate sums of $25,000 each. In this way the usefulness of the organization will be enlarged.

This society is essentially benevolent. It is conducted upon a system that is purely co-operative, and all its officers perform the work connected with it without remuneration, with the exception of the secretary, who is merely paid a moderate sum for clerical labor. The organization has been a great blessing to workmen, many of whom having, by its agency, been enabled to procure permanent ownership of homes by a process but little if any more burdensome than the payment of ordinary rental. We are gratified at the success of the society, indicated by the good it has accomplished and its present satisfactory situation. May it live long and prosper.

MISTAKES OF ORGANIZED LABOR.

The union men in the Courd'Aleone country, as well as those at Alene, Pennsylvania, find that they have made a sorry mess of their extreme and lawless transactions. In the presence of the military they became powerless, and when the strong arm of the law had free exercise they found themselves in terrible jeopardy. The whole proceedings in those places have been unfortunate. From what appears after hearing both sides, the striking workmen and miners were not justified in the course they pursued. The employment of troops to aid the civil authorities because absolutely necessary, for the protection of life and property and the maintenance of peace and order.

The rights of labor are of great importance and working people may lawfully and justly combine to obtain and retain them. While there continues a conflict with capital, organizations of workers will be found necessary and desirable. Reasonable people will not object to them while they are kept within legitimate bounds. It is only when they go beyond those limits and encroach upon the rights of others that they are to be opposed. And when that departure is to the extent of preventing non-union men from doing work which union men refuse, or of injuring the persons or property of employers or employees, no matter whether the grievances of the union people be well or ill founded, the powers of government, local and national, if necessary will and ought to be exercised to the utmost needful extent, until the lawless power surrenders or is punished or crushed.

The voice of civilized society to the labor unions today is: "Thus far shalt thou go and no farther! Unto if you will to better your condition and regulate your own affairs, but keep your hands off the persons and property of others, and do not infringe upon their rights!"

It is the right of every man to refuse to join a labor union and to work for such wages as he is willing to accept. It is the right of employers to give work to those who are willing to labor, and at such wages as can be agreed upon between the employer and the employed. Any interference with this by force is unlawful, and in violation of natural rights. It will be and ought to be suppressed, if it takes all the force of the government to effect it.

Notwithstanding this, our sympathies are strong for working people, struggling against the oppressions and heartlessness of capital. We desire to see the laborer in every department elevated and fully remunerated, and relieved from excessive toil. We believe this cannot be accomplished without unity of effort, wise organization, and educational advancement.

Unity of interests between capital and labor is the great desideratum. Coercion on either side is wrong and will not produce good results. Whenever unions step over lawful bounds and attempt to accomplish by force that which they fail to do by moral suasion and enlightened argument, they expose themselves to a force which is greater than their own and do great damage to their cause. Such has been the outcome of the lawless doings at Homestead and the outrages at Court d'Alene.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met in regular session Tuesday, July 12, President Loofbourrow in the chair. The councilmen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Hardy, Moran, Bell, Lawson, Evans, Simondt, Beardsley, Helms, Ewing.

Absent—Wantland, Karriek. After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read, amended and approved, the following were read and referred as specified: William Laughton and others renewed their request for an extension of watermains on First North street as far west as Ninth West street. Committee on waterworks.

PETITIONS

John Cook and others asked that Second West street be sprinkled. Committee on sprinkling.

H. P. Nielson and 122 others protested against the Great Salt Lake & Hot Springs Railway Company being allowed to amend its franchise. Committee on streets.

C. Driscoll and others protested against paying for water main extension. Committee on waterworks.

S. K. Hooper and others sent in a communication calling attention to a petition presented to the Council recently, but which they represented had not been acted upon. Referred.

The Salt Lake Stradament Asphalt Co. asked the Council to examine and formally accept the pavement it had laid at the intersection of First South and State streets. Committee on streets, board of public works and city attorney associated.

A DANGEROUS GRAVEL PIT.

George Osmond and others asked that steps be taken to prevent further blasting in the gravel pit in the eastern part of the city between First and Second South streets. The place, they state, is a dangerous and unsightly one, and the continued use of explosives in loosening gravel was damaging their residences. Committee on streets.

WANTS TO BE A POLICEMAN.

G. M. Bridwell asked to be appointed to a position on the police force. Committee on police.

RELIEF ASKED.

Rbert McLaughlin sent in a communication in which he represented that on the 17th of July, 1890, his son Robert, aged nine years, was killed at the intersection of First East and Fifth South streets, by being run over by a city team which was employed in hauling rock. He further stated that himself and wife were very poor and without work and asked that he be granted such relief as might be deemed just and equitable. Committee on claims.

MORE REMOVALS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Mayor Baskin sent in a communication appointing Samuel Paul a city jailer in place of Ex-Chief of Police Janney. Also appointing John J. Gleason as policeman at Liberty Park in place of Daniel Cammonlie. He asked the Council's confirmation of his action. Committee on police.

GAS ORDINANCE VETOED.

The following was read by the recorder:

E. C. Stanton, City Recorder:

Dear Sir—I hereby return disapproved ordinance No. 212, entitled "An ordinance for the construction and maintenance of street mains and services for utilizing and distributing natural and manufactured fuel gas in the city of Salt Lake," passed by the City Council July 5th, 1892, for the following reasons:

First.—The New American Gas & Fuel Co., its successors and assigns, are granted the right and privilege of using any and all streets, avenues and alleys of the city in which to lay and maintain mains and service pipes. The only restriction placed upon this sweeping grant are in the following proviso to wit, "That all streets, avenues and alleys shall be speedily repaired and put in as good condition as they were before the excavations were made; that not more than one main pipe shall be laid in any one street without the express consent of the City Council, and that in the construction, maintenance and operation of said mains and service pipes, the said grantee and its successors and assigns shall at all times conform to such ordinances, rules and regulations as may hereafter be adopted by the City Council in relation thereto."

In my opinion the general grant quoted is not sufficiently limited by these provisos. If but one pipe be laid in each street, it follows from the grant itself that the company would have the right to lay service mains across the street wherever it chooses. Some of the streets are already paved with asphaltum, others will soon be, and within twenty years granted in the proposed charter the streets in most parts of the city will be paved. It is impossible to make these pavements by repairs, when cut through by trenches, anything like as good as they were before; therefore, in place of requiring by one pipe to be laid in each street, a pipe on each side of the street should be required when the gas is used on both sides, and the company prohibited from crossing the streets by service mains except by permission of the Council.

The city has already expensive systems of water and sewer pipes. These systems must in the near future be greatly extended, for this reason should be so limited as to prevent any interference with these systems or their future extension. This can be easily done by reserving to the city the right to require the company to change the locations of its pipes and mains as necessity may require and the right to designate the location of the pipes and mains in the first instance.

Second.—As it is very difficult to prevent the escape of natural gas and as fatal accidents are liable to occur in case of its escape, the right of inspection ought to be reserved to the city with authority to require the company to make such repairs as may find necessary and adopt such appliances as experience has or may hereafter point out as conducive to safety in the use of gas.

Third.—The maximum price, 30 cents per 1000 cubic feet, which the company may charge consumers at present I do not think exorbitant, considering the great cost and hazard of the proposed enterprise. Nor do I believe it will be exorbitant for several years to come, but it may become so before the expiration of the charter. The city is rapidly increasing in population and business and the consumption of gas must correspondingly increase, and as it increases the profits of the enterprise must also increase, and while I recognize the fact that a practical use of the natural gas discovered by the energy and enterprise of the principal promoters of the proposed company is of great value to the community, and the parties who have developed this important element should be granted liberal opportunity to enjoy its fruits, yet if in the future the profits should reach a point as to render the price fixed exorbitant the city should have power to reduce the price to a reasonable amount. I therefore recommend the insertion of a clause allowing the City Council, after the lapse of any three or four years to fix the price within the limit between thirty cents and some reasonable sum less than thirty cents.

R. N. BASKIN, Mayor.

Lawson—These points are all fully covered; they were thoroughly discussed before the passage of the ordinance and the Mayor's recommendations are therefore unnecessary, and I now move that the ordinance be re-passed notwithstanding the Mayor's objections.

The ordinance passed over the Mayor's veto on the following vote:

Ayes—Beardsley, Evans, Ewing, Folland, Hardy, Helms, Horne, Karriek, Lawson, Moran, Rich, Simondt. Nays—Loofbourrow, Bell.

CONSIDERED A NUISANCE.

Robert J. Jessup, of the Salt Lake Tribune, and others represented that "One Peter Nielsen, of Sanpete, has for the last two seasons been afflicting this patient and long-suffering community with a wild, screaming hand-organ, playing some eight soul-destroying airs. This distressing person, with a persistence born of lunatic insanity, starts in at 3 a. m. and whoops it up until after 11 p. m. daily, in the principal thoroughfares of the city, to the public disgust in general and the destruction of the tempers of nervous people in general. This Niels Peter Larsen is a public nuisance of the most woesome kind, and your petitioners respectfully but urgently ask that he be abated without delay, and shipped back to the wilds of Sanpete."

Committee on finance.

THE BOND CONTRACT.

The mayor, treasurer, and finance committee reported that the contract with Blair and Company for the sale of $300,000 bonds had been entered into as provided by law. They asked that the contract be ratified. Adopted.

MAJOR STANTON'S REPORT.

Chief Stanton of the fire department sent in his quarterly report ending June 1st. The total expenditure amounted to $10,938.59. Received and filed.

THE AUDITOR'S REPORT.

Auditor Raybould presented the following account of receipts and disbursements for the month of June:

Paving tax	$13,535 41
Liquor license	12,400 00
Watermains extension tax	8,373 64
General license	4,926 46
Fines	1,026 00
Water rates	586 29
Tax sales	737 87
Sidewalk tax	494 92
Dog tax	414 00
Cemetery	350 00
Engineering department	332 75
Police tax	378 00
Carriage and harnessing	126 06
Rent	10 00
Sewer tax	73 50
City tax, 1892	65 62
Interest	61 97
Street department	42 40
Waterworks	14 86
City and County building	9 00
Sprinkling tax	1 33
Fire department	2 00

DISBURSEMENTS.

Waterworks	$ 25,234 72
Interest January, 1891, bonds	12,000 00
City and County building	10,809 45
Street department	5,698 70

Grading Seventh West Street.	3,316 99
Interest July 1901, bonds.....	5,000 00
Police department.....	5,549 01
Fire department.....	4,475 43
Salary.....	4,642 42
State street paving.....	5,521 73
Street lighting.....	3,412 50
Watermaster.....	2,817 52
Street sprinkling.....	2,710 64
Health department.....	2,196 97
Engineering department.....	1,848 10
Retaining walls.....	1,860 10
Cemetery.....	1,771 53
Beverage.....	1,566 60
Sidewalks.....	1,125 49
Assessor and collector's office	908 77
Prison department.....	844 32
Parley's conduit.....	831 25
Therapy park.....	494 50
Printing and advertising.....	470 75
Rent.....	455 00
Donations.....	418 66
Land.....	400 00
Expense.....	392 03
Dog tax.....	293 00
Licenses.....	246 05
Mayor's contingent fund.....	117 55
Hospital.....	143 43
Trains.....	72 30
Supplies casual.....	71 25

SUMMARY

Balance in treasury June 1.....	$129,008 25
Additional receipts.....	42,708 08
	$172,446 33
Deduct disbursements.....	$107,667 09
Balance in treasury.....	$64,708 64

TREASURER'S REPORT.

City Treasurer Duke submitted his report from February 20th to July 1st. It shows a balance in the city treasury July 1st of $67,904.28.

SIXTY DAYS' EXTENSION.

The board of public works reported that the Pacific Paving company had asked for an extension of sixty days in which to complete the paving now on State street. The report was adopted and the request granted.

VALUATION OF CITY PROPERTY.

Assessor Leonard reported that he had completed the assessment of the city for the year 1892. The amount of the assessment is $52,689,386. Laid on the table until Friday night.

WATERMASTER'S REPORT.

The watermaster submitted his report for the quarter ending June 30, 1892. It shows the total expenditure of $9003.13 as follows: Watermaster's department, labor and supplies, $6705.68; Jordan and Salt Lake canal, $2127.11; Parley's creek canal, $710.34.

CITY PHYSICIAN'S REPORT.

The quarterly report of City Physician Mencham was referred to the committee on sanitary rules and regulations.

SEXTON'S REPORT.

The report of the city sexton for the quarter ending June 1st was referred to the committee on cemetery.

DEPUTY CITY AUDITOR.

The Mayor and finance committee reported that P. O. Perkins had been appointed deputy city auditor at a salary of $125 per month.

Evans—Is this appointment permanent?

Bell—It is.

Evans—Then I shall oppose it, for when the matter of appointing such an officer first came up it was clearly stated that the office was only a temporary one.

Bell (sarcastically)—It is your privilege to do so, Mr. Evans.

Moran—It seems that the action of the committee and Mayor is unsatisfactory, and I move that the appointment be made to hold good during the pleasure of the Council only.

Lawson—I second the motion. It is time that this Council was looking after its officers. I consider Mr. Moran's motion an excellent one.

Horn—I am opposed to making the appointment permanent.

Evans—Did the last city auditor have an assistant?

The City Recorder—He did not.

Evans—Then I am more strongly opposed to the proposition than ever.

Moran's motion then carried.

MORAN'S MAJORITY REPORT.

Moran offered the following majority report:

July 12, 1892.

To the President and Council:

We your committee to whom was referred that portion of mayor's report, reflecting upon the conduct of the four members of the council and the testimony upon which said report was made beg leave to report as follows:

After a careful examination of the testimony and after hearing the statements of the gentlemen in question, we believe that they were actuated by a proper motive in visiting the houses mentioned, their purpose being to investigate certain statements made to them which they found to be true. The committee on police were given the facts by these 4 councilmen, but the action of it Mayor relieved that committee of further investigation.

Therefore we recommend that said four members of this council be exonerated and that their action be sustained.

Respectfully submitted,

P. J. MORAN,
O. H. HARDY,
J. S. LAWSON.

MINORITY REPORT FROM EWING.

Ewing offered the following minority report and asked that it be adopted in lieu of the majority report:

As a member of your committee appointed to investigate the action of certain councilmen as set forth in the communication of the Hon. Mayor to the City Council on the 5th day of July, 1892, I beg leave to submit the following minute report touching said matter:

It appears that the members of the said council referred to in the communication of said mayor went upon the evening in question at their own soil invitation, and on their own responsibility, and were not upon any official business authorized by the body to which they belong. It also appears from the testimony before the committee that said councilmen on the evening and occasion in question were engaged in investigating the conduct of certain officials and employees of the city; this investigation was entirely unofficial and not called for by the council. It is therefore my opinion under the circumstances that this body has no authority to take any action in the premises.

Hees (rising quickly)—I move the adoption of the minority report.

Bell—I second the motion.

Moran—I move to amend by adopting the majority report.

Lawson (promptly)—I second the amendment.

Bell—I claim that the Council has no jurisdiction over its members after they leave this chamber. Their actions are those of private citizens, and this body has no power in the premises. I shall therefore vote against the majority report.

Evans—As an interested member of the Council in this matter I wish to say that I made the tour of investigation so sarcastically referred to by his Honor the Mayor in the communication here sent to this Council. I did so with four other gentlemen of this Council, two of whom were members of the police committee.

Ugly rumors and damaging insinuations had come to our hearing about immorality in the police department. I was asked to assist in investigating the charges. As a matter of duty I accepted the invitation and would do so again under like circumstances, the strictures of the mayor notwithstanding. I have no apologies to offer for my conduct that night. I did nothing, but what I am willing and anxious the public should know. I have been compelled to listen to this thing in silence for three weeks. This is the first opportunity I have had to defend myself and shall speak plainly and without fear. The aspersions hurled at myself and colleagues are infamous and untrue. As to the statement that the committee should have acquainted the Mayor with the facts, will say that one of the members of the committee called at his office four days in succession without being able to accomplish the object of his calls. The Mayor ignored the committee when they did hold a meeting and then inaugurated an investigation for his own benefit for the purpose of humiliating and degrading the councilmen. The Mayor has said, and seems to be actuated by the belief, that a conspiracy has been hatched to besmirch his administration. This I deny in toto. If any such scheme had been carried on I certainly would have known it and should have been the first to denounce such action. I served my country four years in the army and navy and during the terrible struggle of the late civil war. During that service I received many wounds and the suffering from them was intense but they caused me no such pain as the efforts that have been made by those whom I supposed were my friends, to injure my character and reputation as a man.

Again I say that I have no apologies to offer. I came into this Council with the firm determination that I would do all in my power towards giving our constituents as pure an administration as possible. I still stand by my resolution in this respect. I regret very much that the mayor has taken an unfair advantage in pursuing myself and others in this matter.

Mr. Evans spoke warmly and earnestly and at the conclusion of his remarks he was rewarded with a round of applause by the big audience that filled the Council chamber.

President Loofbourough (striking the table vigorously with his gavel)—You must understand that this is a session of a deliberative body, and not a political meeting. No more such demonstrations will be allowed.

Lawson—As a member of the police committee I say that the mayor has overstepped his bounds in attempting to cast odium and scorn upon gentlemen who belong to this council and who were in the strict line of their duty, and I say we should not allow it to be done without showing the mayor that we do not approve of his conduct with reference to this case.

Ewing—I call the gentleman to order.

The President—I think that the fullest and freest discussion should be allowed in this matter, but the mem-ben should keep within proper bounds nevertheless. The point of order is well taken.

Moran was about to protest when the president said on second thought he would reverse his ruling and allow Mr. Lawson to proceed.

Lawson—I do not think there is any member in this Council who has more respect for the majority position than myself, but I ask you in all candor, Can we allow our brother officers to be humiliated and treated by the mayor as they have been when we know that they were serving the city and serving it well? The mayor talks (ironically) of self-constituted committees. It was he who constituted himself to committee of one and held a secret investigation for his own private benefit and then endeavors to brand honorable men with disgrace. I shall vote for the majority report.

Moran—Something has been said about these four councilmen not being on duty on the night in question. I take the stand that when we were elected we did it with the understanding that we should always be on duty and so we are. These gentlemen should be exonerated. They have done nothing wrong. I have heard their statements and believe they are correct, notwithstanding the attitude of Mayor Baskin.

Ewing—I deny that we are on duty all the time. I am not and would not be for the paltry $250 per year that I receive as salary. These councilmen after they leave this chamber are merely private citizens. They took an unfair advantage of the proprietors and inmates of the places they visited on that night. These people did not know that they were city officials. They should have been apprised as to who they were and for what purpose they were coming, so that the women could have been on their guard. These men should not be held up as martyrs.

At this juncture of Ewing's speech he had a personal tilt with Moran. After order was restored, Hardy took the floor. He said: If Mr. Ewing's singular way of reasoning is correct and when we leave this council chamber we are no longer on duty—no longer representatives of the people—then our committee work is all illegal, for it is done during every hour of the week, and all outside of council capacity. All the councilmen did their plain duty.

Fol and said the idea that there was any conspiracy was all wrong. There were certain charges against a policeman and several members of the committee determined to visit the house where it was said the information could be had. They did so. On their way home from the first house they were told that the marshal and his friends were at Hattie Wilson's. He said he hoped it would be understood he believed he had a right to investigate all actions of the members of the police force or any other city employee. He went there on June 17, in the line of his duty, and he had no desire to shrink from the consequences of such action. He had been dubbed a member of the "smelling committee," but he cared nothing for that. He denounced the statement that there was anything in the nature of a conspiracy in his action or that of other members of the Council.

Bell then made another long talk in favor of the minority report and that the four councilmen directly interested had no right to vote on the majority report. The president sustained Bell in his position, and declared that the vote would now be called on Moran's motion to adopt the minority report.

Moran—Do I understand, Mr. President, that you absolutely refuse to allow these councilmen to vote.

Mr. President—I do. Moran (emphatically)—Well, all I have to say is that such a ruling is wrong. If these men were impeached it would be different, but they are not. If I were one of their number I would vote or know the reason why.

Evans wanted to know why the chairman ruled that he and others were debarred from voting.

The President—Because no member of a deliberative body has a right to vote on a question which concerns his own actions.

THE VOTE.

The vote on Moran's amendment stood as follows: Ayes—Beardsley, Hardy, Lawson, Moran.

Noes—Bell, Ewing, Helms, Loofbourou, Simondl.

Lost.

The question of the adoption of the minority was put with this result:

Ayes—Beardsley, Bell, Ewing, Helms, Loofbourou, Simondl.

Adopted.

EXPUNGED FROM THE MINUTES.

Moran moved to expunge all reference to the councilmen from the Mayor's communication. This raised another protest from Bell but it was carried all the same. Following is the vote:

Ayes—Beardsley, Ewing, Hardy, Lawson, Moran, Simondl.

Noes—Bell, Helms, Loofbourou.

POLICE JUSTICE KESLER'S CASE.

In the case of Police Justice Kesler, charged with conduct unbecoming a public officer, the special committee reported as follows:

We, your committee to whom was referred that portion of the mayor's report relating to the conduct of Police Justice Kesler, in connection with other city officers, beg leave to recommend that this case be referred to the committee on police.

So referred.

The report was signed by Councilmen Ewing, Moran, Hardy and Lawson.

APPROPRIATIONS.

William Harkness	795 50
J. M. Hutchinson	100 00
J. H. Gertz	25 00
Joseph Lippman	250 00
Pacific Paving Co.	11,000 00
S. M. Watson	810 30
Wesatch Asphalt company	7,616 30
Mount and Griffin	5,156 90
Eagle Foundry and Machine company	318 14
D. J. O'Mahoney	26 40
W. J. Smith	45 00
American Bank Note company, New York	422 00
Rio Grande Western Railway	1,040 00

A special session of the City Council was held Friday, July 15, President Loofbourou in the chair. The councilmen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Hardy, Hora, Bell, Lawson, Ewing, Evans, Simondl, Beardsley, Helms, Moran.

Absent—Karrick, Wantland.

PRELIMINARY BUSINESS.

After the minutes of Tuesday night's session had been read and approved, business was transacted as follows:

COURNER STONE CEREMONIES.

The following was read by the recorder:

At two o'clock p. m. arrival of the Freemasons in front of the City Hall, where the members of the City Council, City, County and Federal officers and invited guests, will join the procession.

ORDER OF ORGANIZATION

Police.
Band.
Knights Templar (Escort).
Freemasons.
Band.
Knights Templar (Escort).
Members of the City Council, City, County and Federal officers and invited guests, in carriages.
Grand Master, Officers and Members of the Grand Lodge, of Ancient, Free and accepted Masons of Utah.

LINE OF MARCH.

The Line of march is as follows:
South on State street to Second South street; west on Second South street to Main street; south on Main street to Fourth South street; east on Fourth South street to Washington square and side of building.

The order of exercises on the northeast corner of the building is as appended:

Command of silence by the most worshipful Watson Newton Shilling, grand master of Free Masons in Utah.

Address by the Hon. Robert Newton Baskin, Mayor of Salt Lake City, requesting the grand master to lay the corner stone of the joint city and county building with masonic ceremonies, and in accordance with the ancient usage of the craft.

Prayer by worshipful James Dowe, grand chaplain.

The laying of the corner stone, interspersed with vocal and instrumental music.

Oration by worshipful Charles B. Jack grand orator.

Instrumental music.
Address by Hon. C. F. Loofbourou, president of the Salt Lake City Council.

Instrumental music.
Address by Hon. W. B. Barich.

Instrumental music.
Address by his Excellency, Arthur L. Thomas, Governor of Utah.

Dismissal by the grand master.
Alvin Charles Emerson has been chosen grand marshal and Captain Samuel Paul, assistant marshal.

The communication was received and filed.

President Loofbourou announced that after consultation with certain members of the City Council and officers of the county court it had been decided among other things to deposit the photographs of the present officers of the city and county in the receptacle in the corner stone, and he advised the councilmen to have their pictures ready on the date named.

Moran—Suppose I should object to having my picture go in.

The Chair—Well, I suppose the committee would do as they pleased about it. (Laughter.)

Horn—Mr. Moran need not feel uneasy in the premises as I suppose unanimous consent can be obtained to put his likeness in the stone. (More merriment.)

SIDEWALKS.

Helms offered the following:

Resolved, That the board of public works and the city engineer be authorized to construct pavements at all intersections where sidewalks have been constructed by assessment upon the property in sidewalk districts 7 and 8, and to construct stone block, cross walks in said districts.

Adopted.

CLUTE'S SHORTAGE.

Moran offered the following:
Whereas, Street rumors and newspaper reports have caused an uneasiness in the public mind with reference to an alleged shortage in the accounts of ex-Assessor and Collector Clute, in the sum of $23,000 or thereabouts, and this council has received no information thereof, from any official source, therefore be it

Resolved, That the assessor and collector, F. J. Leonard, Auditor Raybould and the finance committee be required to furnish this council all information in their possession in relation thereto by next Tuesday night.

Adopted.

CITY TAX ROLL.

In addition to the city tax roll presented by Assessor and Collector Leonard, he sent in a communication asking that the rate be fixed.

Horn—In order to get the matter before the house, I move to make the rate five mills.

Hardy seconded the motion.

Helm moved to amend by making the rate seven mills.

No second.

Simonds thought that five mills would not be enough, yet he was not prepared to vote for seven mills without more light.

Evans moved that it be referred to the committee on ways and means with instruction to report at the next regular meeting of the Council.

Moran objected to the matter being postponed. He understood that the meeting was a special one and thought action should be taken at once.

Lawson said that the five mills rate would give the city $260,000, which would be ample to carry on the business of the city for the ensuing year.

Hardy contended that the hard time would not warrant making the rate any higher than last year.

The chair advised that the matter be referred to a committee.

Mr. Evans' motion passed.

SIDEWALK DISTRICT NO. 7.

An ordinance confirming the assessment for sidewalk district No. 7, was passed under a suspension of the rules.

SIDEWALK DISTRICT NO. 2.

An ordinance confirming the assessment made for the construction of certain sidewalks in sidewalk district No. 2, was also passed under a suspension of the rules.

RECEPTACLES FOR ASHES.

An ordinance providing for the construction of receptacles for ashes and the protection of water ditches from paper and other refuse matter and prescribing penalties for a violation of its provisions was laid on the table until the next regular meeting of the Council. The ordinance is of considerable interest and is herewith given in full:

Sec. 1. That it shall be the duty of the owner or occupant of every building within the fire limits of said city, and of the agent having the same in charge, to provide a close and secure metallic or earthen vessel or brick or stoneroom or bin as a receptacle for ashes; and it shall be the duty of such owner or agent or servant and of every tenant or occupant of any building within the fire limits of Salt Lake City to remove from such receptacle when the same is filled, and no ashes except manufacturers whose ashes are used, shall be kept or deposited in any part of the city in anything other than such metallic or earthen vessel, brick or stoneroom or bin, nor shall any person deposit any ashes upon the street. Any person failing to comply with or who violates any of the provisions of section 1 of this ordinance shall be fined in any sum not less than $5 nor more than $100, and shall in addition to such punishment be fined in the sum of $5 for every twenty-four hours of failure or refusal to supply such receptacle or remove such ashes after notice from the chief or assistant chief engineer of the fire department or any fire warden or police officers or health officer of the city of Salt Lake; Provided that all boxes or other receptacles used for depositing sweeping or other refuse or rubbish from sidewalks, places of business or other buildings shall be placed over the ditch in front of the premises and shall be removed from sight immediately after the scavenger has emptied the same; and, Provided further, that property owners shall have the sidewalks in front of their respective places of business swept each morning, Sundays excepted, before the hour of 8 a.m.; provided further, that property owners may deposit cinders (from furnaces) on the streets or alleys, subject to the consent of the supervisor of streets.

Sec. 2.—It is hereby made unlawful for any person, or persons or firm, agent, clerk or servant of any person or firm to sweep, throw or deposit into any of the gutters or ditches within said city any papers, sticks, stones, dirt, dust or any other rubbish of any kind, or to wash or empty spitcons or slops of any kind in any canal, ditch or flume within the city limits; or to sweep, throw or deposit upon any of the sidewalks within the limits of Salt Lake City any papers, sticks or other rubbish of any kind. Any person violating any of the provisions of section 2 of this ordinance shall be fined in any sum not less than $5 nor more than $25.

THE GAS COMPANY ACCEPTS.

The new American Natural Gas and Fuel Company sent in a communication in which it announced its acceptance of the franchise recently granted it by the City Council. Filed.

NOTION BY BEARDSLEY.

That the city auditor be instructed to at once prepare a table of expenditures, by quarters, for the use of the committee on ways and means for the year 1891.

On motion of Lawson the first six months of 1892 was included and the motion carried.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following appropriations were made:

W. C. Pavey & Co.	5 88
Sullivan & McDonald	187 85
Consolidated Implement Co.	27 50
Utah & Montana Machinery Co.	32 81
Pleasant Valley Coal Co.	20 00
Consumers Coal Co.	3 00
Sierra Nevada Lumber Co.	246 83
E. Sells & Co.	191 25
Geo. A. Love	25 87
E. C. Gottin Har. Ware Co.	15 85
Goldsmith & Co.	22 00
Wasatch Drug store	6 50
W. L. Rickard	7 65
Thune Job Printing Co.	12 00
Duckworth & Deas	11 25
Driver Merchandise Co.	59 71
T. C. Armstrong, Jr.	49 58
Morrison Meritt & Co.	18 88
Kelly & Co.	8 50
Frevert & Co.	12 25
A. W. Calk & Co.	2 25
Rio Grande Railway Co.	62 00
Geo. M. Scott	143 30
H. O. Heath	160 00
T. C. Armstrong, Jr.	15 13
Keese & Fish	12 16
D. J. O'Mahoney	4 50

Adjourned till 7:40 p.m. on Tuesday.

Paris, July 17.—Senator Baron de Courcelles, formerly French ambassador, has been appointed French arbitrator on the Bering Sea commission. The arbitrators will meet in Paris next week.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The city School Board met in regular session July 14th, Vice-President Nelson in the chair. Trustees Aft, Young, Newman, Dooly, Pike, Raybould, Duke and Baldwin were present.

PLUMBERS' PROTEST.

The following protest from the plumbers was tabled:

Board of Education:

Gentlemen—We, the undersigned, members of the Plumbers, Steam and Gasfitters' Union, Local No. 14, United Association, do hereby respectfully but earnestly protest against the letting of the contracts for the steam-heating and plumbing of the new schoolhouses of Salt Lake City, to any person or persons antagonistic to union labor and union prices.

We believe that Utah work should be performed by Utah workmen if possible, and that no contract should be let by the board to any persons who will import men who do not belong to our associations, whose interests are not here and who by competing with us are injuring bona fide residents as well as the Territory by unnecessarily tending to reduce the price of labor of our craft, and by taking from the Territory the wages that should remain here with our people.

Dated July 14, 1892.

CLERK'S REPORT.

The clerk submitted his annual report of the receipts and disbursements on account of the public school for the year ending June 30, 1892, as follows:

RECEIPTS.

County and Territorial school tax	$87,623 92
City school tax	23,518 79
	$106,142 72
First district	5 00
Rent of flower bars	10 00
Bonds, 4 00 sold	436,041 65
Received from library on account refund taxes	236 89
Received from high school	115 00
Received from H. L. Green, note	150 00
Total	$542,686 45

DISBURSEMENTS.

Overdraft in outstanding warrants, June 30, 1891	$36,330 05
General expense	11,061 81
Interest	1,067 66

SCHOOL EXPENSES.

Teachers' salaries (ten months)	$86,554 35
Janitors' salaries (twelve months)	10,371 65
Janitors' supplies	1,463 40
Fuel	3,654 77
School work supplies	1,701 43
Maintenance school property	3,388 15
School rents	4,181 35
Total	$119,016 50

SCHOOL PROPERTY ACCOUNT.

Real estate	$9,540 00
School building	11,445 60
School furniture and apparatus	5,2 2 00
Literatures	178 75
Miscellaneous	519 53

Total	$77,410 96
Paid liabilities for old disbursements	756 21
Paid refund special school tax of 1890	69,432 39

Disbursements to June 30, 1892. Total	$312,635 19
Balance in treasurer's hands	$230,260 51
Less outstanding warrants	319 92

Balance cash	$230,440 50
	$542,686 45

TREASURER'S REPORT.

The treasurer of the board submitted the following report for the year ending June 30, 1892:

Receipts—1901.
September.....	10 00
October.....	10,000 00
November.....	38 673 23
December.....	22,166 15
1902.
January.....	37,808 30
February.....	5,011 23
March sale of 100 bonds.....	100,000 00
April sale of 100 bonds.....	10,000 00
April sale of bonds.....	150,000 00
April interest on 150 bonds sold to E. H. Hollins & Sons.....	1,641 61
May sale of 100 bonds.....	100,000 00
May, from L. G. Hardy account, tax refund.....	226 62
June, from night school.....	112 00
June, from Green note.....	150 00
Total.....	$67,686 48

DISBURSEMENTS.

Account overdraft McCormick & Co. at close of June, 1891.....	11,524 43
February 25th to August 27th.....	245 00
August 27th to October 31st.....	11,254 64
November 1st to November 31st.....	21,960 67
December 1st to December 31st.....	26,204 50
1903.
January 1st to January 31st.....	19,261 44
February 1st to February 25th, inclusive.....	15,250 16
February 25th to April 1st.....	35,024 71
April 1st to April 21st.....	37,402 84
May 1st to May 31st.....	46,971 82
June 1st to June 30th.....	35,156 37
Commission on bonds.....	15,000 00
Total.....	$327,416 97
July 1st, balance in hands of Treasurer.....	$230,260 51
Summary.....
To amount of receipts.....	$57,686 48
Clerk's warrants paid.....	300,894 54
Amount overdraft McCormick & Co.	11,524 43
Commission paid on bonds.....	15,000 00
Total.....	$327,416 97
Balance on hand.....	$230,260 51
Total.....	$567,686 48

Filed.

The committee on school work submitted the following report on school books to be adopted by the schools for the next five years, as follows:

Honorable Board of Education: Gentlemen.—Your committee on school work have to report:

That in connection with the city superintendent of schools they have examined the books presented by the different publishing houses, for adoption by this board, with much care and labor, and we recommend that the board adopt for use in the Salt Lake City schools for the five years commencing July 1, 1892, the books marked Exhibit "A," which is appended to this sheet.

The committee, by a vote of three to two, recommend that the board purchase and own all books used in the schools and loan them to the pupils for use.

The recommendation of books marked in exhibit "A" is based on the idea of the board's purchasing books as above recommended, and if it is decided not to do so, this committee ask for one day's more time in order to consider their action with reference to certain books for supplemental work.

Attached to this report and made a part of it is an estimate by the superintendent of schools of the cost to the district for the first year, of furnishing books free to the scholars.

We further recommend that the president and clerk of the board be authorized to contract with the publishers, giving satisfactory bonds, in one-fourth of the estimate cost of all the books to be furnished by them respectively, for the faithful performance of their contract.

COMMITTEE ON SCHOOL WORK.
SALT LAKE CITY, July 13, 1892.

EXHIBIT "A."

Readers—First Readers, New Franklin, Harper, Siskney, Badlam; Second Readers, New Franklin, Harper, Siskney, Nature No. 1; Third Readers, New Franklin, Siskney, Nature No. 2; Fourth Readers, New Franklin, Harper, Nature

Reader No. 3; Fifth Readers, New Franklin, Nature Reader No. 4, selections from English and American classics. (Ginn & Co.)

Writing—Graphic system of penmanship, grammar school course, nine books. For movement exercises, Appleton's standard system exercise books, A, B and C. Michael's system of rapid penmanship.

Spelling—The Modern Speller. Language and Grammar—Hyde's Practical Lessons in English, book 1; Hyde's Practical Lesson's in English, book 2; Whitney & Lockwood's English Grammar.

Arithmetic—Wentworth's Primary Arithmetic, for teachers' use in Primary grades; Common Sense Arithmetic No. 1, for third and fourth grades; Sheldon's Complete Arithmetic, Piper's Supplemental Seat Work in Arithmetic for teacher's use; Stoddard's Intellectual Arithmetic.

Geography—Harper's Introductory, Barnes' Complete with new Utah edition. U. S. History—Eggleston's First Book, Anderson's Grammar School History, Sheldon's American History for supplement work. McCoun's historical charts for eighth grade and high school.

Physiology—Lincoln's Hygienic Physiology.

Music—Normal music course, books and charts.

Drawing—Angsburg's drawing system. High School Books—Algebra, Milton's trigonometry, Wentworth's English history, Montgomery; general history, Myers; zoology, Colton; botany, Gray & Coulter; human physiology, Martin's briefer course; physics, Gage's introduction to physical science; chemistry, Wentworth; physical geography, Le Conte; geology, Le Conte; beginning Latin, Collar & Daniel; Caesar, Harkness; Cicero, Harkness; Latin grammar, Harkness; Annelid, Greenough's Latin prose composition, Collar's; beginning French, L'Etude du Français, Montanier; French grammar, Edgren; French reader, Super; German cumulative method, Diezaying; German grammar, Joynes-Meisner; German reader, Joynes; German prose, Boisen; Greek lessons, White; Greek grammar, Goodwin; Ana basis, Goodwin; composition and rhetoric, Lockwood; English literature, Hawthorne; civit government, Macy; book-keeping, Gay.

COST OF FREE BOOKS.

First Reader, 1800 at 3¢.....	578 00
Second Reader, 1200 at 35¢.....	89 00
Third Reader, 100 at 35¢.....	35 00
Fourth Reader, 100 at 46¢.....	46 00
Fifth Reader, 100 at 60¢.....	60 00
Primary and Supplemental Arithmetic for teachers.....	18 50
Mental Arithmetic, 1000 at 32¢.....	512 00
Primary Arithmetic, 3000 at 25¢.....	520 00
Elementary Arithmetic, 100 at 60¢.....	260 00
Elementary Geography, 1800 at 36¢.....	648 00
Advanced Geography, 1000 at 31¢.....	1,000 00
Introductory Language, 1000 at 36¢.....	360 00
Language Lessons and Grammar, 1200 at 30¢.....	600 00
Higher Grammar, 200 at 36¢.....	116 00
Copy Books, 10,000 at 36¢.....	600 00
Smaller History, U. S., 500 at 45¢.....	225 00
Larger History, U. S., 300 at 92¢.....	184 00
Physiology, 200 at 67¢.....	134 00
French reader, 300 at 35¢.....	105 00
Supplementary History, U. S., 25 at 80¢.....	20 00
Total.....	$10,265 50

The Kansas City high school expenditure for books is $8.50 per pupil, and a average annual cost for the course 200 pupils at $8.50 is $1,700.

Assuming that fifty per cent. of the pupils have old books which they would be willing to exchange and that the average saving on these books would be twenty-five per cent. saving through exchanges would equal the cost of high school books.

Total cost of books for the first year in all departments of the public schools would be $10,805.50.

Other supplies—
Slates, 4500 at 10 cents.....	$450 00
Slates pencils, 20,000 at $1.50.....	30 00
Lead pencils, 75 gross at 85 cents.....	210 00
Pens, 250 gross at 45 cents.....	90 00
Pencilholders, 30 gross at 50 cents.....	1 00
Examination paper, 75,000 sheets.....	150 00
Music paper.....	30 00
Drawing paper, 300,000 sheets.....	200 00
Traced practice paper, 200,000 sheets.....	150 00
ink, 100 gals. at 31¢.....	180 00
Kindergrater material.....	200 00
Total.....	$1,650 00

Total for books.....$10,330 50
Total for other supplies.....1,650 00

Grand total.....$11,980 50
Cost per pupil on a basis of 7500 enrolled, $1 75

After considerable discussion the report was laid over for one week.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following bills were then ordered paid:

George M. Scott & Co., supplies.....	$ 1 50
Bonnie Langley, moving furniture.....	4 50
Herald Publishing Co., advertising.....	1 00
Joelin & Park, repairing clocks.....	1 30
W. D. Finney, services rendered.....	31 50
Harwood's Furniture Co., chair.....	1 05
William Finney, services rendered.....	115 00
George S. Spahr, preparing plans, etc.....	543 30
G. F. Costerian, preparing plans, etc.....	43 30
Times Publishing Co., advertising.....	10 40
C. L. Baxter, services rendered.....	56 40
G. E. Persons, school work supplies.....	17 14
Pringle Job Printing Co., printing, etc.....	61 25
Farker & Depece, on contract for Lincoln.....	2,985 00
Croxford Bros. & Bryant, on contract for Hamilton.....	4,718 65
W. H. Jay, on contract for Bryant.....	3,348 00
Total.....	$12,349 79

THE JACKSON SCHOOL.

The committee on sites and buildings submitted the following report:

Honorable Board of Education:

Your committee on sites and buildings report that the lowest bid for the erection of the Jackson school building is $94,493 and the highest bid is $98,004, and the average of elevation bids is $96,700. We recommend that the plans and specifications be modified so as to reduce the cost to say $50,000, and ask for authority to readvertise for a period of five days.

Adopted.

WATER MAINS EXTENSION.

It was decided to petition the City Council for the extension of water mains on Seventh West street to the Franklin school.

EAST BENCH SCHOOL SITE.

M. Baldwin moved that the committee on sites and buildings negotiate for a site on the East Bench, Fourth or Fifth South on Twelfth East.

Messrs. Pike and Newman opposed the motion. It was, however, carried, Pike and Newman in the negative.

CENSUS ENUMERATORS.

The following census enumerators were appointed on recommendation of the trustees designated:

Alf, for the First precinct, presented the names of Mr. Taylor for the First and Second wards, W. B. Moreton, Tenth and Third, C. O. Farnsworth, Eighth ward, and D. G. Worstell, Ninth ward.

It would presented the following names as census takers for the Second precinct: Fourth and Seventh wards, A. S. Marting; Fifth ward, Mrs. Clara Agremon; Sixth ward, George River; Fourteenth ward, Thomas Horsley; Fifteenth ward, Albert W. Lister.

Pike and Newman presented the following persons as census enumerators of the Third precinct: William Bradford, Sixteenth ward; Zebulan Jacobs, Seventeenth ward; Joseph H. Dean, Nineteenth ward; W. P. Nebeker, Twenty-second and Twenty-third wards.

Young recommended the following as census takers for the Fourth precinct: Elihu Barrell, Eighteenth ward; Chas. Sanoon, Twentieth ward; James Erskine, Twenty-first ward.

Dooley and Charles Baldwin, members from the Fifth precinct, proposed the names of W. F. Jamison for the Eleventh ward O. H. Avey for the Thirteenth ward and Mrs. H. E. Buchanan.

The recommendations were adopted and the board adjourned for one week.

ARIZONA TERRITORIAL CONFERENCE

The most general and interesting gathering of the Saints in this Territory commenced at Pinetop, Apache Co., on the 8rd of July.

This place is situated on the top of Mongolian mountains in the very heart of the desert.

Teams began to arrive early on Saturday, and the day was spent in pitching tents, erecting shades, etc., preparatory to spending several days in camp; and by nightfall the large pavilion, which had been built for the assembling of the people, was surrounded by a veritable city of campers.

Upon assembling at 10 a. m. Sunday, July 8th, there were present of the authorities: Presidents George Q. Cannon and Joseph F. Smith, of the First Presidency; George Reynolds, of the the First Council of Seventies; Arthur Winters, reporter; Jesse N. Smith, David K. Udall, Christopher Layton, and Chas. I. Robson, Presidents of the Snowflake, St. Johns, St. Joseph and Maricopa Stakes, respectively. There were also Bishops and leading men from all of the four Stakes.

After the opening exercises, President Cannon expressed his pleasure at being present, and advised the utmost care on the part of parents, to prevent their children from straying off and getting lost. He said the Presidents would be expected to report the condition of their Stakes.

President Jesse N. Smith, in reporting the Snowflake stake, referred with regret to the sad death of Lot Smith. With the exception of the blighting effects of winds and frost, our prospects for crops are good. All of the local organizations are complete. Our relations with our outside friends are very amicable. No Latter-day Saint is engaged in the traffic of liquor, and there is really no intemperance in the Stake. The Stake academy is doing a good work.

President Christopher Layton reported the St. Joseph Stake. We have over a hundred miles of irrigation canals, and this year we are reaping a bountiful harvest. Some have already threshed. Early peaches are marketed. Arizona is a good country for industrious men. Two crops of lucern have already been harvested, and the third is in bloom. The results of the Stake Academy are very gratifying. The Relief Society is quite energetic.

President Joseph F. Smith delivered a powerful discourse on the proper training and education of the young.

At the afternoon meeting President C. I. Robson was called to report the Maricopa Stake. He said: We have a very fruitful country. There are over two hundred miles of lateral ditches running from the Mesa canal. We have about 1200 white and about 900 aboriginal Saints in the Stake. The people are improving in the matter of temperance. With few exceptions our young men are doing well. The zeal of the Lamanite sisters in their Relief societies is very commendable. Early fruits are matured and gone.

President David K. Udall said there are seven wards in the St. Johns Stake; some of which are widely separated. We have a good people religiously, but the country we live in is not so rich as some parts that have been reported. We have no indolent people in the Stake, and the drunkard is almost unknown. Time and acquaintance have proven to our outside neighbors that we are friends to the country, and they now so regard us. We raise enough wheat to bread the people, which was not the case formerly.

President Cannon occupied the remaining time of the afternoon in a sermon which was replete with wise counsel and fatherly advice. His remarks were chiefly devoted to the necessity and beauty of charity.

The forenoon of Monday the 4th, was spent in listening to patriotic speeches and songs, the firing of guns, etc., in honor of our country's natal day. One of the lofty pines was converted into a temporary flag-staff, from which the stars and stripes were unfurled.

The conference was again called to order at 2 p. m., and Patriarch P. C. Merrill made remarks on the achievements of the Mormon battalion, of which body he is the only living commissioned officer. He said that all of the suffering of the battalion could never be told.

President George Reynolds delivered a discourse on the first principles of the Gospel.

President Joseph F. Smith occupied the balance of the afternoon in a discourse on the order of the Priesthood.

After the presenting of the names of the people by Elder George Reynolds, the balance of the time on Tuesday forenoon was taken up by President Cannon. His discourse was filled with good counsel to and blessings for the people. He said that as it was quite inconvenient for the four Stakes to meet together; no doubt the St. Joseph and Maricopa Stakes would meet in joint conference hereafter once a year; likewise the Snowflake and St. Johns Stakes.

Conference was then adjourned.

The choir was composed of some of the best singers from the four Stakes united under the able direction of Wm. Holgate of St. Johns.

One of the most pleasing features of the conference was a reception held at 1 p. m. on Tuesday, at which all of the Saints had the pleasure of shaking hands and exchanging friendly greetings with Presidents Cannon, Smith and Reynolds.

There was a Seventies' meeting in the afternoon on Tuesday, at which Brother Reynolds gave some good instructions, and a number of Elders were ordained Seventies.

During the conference a number of young men were called as missionaries to visit the Stakes of Arizona in the interest of the Sunday schools.

Several couples were married.

The census of the conference showed the following representation: Maricopa Stake, 63; St. Joseph Stake, 116; St. Johns Stake, 440; Snowflake Stake, 529 and Salt Lake Stake 4, making a total of 1162. Besides these, there must have been from 100 to 200 non-"Mormons" present. In order to attend this conference the people traveled distances varying from 15 to 250 miles, and in some instances over some of the roughest roads in America. But upon leaving every one seemed to feel repaid for the trouble of attending.

JOSEPH W. SMITH,
Clerk of the Conference.

Riverside, Cal., July 17.—Francis Vetta, the noted basso profundo, died here today.

DEATHS.

WALKER.—In Salt Lake City, July 5th, of peritonitis, Harry Walker, in the 44th year of his age.

TONNESSEN.—In the Sixth ward this city, July 11th, 1892, from accident, Andrew Tonnesen, aged 24 years and 11 months; a native of Denmark.

WATSON.—In the Fifteenth ward of this city, Wednesday, at 3:30 p. m., of rheumatic fever, Eugene Alexander Watson, son of Alexander Richard and Florence Watson.

MARCHANT.—On June 24th, of old age, Lydia Marchant, wife of the late Bishop A. Marchant of Peoa. She leaves five sons and four daughters to mourn her death and a large number of grand and great grand children. She emigrated from England to Utah in 1834, and died as she had lived, a faithful Latter-day Saint.

SIRRIE.—At the residence of Mr. George W. Sirrine in Mesa City Arizona, Florence Sirrine, wife of Joel Sirrine and daughter of Samuel Sellers. Died suddenly June 30th. Sister Sirrine was born in Marshall county, Alabama, September 27th, 1874; emigrated west with her parents in 1877, when she was seventeen years of age. She was a faithful Latter-day Saint.

HOPF LOREY.—Born April, 1844, State of Tennessee, died in this city, July 8th, 1892. Was baptized by Elder Warren Dunsenbury, in 1868; emigrated in 1870; has resided in Salt Lake City since then and remained faithful to the Gospel to the end. She leaves three sons, four daughters and eighteen grand children and two grand children to mourn her death.

PRATT.—In Big Cottonwood ward, June 9th, 1892, John Pratt, son of Nathan Pratt and Sarah Felby, born December 3rd, 1814, in Abbot's Langley, Hertfordshire, England. He was called to his eternal home in 1874; emigrated to Utah in 1872, and has resided ever since in the Big Cottonwood ward. He was faithful and exemplary, and died the death of the righteous.

SIMONS.—In the Tenth Ward of Salt Lake City, at 9:25 o'clock on Wednesday evening, 28th, Elizabeth Simons, wife of Joseph Wilson Simons, after an illness of fifteen months, from heart disease. The deceased was in her 61st year, and leaves a husband and four children to mourn her death. Funeral services will be held in the Tenth Ward meeting house, 10 o'clock tomorrow (Friday) morning. Friends invited.

WRIGHT.—At the residence of his sister, Mrs. M. K. Jones, 287, 230 South Eighth street, Salt Lake City, of general debility, at 10 a. m. July 7 1892, William Wright, aged 66 years, 8 months and 13 days. He was a native of stockport, England; emigrated to Utah in 1852, went to Springville in 1857 and lived there over thirty years, when he returned to this city and spent the remainder of his days with his sister. From no disease he will be remembered. Services at 11 a. m., Saturday, July 9, 1892, to which friends are invited. He lived and died a faithful Latter-day Saint.

Millennial Star, please copy

THE DESERET WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION.

ESTABLISHED TRUTH AND LIBERTY JUNE 1850.

NO. 6. SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, JULY 30, 1892. VOL. XLV.

THE UTAH COMMISSION.

In the House of Representatives, July 14th, the report of the committee on appropriations being under consideration, Mr. Forney who had the report in charge, yielded ten minutes to the delegate from Utah to speak on the appropriation for the Utah Commission. As reported in the Congressional Record he said:

Mr. Speaker, I have taken no part in the discussion upon this proposition to abolish the Utah Commission; but now that it is proposed to restore this body I feel, in justice to myself and to my constituents, that I should be heard for a few moments.

The board known as the Utah Commission, to which the paragraph under consideration refers, was created by the act of Congress of March 22, 1882, commonly called the "Edmunds anti-polygamy law." The eighth section of that act reads as follows:

That no polygamist, bigamist or any person cohabiting with more than one woman, and no woman cohabiting with any of the persons described as aforesaid in this section, in any Territory or other place over which the United States have exclusive jurisdiction, shall be entitled to vote at any election held in any such Territory or other place, or be eligible for election or appointment to or be entitled to hold any office or place of public trust, honor, or emolument in, under, or for any such Territory or place, or under the United States.

The object aimed at by this provision is clearly expressed in the language of the section: it was to disfranchise all polygamists and prohibit them from voting and holding office in the Territory of Utah.

It was asserted at that time, and generally believed, that many of the offices in Utah were held by polygamists, and in order that the law might be put into immediate effect the ninth section vacated all the election officers in the Territory, and provided how they should be filled.

This is the language of the section: (Mr. Caine read the section of the Edmunds act relating to the Commission.)

The board of five persons referred to in this section soon became known as the "Utah Commission." Their duties were clearly defined by law. They were empowered to appoint all registration and election officers, canvass the returns, and control the entire election machinery of the Territory.

All elections, municipal, county, and Territorial, were placed under their direction. Whatever power in these regards the law failed to give them they assumed, until by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States the assumed powers were declared illegal.

The whole purpose of the Edmunds act, so far as it relates to elections, was to prevent polygamists from voting or holding office; to put the entire government of the Territory in the hands of the monogamists, temporarily, until the first session of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory, to authorize a non-resident commission to appoint the registration officers and election judges. The language of the law which I have read makes it very clear that this board was not intended to be a permanent one, but was merely an expedient to accomplish a certain object, to oust all polygamists from the offices they held and to fill their places with non-polygamists, as an encouragement and inducement to the latter to continue to live within the law—in short, to humiliate and debase the polygamists and to honor and exalt the monogamists. It was never intended that this Commission should be continued for any length of time, much less to become a permanent institution.

The law clearly contemplated that the Commission should be superseded in the near future. They were only to "continue in office until the Legislative Assembly of said Territory shall make provision for filling said offices." It is a matter of history that at every session of the Legislature except one, since the creation of the Commission, provision has been made for superseding this expensive, unnecessary, and un-American board. The assembly of 1884, composed entirely of monogamists, passed an act in every way suitable and proper, providing for conferring the powers exercised by the Commission, in the appointment of registration and election officers, upon electors of the Territory, who could only be monogamists; but the governor refused to approve the bill, and as the governor of Utah has the power of an absolute veto, the bill could not become a law. In 1886 and 1890 similar bills were passed and met with like treatment from the governor.

The session of the Legislature which adjourned in March last passed a very comprehensive election law embracing the best features of the more recently enacted laws of the several States, including what is known as the Australian ballot system. This bill made provision for superceding the Commission by a Territorial canvassing board, to be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council. The board was to consist of five members, not more than three of whom were to be of the same political party. The bill, like some of the others having the same object in view, was honored with a pocket veto. His excellency the governor did not even favor the representatives of the people with a statement of his objections to the measure. He probably could find no feasible objection to the bill and thought it imprudent to place himself upon record.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I submit that as the Edmunds act was solely aimed at polygamy; that as Congress did not attempt thereby to legislate against but rather in favor of and to encourage the monogamists; that as no polygamist has been able to take the oath required by Congress, and consequently has not been permitted to register, vote, or hold office since 1882, that ever since that time the law-abiding citizens of Utah, of all classes and creeds, have been unjustly deprived, by the absolute and arbitrary power of the governor, of their right of local self-government in the conduct of their elections.

A great deal of credit has been claimed for the Utah Commission for the wonderful service it has rendered the country by the suppression of polygamy in Utah. Let me ask what these commissioners have done in this regard. The polygamists in Utah, after the passage of the Edmunds law, neither attempted to register nor vote, and there has not been a single conviction of one of this class for illegal registration or illegal voting from that day to this. As the Commission had no duties to perform respecting polygamy, outside of registration and election duties, and as no polygamist ever claimed or attempted to exercise the right to register or vote, I fail to see wherein the Commission can claim any credit for the suppression of polygamy. Whatever external forces have brought about the discontinuance of that practice, the Utah Commission played a very small part in its accomplishment.

As a fair, unprejudiced presentation of the existing state of affairs in Utah,

I am permitted to quote from a letter recently received by a distinguished member of this body from two prominent gentlemen, Gentiles so called, one of whom was formerly a member on this floor and who has lived in Utah over twenty years. The other went there some years ago as a federal judge, remained after his term expired, and has become a permanent resident of the Territory. Hear what they say:

"Six months after the issuance of the manifesto of the Mormon Church, abandoning the practice of polygamy, it became apparent to every fair-minded citizen that the Mormons were sincere in their abandonment of the practice, and were anxious to discontinue the unpleasant and unprofitable fight which had so long kept the Mormons and non-Mormons apart. Proposals were made by leading non-Mormons to the prominent Mormons to come out from their political party (the People's party), dissolve it, and join with them in organizing the two great national parties—the Democratic and Republican—throughout the Territory, and thereafter conduct the politics of the Territory precisely on national principles. The proposition was accepted by the Mormons, and their old party was formally dissolved and disbanded in every voting precinct in the Territory. Since then politics in Utah have taken a radical change. The old bitterness which existed between the two parties for so many years has been entirely obliterated, and the Mormons and whites are now willing to get along together as harmoniously as though no differences had ever kept them apart."

Democratic societies and Republican clubs have been organized in nearly every election precinct of the Territory; and the last Territorial election (August, 1891) was the liveliest and most interesting political struggle in the history of the people of Utah. Nothing but national issues were presented to the people, and the great bulk of them have already been decided in favor of the one or the other of the two great parties. It is true, however, that a portion of the old Liberal (Gentile) party is opposing the adoption of national politics in Utah, but their fight is limited; it is confined to but two or three counties, and there it is maintained under the leadership of the Salt Lake Tribune, the newspaper which has fought the Mormon people so unrelentingly for many years. It is still determined that they will not be permitted to surrender, either conditionally or unconditionally, or to do anything else to close the war. Their idea, for reasons well understood here, is that the fight must be kept up and made as bitter as possible. But few, if any, of the Gentiles of Utah doubt the sincerity of the Mormon people. The great majority feel that days of peace have come to Utah, and are anxious to make the Mormons all way and do their part toward bringing to this mountain region a grand season of prosperity, which can only be secured by united and energetic action.

Speaking of the Utah Commission, the writers say:

This body of men have long since demonstrated that they have outlived their usefulness as an election board. From the day they first came to Utah they have insisted upon exercising legislative, judicial, and executive powers which it was plain to any reasonable and candid mind Congress never intended they should exercise. When the board was first created by the act of 1892, it was the Congress' intention that it should remain in existence less than a year, but by the false and scandalous misrepresentations and personal lobbying of its members they have induced Congress by act of March, 1887, to fasten the Commission upon the Territory as a permanency or until abolished by Congress. They have persistently maligned the people of Utah without any cause therefor. They have refused to recognize the formation of the national parties here, and although the late dominant party (the People's party) had disbanded, they declined to appoint any Judge or Judges of election from the Democratic or Republican parties, after being requested by each of said parties so to do, thereby violating the plain spirit and letter of the election law of the Territory.

These commissioners annually send out, in their report to the Secretary of the Interior, and cause to be published, shameful and libelous attacks upon the people of the Territory, calculated to mislead the people of the States and Congress into the idea that the perpetration of the crimes and the payment of their forfeits (which alone insures their divine presence in Utah during the heated term, when it is far pleasanter to spend a few days recreating in the tops of the mountains and at the shores of the famous lake so noted for its salt bathing than it is to squalor in the heated cities and plains of the East) is essential to keep the Territory free from making another serious outbreak which would endanger the life of the nation. These heroic commissioners are still anxious to sacrifice themselves for the good of the nation, on the basis of making an annual three weeks' trip to the mountains for $5,000 each and their expenses. Why they should be so willing to die for many years have been doing their utmost to prevent a solution of the Mormon problem, to the end that they may be continued in office as long as possible. There is no need for them here. The people are competent to cast and count their own votes; and Congress will only admit a solution of the Mormon problem if it were manifest that all their fears entertained are by those thrifty and anxious commissioners.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish it to be distinctly understood that these are the expressions not of Mormons but of reputable non-Mormon citizens of Utah, who know whereof they speak.

But it may be claimed that this statement emanated from a Democratic source.

Permit me to give a Republican view of the Utah Commission. I will read an extract from an editorial from the Enquirer, published at Provo, Utah. It is a Republican sheet.

(Mr. Caine read some extracts from that paper favoring the abolition of the Utah Commission.)

Mr. Henderson of Iowa—I would like to ask the gentleman if any bill has passed the Legislature of Utah providing for elections in that Territory and the discontinuance of the Commission which has been approved by the governor?

Mr. Caine.—No, sir. This board has been rather an expensive luxury to the country. The salaries of its members were fixed in the law at $3000 each per annum, but it was feared that statesmen sufficiently patriotic enough could not be found to undertake for such a meagre salary the onerous duties of preventing the polygamous Mormons from voting, and so the salaries were increased to $5000 a year on an appropriation bill, and have been continued at that rate ever since.

By a statement recently furnished by the Secretary of the Treasury to the chairman of the House committee on Territories, we learn that the cost of this board to the general government from the time of its creation up to March 1, 1892, is as follows:

Salaries of Commission	$241,063 91
Contingent expenses	105,184 82
Compensation and expenses of election officers	193,423 16
Total	$539,670 89

mltee on appropriations which originally recommended in this bill the abolition of the present Utah Commission. There is no use on earth for the present Utah Commission. It is absolutely unnecessary. It is an alien body, out of touch and out of sympathy with the people of Utah, maintained at an enormous expense to the people of the Union. It cost the taxpayers of this country last year $33,500 to maintain these five men in what one who was formerly a member of this House from Kentucky used appropriately to designate, with a most peculiar accent, as "a sine-cure"—that is to say, a job with plenty of pay and no work.

Now, to maintain the Utah Commission, even at a salary of $2000 a year, is to continue these men in a sinecure. We pay to five men $2000 a year, and contingent expenses, amounting to $10,000 per annum, to go to Utah once in twelve months, appoint clerks, registrars, and other election officers, and to supervise the election, count the returns, and certify the result. We can have that work done by a board consisting of the governor and secretary of the Territory and the chief justice of the Territory at a nominal cost of $3000, or $14,000 less than this bill as reported from this conference carries. In the name of economy, in the name of the taxpayers of this country, I ask this House to refuse to confirm this conference report and let us make another attempt to bring the Senate to our proposition. This Democratic House has been unanimous so far in support of the effort of those of us on this side to abolish the Utah Commission as it now exists.

By a vote of two-thirds the House passed the other day the local government bill for Utah, reported from the committee on territories, which wiped out this alien commission. You endorsed last week a report of the committee on appropriations proposing to abolish this Utah Commission and substituting a board composed of the governor, the secretary of the Territory and the chief justice of the Territory. Is there any reason why we should recede today? But in addition to that fact, we find that the united Democracy of the Senate has stood by the united Democracy of the House in abolishing this alien commission. In the Senate the Record shows that every Democratic and three Republican Senators coming from States in the far West, and who therefore must understand the condition existing in Utah, voted to abolish this useless and unnecessary commission. Why, then, I repeat, should we recede today? There can be no reason given, except one which carries little weight, that this bill should be rushed through the House to facilitate adjournment, and that the report of the conference committee should be considered, whereas, by taking a little more time, by giving the conference committee another chance at this item of the bill, we will save $14,000 to the taxpayers and lift from the people of Utah that outrageous stigma of having an alien, carpet-bag commission to supervise their elections. That will be time well spent by the American Congress.

I hope that when my friend from Alabama, in charge of the bill, shall make his motion for the previous question, which naturally stops debate and will cut off all amendments, that the House will vote down the previous question and give us an opportunity to further instruct the conferees to stand firm by the position thus far adhered to by the House of Representatives and by every Democrat in the Senate and three Republicans to abolish the Commission by this bill.

The Republican members of the Senate themselves confessed that the Utah Commission is a useless and expensive luxury, when they agreed to a reduction of their salaries from $5000 to $2000 per annum. If the Senate had thought this Commission necessary to insure fair and honest elections in Utah, do you suppose the Senate committee would have voluntarily reduced their salary?

No good reason can be given why we should continue for another year three commissioners at a salary of even $2,000 each and $7,500 for traveling and other expenses, except that it is a ploy to turn them out all at once. I suppose that we must let them down by easy stages instead of coming at once to the proper proposition of giving Utah a home commission of residents, of citizens of the Territory, every one of whom are Gentiles. That is to say, they are not Mormons, and have no connection with the Mormon Church, and no sympathy with those practices of the Mormon Church which have heretofore caused the great difference between the Mormon people and the people of the rest of the Republic. Moreover, these three proposed commissioners are all Republicans, so that our Republican friends should have no objection on that score. We are willing that a board of three Republicans, home Republicans, resident Republicans, in Utah shall carry out for one more year at least the elections under the Edmunds act, and then leave it to the Legislature of the Territory, as it has been left for the last ten years, to supply the local machinery to control and regulate elections.

I believe, then, in the name of justice, of economy, and of right that this House ought not to ratify this conference report, but to allow us further to instruct the conferees to stand by the original item in the House bill, which created a commission of three residents of the Territory of Utah to supervise their elections.

THE LIBERAL "CONFERENCE."

This is a big field day with the Tuscaroras, Wednesday having been especially set apart for the holding of their conference in the Exposition building. Grand Sachem Powers, the genius loci, was jogging around before breakfast this morning, in company with a number of his most prominent "braves," giving the finishing touches to the programme of events; and between 9 and 10 o'clock he sat at his desk in his law office distributing party "favours" in the shape of satin badges, etc. It was he, too, who doled out the non-transferable tickets of admission to the Exposition building, of which, it is said, something like 8,000 had been scattered broadcast up to 11 a.m. today. No less than 10,000 feet of lumber had been employed in providing seating accommodation in the hall in which the pow-wow is to be held, and the speakers' platform has been elaborately fitted up. The decorations are in keeping with the occasion. The old shields of the counties are there and "Liberal" campaign banners which have done service in the past occupy conspicuous positions. The national colors were brought into play, and Tuscarora flags were aloft. The mottoes on the badges proclaim the virtue (?) of the "tribe." "We have kept the faith!" runs one; while another admonishes the followers of "Boss" to "Hold the Fort!"

At 9 o'clock this morning the "pages" and ushers assembled, in accordance with a pre-arranged plan, in the office of the "Chief." They then went through what was prettily termed "a drill," and received instructions as to their duties during the day. It was 1 o'clock when the Denhalter band struck up a lively tune and made for the Exposition building—the scene of more active operations, and about the same time the Territorial committee met together at the Walker House to arrange preliminaries.

It was promised that none who attended the "great gathering" need go unrefreshed; so to the janitor of the building has been entrusted the duty of dispensing fresh iced lemonade and other innocent drinks to the thirsty, ad libitum. All the visitors have to do is to ask—and receive.

The questions proposed for the consideration of the convention are these:

First—Is it deemed advisable for the Liberal party to nominate a delegate to Congress next fall?

Second—If not, shall the Liberal party wage an active campaign next fall for the local office?

Third—Is the Liberal party ready to advocate immediate statehood for Utah?

Fourth—Is it the judgment of the Liberal party that the time has arrived to divide on party lines in Utah?

The doors of the Exposition building were thrown open at 1:30 p.m., and then the "Liberal" influx began. Shortly after 2 o'clock the meeting was called to order. Various formalities, termed "the opening exercises," were duly observed, the Grand Sachem, as chairman of the "Liberal" Territorial committee, presented himself before his political adherents, and that worthy was about to discharge the first lot of oratorical fireworks in the great pyrotechnic display.

Strict punctuality does not appear to be one of the most prominent traits of the Tuscarora brethren. Their "mammoth" conference in the Exposition building yesterday afternoon (fore-shadowed in Wednesday's News) was announced to begin at 2 o'clock sharp, but it was quite forty-five minutes after the widely-advertised time that word was given to go ahead and the first move was made by way of unfolding the programme.

A faint pattering of feet and a thumping of umbrellas upon the floor at 2:20 was the signal that somebody of more than ordinary importance had arrived. A moment later the spare form of Judge Powers was seen on the platform. He was heavily laden with books and papers, and after bestowing a pleasant smile upon his hero worshippers, stepped down into the body of the hall and indulged in a running-around conversation with members of the party, their wives, sweethearts and children. Colonel Ferry of Park City made his appearance a moment later, and he, too, received a mild greeting. Denhalter's band, which had previously made a tour of the principal streets of the city, beating up the recruits from the "Liberal" ranks, reached the building just before half-past two, by which time, by a count, not more than 500 persons were present. From now on, however, the number gradually swelled, until by 3 o'clock something like 1500 or 1800 Tuscarora heads could be counted in the various parts of the hall. But the galleries were very sparsely occupied.

The band was located in the gallery orchestra at the end of the building, and first struck up the good old tune "The Red, White and Blue," followed by other short selections of well-known airs. Then there was a stamping of feet, as though the audience were becoming impatient, and desirous of getting down to more solid business.

This brought Judge Powers to his feet. He formally declared the convention open, and called upon Mr. C. E. Allen, secretary to the "Liberal" committee to read the call, which duty having been discharged, the Rev. E. M. Knox offered prayer. This had almost exclusive reference to patriotism and an obedience to the laws of our country. "We pray Thee, O God, to guide this party in their deliberations." Next the band played.

Grand Schemer Powers, having in the meantime fortified himself with a glass of water, made the opening speech, which was a eulogy of the "Liberal" party.

The band struck up "America."

The secretary was afterwards requested to read letters from a number of gentlemen who were unable to be present. Among the number were the following:

A. B. Miller, of this city, was in favor of voting for nominating a delegate to Congress against division, and for "a straight fight all along the line."

County Attorney Walter Murphy wrote:

"Vote for me as being opposed to the dissolution of the Liberal party."

W. W. Funge was strongly in favor of keeping up the organization and the old fight. A division on party lines meant death to the "Liberal" party, and he presumed that when the time for statehood arrived the party would march in in many forms.

Resolutions adopted in Ogden and Bingham, declaring in favor of keeping up the organization of the party and the fight, were next read.

Morris Somers sent "from the wilds of Sanpete," that he favored keeping up the fight.

Mr. Giffith of Nephi said that the "Liberals" of that place would stand by the action of the conference.

A. B. Thompson, of Brighton, trusted that the doomsday of the "Liberal" party had not yet arrived.

David Berry, of Fort Douglas, believed a candidate for delegate to Congress should be placed in the field.

W. A. Smith, of Wasatch County, observed that it would be folly to disband.

Charles K. Gilchrist, this city, wrote in favor of placing a candidate for delegate to Congress in the field, and opposed statehood or division.

Allen G. Campbell believed in keeping up the fight. He was an American first, and a Democrat afterwards.

Mr. Powers, when the reading of the letters had been concluded, intimated that he had a "little surprise" in store. It amounted to this. There were no funds, said he, in the treasury. There were certain expenses incurred in arranging for and holding this conference, and therefore "the band will now play and the ushers will go round with the hat!" The Judge added, in his softest manner, that even a quarter of a dollar would be acceptable. The ushers responded and so did the audience.

Judge Boreman offered a resolution, in effect that as that meeting had been convened to obtain an interchange of "Liberal" views, it was not advisable to take any action that would be binding on the future course of the party.

Rev. Dr. Hiffe seconded the motion, but it was ruled out of order.

Mr. Cohen then proposed that a committee of seven be appointed on resolutions and address.

This was carried, and the chairman appointed Messrs. J. M. Cohn, C. C. Goodwin, R. M. Pettigill, of Ogden, Hills, of Provo, J. S. Guthrie, of Corinne, Hayes, of Wasatch, and E. M. Knox, of Davis.

It was next announced by the chairman that Judge Boreman's resolution was in order, and the same was put and adopted.

After some formal matters conference adjourned till 8 p. m.

THE EVENING DISPLAY.

Judge Powers, as chairman, called the conference to order at 8.25, and while the audience—which, it is computed, numbered about three hundred—was getting seated the band discoursed some good music.

There was a large sprinkling of ladies and children at this the second meeting.

Judge Powers stated that at the request of Mr. Hills, of Provo, the name of J. W. Macbeth, of Utah County, would be substituted for his on the committee on platform and address. He then rose to "a question of personal privilege." It was intimated in the conference this afternoon, he said, and the same suggestion had been made in the press of this city, that some person or persons were interested in securing an attendance on this occasion that would indicate a certain expression of opinion. Since 1880 he had been the chairman of the "Liberal" Territorial committee, and during the entire period he had looked upon that position as a trust. At no time and under no circumstances had he ever desired or ever connived at the packing of any convention or caucus. (Cheers.) At no time, and under no circumstances, had he ever recognized any official difference between a Republican and a Democrat. The suggestion referred to of course reflected upon the committee of which he was chairman, and speaking for that body he desired to say that all it had hoped for it had received in the assemblage of the "Liberals" of this Territory that day. He derided the truth of such a report.

W. A. Snyder, of Park City, moved that the action of the conference that afternoon in appointing a committee of seven on resolutions and address be now reconsidered. They had come there for the purpose of advocating "Liberal" principles. The "Liberals" of this Territory had got tired of being called together time after time; therefore let us settle this question now. Let us see now whether we are "Liberals" or somebody else."

The motion as to the appointment of the committee was, after some discussion, ordered to "lie on the table." Mr. Snyder remarking that he did not believe half those who voted on the matter in the afternoon understood what they were voting about.

The chairman at this point invited remarks from any gentlemen who chose to speak on the following questions, outlined previously by the "Liberal" committee:

First—Is it advisable for the Liberal party to nominate a delegate for Congress next fall?

Second—If not, shall the Liberal party wage an active campaign next fall for the local offices?

Third—Is the Liberal party ready to advocate immediate statehood for Utah? Fourth—Is it the judgment of the Liberal party that the time has arrived to divide on party lines in Utah?

He said the committee advised that No. 4 be taken up first—Shall the "Liberals" divide on national party lines this fall? that each speaker speak strictly to the question; that no speaker speak more than fifteen minutes without unanimous consent, and that no one speak more than once.

Mr. J. M. Denny (Salt Lake) viewed this question as a most important one, not only to the "Liberal" party, but to every individual in this Territory. Should they, as "Liberals," place in the field for election this fall a candidate for Congress? If this meeting answered no, they said there was no further use in this Territory, or this land, for a "Liberal" party. He did not agree with any man who said that the party should be disbanded, even if it had accomplished the purpose for which it was organized. The Democratic party was working for Home Rule for Utah. He himself opposed any such proposition and invited those present to do the same. There was no reason whatever why Utah should be considered different from any other portion of this Union. No other Territory had been admitted first by home rule, and Utah was not prepared for it at this time. The Republican party was now pledged to and working for statehood for Utah. So if this party did not wish either statehood or home rule, they must put a candidate in the field for Congress. (Cheers.) The time had not yet come for the dissolution of the "Liberal" party. An active campaign should be waged for the offices, because they did not believe their opponents were any more capable of filling them as Republicans and Democrats than they were as people.

Mr. Dullin of Utah county, who said he had been a "Liberal" for thirty-five years, and had fought in the front ranks ever since it was necessary for an American party in this country, remarked that he had ever committed himself to any but the "Liberal" party. If the People's party had dissolved and the seeds of dissolution had been planted, the "Liberal" party was in honor bound to dissolve. In the last convention he sought hard to obtain recognition twice, but was put to silence by a Mr. Whitbeck of Nephi. (Laughter.) As a matter of fact, in the county in which he resided there was a hopeless majority of "Mormons," and he thought the young men there were ready to tread the same plank as any other young men. The great majority of Utah county "Liberals" were Republicans. (Applause.) In his opinion it was not advisable to put up a candidate for Congress, Salt Lake, Summit and Weber counties were quite able to care for themselves; but they might just as well butt their heads against a stone wall as in all the outside counties vote for a "Liberal" candidate for Congress. He was there to advocate the dissolution of "our grand old party."

Mr. Van Horne (Salt Lake) said they were upon a time of State making—upon the eve of the admission of Utah into the Union as a State, whether they liked it or not. The question was not what the "Liberal" party had done, but what it should do. After their surrender—it was once—

"Voices—"Never has been;" "never will be;" and shouts of "No surrender." Several persons in the audience fairly hallooed themselves hoarse, and the speaker was unable to proceed until the chairman came to the rescue.

"No interruption of any speaker," yelled Judge Powers, "will be permitted by me, your chairman. You are here by the invitation of the Liberal committee. No matter whether his views agree with you or not, hear him, and let us carefully consider them."

Mr. Van Horne said if there had been a surrender of the enemy were they still to keep filled the ranks of the great and glorious army that caused that surrender? That was the question. What were the circumstances that forced them today? Were the conditions changed? (No.) He, for one, thought they had, and the speaker went on to give his reasons for the belief. They were today fighting the united sentiment of the great political commonwealth of the United States. ("No, no," and prolonged interruption.)

The chairman arose, and with a display of warmth, said: The sergeant-at-arms will remove any gentleman from the floor who interrupts the speaker. This is an American assembly which believe in free speech, and every speech will be heard. (Applause.)

Some one seated in the hall near the platform rose to "ask for information." The chairman metaphorically pounced upon him, flourished his wooden toy hammer aloft, then bringing it down with force upon the table, said, "Mr. Van Horne has the floor and you will take your seat." The individual subsided with a fiery protest.

Again Van Horne went on to explain his views on "the situation," and said the "Liberals" were today without one of the friends in Congress that they had had there in the past. They were today fighting in Utah the proposition of Americanizing this Territory on the lines of the "Liberal," Republican and Democratic parties. The "Liberals made their fight, they met their defeat, and they now stood in opposition to the sentiment of the United States. (Expressions of assent and dissent.) What should they do? Nominate a candidate for Congress this fall and carry him down to defeat with them? Because that is what such a step would mean. Were they ready to say to the other two great parties, "You do not know what you are talking about; we do," voices, "yes." The present was a condition of things for which he was sorry.

An ex-policeman of Salt Lake named Green (said to have been expelled from the force for assaulting a negro) devoted about a quarter of an hour almost entirely to abusing the "Mormon" people, although he had prefaced his observations with, "Let us look at this matter calmly, dispassionately and without prejudice." Before he got through he tired his unfortunate hearers completely out. The "Liberal" party had, in his opinion, "accomplished something," and they were not ready to disband on party lines. Now was the time when men should not be afraid to face the foe, etc., etc.

Hon. H. W. Lawrence was next introduced. The question was "Should the 'Liberal' party disband—was its work accomplished?" He reviewed what he termed the conditions of Utah at the time the "Liberal" party was organized, upwards of twenty years ago, and asserted that in these days "there was not that moral force behind the officials that they could execute the laws. You are the ones who afterwards surrounded those officials, grasped the flag, and set it on its peg, saying, 'Here the laws of the government shall be enforced.' They never wished to injure the dominant party here. Though he himself had been an opponent of that party for the last twenty years, yet he had nothing but the kindest feelings towards them. He had fought 'the creed' because he believed it to be wrong. The speaker indulged in a bitter attack upon the "Mormons" by way of demonstrating his "kindest feelings."

Rev. Dr. Hiffe said he was earnestly opposed at the present time to the dissolution of the "Liberal" party. (Loud cheers.) He was eternally opposed to immediate statehood, whether sought for either by the Democratic or Republican party; we were not ready for it in Utah yet. ("No, no," and "Yes, yes.") He was disposed to think, moreover, that it would be for the best interests of the "Liberal" party not to put forward a candidate as delegate to Congress. They would have more influence throughout the nation if they said "It will be our purpose to show our affiliation, sympathy and interest in the Republican or Democratic party." He stood there in an absolutely independent position.

Mayor Baskin then rose to speak, but a number of persons began to move uneasily about the hall and the chairman's toy hammer came down with a heavy thud. Order having been restored, the mayor said he did not come there intending to speak. Statehood for Utah was not "impossible," and if they voted in favor of it, would be a declaration that they had lost their senses. The "Liberal" party had not yet performed its mission and should not be dissolved. This party in its infancy nominated a candidate for Congress; if they now failed to do so it should be for some great and potential reason. The Democratic and Republican parties were ruled today by the old People's party. It was 10 cents to a copper that John T. Calne would now be the candidate of the Democratic party, and that G. W. Bennett or a man of his ilk would be the Republican candidate—perhaps John Henry Smith. Were they prepared to take a course that would force every "Liberal" to stay at home, or go to the polls and cast their vote for Calne or Bennett? ("No.") Both those parties were in advance pledged to statehood. The "Mormon" Democratic party, in addition to that was pledged to the Faulkner bill; and those were the principles which would be incorporated in their platform. How could any "Liberal" go and vote for such a candidate? There was only one alternative—like true "Liberals"—as they always had been—throw their banners to the breeze, put a candidate in nomination and vote for him.

(Cheers and voices: "That is what we will do.") Statehood would be our ruin the very day it came, and no true "Liberal" would cast his vote for it. He did not care what the nation had done in recognizing the two parties. "Liberals," stand to your guns, fight to the end and you will conquer in the future as in the past. As to a few renegades from the old "Liberal" party—many of whom have left you because their official escape were loose upon their heads—notwithstanding these, your latter end will be as glorious as your past if you will be true to yourselves and your cause. (Cheers.)

As in the afternoon the janitors at the request of "Boss" Powers again went around with the hat at this juncture to collect subscriptions "towards paying the expenses."

L. E. Hall thanked G. J. that a change was taking place in Utah. He blessed the "Liberal" party for the good work it had done. He was glad that a division took place, and believed it was a "trick" of the "Mormon" Church to get control of Utah as a State, but that they had largely lost their power now over the young men of Utah. They had been fighting the "Mormon" power, which cried "Surrender!" But he was not going to kick it when down. Looking over the field conscientiously, he said the old fight should not be kept up forever, in face of the changed conditions.

Judge Boreman, of Ogden, considered a middle course the best for the "Liberal" party to pursue. He held that it would be wise for them to say to the people, "You have come out and for a year and a half you have persisted in saying you have laid down your arms, and now we are going to say to you: For one election, at least, we will put no candidate in the field and see whether you will act squarely or not." He did not care whether a man agreed with him or not. He abominated the idea of Statehood, which, however, was right at our doors, and nothing they could say would keep it off. He was in favor of putting up a Republican and Democratic candidate for Congress. (Expressions of dissent, mingled with applause.) He had no doubt that in eighteen months Utah would be a State. Were they going to keep up this fight in this sort of style? Won't you give these people any show? If the other parties choose two obnoxious men, choose the better of them. (Laughter and groans.) That is the only safe course. He thought they ought to elect a Republican to Congress. (Groans.)

It was now 10:30; many among the audience had become weary and moved towards the doors. A motion had been made to adjourn by Mr. Tarpey several times, but the chairman did not pay the slightest heed to it, and said that Mr. C. E. Allen had the floor.

"Then I appeal to the house," said Mr. Tarpey, after being repeatedly "sat upon" by Judge Powers.

"There is no appeal to the house; it is to the committee," replied the chairman sternly.

Cries for "Allen" came from various quarters.

Judge McKay, who occupied a seat at the rear of the platform, insisted in angry tones that there should be "no bulldozing process" employed there. Let the appeal from the chair's ruling go to the house, said he.

"It looks like 'bulldozing,'" echoed a number of persons around.

The chairman indignantly repudiated the "bulldozing" assertion and said "the chair will hold that the committee has a right to decide" (brandishing the hammer proudly above his head).

"Let it go to the house" shouted a thousand voices in chorus. So it did and the house decided that Allen should proceed, and he did, although many were in favor of adjourning until 8 o'clock on Thursday evening.

The "Mormon" people, Allen said, desired the admission of Utah into the Union; the Gentiles did not, and the question of the latter to consider was how to stave off the evil day. "Liberal" voters, he thought, could not be convinced that twelve thousand Gentiles could control 27,000 thousand "Mormons;" and he believed, further, that 12,000 Gentile voters, throwing in their strength with the "Mormon" people, could not go to Washington and have the influence upon legislation that they could if they stood as a solid phalanx alone. "Let them enfranchise the women and there would be 68,000 votes standing solid against you, and you cannot raise more than twenty to beat them. What influence will you have upon the Democratic and Republican party of Utah when you are swallowed up by the Mormons. (Cheers.) Keep the Liberal party intact." He was in favor of nominating a delegate to Congress. (Voices—"And you are fishing for a nomination.") A round of laughter followed this declaration. Let them wage this fight until they had won it or had gone down to "magnificent defeat."

At this point the audience showed unmistakable signs of its desire to be dismissed for the night. The hands of the clock now pointed to 10:55. Judge Powers, on the other hand, wanted to "hold the fort" as long as he p could, and seemed anxious to prolong the meeting until midnight.

There came again a motion to adjourn until 8 o'clock on Thursday night; then an amendment fixed the hour at 7:30. There was a great hubbub, and when the noise had gone on for some minutes Judge Goodwin came forward and said—"We have only heard one or two speakers outside of Salt Lake. We in the city have been taking up all the time, to their exclusion. They ought to be heard."

This latter observation had reference to a proposition by a Mr. Davellin—which at one time appeared likely to carry the way—take the vote of the meeting upon resolutions submitted by the "Liberal" committee forthwith, and so close up the conference right up.

But after a lot of wrangling and protesting, H. H. W. Lawrence moved that the conference adjourn till 10:30 this morning, and that went with a whoop. The motion having been adopted, the exhausted members of Denbaiter's band played a short tune and the audience dispersed to their homes, to take a respite until this a. m.

"What a falling off was there!" When the hour arrived for the re-assembling of the "Liberals" in the Exposition building this morning, there were certainly not more than fifty persons present. But the band was set to work and entertained the few in attendance until more had arrived. At 10:50 the number probably reached 300, and at that figure the numerical representation stood till the time of adjournment—shortly after midday. It was a dreary spectacle altogether, and where last night's hosts had gone appeared to be a sort of conglomeration, which the whippers-in of the tribe were seemingly unable, or did not care to, answer.

Just before 11 Judge Powers (as chairman) ascended the platform—there were three others seated thereon—and in a sorrowful tone of voice said—Conference will come to order.

Whereupon W. C. Edwards landed in the following resolution:

Whereas, This is a conference of the "Liberal" and not the "Mormon" party, and when it was called the indirect promise was given that it should not adjourn until every man had had full opportunity to express his views; therefore be it

Resolved, That the propositions now under consideration be regarded as the previous question, and that it be not put until every man has been heard who desires to speak, if this conference lasts all summer.

Mr. Nicholls seconded.

Judge McKay moved to amend so that the previous question should be called at or before 11 o'clock tonight.

Mr. W. Newton seconded.

Judge McKay said that if this conference was kept bobbing as it had been, there would not be more than a dozen or so people here eventually. This audience was not, in his judgment, large enough—though respectable enough—to deal with this question, and he thought the meeting ought to be adjourned until this evening.

C. M. Jackson said it was a question of votes, not argument, that was going to prevail.

Mr. Newton remarked that if gentlemen desired to be heard let them attend. He did not want this conference to be prolonged for a week or ten days in order that some individual might have the felicity of speaking to himself at the end of that time. Let the vote be taken before a full house this evening—he did not care if it was not done before two o'clock tomorrow morning like it was at the Chicago convention, when he had the pleasure of sitting outside and listening. (Laughter.)

Discharged Policeman Green said: "Let us shut out no one from voting," and then he launched out again into a rabid anti-"Mormon" attack, in imitation of his last night's effort.

Judge McKay moved, as an amendment, that the vote upon the committee's resolutions be taken "during this evening's session."

This was seconded and carried.

The secretary then read a letter. It was from N. L. Eliason, who wrote from Mormon, Utah, stating that the "Liberal" of that place wished him to state that they were opposed to the dissolution of the "Liberal" party, and that they would vote as a unit for any staunch "Liberal" whom the party felt pleased to nominate.

C. E. Munson, of Mapleton, Utah County, devoted a few moments to a general abuse of the "Mormon" people. His remarks were utterly devoid of sense or argument.

Mr. Coombes, of Brigham City, said the "Liberals" of Box Elder County were of opinion that the time had not come to divide on party lines. They thought it desirable to put a candidate in the field for Congress this fall. He regretted the secession which had taken place from the "Liberal" ranks, but that was their own lookout. They ought not to be Turners or "Liberal" Democrats, but Simon pure "Liberals" and stay by them until the entire question is settled. The speaker said he intended to hunt with the "Liberal" party as long as there was one.

Mr. Alexander, of Salt Lake, rose to speak, but gave way to Coin. Ferry (Park City), who moved that the motion made yesterday by Mr. Cohen (Park City) to the effect that a committee of seven be appointed by the chair to prepare an address at the close of the conference setting forth the sentiments of the conference, to the people of this Territory, be now taken from the table, the same having been laid thereon last night, on a motion to reconsider.

Col. Ferry's proposition was seconded, and Judge Powers, having unbosomed himself of a variety of sentiments on the subjects, it was adopted.

In reply to a question, the chairman said the report of the committee would not be presented until the next regular convention.

Mr. Edwards moved that the same committee appointed yesterday be now re-appointed.

But Judge Goodwin, one of the members, it was announced, wished to withdraw, and after several names had been mentioned as a substitute, ex-Policeman Green moved that "only real Americans be placed on guard." This indiscreet remark was speedily cried down.

A. B. Emery, of Summit county moved as an amendment that the Territorial "Liberal" committee formulate the address and resolutions without reference to any other committee. He, of course, had every confidence in that body's ability, integrity, and good judgment.

Mr. Edwards rose and wished to speak.

Judge Powers—Keep to the question, then. We are now on a side track and we want to get on the main track again.

Mr. Edwards—Let us act like Liberals. Never let us choke off any man from expressing his sentiments.

The Chairman—The gentleman is not talking to the question. No one has endeavored to choke anybody off.

Mr. Edwards hoped Mr. Emery's proposition would be defeated.

The Chairman assured the meeting that the committee had no desire to have their already onerous burdens added to. They would prefer to have this duty given to some independent committee.

Mr. McLaughlin favored Mr. Emery's motion and hoped it would prevail.

Mr. Alexander moved, as another amendment, that the name of Judge Bor-man be added to the Territorial Central Committee, but it was ruled out of order by the chairman.

Judge Goodwin thought Mr. Emery's proposition ought to carry.

Mr. Emery's substitute was put and carried.

The "four propositions" were then returned to.

Mr. Phil. Corcoran went upon the platform, but Edwards objected to that gentleman having the floor on the ground that he was "not a 'Liberal'."

The Chairman called up Mr. Corcoran to state his position and he should be heard.

Mr. Corcoran said he had been a loyal and uncompromising "Liberal" from the time he first set foot in Utah up to the closing hours of the last legislature. He had ever stood by "Liberalism," ever ready to speak for it and to apologize for its mistakes and shortcomings. Outside of those who were elected to office by "Liberal" votes, outside of those who desired to be re-elected next fall, he believed he was just as good a "Liberal"—he preferred to say as good an American—as the next man. He felt he had a right to be here and to be heard.

The Chairman—Yes, certainly, if you think you can aid the committee in the proposition under discussion.

Cries of "Hear him!" "Give him a chance!"

The Chairman—Proceed.

Mr. Corcoran—The hostility of the members of the last legislature—

The Chairman (bringing down his gavel)—The gentleman will confine himself to the four propositions under discussion. He will discuss these or take his seat. (Cheers.)

Voices—"Give him a chance."

The Chairman—He will have a chance if he keeps to the point.

Mr. Corcoran—I wish to do it in my own language, and you shall hear the information I shall give the members of the "Liberal" party and this committee. The speaker essayed to comment upon what he termed "the demoralization which exists in the ranks of the workingmen;" but he was pulled up in short order by the chairman, who again repeated the alternative.

Mr. Corcoran then retired from the platform amid the jeers of the audience.

Rev. Dr. Iliff moved that Mr. Corcoran be permitted to speak on the lines he had indicated, but the chairman promptly ruled him out of order. "We cannot discuss," he said with a severe frown, "all the evils committed by society and all the wrongs of government."

Dr. Iliff—I supposed we were here for free and open discussion, but if not, I am willing to take up my hat and say "Good-day."

The Chairman—The chair desires a full discussion of the questions, but not a general criticism of affairs.

Dr. Iliff—I think there should be some criticism at times if criticism is necessary.

Mr. Edwards—If he is not a "Liberal" he has no right to be here.

The Chairman—Yes he has, if he has once stood with the party, but he must confine his views to these four propositions.

The subject then dropped.

Mr. David Holmes, of Utah county, was of the opinion that the time had not arrived for the "Liberal" party to divide on party lines. He should vote for a candidate to Congress in full.

On motion of Mr. Pettengill (Ogden) the conference adjourned till 8 p. m.

If the so-called "Liberal" conference in the Exposition building had been drawn out very much longer, the great chances are that "Boss" Powers and Statisticians Allen would have been about the only two left to cast their votes for those four propositions concerning which so much talk was made during the party pluck. On Wednesday evening the audience was one of tolerably respectable proportions, but that of yesterday morning was an awfully feeble apology for a political gathering; while the "mass" meeting which had been looked forward to last night with such fond hopes and anticipations has to be recorded as another dismal failure. In all parts of the hall there may have been something approaching 1000 persons present; but not more than three-fourths of those were "Liberals," and only the dying embers of enthusiasm were left. Now and then in the course of the evening, by a desperate effort, the Tuscaraora crowd managed to work up a cheer, but even that had a ring of despair in it, and when at 11 o'clock the vote of the conference having been taken—the meeting was finally dismissed, everybody appeared glad to get away.

It was 8:20 when the great chief of the tribe—looking anything but happy—stepped upon the platform and took the chair. Bringing down his gavel on the table with a tremendous thump he called the conference to order, and as a preliminary to the proceedings, expressed an earnest desire to make an explanation. His solid look and sober tone caused the little band of Tuscaraoras to prick up their ears, as though anticipating that again something shocking had happened. But it was again the old fable of the mountain and the mouse! He said it had been reported by one of the newspapers of a city—as he was informed—that a circular was sent out by the "Liberal" committee and a pretended quotation was given from the circular, the same being within quotation marks, requesting "Liberals" of the Territory to send letters to the committee, the same being of the tenor required, as indicated by the quotations. He desired to say for the committee, also for himself personally, that so far as it pretended to be a quotation, it was a quotation that never emanated from them. To that extent, then, it was a forgery.

Secretary C. E. Allen read a communication from a prominent citizen of this city. The writer asked to vote "n." on the proposition to nominate a delegate for Congress, and also that he be not cast out. The letter was signed "T. C. Iliff."

A letter from ex-Mayor George M. Scott asked that the Liberal party put up a candidate for Congress.

The Chairman then remarked that as the vote on the four propositions would be taken this evening at a reasonable hour, he should hold the speakers "to the limit," in order to give as much opportunity as possible for those who desired to address the conference.

The Rev. B. M. Knox, of Davis County, first took the floor. He represented seventy-five "Liberals" from Davis County, he said, and they all wanted to send a delegate to Congress. When he heard the "Liberals" from Sanpete saying that they wanted a "Liberal" delegate, he thought they ought, at least, to concede something to them. He believed that today, to the men who were stepping out from the "Liberal" ranks into another party, they could say, "God bless you; we are stronger without you than we are with you." He would rather have five men who believed in a principle and stood by it than any five hundred brigadiers, generals and colonels who were only waiting for office and spoils. If they stood by their guns as "Liberals" in this Territory, they could say to the nation, "We demand that you listen to the Spartan band here for the grandest principles that ever men fought for in any political issue in the world." This division on party lines in the Territory was not straight. Let them this fall do the straight thing all round and he believed they could send a delegation to Washington, if necessary, to state off statehood and home rule by showing where we stood.

Mr. Franks (Salt Lake) next essayed to enlighten the conference on matters political. He uttered a good deal, but there was very little in it. "This statehood racket is an awfully funny thing," said Franks in an awfully funny way; "yes, funnier on the surface than it is further down." He proceeded to glance at the changed condition of affairs, "to look the opportunity," in passing, of awarding an insult to John Henry Smith, as "a stumper of the country." He was heartily in favor of nominating and electing as delegate to Congress a "Liberal" pure and simple. (Applause.) Put him there with the biggest vote you have ever cast and you will then show your strength.

Mr. Davellin (Salt Lake) asked the Tuscaraoras to pardon "a bad break" he happened to make the night before. He was in favor of electing a "Liberal" delegate to Congress, and surely no good Republican in the house should take exception to it. Mr. Davellin is another "funny" fellow, and played the bones to Franks, the other "corner man."

It was resolved at this point that each succeeding speaker be limited to ten minutes, and then Mr. Powers made another touching appeal for more money. "My friends, we find ourselves still about $200 behind, and therefore before the vote is taken we are going to give you one more chance of contributing; because if you don't give, I am the man left." Then came the oft-repeated "The band will play and the ushers will go round the hall."

The band did its part in response, the ushers did theirs, and the golden (?) harvest having been reaped,

Colonel M. M. Kaighn addressed the meeting. He described himself as an old-time Republican and said that for some weeks he had been trying to get into the Republican party, but he could find no opening. The main plank in that party was statehood. If a vote were taken in Utah tonight he did not think there was a single "Liberal" but would vote against statehood. Statehood would come to us in a comparatively short time; they could not contest the fact that conditions in Utah were changing; but no candid man who loved his country and her principles would say "We are ready for statehood in the Territory today." He did not see how any "Liberal" could leave his party now and join either of the other factions. Therefore, though it parted friendships and subjected him to contumely, he was in favor of nominating a "Liberal" candidate for Congress and supporting him. (Applause.)

Judge McKay moved that the vote on the four propositions be taken at 10:30. (Voice: "Or sooner.") This was seconded and carried.

Mr. Anderson proposed that from this time the speeches be limited to five minutes. This suggestion of relief was hailed with a unanimous shout of delight, and was adopted.

W. G. Newton, the Tuscarora humorist, said he felt somewhat diffident about talking to "Liberals" who had waged the good fight for so long. He was almost a stranger within the gates of Utah, but he could not sit still when momentous questions were being discussed. The old "Liberal" ship was good enough for him. "A jack of state even would abandon a vessel until it was submerged." He would not have it said that a rat possessed more intelligence than himself (laughter), for it did not. He was there to take part in the proceedings, an account of which would be telegraphed over the mountains through the canyons of Colorado, the plains of Nebraska, the green fields of Iowa and the city by the big sea water where the Tuscaroras were shut out of the convention. Ex-Councilman Hall, Van Horne and others saw a change in the local political condition.

Time was called, but the speaker was granted additional time in which to introduce an anti-"Mormon" and anti-statehood resolution, as follows.

Whereas, The constitutions of the United States and of the various States of the Union declare and enforce a complete separation of church and state; and,

Whereas, In no State of the Union do the adherents of one religious denomination or sect hold a majority of votes over all others combined; and

Whereas, The admission of any State in which any one denomination had such a majority would be, in our opinion, a dangerous experiment in statecraft; and

Whereas, Utah is in such a condition that the adherents of one sect which has always been desirous of and has always extended political power have a large majority over all other voters; therefore be it

Resolved, That we citizens of Utah and loyal and patriotic citizens of the United States, devoted to the Constitution, are unalterably opposed to the admission of Utah to the political power until such time as the increase of population shall remove all danger of enriching a theocratic government behind State lines.

The point was taken that the resolutions could not be adopted until the propositions for the convention's consideration had been voted on, and the chairman sustained it.

Mr. W. R. Campbell, of Cache county, said he was ready to cast his vote for a "Liberal" candidate as delegate to Congress in 1892. The gentleman rolled off a lot of tedious talk, devoted largely to Logan politics, and when the audience began to rattle their feet and "Time" was called, he wisely took the hint and resumed his seat.

Mr. S. P. Edholm, Probate Judge of Morgan County, shook hands with himself on "the fact that the 'Liberals' were increasing in numbers." The time had not come for division; "we will not allow it." This was not the day to lay down their weapons and go to sleep. He was ready to vote for a "Liberal" delegate to Congress. (Cheers.) "I am not able to say much," the speaker was honest enough to admit, "but I think a good deal—(loud laughter)—and when I can put it down on paper I can do a little better." (More laughter.) He then nodded a good-bye to the audience and stepped down.

Mr. A. F. Coad (Salt Lake) was wholly opposed to the dissolution of the "Liberals" party until there were enough Gentiles to deal with the "Mormons." He mourned that, as "Liberal" Republicans, they had lost their leader. Their duty as loyal, liberty-loving citizens was to stave off the question of statehood just as long as possible. Let them put up a "Liberal" candidate as delegate for Congress and roll as big a vote as possible for him. This was not a time for friendship to cut a figure here, or for selfish considerations. Every man should consider what was the correct thing to do today and act upon his convictions.

Mr. Joseph M. Cohen (Park City) said that Summit County would place a "Liberal" ticket in the field from A. to Z, and if a "Liberal" delegate to Congress were nominated, he pledged that on election day in November they would give more than 1000 round majority. With tears in his large eyes Mr. Cohen deplored that their "honored chief" had been so grossly insulted by holludes in the Twenty-first ward. "It is a shining indication that the same spirit was bred and born in the bone and descends from generation to generation and cannot be wiped out." He happened to be one of those unfortunate who went to Chicago and were compelled to be on the outside. (Laughter.) He was told he was not a Democrat. If to be a Democrat, however, was to embrace the "Mormon" faith, then he was no Democrat. Let them keep up the "Liberal" party in this Territory.

Mr. Powers said he understood the situation here better than politicians at Washington. He placed country above party now, as heretofore, but so long as it seemed to him right and just, proper and test that the "Liberal" party should continue in full force in this Territory he should hold up his hand in its behalf, even though he stood alone. This declaration of self-sacrifice went to the hearts of the Tuscaroras, and they fairly shouted themselves hoarse. The national party had no strings upon him—oh! so. He felt that the interests of the whole community were greater than those of self-serving and time-serving politicians. To cast their vote against home rule and statehood was to cast them for a nominee for Congress. Recognition from a national party was not everything; satisfaction to a man's conscience was better than all. He was in favor of the "Liberal" party remaining intact until the time came—and come it would—when they could say, "We are ready for statehood." Until then questions dividing national parties had no use for them here.

Theodore Burmeister ambled to the platform and delivered one of his old time blood and thunder speeches.

In answer to loud calls for Judge Goodwin, that gentleman next appeared in view. He said the question was what should they do under the circumstances? This was a trying era for the "Liberal" party. Statehood was close upon us, and what they had to consider was how best to meet that emergency when it should come or put it off as long as possible. Let the "Liberal" party at this time stand together. (Cheers.)

The five minute rule evidently did not apply to Judge Goodwin. He took up fully 20 minutes, winding up in this fashion: "Let us utter our protest against Statehood and determine to run a delegate for Congress—in short, do as we have through the years—make a fight on 'Liberal' lines, with malice towards none, charity towards all, but doing the best we can, first for our country and next for our families and lastly for the good of the people of this State."

It being now 10:35, several persons among the audience began to move out of the building; but the chairman besought them to remain, promising that the vote would be taken almost immediately. One and a half minutes each would first be allowed, however, to four more gentlemen who desired to speak. The first two were C. W. Edwards (late of the Salt Lake Evening Times, whose venomous attack on certain gentlemen was in very bad taste) and C. B. Glenn.

When they had unburdened themselves the audience got tired and shouts of "Question" went up.

The chairman treated the request with the same old indifference which he had exhibited from time to time during the pow-wow, remarking—"The question will be put as soon as these other two gentlemen are through. It will be three minutes."

Mr. Lochrie then took the platform "as a true American citizen, but not from Tennessee," but before he had traveled far the audience, growing still more impatient, interrupted with "Time!" "Time!"

Mr. Powers jumped up and looked down with wrath. "The chair will call 'Time.' It doesn't need any assistance from the conference." After administering which gentle snub he sat down again, and Mr. Liehrle disappeared a moment or so later.

"Judge Hoge will close the discussion," said the chairman. He came to the platform and said a few words, and the orations of the conference were at an end. Judge Hoge wanted to know "where will be the hand to raise against Statedeb? If the 'Liberal' party is disbanded?"

"Vote, vote," came from a hundred or two throats, and at length the "Bose" yielded to the persistent calls of the audience.

The four cut and dried propositions were impressively read by Powers, and then submitted. They were, of course, all carried (with but one dissentient—somebody at extreme end of the hall) and the building rang with a loud buzz.

"Three cheers for the Liberal party" shouted Judge Powers, who had lashed himself into a very fury of enthusiasm. Hats and handkerchiefs went up, and having exclaimed to their hearts' content, the meeting dispersed on the stroke of eleven. It did not take many minutes to empty the building.

SOCIAL DEMOCRACY IN GERMANY.

The growth of social democracy in Germany is one of the most remarkable movements of the century. The first Imperial Parliaments contained 9, 12, 24 and 11 social Democratic members. The present Parliament includes 35, the largest number ever yet elected. While the number is not insignificant, the number of votes cast is still more ominous. There are some 10 or 12 parties in Germany, but the social Democrats cast more votes than any other party at the election of 1890. Other parties have more representatives, because the social Democratic vote was not so concentrated. The fact that this vote comes from all sections of the country, and is more evenly distributed than that of any other party, is significant. It decreases, for the time being at least, the number of representatives in Parliament, but it indicates a greater hold upon the entire country. The stranger in Germany who discusses social and political topics will hear frequently enough the expression, "You know the social Democrats are now our largest political party." During the past summer I attended various meetings of workmen and all that I saw and heard confirmed the assertion that the labor movement in Germany is social democratic. If a meeting of any organized body of workmen is attended, the speakers may advocate specific measures for the time being, resembling those which meet with favor from trade unions in England and America, but the sentiment will almost invariably be heard that social democracy alone can bring permanent and complete relief from the evils under which the workmen suffer. A few women are generally found at their meetings, and some of them are good looking and intelligent.

The great increase of power of the political party which represents the working men has brought with it a certain feeling of responsibility. Obedience to law and the use of constitutional remedies were always recommended. Patience under persecution from the authorities were enjoined. The folly of resistance to the constituted authorities of the land seemed to be ever present to the leaders, while they could not help feeling a certain gratification at the progress made by the use of legal methods. The sincerity of the social Democrat can scarcely be questioned. He has strong convictions for which he has suffered and is willing to suffer. The only real missionary zeal and strong faith which impressed me in Germany I found among the social Democrats. They have an interest in life; they have a purpose in which they believe and for which they think it worth while to make sacrifices. The coldness, the indifference and the skepticism found in the churches of Germany which I diligently attended contrasted most painfully with the faith and energy of the social Democrats.

When social Democracy is mentioned it must be borne in mind that it means not merely socialism but Democracy, and emphasis is laid on both of these terms. A social Democrat believes that socialism in Germany, to be worth anything, must come through Democracy. This explains the strong opposition which they have encountered.

A "LIBERAL" DISSENTS.

Pardon me for troubling you. Just now I can hardly refrain from writing you a line. The Tribune of this morning, referring to the Liberal Territorial conference of last night, says that the conference voted without a dissenting voice. That may be true. It does not, however, prove that there were no dissenters present. I think there were many. And there is not a doubt in my mind that it will be shown by the ballot that will be cast in November next. Many dissenters kept their seats, not wishing to make any special display of themselves.

In reference to that "single voice" referred to by the Tribune, that sounded as that paper says, like that of a small boy shouting "No," I will say knowingly—"That voice was the voice of a full grown man—a man who, from the beginning of the Liberal party identified himself with that party and held on to it till within a very few days past. Becoming convinced that the time had about arrived when the Liberal party should disband, I went to the conference last night, intending too, if there seemed to be the least chance, to take the stand and, in a very few words, state my disapproval of continuing any longer the organization of the Liberal party. Finding, however, that so many of the lesser lights of the party organization (some of the greater lights of the party having just before gone out) were so very anxious to make as good a display of themselves as possible—one hour or more before the conference adjourned, the writer made up his mind to keep his seat.

If he had spoken he would have at least said to the first proposition: "I think not. It is not likely that any Liberal can be elected." A delegate to the nation's Congress is not local, but national. To the second proposition, No. Let the Republicans and Democrats of the party divide their forces and vote their respective party tickets." To the third proposition, Yes. Just so soon as the parent government is ready to give us statehood. To the fourth, Yes. Disband now, and thereby test the political sincerity of the priesthood of the Mormon church. Come what may the past cannot possibly ever be repeated. Such fellow citizens is my judgment.

DISSENTER.

MODERN CHRISTIANITY IN JAPAN.

SANGUINE Christian missionaries in Japan have endeavored to create an impression abroad that the inhabitants of that country are almost ready to embrace Christianity en masse. The fact is, however, that of a population of forty million souls, only forty thousand are professed Christians of the various denominations, and for each Christian church, there are at least five heathen pagodas. Now, a missionary reports that the heathen population in Japan are organizing societies to defend the people from further encroachment by the foreign religion. A Mr. Carey says, that when he, a short time ago, passed through Taketo, he noticed on almost every door in the city a board bearing an inscription, stating that the occupants had solemnly promised never to have anything to do with Christianity.

This seems to prove that the Japanese after years of studying the new religion as presented by the various missionaries, have finally come to the conclusion that their own theology is superior and worth maintaining.

FAVORS HOME RULE.

THE following is from the New York News:

"It reads somewhat strangely when we find in the Congressional reports that the House of Representatives last week passed a bill to grant local self-government to the people of Utah Territory. Many people had supposed that local self-government was the keystone of our American system. Other Territories had long since secured it, at the hands of the Federal Government the full right to elect their Legislatures and make their local enactments, the power being reserved at Washington, but almost never exercised, to disapprove of any Territorial act not in consonance with our General Government's policy. But in Utah, in consequence of religious disputes, the Federal Government has, ever since the beginning of the Grant administration, denied the right of control of their own local affairs to the people, and has sent out satraps and pachas to rule with absolute sway.

"If there ever was an excuse for this arbitrary usurpation it long since disappeared.

"The cause of offense being thus removed, it is but just that the American citizens in that Territory should enjoy the privileges of American citizens elsewhere, without reference to past prejudices and their protest. But the Democratic and the Republican Presidential conventions have this year admitted Mormon delegates to seats, with no more question than though they had been Quakers, Roman Catholics or Agnostics. And the Democratic House of Representatives has now striven to atone for past prejudices and injustices by passing the act we have referred to. The Senate should concur, and thus recall the despotic gang of Federal office-holders who are making all the trouble there now is in Utah."

THE DESERET WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED BY
THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:

Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, $2.50

Per Volume, of Twenty-six Numbers, . . . 1.50

IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. PENROSE, EDITOR.

Saturday, . . . July 30, 1902

SIGNS OF DISINTEGRATION.

We give some space today to an account of the proceedings of the "Liberal" conference. Taking them as a whole and speaking without prejudice, they present very strong symptoms of early dissolution of the party. This result will come independently of the final action of the conference. As a matter of effect following a cause, the demise of the organization seems inevitable. The symptoms point in that direction.

To our thinking the matter of putting a candidate in the field for delegate to Congress does not affect the question to any great extent. It seems this way: If a candidate for Congressional delegate should not be selected, the party practically acknowledges that it is useless any longer to maintain the fight, and the organization goes to pieces. On the other hand, should a candidate for the delegateship be placed in the field, the "Liberal" vote would, according to the most potent indications, be so comparatively insignificant that the result would be precisely the same. This question of selection or otherwise of a candidate for representative in Congress, no matter which determination may be reached, will also render useless any future effort to capture local offices.

Any symptoms in the conference that do not seem to agree with the views herein expressed are only ostensible—not real. They consist mainly of boisterous yells of the more ignorant portion of the audience, and serve to give color to the allegations of some of the speakers to the effect that the meeting had been stuffed with Tuscarora claqueurs. The proceedings as a whole show that the intelligent, thinking, and certainly the more disinterested—of the leaders, judging from the speeches, are in favor of division on national party lines. The radical assertions to the contrary of "Liberal" office-holders, such as Mayer Bakin and C. E. Allen, have necessarily but little force. Mr. Allen especially naturally has no hope of being elected to office by either of the national parties, because it is notorious that his present official position does not properly belong to him. This fact was proved in the Courts. It is not likely that either of the great parties would trust him after such an exhibit. Hence his only hope for office necessarily lies in the prolonged existence of the party which enabled him to secure an office which rightfully belongs to another.

Recent events show clearly that the "Liberal" party is now confronted by forces that are too formidable for it to even hope to successfully cope with.

They are as follow: The flat of both the great national parties; the alienation from the organization of its most capable, influential and clear-headed adherents; the sharply defined political situation of the Territory as a whole; the dissolution into thin air of the anti-"Mormon" bugaboo.

This is a plain and dispassionate view of the situation, scanned from a non-partisan standpoint.

THE STATE STREET PAVING.

YESTERDAY the NEWS published a portion of the proceedings of a "star chamber" session of the City Council. The subject discussed with closed doors was the unsatisfactory character of the paving work done on State street. The chief engineer denounced the job in strong terms and threatened to resign rather than accept the work referred to.

This state of affairs demonstrates the correctness of our position as to the uselessness of inspectors who are understood to receive their appointments as rewards for "Liberal" partisan work at elections. They are placed in position without the slightest reference to their fitness.

The engineer and other officials some time since protested vigorously against the retention of Mr. Gus Woods, a radical Tuscarora, as Inspector on State street. The ground of objection was that nobody familiar with his methods could correctly accuse him of a proper understanding of the duties of his position. He was said to be spotlessly innocent of such knowledge. But he was retained at a salary of $100 a month. It is now proved, as we asserted some time ago would be the case, that this was so much of the people's money worse than thrown away.

A morning local cotemporary, not noted any more for consistency than is Mr. Woods for inspectorial capacity, to judge of the quality of street paving, does not seem pleased about the NEWS giving publicity to the subject treated by the Council in the alleged secret session. It accuses, without a shadow of foundation, Councilman Rich of having given the information contained in the NEWS article to a reporter of this journal. The fact is that our reporter obtained the points from the minutes of the meeting, which were on file in the City Recorder's office. We considered the information due to the public, the people being interested in regard to the subject of squandering their money for the payment of officials that are a great deal worse than useless.

GEORGE WASHINGTON ON RELIGIOUS LIBERTY.

THE greatness of Washington was conspicuously exhibited by his repugnance to anything in the shape of interference with religious freedom and the rights of conscience. A Seventh-Day Baptist Society solicited his views on this subject. The request was made by letter, in which the great patriot and statesman was asked whether he, as President of the convention that framed the Constitution of the United States, understood that instrument to warrant any such interference as the kind referred to. The society, it appears, had had their rights interfered with at the investigation of their religious opponents. The answer is dated August 4th, 1789, and reads as follows:

"If I had had the least idea of any difficulty resulting from the Constitution adopted by the convention of which I had the honor to be president, when it was formed, so as to endanger the rights of any religious denomination, then I never should have attached my name to that instrument. If I had any idea that the general government was so administered that liberty of conscience was endangered, I pray you be assured that no man would be more willing than myself to revise and alter that part of it, so as to avoid religious persecution. You can, without doubt, remember that I have often expressed my opinion that every man who conducts himself as a good citizen is accountable alone to God for his religious faith, and should be protected in worshipping God according to the dictates of his own conscience.

GEORGE WASHINGTON."

HOW A YOUNG MAN SUCCEEDED.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Worcester Press tells an interesting, almost romantic, story about the manner in which a young Boston newspaperman achieved success in England. He is a graduate of Harvard University and was a useful member of the staff of the journal on which he was employed.

An occasion arose for sending the young gentleman to Montreal for a piece of newspaper work. He went there and registered at the St. Lawrence Hotel. He had been there but a few hours when he noticed that he was closely watched by a gentleman of rather himself, who seemed to be staying in the hotel. Before his first evening was passed he was surprised to receive a card bearing his own name from a gentleman who waited for an interview below. The gentleman was asked to come to his room, and proved to be the same one who had watched the young man in the office of the hotel. He at once explained his reason for calling. He said he was a member of the English Parliament on a visit to Canada. He had lost a son by death to whom the young man from Boston bore a striking resemblance, and his interest in him had been increased by finding their names to be identical. He inquired concerning the young man's family and all about him. The result was that he gave the Boston boy an urgent invitation to visit England as his guest, at the same time expressing a desire to make the acquaintance of his parents. He at once accepted an invitation to visit Waltham and meet them.

So pressing was his request that the young man should return with him to London that it was complied with at the earliest possible moment. Taking with him letters of introduction to a number of literary men in England, the young editor sailed for that country, and in the space of a few weeks found himself possessed of a valuable acquaintance among some of the most important people of the old country. Among others whom he met were the Walter family, the prineditor proprietors of the London Times. One of the ladies of the family took a special interest in him, and this is not strange, for he was a man of attractive person and manner. Through her active instrumentality an offer was soon made to him of employment in the Times office. This came to him unexpected and undesired, and he was disposed to refuse it. He was urged to accept, however, and was told that it would be easy for him, after spending a few months in the home office in London, to go abroad on some desirable duty for the paper. He accepted the offer, and after a few months was sent to Paris with independent authority and under circumstances every way most agreeable. He is not a subordinate of the noted De Blowitz, but acts as a special commissioner from the editor of the Times in Paris. This brings him into relation with the highest functionaries, and it is doubtful if any one connected with the paper has ever held a more important and responsible place on its staff.

From the time when he left Boston for Montreal this young man's destiny seemed to have been shaped for him by his finances over which he has held no control whatever. His name is W. M. Fullerton.

A LADY FOR STATE ATTORNEY-GENERAL.

THE People's party is distinguishing itself in various ways. In Montana its candidate for Attorney-General is Miss Ella L. Knowles, a lady lawyer well known throughout the State. Strange to say she is not put down as a rampant woman suffragist, but she believes in her right to enter any of the learned professions or skilled trades that her taste or inclination may select. She believes she can discharge the duties of Attorney-General honestly and effectively, and if her fellow citizens repose confidence enough in her to elect her, she sees no reason why she should not draw the salary attaching to the office.

Miss Knowles is the only lady lawyer in Montana. She is a native of New Hampshire, where she was born twenty-eight years ago. She studied law in Manchester, N. H., and when later on she came to Helena, Mont., the legal profession there manifested considerable prejudice toward her. She succeeded in getting the Territorial legislature of 1888-9 to pass a bill admitting women to practice law. In December, 1890, she was admitted to the bar, and now commands a practice said to be equal to that of any fellow professional of the sterner sex.

ANCIENT AMERICA AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

"DEPARTMENT M" of the World's Fair at Chicago will be devoted to ancient America, and its chief will be Professor Putnam of Harvard University. The Western Herald says that the representation will be as complete as energy, industry and knowledge can make it. It says:

"Ancient America will be represented by objects from shell heaps, ancient villages, burial places, mounds, earthworks, ancient pueblos, cliff houses, caves, the ruined cities of Mexico, Central and South America, etc. The most distinctive earthworks and mounds of the central portion of this country, to which Prof. Putnam has given special study, will be represented by sets of accurate models. Various State historical societies will make valuable contributions in this respect. Portions of the famous great stone structures of Central America, Mexico and South America will be shown in actual reproductions from moulds, with their elaborately artistic architecture. There will also be plans, photographs and paintings, illustrating many details, together with casts and photographs of inscribed tablets. A reproduction of the great 'Portal of Labna' will form an imposing entrance to one portion of the exhibit. The material collected this year by the Peabody Museum Honduras expedition, including moulds of the enormous monoliths and altars of the ancient ruins of Copan, elaborately ornamented with figures in high relief and strange hieroglyphics, will be loaned. The governments of various Spanish American countries will probably contribute extensively to this division. A comparison of the various exhibits will afford good ideas of the customs, habits and surroundings of the pre-historic American peoples. Archaeological collections expected from various foreign countries will be valuable for comparative study."

SILVER IN THE TREASURY.

SENATOR PALMER, of Illinois, recently propounded some questions relating to silver, to the Director of the Mint, Mr. Leech. The questions and answers are as follows:

"First. What number of standard silver dollars are now in circulation?"

"Answer. 50,779,484.

"Second. What number of standard silver dollars are now in the Treasury?"

"Answer. 357,189,361.

"Third. What number of troy ounces, or avoirdupois pounds, of silver bullion purchased with 'silver or coin certificates' is now in the Treasury?"

"Answer. 78,933,000 troy ounces of fine silver or 5,412,549 avoirdupois pounds.

"Fourth. What length of time would it require with the present mint facilities to coin all the silver bullion in the Treasury into standard silver dollars?"

Answer. Nearly two and a half years (doing no other coinage).

"Fifth. What number of standard silver dollars, at the present legal ratio, would the silver bullion in the Treasury (purchased with silver or coin certificates) produce if coined?"

Answer. 102,065,000.

According to Mr. Leech if the silver bill which recently passed the Senate and got shelved in the House, should become law, all the silver now in the Treasury would have to be coined into money, and it would take two years and a half to do it.

HOMICIDES IN 1890.

THE census bulletin relating to homicides in the United States during the year ending June 1st, 1890 is a most elaborate document. It has been prepared by F. H. Wine, special agent on pauperism and crime, and seems, so far as it goes, complete.

On the date mentioned there were 82,329 prisoners in the United States, and of these 7386 were charged with homicide 8968 were men and 393 were women. Thirty-five were omitted who were charged with double crimes.

As to color, 4425 were white, 2739 negroes, 94 Chinese, 1 Japanese and 92 Indians. Of the 4425 whites, 3157 were born in the United States and 1213 foreign born, the birthplace of 55 unknown.

In habit 972 are given as not known in relation to intoxicating liquors, while 1,282 are classed as total abstainers, 3,529 moderate drinkers and 1,267 drunkards.

Out of the total 7,386 persons in prison for the crime of homicide on June 1st, 1890, 158 were awaiting execution. Forty-nine of these were in the Kansas penitentiary, no date having been fixed for their execution by any governor since 1872. By this procedure the death penalty is practically abolished in Kansas, though not by statute. It is abolished by law in Rhode Island, Michigan and Wisconsin.

During the calendar year of 1889 158 legal executions and 117 lynchings are reported. Texas stands first in the roll of States with 730 homicides, New York next with 473, Kentucky 439, California 418, and so on to Wyoming, the lowest, with 5. Mississippi and Ohio have each 217, but the population of the former is only about a third of the latter. Oregon and Arizona have each 54, but Oregon has 314,000 people while Arizona has only 60,000. New Hampshire and Utah have each 20, with populations respectively of 378,530 and 287,905.

Among the homicide prisoners were 10 preachers, 15 physicians, 2 journalists and 1 reporter. Agriculture, strange to say, furnishes the greatest number, 1873, while mining furnishes only 212. The printing trade furnished 22, while unskilled labor furnished 2194.

Homicide is defined differently according to the penal codes of the various States. New Mexico has five degrees of murder, the three lower of which would be defined manslaughter in other States. In a number of States murder is not distinguished by degrees, while in others it is not even defined by statute.

UTAH WEATHER FOR JUNE.

THE average temperature of Utah for the month of June, 1892, as deduced from observations at 27 stations was 65 degrees. It ranged from 53 degrees at Scofield, a station in central Utah, with an altitude of 8000 feet, to 78 degrees at St. George.

The highest shade temperature reached was 118 degrees at St. George, on the 28th, the warmest day known in that place during six years.

The rainfall for the month was scanty, except in northern Utah, where it exceeded the nominal amount for June. Irrigation was resorted to this year considerably later than usual. There were thunderstorms on the 10th, 13th, 14th, 15th, 29th and 30th of June in various places. Hail fell on the 10th and 11th, and sleet on the 3rd, at Levan, Juniper county.

A Boston man wants to exhibit a sky-cycle at the World's Fair. A sky-cycle comes under the head of flying machines.

THE LATE "LIBERAL" CONFERENCE.

THE alleged conference of the "Liberal" party which concluded its session last night was not what it purported to be. That is to say, it was not a conference. The propositions it was ostensibly called to consider and decide upon were virtually, we might say practically, disposed of before the meeting was called for. The Tuscarora band fixed that long since. Mr. Powers announced before leaving here for Chicago with his party that even if defeated at the National Democratic Convention, the delegation would return with colors flying and continue the old fight. The Tuscaroras were defeated and the alleged conference was called simply to endorse what had been already decided for the gathering in advance.

If anything more than the lusty announcement of the determination as to future Tuscarora action were needed it was given at the alleged conference itself. Those who expressed any idea contrary to the affirmative side of the propositions were, as a rule, hooted down, their utterances being drowned in yells, shouts and other uncouth and semi-savage demonstrations. The tactics of the chair had a similar bent. The presiding genius occasionally showed the most intense anxiety to keep certain speakers to the propositions. This solicitude was only displayed in instances where the speeches exhibited premonitory symptoms of taking a negative trend, in their relation to the propositions. In other cases of departure from the slightest reference to the fur point of consideration, the chairman's magnanimity and liberality seemed unbounded. This generosity invariably dropped out when the rabid fire-eaters would deliver a vicious anti-"Mormon" tirade that had not the remotest reference to the questions at issue. The harangues of scoured and embittered ex-"Mormons" of twenty-five years standing were especially noted for pointlessness, and for the absence of any check being placed on the ranting utterances. Had the meeting been actually called for conference purposes, and had thoughtful men who have "Liberal" affiliations but are convinced that the time for national division has arrived, felt assured that they could have expressed their views honestly without being subjected to insult, they would doubtless have participated in the proceedings.

A great effort was made to attract a large number to the meeting. For this purpose the ticket system was resorted to. Its object was, of course, to give the matter an air of exclusiveness that did not belong to it. The true purpose of it was evinced by a last hour announcement to the effect that all could have tickets who wished them. The first meeting was large, probably three thousand persons being present. The second was wonderfully thin, getting down to the vicinity of three hundred. The closing session was larger than that of the second, there being about one thousand people in the hall. A "Liberal" informed a reporter of the News that he counted 884, and afterward probably enough stragglers entered the room to run the number up to about 200 more.

The leading and more intelligent

"Liberals" predicted the early defeat and dissolution of the party. We include those who favored the affirmative side of the four propositions. They announced that early stakedness was inevitable. This being evidently the conviction in the minds of these gentlemen, the reason for the anxiety to have an affirmative endorsement of the four propositions submitted to the alleged conference at once leaps into view. It is estimated that there is not a shadow of possibility of a "Liberal" candidate for representative to Congress being elected, yet it is decided to put one in the field. The purpose of determining to name one for the position is simply and solely to avoid the party disintegration that would follow the omission to do this. The result would be disastrous to any prospect that might exist for the expiring party to capture, in future, any of the offices of Salt Lake county. This is their only chance, however remote it may be, to secure any remunerative offices, and so long as there exists a shadow of opportunity in that line, it will be hedged, guarded and nourished. Hence the object is not general, anything in that line being hopeless, but territorially local, involving a last party effort to obtain official position and place.

We have necessarily noted the proceedings of this gathering, principally because the chief stock-in-trade of the leading agitators has been the old senseless, extravagant and absurd anti-"Mormon" song, of which all good, thoughtful and consistent people are becoming heartily sick. Playing upon this broken string is fast becoming repulsive in a political way. The general impression is fast becoming universal that the "Mormon" people are entitled to their religious views as much as any others. They are becoming more widely known and information is removing prejudice. And when such resolutions as those introduced into the "Liberal" gathering by a person named Newton are given publicly, they fill fair minded people with disgust. The position taken in them, in a nutshell, that Utah ought to remain in a Territorial condition because the greater number of votes can be cast by people who are members of the "Mormon" Church. This man and his supporters are evidently not open to the accusation of being possessors of information regarding the institutions of this country and the genius of American liberty.

We contend for the enjoyment of religious freedom for all people, so long as their practices do not infringe upon the liberties of others.

WILL THE CHINESE BILL BE EFFECTIVE?

It is expected that the present session of Congress will come to a close at the end of the current week or early in the next. A great deal in the way of legislation has not been accomplished. The Pacific coast people are satisfied with the new Chinese exclusion bill, but they claim that the appropriation for its proper enforcement is insufficient. The bill was certainly a radical measure. If the insufficiency of the appropriation should render the bill ineffective of course the blame will be laid on the House of Representatives.

The Pacific coast people are now urging a political economy argument against the Chinese. It is claimed that there are in California 71,000 Celestials, earning $20,000,000 annually, $15,000,000 of which goes regularly to China. Taking this draining process for thirty years, it means the removal of $450,000,000 in gold coin from that State. This is asserted as one of the probable reasons for the stagnation in trade and industry now prevailing on the Coast.

If this deportation of coin has a depressing effect on the business of the Pacific side, how much more reason to complain has the Atlantic seaboard line? American tourists alone who visit Europe this year, it is estimated, will spend over $50,000,000 without any corresponding return. Yet this would never be used as an argument to justify the keeping at home of wealthy tourists by legal enactment.

It is reported that the appropriations made by this Congress during the session now about to close will aggregate $500,000,000. If so, this makes $40,000,000 more than the appropriations made by the first session of the Billion dollar Congress.

HOMESTEAD WAR AND PINKERTON

HUGH O'DONNELL, the leader of the Homestead strikers, testified before the Congressional committee that he was receiving in wages $144 a month, and that the new scale proposed by the Carnegie company did not in any way affect his wages. O'Donnell was chairman of the advisory committee which counseled the strike. He was the head and the foot of the movement. He claimed that though the new scale affected but comparatively few, yet it would prove the entering wedge for disrupting organized labor in Homestead. He said he knew this was Frick's system of procedure.

O'Donnell and his colleagues were favored by a little jealousy in the ranks of the Pinkertons. It appears that Pinkerton, especially the man known as "Billy," has had trouble with ex-employees very frequently. He had trouble with one in particular—a man named Norris, who did a great deal of work in Pennsylvania for the coal and iron companies. Norris started an agency of his own after leaving Pinkerton and this caused ill-feeling. "Billy" had him arrested several times, but nothing came out of the arrests. Norris learned all about the Homestead strike and the part the Pinkertons intended playing in it. He even hired a friend to enter the Pinkerton service. This friend kept him (Norris) advised of all movements, and he in turn kept O'Donnell advised. So that the strikers were fully prepared.

When the count of the Pinkerton men was made after the surrender, one was missing. It was supposed that he dropped into the river. But it is now stated that this was the friend of Norris, and that he slipped away from his comrades at Pittsburg, or some point before reaching the scene of conflict.

The correspondence between Frick and the Pinkertons was given to the public before the congressional investigating committee. It showed that the closest secrecy was to be observed in all the proceedings. Even the men hired were cautioned not even to tell their families on what mission they were bound. Many of them did not know their ultimate destination when engaged. The mustering point was at Ashtabula, Ohio. There all arrangements were made, and there the plan of campaign laid out. And from there the friend of Norris disclosed the whole plot.

PREPARED FOR THE CONFLICT.

THOMAS HENRY CARTER, of Montana, has been selected as chairman of the National Republican Committee. He is a native of Ohio, and about thirty-eight years of age. His election seems to give general satisfaction to his party. He is known as an earnest, energetic and aggressive party worker. He defeated Maglavin in Montana for representative, and the latter is recognized as one of the most popular Democrats in that State.

Wm. F. Harity, of Pennsylvania, has been chosen chairman of the National Democratic committee to succeed Senator Calvin S. Brice, who occupied the place during the past two years. Harity is known in his own State as a successful party politician, and it is to his strategy and generalship, as many are willing to accord, that Pennsylvania now possesses a Democratic governor.

The chiefs on both sides are able men, and the opening battles of the campaign might be looked for any time now. Chicago, it is said, will be made a Western headquarters for both parties, and from there both will dictate their respective plans of battle.

The People's party is also moving. Its candidates, Weaver and Field, will appear tomorrow at Denver, Colorado, and open the campaign on their side. They intend stamping the whole State of Colorado before leaving it.

HOME RULE FOR CUBA.

CUBA, the gem of the Antilles, has a Home Rule question on her hands. For fourteen years she has been struggling bravely to achieve independence of Spain. A political party on the island has been endeavoring by agitation to get some sort of an autonomic measure. Failing in this, it said that revolutionary methods will once more be tried. There exists an organization of Cubans in the United States and Mexico pledged to support a revolution in Cuba, and it is stated that active work will soon begin.

This recalls the fate of the last revolutionary expedition to Cuba from the United States. It was a most deplorable affair. The Spanish government had detectives among the Cubans and their sympathizers in New York, and when the expedition started the Spanish consul was apprised of it ten minutes after. Several ex-American soldiers were executed by the Spanish authorities on that occasion. The Pinkerton records could perhaps tell some interesting stories about revolutions in Cuba, for employees of that agency worked with the leaders.

VOLCANIC ACTIVITY.

THIS telegraph is daily bringing word about eruptions of Etna, and of damage done by this great volcano. It is situated on the eastern coast of Sicily and presents a majestic appearance as viewed from the steamers that go through the strait of Messina. The height of the mountain is given as 10,874 feet, and it has a circumference at its base of 90 miles. Several eruptions of this volcano are recorded. In 1169 Catania and its 15,000 inhabitants were destroyed. In 1527 two villages were buried and a number of people perished. A series of eruptions occurred between the years 1664 and 1673, when many villages were buried and a number of lives lost. The last great disturbance took place in 1852, when the surrounding country was covered with ashes, or dust, and vast torrents of lava flowed down the eastern flank of the mountain. One of these was measured and found to be at one time two miles broad and 170 feet deep. This will give some idea of the vastness of the powers of destruction that slumber beneath the surface of the earth.

The volcanoes are considered the safety-valves of our globe. But for these, it is thought the earth would be unsafe as a habitation, on account of constant explosions and consequent fractures of its crust.

RUSSIAN RELIGIOUS PERSECUTION.

THE Russian authorities, who, one would think, have all they can do in fighting the epidemic that decimates the country in various places, manage to find time to wage war against an unoffending religious sect known as "The Stundists." The minister of the interior, says a Russian paper, is busy forming a plan of campaign against the obnoxious society and is aided by the holy synod and the department of justice.

The "Stundists" claim to be endeavoring to build up a church on New Testament principles. In Russia, but the authorities are against it. The sect was inaugurated by a peasant in 1855 and has grown to such large proportions as to excite the jealousy of the fanatical Greek hierarchy.

THE SITUATION IN ENGLAND.

A MEMBER of Parliament writing from London to the San Francisco Chronicle gives the following particulars of the political situation in England:

"I believe the present determination of Lord Salisbury is not to resign, but to call Parliament together early in August and go on with business in the usual way. A speaker will be elected who shall be sworn in, and there will be a Queen's speech, and a long vote of thanks, and the Gladstonians will move an amendment designed to turn out the government.

"All this will occupy three weeks. Many of the Conservatives do not see why they should be kept in London for the sake of fighting a hopeless battle, but the object is to get Mr. Gladstone committed to some definite statement about his Irish policy. Some of his own followers will want to know what he means to do, and the anti-Parnellites, though few in number, will make it warm for him.

"If Lord Salisbury were to resign without summoning Parliament Mr. Gladstone could practically avoid meeting the new House till next February, and thus gain nearly seven months for drilling his forces and shaping his course. First of all, however, he must go to Midlothian as soon as he is appointed prime minister, to get elected again, and as his majority was so terribly cut down the other day, this is not a pleasant ordeal to face. The same remark applies to Mr. Morley, who may very possibly be beaten on a new election.

"Thus the troubles of the Gladstonians have already begun. Moreover, I am assured on good authority that the leader has suffered not a little from his exertions during the late contest, and that his health is in anything but a satisfactory state. A contested election is bound to find out a man's weak spots, especially when he is in his eighth or ninth year."

SEX, COLOR AND ALIENISM IN THE SOUTH.

ACCORDING to the figures of the last census the total population of the four States, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida, was in 1890 4,997,358, or very nearly $5,000,000. Of this number only 45,000 were foreign born, making not even one per cent. If any troubles, social, industrial or political, exist in these States, they cannot be attributed to the presence of foreign born citizens.

Of the 5,000,000 comprising the total population of the four States mentioned about 2,700,000 are white and 2,300,000 colored. The sexes are also pretty evenly divided, the males being 2,493,000 and the females about 2,504,000.

A very marked decrease in the rate of increase of the colored population is observable. For the decade ending 1880 the rate of increase in North Carolina was 35.54 per cent., and for the decade ending 1890 only 5.64 per cent. South Carolina shows a decrease from 45 per cent. to 14 per cent. for the same decades. Georgia shows a similar decrease. Florida shows some increase, but the population as a whole shows a corresponding enlargement.

Taking the distribution of sex in the four States separately, it is seen that the two Carolinas show a slight predominance of females, while Georgia and Florida show the reverse.

In North Carolina the whites number 65 per cent. of the population, blacks 35. In South Carolina whites 40 per cent., blacks 60. In Georgia whites 53.25 per cent., blacks 46.75. Florida, whites 57.47 per cent., blacks 42.53. There are, seven cities of 8,000 and over in which the blacks outnumber the whites.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTIONS AND CONGRESS.

GLANCING at the political situation from a People's party standpoint the prospect seems, to say the least, interesting. The leaders of the party frankly acknowledge that they have no hope of electing their candidates, but they confidently assert that they will throw the election into Congress. The electoral vote this year aggregates 444, 228 of which are necessary to a choice. The certain Democratic States, as conceded by the People's party men, are Alabama 11, Arkansas 8, Connecticut 6, Delaware 3, Florida 4, Kentucky 13, Louisiana 8, Maryland 8, Michigan 7 (half), Mississippi 9, Missouri 17, New Jersey 10, Tennessee 12, Virginia 12, West Virginia 6. These make an aggregate of 134, and should the Democrats carry New York and Indiana also, the result would be 192, or 31 short of the required majority.

The certain Republican States similarly conceded are California 9, Colorado 4, Idaho 3, Illinois 24, Iowa 13, Maine 6, Massachusetts 16, Michigan 7 (half), Montana 3, New Hampshire 4, North Dakota 3, Ohio 23, Oregon 4, Pennsylvania 32, Rhode Island 4, Vermont 4, Washington 4, Wisconsin 12 and Wyoming 3. This makes a total of 177. Should the Republicans carry New York it would give 213, or ten less than required, and if they should carry Indiana as well it would give 228, or five more than required.

The States claimed by the People's party are Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, South Dakota, Georgia, North Carolina, and Texas, aggregating 75 electoral votes.

In the House forty-four States are represented, thirty of which are decidedly Democratic. The voting there would be by States, each having one vote. Idaho with one Representative would be equal to New York with thirty-four. Twenty-three States are necessary to a choice, and for a quorum on this occasion twenty-nine States, or two-thirds. There are five silver States that are Republican which, in the event of a House election, might join their forces with the People's party and complicate matters so that the choice of candidates may be difficult.

According to the Constitution the House would elect the President, the Senate the Vice-President, the latter voting by members. Would the result then be Cleveland and Reed? But the Constitution says:

"The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves."

Reid and Cleveland are from the same State, but does the limitation placed on the electors extend also to Congress? It seems as if it was the intention of the framers of the Constitution to prevent two citizens from the same State occupying the first and second places.

THE MINING CONGRESS.

In the Mining Congress recently held at Helena, Montana, the following resolution was adopted by a vote of 264 to 27:

"Resolved, That wisdom and patriotism both require that the people of the silver States and the State conventions of all parties therein shall so shape their action as to secure the balance of power, if that be possible, in the electoral college, to the end that the electors elected by the people of such States may so act independently in the electoral college as to defeat the election of any man as President who will not agree that the will of the people as expressed in any future act of Congress in relation to silver shall stand without executive interference or veto."

"That in order to meet the contingency of a possible election of a President by the present House of Representatives, the constituents of the members of the present House be appealed to to demand of all members of the present House who are candidates for re-election the promise that they will support no man for President who will not permit the will of the people as expressed in the future act of Congress upon the silver question to stand without executive veto."

Mr. Newlands of Nevada, a Republican, was the author of the above resolution. In a long speech he outlined the scheme embodied in it, and how the silver States could obtain the balance of power between the old parties. He wants the Nevada plan adopted in all the silver States. There, a convention representing all the silver clubs was held and three presidential electors nominated, two Republicans and one Democrat. These, if elected, will go into the Electoral College pledged to vote for none but a candidate who advocates the free and unlimited coinage of silver.

The Helena Journal says this plan, if adopted, would democratize the Electoral College; that it would render electors independent of party obligations, and make the ballot box a howling farce.

ALWAYS AT IT.

THE "Liberal" organ is never tired of telling falsehoods about John T. Calne. Sometimes it is in relation to his work in Congress, at others in regard to his personal affairs. Now it repeats one of its old slanders, namely, "he never voted but one Democratic ticket in his life." It may be thought by some people that the last assertion would amount to a feather in his cap.

But the fact is, that John T. Calne has been for a great many years a strong Democrat in his political convictions, which have been manifested in his political actions. He was a Democrat and voted the Democratic ticket in St. Louis, before he came to Utah. He voted for James Buchanan for President of the United States in 1856. When he came to this Territory he remained a Democrat and did not change when he was connected with the People's party. He was recorded as a Democrat as soon as his name appeared on the roll of the House of Representatives as the Delegate from Utah, and there is no sense or truth in trying to misrepresent him in this particular. But the petty attempt to belittle him as to his party politics is all of a piece with the rest of the Tribune's malicious and lying course toward all who do not agree with its efforts to rule or ruin Utah.

HE "OUGHT TO BE ASHAMED."

THE "Liberal" organ, backed by its mythical "Old lady" without name or habitation, still insists on making O. W. Powers a martyr to "Mormon" yahoos." It does this in the face of the fact that we proved that no such occurrence as the "oharivari" ever took place. Here is what it says this morning:

"It is true, notwithstanding the denial of the News, that Judge Powers and his family were grossly insulted on their moving to the Twentieth ward by a band of broodlums. We do not wonder that the News denies it; it has always defended every act of that kind or boldly denied it."

We here re-introduce a portion of the denial of the News referred to, and if the claim of martyrdom for Mr. Powers, sustained by the Tribune's inviolable old lady, continues, we may add to the denials until the whole neighborhood is covered:

"Mr. Edward Taylor (non-'Mormon') resides a few yards distant from the new home of Mr. Powers. The writer of this asked him the following question, this morning:

"Have you seen in this morning's issue of the Salt Lake Tribune, a statement to the effect that a crowd of 'Mormon' yahoos" disturbed O. W. Powers and family on the night in which they moved into their new residence, by the beating of tin cans, the blowing of horns, the ringing of bells and firing of rocks against the house?"

"Yes."

"Is there any truth in the statement?"

"None whatever, so far as I know. I was at home during the whole of the evening in question. I am certain nothing of the kind could have occurred without my being aware of it. There was no blowing of horns, beating of cans, ringing of bells or throwing of rocks against the house. There were a number of small girls on the street ranging probably between the ages of four and six years, engaged in a game of their own. They shouted gleefully, and chattered generally while at play. That was all. I guess Powers' imagination must have been lively and created the oharivari."

This morning the writer of this met Mr. Charles Thirkhill, who lives in the immediate neighborhood of Mr. Powers' new residence and asked him a question similar to the first put to Mr. Taylor.

This was substantially his reply: "I never heard any such disturbance. It could not have been made without my having heard it. There are a few little girls about so high (placing his hand about 30 inches from the ground) who are in the habit of playing around on the street in that vicinity, among them two of my own. They are innocent of making any noise to disturb anybody, simply engaging in a frolic, like little children do everywhere. For my part I delight to hear them, and so does anybody who is not soured. Judge Powers ought to be ashamed to make such a statement as he has. It is the most childish attempt to make something out of nothing I ever heard of."

"Do you know of any old lady living in that neighborhood who would be likely to say that she 'did not want Judge Powers to live up in the ward'?"

"I do not know of any old lady who lives in that neighborhood except one, and that is my mother, and I am sure she would never make such a statement, as I am certain she has no objection to Judge Powers living anywhere that suits him. I do not know of anybody in the neighborhood who feels otherwise. I say again, that Judge Powers ought to be ashamed of this business."

Will the Tribune be kind enough to name and locate its "old lady" who has done such stalwart service in the cause of scandalizing the "Mormon" people and making bogus martyrs of "Liberal" politicians? We think not. It made a great blunder in naming and locating bogus "Bishop West." By that means its infamy was easily demonstrated. We furnish names and facts which it cannot overturn.

The babbling of this Powers martyrdom business exceeds everything of its kind on record, and is the shallowest basis for an anti-Statehood argument that could possibly be fabricated. A resort to such ridiculous means is an indication of approaching imbecility.

MORE FROM THE RECORDS.

THE "Liberal" organ continues to write under the fair intention we expressed to support Mayor Baslin in his announced determination to make the administration of the party clean during the balance of his term. It does not take to the implied reflection upon the "Liberal" administration from its advent to power in this city, which has been notoriously corrupt. Our cotemporary tries to screen "Liberal" rottenness behind a volley of general statements to the effect that the People's party rule was unclear. If even that were true it would not straighten the record of the "Liberal" officials. But it is not true. We have supplied evidence of the character of the "Liberal" government from leading members of that party.

On Monday we presented a number of expressions of "Liberals" made in a law and order mass meeting held on December 29th, 1899. Among those statements was one from Dr. Iliff, who declared that "never before had it been necessary to call such a meeting in this city." The absence of necessity was the result of the absence of the cause of the gathering—the corrupt character of the municipal government.

Frank B. Stephens asserted, on the same occasion, that the reason why gamblers and rum-sellers were allowed to break the laws with impunity was because they had votes.

F. E. Gregg stated that the deplorable condition of affairs in this city was because all the members of the City Council had been approached by outside parties who controlled them.

We promised if the old strain of accusation and denial were kept up we would give some more proofs of "Liberal" corruption, and we propose to do it.

The Rev. W. S. Hawkes was one of the speakers on the same occasion.

"He commended an editorial which appeared in a morning daily newspaper. It made grave charges against officials, and called for a remedy for the existing epoch of vice. The publication of such statements alone was sufficient to show that something was radically wrong."

The "Morning daily newspaper" was the Salt Lake Tribune, which, as usual when it suits its purpose to do so, flies in the face of its own record in order to bolster a corrupt "Liberal" administration.

The Rev. J. B. Thrall was a member of a committee on resolutions appointed by the meeting. He appeared on the platform and said that before introducing the resolutions it was deemed advisable to read a clause from the "Liberal" platform and declaration of principles, that it might be seen that the pledges made for good government had not been kept and we had a right to insist on their fulfillment.

The gentleman then read the following from the "Liberal" platform, which had been adopted in July 1899:

"That while the Liberal party recognizes the fact that there are vices and crimes which human laws and human efforts cannot wholly eradicate, yet it also recognizes the fact that honest persistent efforts under the law can break the power and influence of these and render odious and measurably harmless those who live by the violation of law; that the Liberal party gladly and fully acknowledges the abiding obligation it is under, whenever it is wherever it shall have the power so to do, to uphold virtue and morality and suppress vice and crime; that the Liberal party enjoins upon and requires all those who have been or may be elected to office by it, that whenever they have the power so to do they shall without partiality, fear or favor, in good faith execute the trust committed to them so as to rid this community of all those who, without further enumeration, live by the breaking of the law and preying upon the community."

The following resolutions were unanimously and heartily adopted by the large gathering of the more respectable people of the "Liberal" party:

"We, citizens of Salt Lake City, in public meeting assembled to consider what can be done to restrain the lawlessness, vice and crime, which are disgracing our city, hereby declare:

"First—That those who compose our present city government were elected to office with the explicit understanding that they would enforce the laws against vice and crime.

"Second—That the present city government, while progressive in other things, has by its recent failure to enforce the laws against gambling, brothels, the sale of liquor to minors, and the opening of saloons on Sundays, excited the apprehensions of many of its friends and supporters, and is thereby imperiling the cause of morality in this city. In view of these facts—

"3. We hereby call upon our worthy Mayor and his associates to proceed at once to enforce promptly and thoroughly the laws above referred to, assuring them that in so doing they shall have the hearty support and co-operation of the moral and law-abiding citizens of this community.

"4. We therefore appeal to the City Council to refuse to grant the application for license now before it for a saloon in the vicinity of, or to be run in connection with, the variety theatre on Franklin Avenue. JOHN T. LYNCH,

J. R. BOWDLE,

F. E. GREGG,

J. BRAINARD THRALL,

Committee.

Subsequent meetings of the same kind were held for the attainment of the object sought, but corruption has to a large extent held away from the advent of the party in power till now. And the facts and details—not general, indefinite and false accusations—will make strong reading. We still hold to our purpose of sustaining Mayor Baslin in his intention to make the balance of the "Liberal" administration clean. We shall not bestow to give due credit should his efforts lead to such a much needed reformation.

INCIDENTS OF THE OMAHA CONVENTION.

THOUGH there was a good deal of earnestness and common sense manifested at the Convention of the People's Party in Omaha on the 4th inst., yet there transpired also some incidents of a ludicrous character. For instance, Mrs. Lease, who is a very tall lady, angular and blessed with strident tones, stepped to the front holding a telegram. The delegates, anxious to hear what this Cassandra of bucolic philosophy had to say, became silent. She simply announced that she was authorized to say that Benjamin Harrison would accept the nomination if given him. The intelligence created the wildest kind of boisterous mirth, and Mrs. Lease subsided, conscious of having achieved a victory second only to the conquest of the famous Ingalls.

Loucks, the permanent chairman of the convention, showed how ill-fitted he was for the position. In the course of the proceedings a wild-eyed man made his way to the platform and asked permission to address the convention. No one knew him, but he was evidently a lunatic on greenbacks, sub-treasury schemes and so forth. Loucks became bewildered and left the chair. Then Powderly took the dais, rapped for order, introduced the madman, who was permitted to utter a few incoherent sentences, and retired. Powderly conducted him quietly out of the hall, and possibly made him believe that his oration excelled that Burke Cockran's at Chicago. This little incident, trivial though it is, well illustrates the character of Powderly, who is a man of consummate tact.

THE SAN FRANCISCO AND GREAT SALT LAKE RAILWAY.

THE FOLLOWING is from the San Francisco Chronicle:

"The San Francisco and Great Salt Lake railway has been quietly working for months and is now about ready to place a portion of its stock on the market. The capital of the company will be $25,000,000, and of this sum $3,000,000 will be offered for sale in this city in the expectation that it will all be speedily taken up. Henry P. Sonntag, in speaking of the matter yesterday, said that it was possible that $5,000,000 in all would be floated here, but the company does not intend floating any more bonds than are absolutely necessary, and so will only put on the $3,000,000. The necessary legal blanks and stock certificates are now in the printer's hands, and books will probably be opened by the first of next week. 'The construction of the road,' said Mr. Sonntag, 'is now an assured fact. We expect to have the first $1,000,000 worth of stock subscribed as soon as the books are opened. The surveys thus far made have proved very satisfactory and have been adopted by the company. There will be no delay in getting down to the work of actual construction, and then the people of the city and State will see that the proposition which has been pooh-poohed is a bona fide undertaking."

PRESBYTERIANISM IN THE UNITED STATES.

THE census statistics in relation to Presbyterianism in the United States are now published in complete form. There are twelve bodies holding to the polity of government by elders, and adhering to the Calvinistic system of doctrine, and all trace their origin to the Reformation in which John Knox figured so prominently. Denominationally these organizations are known as the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, (Northern), the Presbyterian church in the United States, (Southern), the Cumberland Presbyterian, the Cumberland Presbyterian (colored), the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist, the United Presbyterian, the Associated Church of North America, the Associated Reform Synod of the South, the Reformed Presbyterian Church in the United States, (Synod) the Reformed Presbyterian Church in North America, (General Synod), Reformed Presbyterian (Covenanted), and the Reformed Presbyterian Church in the United States and Canada.

These bodies all accept the Westminster Confession of faith, except the Welsh Calvinist and the Cumberland Presbyterian; both have distinct confessions of their own. According to the census returns there are in the United States a grand total of Presbyterians of all shades, 1,278,815 communicants, embracing 18,490 organizations, owning 12,462 church edifices, with property valued at nearly $98,000,000.

Presbyterianism was introduced into America in 1685 by Francis Makemie, a native of Ireland. He organized the first church at Snow Hill, Maryland, towards the close of the century. The first Presbyterian (Philadelphia) was organized in 1706 by Francis Makemie and John Hampton, natives of Ireland, George McNish native of Scotland, Jedediah Andrews, Nathaniel Taylor, Samuel Davis and John Wilson Puriton, natives of America. In 1716 the Synod of Philadelphia was formed. In 1788 a general assembly with four Synods was formed, and held its first meeting in 1789.

In 1861, to owing the slavery issue, the Southern Presbyterians seceded from their Northern brethren. Pennsylvania stands first in the number of communicants, New York second and Ohio third, Louisiana lowest, having only 70 members.

The figures for Utah show that there are 20 organizations in the Territory, church edifices 31, membership 688, value of property $212,975.

The first Welsh Calvinist Church was organized in 1826. In the services the Welsh language is used. It has a membership of 12,722 with 187 organizations and 19 presbyteries.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—There was a slight shock of earthquake early this morning.

FRICK, PINKERTON AND SHERIFFS.

MR. H. C. FRICK, in his testimony before the Congressional Investigating Committee at Pittsburgh on the 12th inst., made some statements worthy of serious perusal. He stated that the company of which he was manager was not a corporation, but an association formed under the limited partnership laws of Pennsylvania. In the several establishments embraced in this association 18,000 men in all are employed, 8,800 of whom are engaged at the Homestead works.

Mr. Frick produced the Homestead pay roll for the month of May. It showed that wages ranged all the way from $40 to $275 per month. Rollers averaged from $250 to $275 a month, heaters $185 to $190, heaters' helpers $180, train men $97 to $120, head shearers $100, shearer's helpers $95, gaugers $75, and so on. In this one department known as the H. I. H. mill, the payroll for May aggregated $20,202.95. There are in the Homestead works twelve departments. The old contract was entered into on July 1st, 1889, to run for three years. Wage rates were settled every three months by a joint committee consisting of three men appointed by the employers and three appointed by the workers. In the event of a disagreement a seventh man was called in whose decision was final. In the new scale presented for the term commencing July 1st no agreement could be reached, and the result was the now historic lock-out.

One incident transpired which places Mr. Frick in a rather equivocal light before the general public. The following will explain what is meant:

"Mr. Gates—What is the cost of production per ton?"

"Mr. Frick—I don't think that is a fair question. I don't think you should ask that."

"Mr. Taylor—Would you object to tell the cost of a ton of steel, including everything?"

"Mr. Frick—Yes, sir; I would have the same objection."

"Mr. Boatner—You don't propose to give away any of the secrets of the trade?"

"Mr. Frick—No, sir; not yet."

"Mr. Gates—Will you state the labor cost alone?"

"Mr. Frick—That would be equivalent to stating the whole cost."

It is possible that Mr. Frick was right in not answering these questions from a business standpoint of view, but how is the controversy between labor and capital to be adjusted unless knowledge is obtainable on the cost of production. It is true the wages paid as stated by Mr. Frick are enormously large as compared with the hosts of men engaged in ordinary labor at $1.00 and $1.50 a day of twelve hours. But then if the profits of the capitalist are in proportion as large as the wages, somebody must be paying for the whole.

The following question and answer is a commentary on government as it exists in the Keystone State:

"Mr. Gates—You state that after the Sheriff failed you employed the Pinkertons. Did you appeal to the Governor?"

"Mr. Frick—No, sir. The experience of past years was that the Sheriff was powerless. We concluded to employ our own watchmen, put them on our own property, and have them stay there to protect it. We hired them and agreed to pay them $5 per day, and we secured 300 of them on June 24. We concluded it would be necessary to protect our property and employ new men."

Here Mr. Frick, manager of an association of firms, aggregating millions of capital, openly and candidly states before a Congressional committee that he had no faith in the constituted authorities, and that they were powerless even if called on to act. This Homestead matter reveals several weak points in many places. It is a lesson that the various State governments and the Federal government of this country should profit by. It furnishes striking illustrations of what anarchy means.

PIONEER DAY ANNIVERSARY.

TOMORROW will be July 24th and therefore the forty-fifth anniversary of the entrance of the Pioneers, led by President Brigham Young, into Salt Lake Valley. The advent of that noble band into this inter-mountain region was not only a notable event in the wonderful experience of the community of Latter-day Saints, but also an important occurrence in the history of this Republic. It was the beginning of the redemption from sterility of a vast stretch of country, sufficiently extensive to admit of the founding upon it of an empire. It is now one of the most fruitful as well as most promising sections of our great country. Immense progress has been made in its development during the last forty-five years, yet its possibilities have only been comparatively touched. This prolific region will yet team with a population which will be distinguished for intelligence, energy and all the qualities that go to make a people great. We believe, in this connection, for instance, speaking locally, in a prediction once made, in the hearing of the writer, by Brigham Young, to the effect that this city would yet occupy this entire valley southward to the "point of the mountain." If this is the destiny of our city, the immense surrounding country will be correspondingly developed.

There will grow up in this section of the Republic a community who will exhibit their loyalty to the Government in such a way as to form an object lesson for all time to come. In a period when the country will be torn and distracted with discussion, when distress and commotion shall be rampant throughout the land, and human liberty will seem to be threatened with annihilation, that people will be the chief promoters of peace. In union with the better and more patriotic classes of the people of the whole nation, they will raise the standard of peace and freedom and take part in the re-organization of the country on those glorious principles that are embraced within the Constitution. It looks as if the symptoms of an anarchical condition were already near at hand, and were likely, to all human appearances, to develop into formidable proportions. And the sons and daughters of the West should prepare themselves, by becoming familiar with the principles of free government, to do efficient service for the Republic in the hour of need, when it shall arrive.

After the cloudy day will come the splendor of a new and brighter era, and the best form of government on earth will be a beacon light to all the nations, inviting them onward to the universal establishment of a condition that will produce peace everywhere, and the long predicted brotherhood of man as an existing reality.

We are confident that when that desired era shall be established the advent of the Pioneers to this inter-mountain region will be referred to as an initiatory factor in its production. The memory of the coming of that heroic band to this then inhospitable region on the 24th of July, 1847, ought to be cherished throughout this western country. It will yet be regarded as one of the prolific events in the history of the Republic, because of the fruitful situations which have already sprung from it and the greater offshoots which are in the bosom of the pregnant future.

NO REFERENCE TO POLITICAL MATTERS.

ON Sunday, July 17th, President Joseph F. Smith was one of the speakers at the Utah Stake Conference, held at Provo. In the course of his remarks he spoke of the necessity of the brethren taking counsel in temporal as well as spiritual matters from their quorums and presidents. He deplored the fact that there was a tendency in opposition to this course. He cited his personal line of conduct in this regard, having made it a rule, during his long connection with the quorum of the Apostles never to enter upon any temporal undertaking that would occupy his time and attention without the advice and consent of his associates and presiding officers. He expressed regret at the departure from this course of action which had for some time been evinced by men occupying leading official positions in the Church.

A synopsis, necessarily imperfect, of President Smith's discourse appeared in the Provo Enquirer, and a disposition has been shown by some persons to make political capital out of it. In view of this fact and to ascertain from Brother Smith himself the true purport of his statements, which is, however, plain enough without explanation, a representative of the News called upon him. The writer, after drawing the gentleman's attention to the subject, asked him the following question:

"President Smith—To what did you refer when you stated that it was the duty of the brethren to seek advice from the presiding authorities of the Church in temporal as well as spiritual matters?"

"Simply this: Men who occupy leading positions, as Apostles, Presidents of Seventies, Presidents of Stakes, etc., have accepted those offices with the understanding that they will devote their time and attention to the performance of their ecclesiastical duties. There has been, for some time, I regret to have to say, a growing disposition among some of those leading men to enter into business enterprises and speculations that have engrossed their attention to such an extent that the sacred duties of their callings have been neglected, and the cause of the Church has suffered proportionally. I do not consider this to be right, because when a man accepts of an office in the Church I regard him as the servant of God and of the people, and in an ecclesiastical capacity he is subject to his leaders in office to this extent: When he desires to enter into an undertaking or business that would take up his time and attention and draw them off from his Church duties, he ought to consult with his superior officers and gain their consent, and also advise with his quorum or council associates that there may be an understanding and suitable arrangements be made to avoid neglect of Church labors. How can there be any order in the organization, if each official can go off on his own business and neglect his religious duties as he may please? No church could tolerate such a condition and prosper. For instance, if a priest or minister of the Catholic Church, or of the Presbyterian, Methodist or any other denomination, were to neglect his official duties in consequence of engaging in his own secular business, he would doubtless be handled by the dignitaries of his church who preside over him. One of the leading objects of holding Stake Conferences is to instruct the officers of the Church in relation to their duties, that they may not be neglected and the people suffer in consequence.

"Did you have any reference to political matters when speaking of the necessity of taking advice from the chief men of the Church?"

"Not in the slightest. That subject was not in my mind at all. In fact, if I had thought of it I believe I would have tried to frame my remarks so as to avoid even the appearance of an allusion to it, because a man in my position is liable to have his statements twisted and misconstrued from their true intent. Still I will give it as my opinion that a leading official of the Church ought not to give his time and attention to political matters to an extent that would cause him to neglect the duties of his religious calling. This would be wrong in the same way that it would not be right for him to become absorbed in business enterprises to the detriment of his religious obligations.

"Have you anything more to say on the subject, President Smith?"

"Nothing more occurs to me at present."

President Woodruff, who was present at the conference where the discourse in question was delivered and who then endorsed Brother Smith's statements, was asked the following question:

"Did you understand Brother Smith to have any reference to political matters in his remarks at Provo?"

"Not at all. I understood him to mean, just as he has now explained. At the same time I look at the subject just as Brother Smith does in regard to leading men of the Church being so taken up with political matters that they cannot find time to attend to the duties of their religious callings. I don't think it would be right. As to dictating to men with regard to their political opinions or party connections, we don't do anything of the kind. We don't want to do that, we don't intend to do it, and if we did want to I don't think it would be any use. To tell you the truth I am about tired of myself and my brethren being accused of interfering with the political concerns of the people. I have frequently stated my position on the subject as plainly as I can tell it in words, and if people insist in pretending not to understand me, I cannot help it. My actions speak as plainly as my words. That is all I care about saying on the subject."

POLITICAL STRUGGLE IN NORWAY.

THE political conflict which for years has raged between the two Scandinavian countries seems to be nearing its culmination. It must end either in a closer union between Sweden and Norway or in the complete severance of the uniting cords, and the establishment of a Republican form of government in the "Land of the Midnight Sun."

The first exciting political battle took place in 1893, when the radical parliament opposed the claim of the King to absolute veto in all questions touching the constitution. Until then this veto power had been considered the natural prerogative of the king, but the radical leaders contended that the constitution could be changed by the majority of the Parliament and a motion was passed as a test case. The King refused to sign it, and his ministers were impeached and tried before a tribunal composed of members of the supreme court and radical members of the Parliament, specially appointed for this purpose.

The cabinet ministers were found guilty by this court before whom legal arguments and precedents were nothing and partisan-ship everything. Each minister was sentenced to a heavy fine and adjudged unworthy of holding any public office in the future. Some of the most extreme clamored for the application of capital punishment, but the cooler heads prevented the party from committing murder.

The excitement during these extraordinary proceedings ran high. By order of the military officers the rifles of the soldiers were taken to pieces and made temporarily useless. Cannon were planted in commanding positions in Christiansia, and Swedish soldiers were secretly massed along the Norwegian border.

The King, however, saved the situation. He refused to sanction the sentence that had disgraced his ministers, but accepted their voluntary resignation with assurances of his royal favor. Having thus preserved his own dignity and put his foot on the parliamentary sentence, he summoned Johan Sverdrup, the leader of the Radicals, and offered him the portfolio as minister of state, a position gladly accepted by this statesman. Peace was now temporarily assured. Parliamentary rule had been won for the people of Norway.

During the strife, it had been argued all along by the Conservatives, that the Radicals were really aiming at the dissolution of the union. This was always indignantly denied by the Radicals. But at present this object is too plainly apparent to be longer denied.

The measure recently passed by the Parliament providing for a separate foreign representation the King refused

THE HOMESTEAD RIOTS.

HOMESTEAD, July 19.—Barring surprises, the indications tonight were that however many criminal informations against the strikers might be cited to the officials in Pittsburg, a truce in the arrests was at least temporarily the programme to be pursued in Homestead. During the day innumerable warrants kept excitement at the highest point.

A constable was serving a subpoena and had a narrow escape from violence in the afternoon, some muscular strikers at one point thinking they were to be arrested.

In the military camps today despite the inspection of the Second Brigade by Governor Pattison matters were extremely quiet. The governor expressed himself as delighted with the condition of the troops. He would say nothing about the report that a portion of the regiment would stay here all summer, but among the military story is current, it being said that 500 volunteers from among the men now here are to be paid by share. Many of the soldiers are anxious to get home. Not a few of them are business men whose home interests are suffering.

PITTSBURG, July 19.—An Associated Press reporter made a tour of the Homestead steel mills today, being the only newspaper man who has succeeded in gaining admission behind the great gate. He found about 150 men at work, most of them new employees. Four furnaces in the armor-plate department were charged today and complete resumption in the department will take place tomorrow. The open hearth department and mechanical department were also being worked, but in a desultory way. The assistant superintendent is confident that if the mill resumes operation successfully for a day or two many of the former employees will return. A large number of colored men arrived in Pittsburg today and visited Mr. Frick. Their destination is surmised to be Homestead.

Smoke issued from half a dozen stacks on Carnegie's mills today, and tonight lights are gleaming in many furnaces. Gentlemen who have been through the mills say that about one hundred and forty men are at work, the chief focus of activity being the press mill where the armor plate is bent to fit the sides of battleships. A specimen was made in the presence of visitors, and the strikers say this is the most rudimentary part of armor plate work, being collected after being previously cast and planed. The mechanical department was rather a surprise to the mill owners. Manager Potter was confident that a great men would return Monday and today. They did not do so. It has developed that none can be shipped into the works without the knowledge of the strikers, very easily, and it is believed now that Mr. Potter will find no difficulty in introducing such persons as can be induced to go into the company's employ.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Word was received here tonight to arrest Hugh O'Donnell, the leader of the Homestead strikers, should he appear in this city.

PITTSBURG, July 20.—The preliminary hearing in the case of Burgess McLuckie, of Homestead, under arrest for participation in the late mill riot, was held this morning and the prisoner released on $10,000 bail.

Judge Magee held that McLuckie's offense was no murder in the first degree, and therefore bailable.

Counsel for the defense sought to have the bail of those for whom warrants were out fixed, saying that they would then surrender themselves. The judge declined to fix the bail, saying that some of the men wanted might be guilty of murder in the first degree.

HOMESTEAD, July 20.—A triumphal reception was accorded Burgess McLuckie when, after his release from imprisonment in the Pittsburg jail, he arrived this afternoon at Homestead. The borough council was assembled, and the advisory committee of the amalgamated association. Carriages were secured and a brass band was preceded by a big American flag. The advisory board headed a procession of locked-out men, which marched through the streets of Homestead.

An entrance to the Carnegie mills was made this afternoon by a representative of the Associated Press. In walking through the mills twice he found by actual count sixty-five men lusty of the works, exclusive of uniformed men. Fires were burning in part of the open hearth department No. 1, and in the armor plate mill, but in neither were there more than half a dozen men. Two locomotives were in operation in the yards and in one place what seemed to be six red hot, newly-made or newly heated armor plates were seen. This was the sum total of anything bearing the resemblance to the new product that could be observed. Steam was up in nearly all of the stationary engines throughout the establishment, but for what purpose was not apparent.

Governor Pattison gave his ultimatum to the committee of citizens who called upon him tonight and requested the removal of troops. The governor listened attentively to what the committee had to say, and then replied that he would keep the guards here and stay here himself all summer, if necessary, to vindicate law and order, and, if necessary, would spend every dollar in the treasury and then mangle the State.

O'DONNELL RETURNS.

HOMESTEAD, July 20.—Hugh O'Donnell arrived from New York tonight. He will surrender himself at Pittsburg tomorrow.

HOMESTEAD, July 21.—This is the last day allowed by the Carnegie company for old men to apply as non-union men for reemployment. They did not do so, but many unskilled men hired to railroad contractors, to build a new rail.

HOMESTEAD, July 21.—A conference of over an hour's duration was held tonight between Governor Pattison, President Weihe of the Amalgamated association and A. J. Brennan, legal adviser of the strikers. At its conclusion neither of them would say a word as to the nature of the discussion. It is said that it was on a proposition to remove the troops from Homestead.

Weihe and Brennan denied that threats of any kind were made, and are reported to have stated privately to friends that if the conference proved satisfactory as they hoped, the whole trouble will soon be at an end. The best information obtainable as to the Governor's view, however, is that no such restate view is justified, and that the troops will not be moved till the workmen can enter and leave the mills at will unarmed and unharmed.

There have been riots between the people and soldiers today. Early in the day one of the colored cooks of the Eighteenth regiment who was getting a little too much beer into his system, became tired of camp life and concluded to go home. He was captured by a patrol near the depot and a lively scene ensued. A crowd gathered and company G of the Eighteenth was ordered to disperse the people. This was done to put it mildly, in a very brisk manner. The strike leaders were promptly on hand and had a hard time to prevent some of the men who had been drinking.

FROM ATTACKING THE SOLDIERS.

The strikers went to their headquarters, and some still feeling sore about the matter are said to have spit on the soldiers in front of the building. This is told by the military and denied by the strikers. At any rate a soldier suddenly appeared in the advisory committee rooms and delivered himself of this remarkable communication:

"Gentlemen, Colonel Green presents his compliments and says if any more spit is spat out of the windows on to anybody the whole building will be shut up."

The soldier saluted and withdrew and then ensued a complicated discussion on the question of expropriation, which was finally ended by posting a notice calling upon the men to expropriate on the floor and not on the street. Some Hungarian workmen later came in and asserted that when on picket they were rudely dispersed and sent back by the military men. Provost Marshal Green claims to have heard nothing of this.

PITTSBURG, July 22.—The Carnegie company this morning began to carry out the expressed intention to put non-union men in the Homestead mills. The steamers "Tide" and "Little Bill" left with loads of new men this morning and will continue to make trips all day. From the number of men coming and going at the offices of the company, it looks as if the claim that the company has all the men necessary to start the mills is true.

The strikers' advisory board issued an address to the men and public generally this morning. The address calls attention to the tendency to concentrate business in the hands of a few men, giving them despotic power over the employees, who constitute the great mass of the people. Instead of being the right of the employers to manage their own business, it is coming to mean the right to manage the country.

The employees of the Carnegie Company at Homestead have built up the town, worked faithfully with the company for many years in the business of the mills, invested thousands of dollars of their savings in the mill, in expectation of working there as long as they were able to work.

The government taxes the country to foster his business and the State of Pennsylvania is spending large sums to protect the mills. Therefore the belief is expressed that the employees and the public have equitable rights in these mills, that employees have a right to continuous employment without regard to either religious, political or trades unions affiliations; and that the position of the company is unconstitutional, anarchistic, revolutionary, and in contempt of the public and private interests.

It adds, "The committee wishes it known that we will prosecute said public and private interests in the courts of law and equity, and we demand of Congress and the State legislature the distinct assertion of the principle that the public has an interest in such concerns as that at Homestead, and that the State has a duty to judge the affairs of such concerns when the occasion may require."

The address closes with the pledge to abstain from all violence and rest on the courts for remedy.

All old employers occupying the houses owned by the company have been served with an eviction notice this morning. Under the contract with the company they are obliged to deliver possession in ten days.

THE PINKERTON SIDE.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The special committee of this House inquiring into the Homestead troubles heard the Pinkerton side this morning.

R. Pinkerton presented a statement covering the history of his agency since the organization in 1850, stating that for twenty years he had furnished men to protect property during strikes. These men were carefully selected, and seldom permitted to carry arms, except under public authority. They never wantonly fired a shot in any strike. The men were sent to Homestead only on the assurance that the sheriff would swear them as deputies, if necessary. Many of these men were regular employers, thoroughly tried and trustworthy, others were vowed for. They did not go into Pennsylvania as an armed force. The arms were shipped from Chicago and ordered not to be given to the men unless deputized by the sheriff. As a matter of fact, the boxes were not opened until the strikers opened fire and it became a matter of life and death.

Klein had been killed and five others were wounded before the Pinkertons returned the fire. The Pinkertons were handicapped in the fight by the fact that the strikers made a breastwork by placing women and children in front. Not a single woman or child was injured.

The statement declares that the acts of the strikers after the surrender of the watchmen, is a "disgrace to savages." Yet, because done in the name of American labor, it is upheld by some newspapers and political demagogues. It declares that in the trial for murder it will be shown that the Pinkertons' acts were legal.

The statement then reviews the history of the strikes and shows that organized labor everywhere will murder and destroy property out of sheer wantonness and revenge, and it is morally certain, from the threats of the men themselves, that the Homestead strikers would have done likewise if the company had tried to supply their places.

The employment all over the country by banks and private people as watchmen was referred to, and then the subscribers to the statement affirm that their counsel assure them they have violated no law, federal or State, and that they "had a right to employ and send men to Homestead to act as watchmen and that, if they were attacked, they had a right to kill, if absolutely necessary, for self-defense; that they had a right to bear arms on the premises of the Carnegie company in order to protect the life and property, whether or not they were deputized by the sheriff of Allegheny county; that we had the right to ship arms from Chicago to the Carnegie yards at Homestead for the purpose of arming our men, and that all their acts in firing in self defense from the barges after the attack on them was legally justifiable under the laws of the United States and the laws of the State of Pennsylvania.

ST. LOUIS, July 22.—Some days ago an advertisement appeared in a local paper for puddlers, heaters and ironworkers to go East. A union ironworker who applied says the advertiser is the agent of the Carnegie Company from Homestead, hunting men to take the places in the mills there. The wages offered are from 15 to 40 cents a day higher than the strikers were receiving at the time of the lockout.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Pinkerton was called to the stand and required to answer a long list of questions, which were prepared by representatives of the Knights of Labor. The replies in substance were that the Pinkerton agency owned about 250 rifles, 400 pistols and an equal number of clubs, all deposited at Chicago. In all its various branches the firm never had at any one time had more than 800 persons in its employ. The employees were advised exactly what they had to do, and were perfectly at liberty to refuse employment to which they objected. All of the men sent to Homestead knew the nature of their employment. The barges were not constructed for the purpose of protection, not lined with iron or steel, and could not resist small arms. The men would never have been allowed to start on the expedition if it had been known they were to be attacked before landing.

Barges were employed because it was believed that the men would be able to land without a breach of the peace. The sole desire was by all means to avoid a breach of the peace, otherwise the men would not have been permitted to go unless authorized by the governor or deputized by the sheriff. The only purpose was to put the men upon private property, and then protect it from attack. The men would not have fired except as a matter of self defense. It was understood that the Carnegie company had applied to the proper legal authorities, and that the men were going to Homestead with the approval of the sheriff. Mr. Pinkerton thought that if his men had fired to kill many more lives would have been lost and the works could have been taken at that time, but not without great loss of life.

Chairman Oates asked the witness what he had to say of the statement that fifty good soldiers could have scattered Homestead and that cowardice was shown by the Pinkertons. The witness replied that he had talked with his men, and they said they could have taken possession of the works almost any time before 10 o'clock, but would have had to kill men, women and children, and they would not do anything of the kind. The first firing they did was over the heads of the crowd.

Mr. Boutner having asked how it was that the trouble occurred when the strikers claimed that they did not encourage violence, and the Pinkertons were instructed not to use violence. Mr. Pinkerton made a reply that hit squarely at the Knights of Labor representatives present. He said he had never seen a strike when the labor organizations or their men had not abused non-union men. He had seen men knocked off trains; he had seen them beaten to a jelly; he had known members of the very Knights of Labor, whose representatives were here, to put obstructions on tracks and dynamite under cars; he had seen men who wanted to work treated worse than savages could have treated them by recognized members of secret labor organizations.

William A. Pinkerton corroborated all that his brother had said.

HOMESTEAD, July 22.—Owing to the increasing friction between the soldiers and strikers, the governor, before leaving today made arrangements which it is hoped will settle the trouble. A force of deputy sheriffs was brought from Pittsburgh and together with the borough officers will be placed in control, the only duty of the militia being to aid them when called upon. The soldiers for the last two days have been more vigorous than usual in clearing streets and much bitter feeling has developed among the strikers. The women were more bitter than the men in their language about the troops, and in the camp the hostile feeling was certainly returned warmly. The prospect for an indefinite stay in camp is not inviting and the militiamen are eagerly looking for orders which will permit them to return home. A committee from Braddock reported to the strikers tonight that the men in the mills would strike tomorrow.

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—A high official of the Carnegie company says everything is very encouraging at Homestead. A number of men have gone to work; some strikers went back and the company has more workmen than it can easily handle. Applications for work are plenty and only good men are engaged. He says the 110-inch plate mill and the 32-inch slab department are running full, the other departments being put in readiness for immediate resumption. The steamer "Tide" arrived at Homestead this afternoon with fifty-two carpenters and mill workers and landed without incident. No change at the Union or Beaver Falls mills is reported.

Skilled workmen at the Duquesne steel mills of the Carnegie Steel company, to the number of 100, went on a strike tonight in sympathy with the Homestead men.

The men announce that they will not go to work until the Homestead trouble is settled and the Amalgamated association is recognized by Carnegie. The strike was a surprise as the Duquesne mill was supposed to be non-union, but it seems strikers had organized a lodge there within the past two weeks. Information was made in Pittsburg today for murder against Peter Allen and Matthew Faye, both Homestead strikers.

PITTSBURG, July 23.—At 2 o'clock this afternoon H. C. Frick, manager of the Carnegie Company, was shot by a man, name unknown, supposed to be a Hebrew. The man came into Frick's office and fired without warning. It is not known how dangerously Frick was wounded. He is conscious and able to talk. The man has been arrested.

There are four wounds: one in the neck, two in the back and one in the side. The man had a knife. As only three shots were heard, it is supposed the fourth wound, that in the side, was from the knife. The physician is making an examination but says he cannot tell whether the wounds are fatal. Frick's condition, however, is regarded as very serious. The would-be assassin has frequently been in Frick's office and was admitted without question. Frick and he were alone together. What passed between them is unknown.

Secretary Leishman rushed in when the shots were heard and after a struggle overpowered the man and turned him over to the police. There is much excitement and crowds surround the offices.

The man's name is Alexander Berkman, 21 years of age and lives here. He is a Russian Jew, and supposed to be an Anarchist. He has been hanging around the office several days. Asked by a reporter why he did the deed, he reportedly said, "You know why."

HOMESTEAD, July 23.—Now that the Duquesne men have struck, the next objective point of the Homestead men is Bradecock and many of them have gone there to labor with the workmen to come out. They have strong hopes of shutting up the Edger Thompson works. Then they propose to turn their attention to the Frick coke workers. In fact, a strong light is to be made all along the line, though it is doubtful if the coke men can be induced to come out.

PITTSBURG, July 23.—The hearing on application for release of Hugh O'Donnell and Hugh Ross, the Homestead strike leaders, on bail began this morning. Many of their friends were in court. Forty witnesses were subpoenaed including citizens of the Homestead mill workers, reporters and militiamen. It was announced that the application for discharge would be resisted. Judge Magee said the information did not charge murder in the first degree and must be presumed to be the second degree until otherwise proven. Among the witnesses called are John Cooper, New York; Frederick Primer, Phila.; C. W. Bliddell, Brooklyn and W. H. Bent, Chicago, Pinkerton men. They testified that O'Donnell was on the bank before and after the firing began. R. W. Herbert, a reporter, said O'Donnell was present, but as far as he could see, not taking any part in the riot. Samuel Stewart, clerk for Carnegie said that Weihe and O'Donnell addressed the men and half an hour later, the men quit firing and the Pinkertons surrendered. Recess.

PITTSBURG, July 23.—It was a few minutes before two o'clock this afternoon when a young man entered the Chronicle-Telegraph building and asked to be let off at Frick's office. The young man had been a frequent visitor for the last few days and the elevator boy thought nothing of the request. Two minutes later the occupants of the building and passers-by on Fifth avenue were startled by three pistol shots, fired in rapid succession. The man had tried to assassinate the great steel-master, but the latter, notwithstanding two bullet wounds and four ugly gashes from a dagger, is still alive and will probably recover.

THE DESPERATE MAN

then drew a dagger and attempted to stab Leishman. Frick saw the gleam of the steel and although staggered by the shock of his wounds and bleeding profusely, he jumped between the men and seized Bergman's arm. The latter freed himself from Leishman's grasp and plunged the dagger into Frick's right side just above the hip, making an ugly wound three inches long. He made another lunge and this time the knife struck higher up, but the point struck a rib and glanced without inflicting much injury. Twice again was the knife thrust into Frick, but he was merely scratched.

By this time officers, clerks and Deputy Sheriff May entered. May had drawn his revolver and was about to shoot Berkman in the back when Frick cried out:

"Don't kill him, we've got him all right; leave him to the law."

The man broke away and tried to escape, but was secured and taken to the station. In five minutes half a dozen surgeons were on hand and Frick's wounds were quickly attended to. He was calm and had perfect command of his faculties, and apparently was less excited than any other person in the room. From time to time he made suggestions, and half an hour after the shooting dictated a message to Andrew Carnegie about the assault. At his request all communication with his residence was shut off. His brother-in-law was sent to inform his wife and to reassure her. She had a child ten days ago and is still confined to her room, but though greatly distressed she stood up bravely.

AFTER CONSIDERABLE DIFFICULTY the bullet which lodged in his neck was removed and Frick was soon resting easier.

The news of the attempted assassination spread like wildfire. In five minutes after the shooting Fifth Avenue from Market to Wood streets was blocked with people, and the greatest indignation was expressed at the cowardly deed. When Bergman was brought out of the building by the police officers to be taken to the Central Station, cries were heard of "Shoot him now!" Some growled, "Let him have what he gave Frick," but the better element stepped forward and helped to keep the assassin from mob violence. Bergman had to be choked until he was black in the face before he would open his mouth and allow two dynamite cartridges to be taken out. It was evidently his intention to follow the example of Louis Lingg, the Chicago Haymarket anarchist, and commit suicide by exploding the cartridges in his mouth, but it appears the cape would not work and the scheme failed.

After the dynamite cartridges were taken from his mouth Bergman became more talkative. He told the inspector that he was 28 years of age and had been working as a compositor on a New York paper. He declined to give the name of the paper. He said he came to Pittsburg day before yesterday. Bergman is not inclined to talk tonight, and all attempts to interview him have been unavailing. A charge of felonious assault has been preferred against him, and the police authorities say bail will be refused.

"Six workmen were buried last week. All of this is chargeable to Frick. Such a man should die. I wanted to kill him," said Frick, "and am ready to die for it."

When asked why he wanted to kill Frick rather than any other rich men, Bergman said a beginning had to be made somewhere and Frick was more prominent as an oppressor of the poor than any other capitalist in the country. Bergman declined to talk about his identity nor say whether he intended exploding the dynamite cartridge he had in his mouth after the fashion of Lingg.

If the man looked up in Pittsburg for attempting to murder H. C. Frick is Alexander Bergman, formerly of this city, he is an anarchist of the most radical style. About six years ago Bergman, who is a Russian Jew, came to this city from Wilna, Prussia. He made himself conspicuous by his marked radical views against capitalists, and it is said he attempted to organize a group for the express purpose of going about the country to exterminate the capitalists. In 1891 he secured a position in the composing room of the Tribune, Most's paper, where he worked a short time. He has been idle about the anarchist haunts in the city for some time. The police are of the opinion that Bergman was simply an agent of the anarchists here, and was sent to Pittsburg for the express purpose of killing Frick. Detectives are working on the matter at this end.

PITTSBURG, July 24.—Alexander Bergman, not Berkman, the would-be assassin of Frick, is still a riddle. None of the detectives or newspaper men who have been talking to him have got anything but contradictory or trivial information so far. He said today that when he was ready, which would not be until after his transfer to the county jail, he would make a written statement for the Associated Press, and until then would decline to answer any questions.

That he is secretly pleased with the notoriety he gained is evident, but he is a fanatic who has become cranky over anarchistic literature also seems certain. He denied today that he never worked for Herr Most's paper, Freiheit, and says he has done only book work. He has no regrets, he says, for what he has done. Nothing has been learned as to how long he had been in the city or anything else. He seems to have deliberately taken every precaution to conceal his identity, and had his plan of committing suicide like Lingg not been frustrated, his face would have been blown away, leaving the matter a complete mystery.

Much to his own surprise and to that of everybody else, Bergman was transferred from the Central Station to the jail tonight. The officers thought to make the transfer quietly, but a couple of sharp gamins at the corner recognized Bergman, and before the jail was reached several hundred people were crowding up to catch a glimpse of the anarchist.

PITTSBURG, July 26.—Frick slept well last night. He woke refreshed and cheerful this morning. There are no dangerous symptoms and it is believed that the danger is past.

Secretary Lovejoy said this morning a cablegram had been received from Carnegie, asking if his presence was needed. An answer was sent that it was not, and he will not come till sent for. Lovejoy added that nearly 800 men are at work in the Homestead mills, turning out first-class work. More will be sent today.

WEBER STAKE CONFERENCE.

This evening has closed the two days' Conference of the Weber Stake of Zion. The meetings were held in the Tabernacle at Ogden. Shortly after 10 o'clock on Sunday morning the proceedings were closed to order by President L. W. Shurtliff. There was a good attendance.

After singing by the choir and prayer by Elder Richard Ballantyne, President C. F. Middleton made the opening address. He was pleased to report the Weber Stake as being generally in a good condition. The presidency of the Stake are thoroughly united in all things pertaining to their calling and the High Council is united with the presidency, and all are laboring for the good of the people. The Bishops and counsel are energetic and alive to the interests of the people in their several wards. The quorums, with few exceptions are complete, and the associations and institutions and the Church members are in general good standing. He believed that with very few exceptions all desired to do the will of God.

President B. H. Roberts delivered an instructive discourse on the restoration of the Priesthood, the organization and order of the Church, the institution and object of conference meetings, presenting in a clear light how all business in these assemblies should be done by common consent.

The benediction was pronounced by Apostle A. H. Cannon.

In the afternoon the Sacrament was administered and the general and local authorities of the Church were heartily sustained in their several positions. The vote was unanimous.

Presidents John J. Kimball and Seymour B. Young gave some excellent instructions on the duties of the Saints towards each other and to God, the necessity of forbearance and the absolute duty of the brethren forgiving each other their trespasses, of humbly conferring their sins before God and before each other.

On Monday the Saints came together and received further instructions. Apostle A. H. Cannon delivered a powerful discourse on the evils politically, civilly, morally and socially which afflict the nations at the present time. He spoke earnestly on the necessity of the Saints observing the Word of Wisdom which was given by revelation from God for the physical as well as the spiritual salvation of His people. He also dwelt at some length upon family government, the proper conduct of husbands and wives, of children and parents to each other in order that harmony and peace may reign in the families of the Saints.

The conference was also again addressed by Presidents Young, Kimball, Flygare and Shurtliff. Their instructions were pertinent, timely, valuable and highly appreciated by the audience.

The statistical report showed that there were in this Stake: one Apostle, five Patriarchs, 607 Seventies, 281 High Priests, 839 Elders, 84 Priests, 189 Teachers, 457 Deacons, 6117 members, 8530 officers and members, 3484 children under eight years of age; total of souls 12,014. Five wards were not fully represented numerically. There were sixteen new adult baptisms, 141 children baptized and 134 children blessed since last report.

There are in the Stake 3335 families out of which 386 individuals are drawing support.

The Sabbath schools of the Stake number 27, with 587 efficient teachers and officers, and 4724 pupils. Superintendent R. Ballantyne represented the schools in good condition, making good progress in their studies. Many improvements are about to be inaugurated in these institutions which will tend to the more rapid advancement of the young among the Latter-day Saints in a knowledge of the principles of the Gospel.

JOSEPH HALL,
OGDEN, Utah, July 19, 1892.

JUAB STAKE CONFERENCE.

The quarterly conference of the Juab Stake of Zion was held at Nephi July 16 and 17. Present on the stand, the Stake presidency and Bishops, also Elder Andrew Jensen, of Salt Lake City. At 10 a. m. President Paxman called the conference to order, and, after the usual opening exercises, addressed the Saints, exhorting them to faithfulness and good works; the Saints met together in these conference; that they might leave their worldly affairs in the hands of the Lord and attend to His worship. We are a favored people. He counseled the Saints to be one and not to let their political views create a division among them. There was no reason that it should.

Bishop N. P. Rasmussen of Levan spoke upon the object of the Saints gathering to Zion, and the great work that is yet to be accomplished.

Elders Wm. W. Allen and George Gardner occupied the remainder of the morning, dwelling upon the restoration of the Gospel with the gifts and blessings, and bearing powerful testimonies to the truth of the work.

At the afternoon meeting the Bishops reported their respective wards, after which Elder Andrew Jensen addressed the conference. His discourse was listened to with rapt attention. He returned to the rapid growth of this people, said that the Stakes of Zion now numbered 32, and contained 600 wards. Zion is growing and we are growing with it. He spoke of the trials through which the Saints had passed, and when the history of each Stake shall be written by future historians the history of Utah will be the most interesting. The importance of keeping Stake records was interestingly explained by the speaker.

In the evening there was a general Priesthood meeting which was well attended. President Paxman and Elder Jensen were the speakers.

Sunday morning was devoted to the Sabbath school. An interesting and pleasing programme was rendered by the Nephi Sabbath school, and short and appropriate speeches were made by President Paxman, Elders John Beck and Andrew Jensen.

At 2 p. m. Counselor Jas. W. Paxman presented the general authorities of the Church and Stake, also a number of names were presented to be ordained High Priests. They were all unanimously sustained.

Elder John Beck then addressed the conference and dwelt upon the responsibilities of parents looking after their sons and daughters, bringing them up in the fear of the Lord, seeing that they select for their companions those who have a desire to keep the commandments of God.

Elder Jensen referred to the restoration of the Gospel and the keys of the different dispensations that have been delivered in our day to the Prophet Joseph. The speaker then gave an interesting account of his recent visit to the East, and his travels in Far West, Kirtland, Nauvoo and Adam Ondi Ahman; also a brief account of the driving of the Saints from these places.

One feature of our conference deserving special mention was the excellent singing by the choir, under the leadership of Prof. Morris.

DANIEL K. BROWN,
Stake Clerk.

CEUR D'ALENE RIOTS.

WALLACE, Idaho, July 19.—The troops which were sent to the summit of Bitter Root divide were ordered to Saltese, a railroad station in Montana, in order to intercept the miners if they try to escape into Montana. A report is current that a large number of armed miners were seen near the summit this morning, and that one Webb, who has been a prominent character in this camp, has sent a challenge to the troops to come and take them.

Reports to the effect that the miners were coming in from Montana armed and resolved to assist the union miners in Ceur d'Alene has caused a

MOVEMENT OF TROOPS

In that direction to check any such attempt. General Carlin and staff, with three companies, arrived here at 11 a. m. under Colonel Page's command, and is ready to move at a moment's notice. Saltese, Montana, is the objective point of the invading miners. Capt. In Bubb with three companies marched to the summit last night from Gem, and holds the trail leading from Saltese.

Martial law may have to be declared at the theatre of operations. The troops will continue to be along the border line of that State.

BOISE CITY, Ida., July 20.—Information was received here today that the insurgents had sworn to kill thirty of the leading mine-owners of Ceur d'Alene.

United States Marshal Pinkham left for the Cour d'Alene today with warrants for eighty of the rioters, charging them with contempt of the Federal court, in having violated the injunction restraining them from interfering with the operations of the mines. The policy of the Federal officials has, however, been changed, and a new procedure will be inaugurated. Judge Beatty has no authority to call a special term of the circuit court, and the cases would have to be delayed until a term could be authorized by Justice Field. The men, after having been brought to Boise, would have to be taken to Moscow for a hearing, making a tedious and expensive proceeding. For this reason it has been decided to proceed against the offenders in the district court charging them with the crime of conspiracy in having conspired to interfere with the administration of justice. Judge Beatty can call a special term of this court when and where he will and he will be asked to call such term at Cour d'Alene City. District Attorney Wood will leave for the north tomorrow in furtherance of this plan.

WORK RESUMED.

WALLACE, Ida., July 20.—Work has been resumed at all of the mines in Cour d'Alene. Wages have been paid at $5.50 for skilled miners and $3 for shovelers with the right to board and lodge where they please. The presence of troops is a guarantee that the men can work for whom they please without becoming members of any organization. The action of the Homestead strikers was commented upon in violent language by such men as Breen, Dallas, Poynton and others. Breen, Dallas, Poynton, who were trusted leaders under O'Brien have escaped to the mountain regions. Papers will be forwarded to the Governor, and their arrest will probably follow. All of the other prominent leaders are in custody.

Indications point to a general exodus to Montana for such union miners as have not been arrested. Although the miners' union in Cour d'Alene is completely broken up and mine owners free of its halter it will require the presence of federal troops for six months or more to insure workmen here immunity from attack. One hundred and eleven men have been arrested at Wardner and there are 190 confined at Wallace. Marshal Pinkham has been looking over the prisoners and is busy getting out indictments against the principal ones. The prisoners will be taken to Boise in a few days to answer to the charge of contempt of court and will be returned here to stand trial on several indictments. Something will have to be done with them soon, as the prison pens are terribly crowded and sickness will result from the unsanitary condition existing at the prison. Provisions shipped on here for the miners' union are turned over to a committee of women appointed by the miners' wives and by them distributed to the needy.

WALLACE, Ida., July 22.—Thirty prisoners were discharged from the military prison here today on parole. Many of them were business men. Governor Wiley has received so many requests from members of the Idaho State troops in the field for furlough, etc., that all of the Idaho guard were ordered home. Later the order was revoked, much to the disgust of the strikers. The retention of a certain number of federal troops in this district is believed to be a foregone conclusion, and already Wardner and Wallace are fighting for the location of the post.

The mine owners of Wardner published the following today:

"We, the undersigned mine managers of Wardner, Idaho, hereby agree hereafter that all employees of the different companies we represent may board where they please. We will receive no orders, and shall pay all employees in full in honest money for honest labor.

GEORGE MCMAULAY,
CHARLES SWENEY,
V. M. CLEMENT."

General Curtis today issued an order modifying the martial law so that courts can be held for civil and criminal cases, but criminal cases must not conflict with the proper enforcement of military law. An attorney applied to the authorities this afternoon for the release of David Schultz on the ground of his being a British subject. The first application was denied. The attorney then proceeded to telegraph the British consul, when the matter was brought to the attention of General Curtis, commanding. A hearing will be granted in the morning. The man claims to have been arrested without any cause whatever.

SUNDAY SCHOOL REUNION.

The Pleasant View, Harrieville and North Ogden Sunday schools held their reunion at North Ogden on the 22nd inst. Shortly before 10 a. m. the schools of the three wards named began to arrive, headed by the brass bands of the respective places and assembled in the James Montgomery Grove, on Washington Avenue. The assemblage, which numbered thousands was called to order by Superintendent Thomas Budge, of Pleasant View. Seated on the Stand were George Goddard, Gen. Superintendent, John M. Whitaker, General Secretary of the Deseret Sunday School Union, R. Balantyne, State Superintendent, C. F. Middleton, of the Presidency of the State, Joseph Stanford of the High Council besides Bishops and their counselors, Sunday school superintendents, and their assistants of the different wards of the State.

The opening song "Cause of Truth," was sung by the three Sunday schools in concert.

Prayer by Bishop Thos. Wallace of North Ogden. Song, "Awake My Bark," by the North Ogden Sunday school. Leaflet No. 30, "Christ's last charge and ascension," by the Pleasant View Sunday school. "Thy Will be Done," was recited by Miss Lucy Brown of the Harrieville Sunday school. The Articles of Faith was recited by the three Sunday schools in concert. Music by the Harrieville brass band. Questions and answers—"Daniel in the Lions' Den," by the North Ogden primary department, was conducted by Sister Annie Desmer. "A Plea for the Slighted Ones," was recited by Miss Eliza Parrot of the Pleasant View Sunday school. "There's Sweet Wild Rose," was sung by Miss Ada Taylor and Miss Louise P. Harris of Harrieville.

Bro. George Goddard made a brief but pointed address, closing with one of his favorite songs, "Girls and Boys." Recitation, "Poor House Nan," by Miss Amy Barker of Pleasant View Sunday school.

The forenoon exercises closed with singing "Home of our Youth" by the Harrieville Sunday school and benediction by Counselor John Semmen of Pleasant View. The different Sunday schools then repaired to spots assigned them in the pleasant shade and park-look of a sumptuous repast.

The assemblage was called together again at 2 o'clock. Incarnation was sung by the Sunday schools in concert. Prayer by Bishop P. G. Taylor of Harrieville. Song, "Light of Truth," by the Harrieville Sunday school. Class exercise on Matt. No. 12, "Jesus Sends Forth His Apostles," was rendered by a class of young ladies from the North Ogden Sunday school, conducted by N. Montgomery. Word of Wisdom by the three Sunday schools in concert. Elder John M. Whitaker made a timely remark, "The Vow of Washington" was recited by Miss Rose Brown of North Ogden Sunday school. President C. F. Middleton of the Weber State, spoke of the great progress the Sunday schools of the county were making under their present management. One feature of the occasion deserves special mention—the singing of the "Anvil Chorus" by the North Ogden Primary Sunday school, numbering over two hundred and waving one hundred national banners. A selection was rendered by the North Ogden brass band. Another pleasing feature of the day's proceedings was the rendition of the song "God Pity the Men on the Sea Tonight" by a select company from the Pleasant View Sunday School. Leroy Cowie of Harrieville brought down a round of applause at the close of his recitation—"The Capstone." County Supt. Richard Balantyne made a few interesting remarks as also did Bishop Thomas Wallace.

Brother Goddard was again called for, made a few remarks and sang his song "Who's on the Lord's Side."

Song, "Let Love Abound," Pleasant View Sunday School in concert. "Songs of the Heart," the Sunday schools in concert.

Prayer by Bishop E. W. Wade of Pleasant View.

B. F. BLAYLOCK.
North Ogden, Utah July 22, 1892.

TEMPERANCE MASS MEETING.

There was a large and interesting temperance meeting at the Theatre on Sunday night at which Miss H. E. Turner, of the W. C. T. U., presided. The vocal music was furnished by the Union Glee Club under the direction of Professor C. J. Thomas.

Rev. Dr. Mabry was the first speaker. His subject was the liquor traffic and the labor unions. He was not there to say whether he favored labor unions, lock-outs, boycotts or strikes. But if an organization existed in Salt Lake that was antagonistic to the school he would work in the streets in order to become eligible to join such a union.

If the workmen should strike against anything it should be against the saloon. Here are one hundred saloons in Salt Lake. The license is $1200 a year, or say $1,000. Suppose the rental of saloons amount to $50,000; that the profits of the liquor traffic in this city were $100,000. It then involves all told $250,000. Who pays all this? The laboring man, from 50 to 75 per cent of it all. For all the money in the saloon business half to three-fourths comes from the wage earner, and if there is anything the laboring men in Salt Lake should unite against it is the saloon. If we could turn $125,000 of the labor earnings into the channels of trade we would not have such hard times in Salt Lake.

Rev. J. B. Thrall spoke on the ill effects of using tobacco and liquor. A boy is not developed until twenty-five, and the undivided testimony of doctors is that it is terribly injurious to minors to smoke. We must do away with minors' smoking. In the case of men, it is plain that tobacco and narcotics blunt their senses, and I sometimes wonder if the police justice does not use narcotics. [Laughter.] Were Rev. Mr. Thrall police judge he would put the fines at the highest pitch, and he remarked, amid laughter, that he never went upon investigating tours. When the mayor says he aims to make this the best governed city in the intermountain country, every good citizen ought to help the mayor in his work. [Applause.]

Mrs. Plummer then sang beautifully "Hear us, O Father."

Scott Anderson said intemperance is the mother of nine-tenths of the crime in this world. Destroy that and you rid the world of nearly all of it. I rejoice to see our Mayor doing his duty, and all the Christian men and women ought to say if our officials do not do their duty they shall be put out. If the Christians of this city were only united as they should be the saloon men would not rule the city so much. They are the tail that has been wagging the dog; a state of things that ought to be reversed. (Applause.) Over one million dollars is expended annually in Salt Lake for drink. The moderate drinking Christians are more dangerous as an example than the sot. (Applause.)

Rev. Bartlett advocated closing the saloons on the Sabbath day, after which Dr. Infford offered the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this temperance mass meeting, representing different religious and political opinions, that the law touching the liquor traffic in our city should be vigorously enforced;

Resolved, That we express to Mayor Baskin our appreciation of his earnest purpose to close the saloons on the Sabbath day, and we assure him of our hearty approval;

Resolved, That we call upon the City Council to sustain the Mayor in his noble work of reform;

Resolved, That a committee of seven, four gentlemen and three ladies, to be appointed by this chair to wait upon the Mayor and City Council and present these resolutions.

Miss Turner appointed Scott Anderson, Rev. Dr. McNiece, J. R. Bowdle, G. H. Payton, Mrs. Griffith, Mrs. Reed M. Bowdle.

A DETECTIVE FORCE.

THE proposition to organize a detective corps in this city appears to be sound, and in the interest of good order. It is proper, too, that such a body shall be distinct from the regular police, and be under the direction of the City Council. Recent circumstances show the need of this. Police-men should attend to their patrol duty in their respective districts or beats assigned to them. Detectives should be ready on a moment's notice to respond to orders from their chief, and go wherever they are sent. Detective duty and police duty are related, but they are not always the same.

However, care will have to be taken that two rival or discordant forces are not established in this city. The opposition that prevailed not long ago between the deputy marshals and the police is sufficient to show that great evil might arise from such conflicts. Therefore, while the detective force should have its chief, it should be so arranged that he should not be entirely independent of the police department if he is not made subordinate to its head.

Offenses committed in view of the police or so that they can make the necessary arrests within their beats, ought to be reported to them. But when immediate action is required to trace up a crime, or capture a criminal whose whereabouts is unknown or outside the beat of a regular policeman, a detective corps is indispensable, and such a body ought to be organized in a city having the population and importance of Utah's capital.

LAW AND LIQUOR.

THE contest between law and liquor is coming to a crisis in this city. It will be seen which will come out ahead. We have believed that the Mayor was honest in the position he has taken in relation to it, and that the new Captain of Police was earnest in carrying out the instructions of the Mayor. We shall retain these opinions as long as evidence will warrant. We hold to them today. We think those officials are entitled to credit for their work.

The Police Justice, however, has not supported the executive authority to any substantial degree. A fine of $15 is a mere laughing matter to the Sunday saloon keeper. He can afford to pay it every week, if he can carry on his business on such terms. A heavy fine, such as the law contemplates, would be a different matter. That, if repeated a few times, would bring the law-defiers to terms. It is necessary that the judicial department of the city shall work in harmony with the executive, and if it does not, a change should be demanded and required.

There is no doubt that the success of the "Liberal" faction at the polls is largely dependent on the liquor men and their followers. It is about equally certain that their assistance has been obtained through virtual promises of the liberty—amounting to license—which they required. They feel that they are entitled to what they bargained for, and it is evident they mean to struggle for it as long as they can.

But what are the public going to do about it? Can they do anything? We think they can, and we think they ought to do it. If the warfare is continued the people must stand by the law and its executive authority, and we are sure that if they do the victory will be theirs. There must be no weakening now on the part of the Mayor and the police. Let the Sunday law be enforced or repealed. While it remains push it to the limit, and let the lawless liquor men see whether they can violate it with impunity. The fight is on and there must be no backing down now by the civic authorities.

POLITICAL ACTIVITY IN COLORADO

THE Silver State Convention of Colorado meets today in Denver. General Weaver and Field were both advertised to be in Denver today, and open the campaign on the part of the People's party of which they are respectively the nominees for President and Vice-President. The free silver advocates in that State are actively working to organize a independent silver party. Senator Teller is in the opposition. He says:

"The silver bill has been shelved for this session, but next winter another free silver bill will be reported, and it will pass, too. Its defeat this session will have no material effect in Colorado, which will go Republican by the usual majority. The Republicans will vote the Republican ticket and the Democrats the democratic ticket."

The Senator is a power in Colorado politics, and his fidelity to the free silver idea cannot be questioned. It seems that notwithstanding the efforts of the People's party, and the silver league clubs to disrupt old lines, the situation will remain the same, and when the battle becomes thick and heavy, Democrats and Republicans will be found in their old accustomed places in the ranks of their respective parties.

RETURNED ELDERS.

Elder Henry Moyle of Alpine, Utah county, called at our office last evening, having returned from a mission to Great Britain, for which part of the world he left his home on June 2nd, 1890. He labored diligently as a traveling Elder in the Cheltenham conference until March, 1891, at which time he was chosen president of that conference and which position he held until released to return home. He enjoyed good health most of the time, and met with fair success as a missionary. Several new openings have been made and prospects for doing good are promising. Elder Moyle met with good treatment generally and prior to his departure for home the Saints of Cheltenham gave a pleasant party in his honor.

Elder John Trimble of Fillmore has also returned from a mission to Europe. He left home on August 26th, 1890. His labors were confined to the Newcastle conference in England and all things considered were very satisfactory. Elder Trimble reports that there is great distress among the coal miners in that region on account of the big strikes.

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, July 17, 1892, commencing at 2 p.m.; President Angus M. Cannon presiding.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn:

Now let us rejoice in the day of salvation,
No longer as strangers on earth need we roam.

Prayer by Elder Millaud, Past.

The choir sang the hymn:

Again we meet around the board
Of Jesus, our redeeming Lord.

The Priesthood of the Twenty-first Ward administered in the ordinance of the Sacrament.

COUNSELOR CHARLES W. PENROSE was the speaker. They were greatly blessed, he said, in being permitted to meet in that tabernacle on the present occasion, where they could come before the Lord, sing His praises and worship Him in spirit and in truth in the way that He had appointed, with none to hurt or make afraid. They were blessed in being permitted to dwell in this land of liberty, where people of all sects, classes and denominations might assemble in their respective places of worship and attend to those ceremonies which seemed right to them, without interference by persons who do not see as they see. In some countries of the earth this privilege was not enjoyed. We should appreciate therefore this blessing and be thankful in our hearts to God for His providence which had brought about the condition of things that prevailed in this goodly land. We should also feel desirous in our hearts to extend this great boon to all people and exert ourselves so that liberty might become universal and all could freely worship God according to the dictates of their consciences.

The speaker then read the first three verses of the first chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews:

"God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers of the prophets,

"Hath in these last days spoken unto us by His Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds.

"Who being the brightness of His glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high."

The idea contained in the first verse, it seemed to him, lay at the foundation of all religions that had ever made any great impression upon any considerable portion of the human family. That is to say, religion had come from God—God had spoken in sundry ways, in divers manners, in times past; and it was from that which the Lord had spoken or revealed that these different religions which had been promulgated among the human family had their origin, or pretended to have had their origin. Religion came from above. That which was merely human—pretending to be religion—did not have much force in the world. That which came down from heaven to the human family was of force and was bidding upon mankind. True religion must come from above, not from beneath. If we examined all the various sects and denominations, we should find that no matter how much admixture of man's notions there had been, the great fundamental principles which they promulgated were those that were made manifest in times past through the Prophets, who received them from the Almighty. The common idea nowadays was that men made religion; that they could get together and formulate a creed, and that God must accept their worship based thereon. But that was the opposite of the idea contained in the verse just read. According to the doctrine of the Apostle, it was God who spake, it was God who reveals. The ideas which the Prophets conveyed in times past, and which were written in the scriptures, did not originate with them; they were not their ideas and notions; but, as was recorded in another part of the New Testament, holy men of old spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost. What they conveyed to the people was not the result of their cogitations, of their learning, of their research and investigation; what they spake was the word of the Lord. God, in sundry ways and in divers manners, spake to the fathers by the Prophets, the latter merely declaring to the people that which they received from God.

The Old Testament was composed of books written by men who claimed to have come with "the burden of the word of the Lord." This we found by reading the Old Testament. God gave His word to the people. He spake in the beginning to our first parents, both before and after they were driven from the garden of Eden. He spake to the antediluvians by Noah, His Prophet; He spake afterwards by Abraham; subsequently through Moses, the great lawgiver of Israel; and from the time of Moses down to three or four hundred years preceding the coming of Jesus of Nazareth He spake to the Jewish nation by those Prophets, some of whose words were recorded in the Bible.

In reading the scriptures we found, just as the Apostle said, that the Lord not only revealed Himself at sundry times, but gave His word in divers manners. Sometimes He appeared Himself and spake with His own voice to men whom He called and had chosen to receive His word. This was not something that they imagined. God the Eternal Father actually appeared to them. We read that He appeared to Abraham and talked with him, that He also appeared to Moses and talked with him face to face "as a man speaketh with his friend." That was very plain language. It was not something that Moses imagined he heard, nor merely a mental impression, nor something he dreamed. God appeared to him in open vision.

We were told that Nadab, Abihu and seventy of the Elders of Israel went up into the mount with Moses and Aaron on a certain occasion, and "they saw the God of Israel, and there was under His feet, as it were, a paved work of sapphire stone, and the body of heaven in his clearness." (Exodus xxiv, 9, 10.)

In the 33rd chapter of Exodus we read that when Moses talked with the Lord face to face he said to him, "I beseech Thee, show me Thy glory." The Lord replied, "Thou canst not see my face; for there shall no man see me, and live." And the Lord said, Behold, there is a place by me, and thou shalt stand upon a rock. And it shall come to pass, while my glory passeth by, that I will put thee in a cleft of the rock, and will cover thee with my hand while I pass by. And I will take away mine hand, and thou shalt see my back part; but my face shall not be seen."

Taking these passages together we were led to understand that although God appeared to Moses and others and they saw his personality, yet He did not reveal Himself in His glory, because, as we were told in the Scriptures, "our God is a consuming fire." After Moses had gazed upon a portion of the great glory of the Eternal God and came down from the mountain he had to cover his face with a veil because it shone so brightly that the children of Israel could not look upon him. The reflection of the lesser rays of the glory of God upon Moses' countenance were so bright that he had to veil himself before the eyes of the multitude.

To some persons this might sound like ancient fables, but to those who really believed in the Bible these were facts. There was one way in which God spake to the Prophets in ancient times. On some occasions He sent His angels, and put His name on them so that they could represent Him. At other times He spake to the ancients in vision by day, sometimes in dreams of the night. We could read about these manifestations in the old testament. These divine dreams were so impressed upon the minds of those who received them that they understood them to be given of the Lord, and their interpretation was made known unto them. In the case of King Nebuchadnezzar, however, he had a dream given him divinely which he could not remember when he awoke in the morning, although he knew that something important had been manifested to him during the night; and so he called for the wise men, the soothsayers, astrologers, and spiritualists—although they were not called by the latter name at that period. They could not tell him what the dream was or give him the interpretation thereof. But God revealed the whole thing to Daniel, His servant, in a night vision, and he was able to tell the king his dream and give him the interpretation. This was recorded in the second chapter of the Book of Daniel. He (Elder Penrose) referred to this as one of the divers manners in which God spake to the ancients.

Another way in which God spake was by the power of the Holy Ghost. The Spirit of the Lord, the Spirit of light, truth, and intelligence came from God to the human family. That was the inspiration that giveth men understanding spoken of in the Book of Job. That was the light the Apostle John referred to in the first chapter of his Gospel "the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." A portion of that Spirit was born in every individual who came into the world—it was that which God breathed into man in the beginning. "He breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul"—an intelligent being. All people received that spirit naturally at birth; but there was a higher endowment given afterward by the Almighty to those who received His word and obeyed His commandments. It was called the gift of the Holy Ghost, and it was by that gift and power that the Prophets spoke in ancient times and wrote the books contained in the Old Testament—by which the Apostles wrote the things that were inspired contained in the New Testament.

Of course the Prophets here spoken of were the Hebrew Prophets. But, he asked, had the manifestations of the Almighty been confined to one race of people? He did not believe they had. He recognized the fact that God chose Israel specially and their Prophets to be His oracles; but he believed that God had regard to His children in other parts of the world besides Palestine, and had raised up good men through whom he had manifested His light and truth for the benefit of the people among whom they lived—not always in the same degree of power and intelligence, but according to the condition, circumstances, capabilities, and necessities of the people in various ages and parts of the world.

He believed that all the religions which had had force in the world, which had awayed the minds of millions of the human family, were in the beginning the revelations of God—not that those revelations had come down to later generations in their purity; but in the beginning God raised up great men, whom He inspired, in whom He put His Spirit, and that they brought forth truth according to the circumstances and needs of the people to whom they were sent; and the people had been blessed and benefited by hearkening to their voice. But as in the case of all other religions, and in the beginning they were pure, in after years they became corrupted, and the ideas and notions of men had been mingled with them. So it was with the sayings of the ancient Prophets; so with the doctrines they promulgated. Jesus Christ came into the world at the time appointed and brought from God to the people truths that were revealed in the earlier ages of the world, but which had been lost from among men through their darkness, transgressions and lack of faith, and these in their turn had been perverted by human opinions.

Jesus of Nazareth came as the Son of God, representing the Almighty Father. He was "the brightness of His glory and the express image of His person." This taught us that God is a person, not a diffused spirit or something that could not be comprehended at all; but an individual, a personality, and Jesus was His express image—the brightness of His glory—His first-begotten in the spirit in the eternal world, and all mankind, He said, were His brethren. God was the Father of us all; the spirits of men were His offspring. This was what the Apostle meant when he said "We have had fathers of our flesh who corrected us, and we gave them reverence. Shall we not much rather be in subjection to the Father of Spirits and live?"—Hebrews xii, 9. If we were obedient to the fathers of our flesh, how much more should we be obedient to Him who is the Father of our spirits—immortal because they were the offspring of an immortal Being? The idea that God was a phantom "without body, parts or passions, whose centre was everywhere and His circumference nowhere," was a something which men had evolved out of their own minds, but which God Himself had not communicated in any age of the world. Jesus said: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." He and the Father were one—that was, one in sentiment, in spirit but not in personality. He prayed that all His disciples might become one, even as He and the Father were one.

It was a very singular thing that people who professed to believe in the Bible, who sang:

"Holy Bible, book divine, Precious treasure, thou art mine," and would pretend to believe that God spoke in ancient days in diverse ways and at sundry times, would not believe that He would or could speak to man in modern times. It was a marvel to him, but that was doctrine of modern Christendom, which taught that the Bible was the only Word of God, and that "whatsoever was not in accordance therewith, and could not be proved thereby, was not to be received as an article of faith." He would like to know where either in the Old or New Testament it was declared that the time when the word of the Lord should come to the people of the earth was limited. Where could we find within the title of the Bible any declaration that God would nevermore speak to mankind? Nowhere. Why should it be so? Why should God suddenly cease to speak to the inhabitants of the earth, seal up the heavens as brass and close up all communication from on high? The speaker could see no reason for it, and certainly there was no revelation for it. On the contrary, some of those men through whom God spoke in ancient times declared that the time would come when all people living would have the knowledge of God, should know Him from the least even unto the greatest. Could man find out God by his own researches? No, it was not in his power. The only way whereby man could learn of God, his Father, was by revelation; he could not tear away the covering which hid the Almighty from his gaze. "Men by searching cannot find out God," we were told in holy writ. But Jesus said: "I thank Thee, O Father, that Thou hast kept these things hid from the wise and the prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes," etc.

"And no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father but the Son and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal Him."

The only way whereby man could learn of God, then, was by revelation from Him, and if it required revelation one or two thousand years ago to enable mankind to understand Him, it would take revelation to do so in the nineteenth century. But people had come to be so wondrously wise in their own counsel, that they thought they did not need revelation now. He would admit that there had been wonderful developments of knowledge in this nineteenth century in various departments; that science had made rapid strides; that God had been pleased to enlighten the minds of men so that great truths had been brought forth. He believed that all this had come from God—that all the inventions, so called, which had been made in this age had been brought forth by the power of God for the benefit of mankind. But notwithstanding the wisdom and developments of the present century, the wise men of the age had not been able to explain to the people who or what God is, nor declare anything which would unite them in their religious views and worship. Indeed, the more they preached by "the enticing words of man's wisdom" and brought forth the results of their learning, study, and researches, the more did they becloud the minds of men in regard to theology, and bring in "confusion worse confounded."

The attempts made by the learned of the age to describe God were supremely ridiculous and contradictory. From the time when Athanasius devised his creed until now all such attempts had proved utter failures. All mankind could learn of God if He would reveal Himself to them; and what was there to hinder it? Why should He not reveal Himself today just as much as in former days? We read that He does not change, and was the same yesterday, today and forever—that His ways are one eternal round.

A little over half a century ago a young man, a native of this land, declared that God had revealed Himself to him that the Father and the Son had appeared unto him in the day time—not in a dream of the night—and that the Father, pointing to the Son, said, "This is my beloved Son; hear Him." He was an unlearned youth, and he prayed to God in the simplicity of his heart desiring to know the truth. He had read in the Epistle of James: "If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not," etc. He prayed in faith to God to manifest to him which was the true religion; he believed that God would answer him. But how many people when they said their prayers nowadays ever thought or believed that God would answer them? How many of the divines of the nineteenth century who with folded hands and eyes rolled up to heaven, and in sanctified tones repeated the prayers which had been written for them, Sunday after Sunday, expected to get a direct answer from God? Not many, if any. This boy, believing that God would answer him, prayed in faith and received this divine manifestation, and he bore testimony to the world to the vision which he had seen. Then he was hooted at and scoffed by the most "religious" people of the time, in the neighborhood in which he lived. Why? Because the very idea that God would manifest Himself in the nineteenth century was absolutely absurd in their eyes. Revelation had ceased, according to modern "Christian" doctrine. The "awful voice of prophecy," to use a quotation from one of the most noted divines, "was silenced for ever." The canon of Scripture was full. Revelation was finished with the Bible, according to their ideas. So when Joseph Smith came and bore testimony to this vision they declared it could not be true, in the nature of things, because, said they, God had quit giving revelation—the heavens were sealed up, no angels were to come from heaven in these times. God, who at sundry times and in divers manners had spoken in the past, by the prophets, had suddenly become dumb and I would not speak again under any circumstances.

When they bore testimony to the world today that God had opened up another, and the last, dispensation—"the dispensation of the fulness of times"—spoken of by His servants in past ages, the wise and the learned theologians of the day met them with a smile of derision. Said they, "There has been no revelation since the days of Jesus, and there will not be any more." Some argued that there was no need for it now, because they had their learned divines, men who had been to college and were trained to become public preachers of the Word—that they could read to them from the Bible what God revealed "at sundry times and in divers manners." In the past, and make explanations of His word. But in their comments one said one thing, and another said another, and another said something else; and no dependence whatever could be placed upon their interpretations.

As the Bible contained some of the revelations given to those who dwelt upon the Eastern continent, so the Book of Mormon, translated by Joseph Smith by the power of God, contained some of those revelations given to the Prophets on the Western continent. The Lord Jesus appeared to the ancient inhabitants of the continent and taught them the same things which He taught at Jerusalem. They were the sheep that He spoke of that were not of that fold, and they heard His voice as He promised. The Book of Mormon corroborated the Bible, and the two books ran together like drops of water and became one.

The reason why so many thousands of Latter-day Saints were to be found in these mountain valleys today was because they had received the Holy Ghost as a testimony of the true Gospel, in distant lands, and they were all living witnesses that God was a God of revelation. He was just as ready and willing to reveal himself to mankind today as in ancient times, if they but sought him humbly and in faith.

The spirit of the generation in which we lived was one of doubt, skepticism and infidelity, and men prided themselves in saying they do not know anything about God. Others pretended to believe in Him but their faith was a dead faith. He had heard very wise and intelligent men, in their own estimation, say, "I am better off than you. I don't believe in anything; I have no care or anxiety about these things; I do not believe in any hereafter; I do not say there is none, but I don't believe in it. I do not worry myself about a God or any hereafter." Now, it seemed to him that an individual of that kind was not much better off than he. Indeed he thought himself a little better off with faith in God, an unwavering conviction of an immortal existence, the joy that came from knowing that his Redeemer liveth and the inexpressible pleasure that came from communion with his Maker and the manifestations of the Holy Ghost to his own soul. The speaker bore testimony that God had revealed Himself in this age of the world, that His Son Jesus had appeared, that angels had come from the courts of glory with messages to man, that the Holy Ghost was given to those who believed, repented, were baptized for the remission of their sins and had the hands of authorized men laid upon them, and that all the gifts enjoyed by the early Christian Church were now enjoyed and that in the sundry ways and divers manners of past times God spoke in this dispensation.

Unfortunately this was a skeptical generation. People doubted almost everything. Even men who stood up and preached in the pulpit, when one talked to them privately, expressed their doubts as to whether God ever did actually speak to man. They believed that men possessing intelligence were moved upon by some divine power; but what it was or where it came from they knew not.

"Mormonism," however, was a living protest against this spirit of infidelity and doubt. It came as the embodiment of the spirit and principle of revelation. It would continue and prevail in spite of all opposition, and the reason why no power on earth could stop its onward progress was that it was God's work, revealed by Him, the beginning of His Kingdom which was shortly to be established upon the earth.

The time was close at hand when with judgments, with fire, with sword, with famine, with pestilence, with earthquakes, with devouring flame, with cyclone and whirlwind, and the heaving of the seas beyond their bounds God would sweep the earth and make a full end of the kingdoms of the wicked and establish His kingdom in power, and all things which he had spoken by the prophets in ancient and in modern times would come to pass. He called upon all men to repent and obey the Gospel and prayed that we might be prepared for the events which are coming on the earth.

The choir sang the anthem:

Unfold ye portals everlasting.

Benediction by Bishop W. B. Preston.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met in regular session Tuesday, July 21, President Loomis in the chair. The councilmen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Hardy, Moran, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Ewing, Simond, Beardsley, Helms, Evans, Wantland.

Absent—Karrick.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read, amended and approved, the following were read and referred as specified:

PETITIONS

J. B. Walden complained of a haud organ nuisance. Committee on police.

The Sierra Nevada Lumber company asked that Third West be sprinkled. Committee on sprinkling.

Mrs. A. Crockett asked for a free peddler's license. Committee on license.

J. Weinberger and others protested against granting a railroad franchise on Second West street between Eight and Ninth South street. Committee on streets.

M. Fitzgerald asked permission to erect an electric light in front of his place of business. Committee on improvements.

The city school board asked for the extension of water mains on Seventh West street to the Franklin school. Committee on waterworks.

John Williams asked for a free peddler's license on account of being a cripple. Committee on license.

Andrew Ammussen asked a rebate on sprinkling tax. Committee on sprinkling.

L. E. Holt and others asked for an extension of water mains on Third South street. Committee on waterworks.

C. J. and W. A. Thompson offered to sell the city a piece of property in the N. E. quarter of the N. E. quarter of section eight and N. half of N. W. quarter and S. W. quarter S. W. quarter section 9 T. 1 R. 1 W. Committee on public grounds.

Henry George asked a rebate on sprinkling tax. Committee on sprinkling.

200,000 BRICKS.

The superintendent of sewers asked the Council to let a contract for 200,000 bricks and for 100 barrels of cement for sewer purposes. It was referred to the committee on sewers.

FROM THE CITY ATTORNEY.

The city attorney reported that the effect discovered in the title of the "Old Mill" property had been quelled by decree of the court, and that the city's portion of the expense was $175. Filed.

POLICE COURT REPORT.

Police Justice Kesler reported for the month of June as follows:

Total fines assessed.....	$2,087 50
Cash for old fines.....	40 00
Amount of fines paid in labor.....	$ 418 00
Amount paid Treasurer Duke.....	1,629 50
Cash carried forward as old fines.....	83 50
Total.....	$2,137 50

One hundred and eighty-three cases were tried.

THE CLUTE SHORTAGE.

The City Assessor and Collector made the following report in regard to the Clute shortage:

Honorable President and Members of the City Council:

Gentlemen—In pursuance of a resolution passed by your honorable body July 16th, 1892 I have the honor to exhibit the attached statement:

Amount of assessment, $51,004.60; at five mills, $255,023.00.
Amount allowed for charity.....	$ 2,228.67
Amount uncollected.....	$1,117 35
Cutler & Clawson.....	20 92
Commissions.....	4,649 38
Tax sales.....	5,160 22
Amount paid Treasurer.....	221,892 47

Total.....	$ 5,003 01
School tax at $\frac{1}{4}$ a mill.....	1,968 24

Total.....	$329,003 01
Shortage school tax.....	1,968 24
Shortage city tax.....	2,519 49

Total.....	$341,896 14
Shortage city tax.....	$ 20,519 19
Shortage sewer tax.....	11 3 40

Total.....	$ 21,092 59
------------	--------------

The finance committee reported that they had examined the statement of Assessor and Collector Clute and found it correct and that Mr. Clute had come forward and made good the shortage.

The city treasurer reported that Mr. Clute had paid to the city $22,007.73. This was $314.24 more than the reported shortage and Mr. Clute claimed that amount was due him.

Moran—That ought to be held for interest.

The recorder—What did you say?

Moran—I say that the city should retain that $314 as interest for the use of its money.

Rich—The city is paying five and six per cent on bonds, $23,000, at that rate for six months is worth about $600. Further I will ask Mr. Bell, has Mr. Clute settled in full with the city? If so, was it a cash transaction or did he give the city other securities?

Bell—We have the sworn statement of the city auditor and treasurer that the money has been paid into the treasury.

The report was referred to committee on finance with the city attorney associated.

THE MAYOR AGAIN IGNORED.

The committee on police reported adversely on the appointment of the mayor's Chief of Police Paul as city jaller.

Wantland—I should like to hear some reason given for the making of such a report.

Lawson—I can furnish the gentleman with all the reasons necessary. The chief of police has plenty to do to attend to the duties of his own office.

Bell (warmly)—I want to hear from some other members of the committee coming from the chairman down as I think Mr. Lawson's statement the angriest one I ever heard. I do not think there is any law in supporting this recommendation of the committee. Moran—Do you know that there is any law on the question at all?

Wantland—If this is a fight between the Mayor and Council I am certainly opposed to it.

Beardsley—After long and careful consideration the committee has arrived at the conclusion that the office of city police properly belongs to the office of city marshal.

The question to confirm the Mayor's appointment was then put, with the following result:

Ayes—Beardsley, Evans, Ewing, Folland, Horn, Hawdon, Siamond, Moran, Rich, Lawson—10.

Noes—Bell, Helas, Loothourw, Wantland—4.

The committee on police recommended that J. Van Alstyne be made a policeman without pay. Adopted.

THAT ELECTRIC DIFFICULTY.

The city engineer and city attorney, to whom was referred the difficulty between the Salt Lake City railway and the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, reported that, in their opinion, the railway company should be required to remove their posts from Second East Street, from First South to Fifth South. They also recommend that this resolution be adopted by the Council:

Resolved, That the resolution of the City Council adopted Feb. 4, 1890, granting to the Salt Lake City Railroad company the privileges and authorize the said company to erect poles and maintain wires and poles where the same may be found necessary for the purpose of communicating power, to be used in the operation of elevators, pumps and propulsion of machinery and other mechanical purposes, be and the said resolution is herewith by revoked, set aside and annulled, and that the privileges and each and every one of them granted in said resolution be and they are hereby withdrawn.

On motion of Hardy the matter was referred to the committee on streets.

FURTHER TIME GRANTED.

Ewing, of the committee on ways and means, asked that the committee be given more time in which to report on the amount of tax levy.

Wantland was opposed to granting the request as he was of the opinion that the matter could be decided upon at once.

On motion of Hardy the request was granted and Friday night set apart for the consideration of the question.

DETECTIVE BUREAU.

The police committee offered the following:

Whereas, It is deemed advisable that the city should have a detective force that should be separate and distinct from the police force and under the direct supervision of the City Council; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the city attorney be instructed to present an ordinance creating such officers at the next meeting of the council.

Adopted.

MORE LIGHT.

As to the petition of A. A. Greenman and others asking for electric lights the committee on improvements recommended that lights be placed at the following points: Fourth and M streets, Second and M streets and Third and I streets. Adopted.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The committee on fire department recommended that $300 be appropriated for the purchase of a Pomper ladder. Referred back to the committee with power to act.

REBATE GRANTED.

The petition of L. C. Trent asking for a rebate of $342.92 on watermain taxes was granted with 5 per cent. added for the use of the money.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A resolution authorizing the advertising for bids for the paving of Main street from South Temple to Fourth South and of First and Second South streets between West Temple and State streets was adopted.

A resolution authorizing the advertising for bids for the sidewalk recently ordered on Main and West Temple streets was adopted.

An ordinance extending the limits of sprinkling district No. 2 was then reported, and under suspension of rules was passed to second and third readings and finally passed.

The garbage ordinance, the special order of the business, was then taken up.

Beardsley moved that the whole matter be referred to the sanitary committee with the health commissioner and city attorney and sanitary inspector associated, for amendment. Carried.

The ordinance for the assessment of the property to pay the expenses of sprinkling the streets in sprinkling district No. 2 was then taken up, and after nearly an hour's talk, in which the Council got into a wrangle over rates and rebates and was called down by the city attorney, the whole matter was laid over until the next meeting.

APPROPRIATIONS.

J. Sullivan	$102.00
C. W. Nunn	50.00
Neder & Cleland	1.00
F. Pratt & Co.	3.00
Stearns Nevada Lumber Co.	2.10
Salt Lake Hardware Co.	20.50
C. W. Nunn	30.50
Simpson Drug Co.	11.85
G. M. Scott & Co.	13.00
Salt Lake City Gas Co.	36.17
Salt Lake P. L. & H. Co.	11.00
Grant Bros Livery Co.	5.10
W. A. Waine & Co.	5.10
Eagle F. & M. Co.	2.10
Kahn Bros	2.10
Driver Mer Co.	2.10
W. L. Pickard	11.22
Rocky M. H. Co.	20.00
Irish & Franklin	22.61
American Fire Eng. Co.	15.00
The McKinnon Horse Collar Mfg. Co.	8.50
O. T. Hollaway	3.50
Wicombs & Co.	15.10
J. Hegab	15.10
H. L. Myers	15.10
E. B. Prosser	15.10
Freed Farm Co.	15.10
P. V. Coal Co.	15.10
E. N. Jones	15.10
Mason & Co.	15.10
Utah Steam Laundry	15.10
Utah Mountain Ice & Cold S Co.	15.10
Utah Pacific Coal Co.	15.10
O. T. Hollaway	15.10
Tullidge & Co.	15.10
Moritz & Greenwood	15.10
J. J. Farrell	15.10
H. M. Bell Telephone Co.	15.10
Mrs. William Gilbert	15.10
A. J. Hart	15.10
J. B. Wheeler	15.10
J. A. H. yes, Jr.	15.10
A. W. Caine & Co.	15.10
Barrett Bros.	15.10
Inter-Mountain Electric Co.	15.10
Utah Electric Co.	15.10
S. L. P. L. & H. Co.	15.10
Salt Lake City Gas Co.	15.10
Utah Mountain Ice & Cold S Co.	15.10
Kelly & Co.	15.10
Utah Book and Stationery Co.	15.10
Kerrie & Miller	15.10
J. C. Murphy & Co.	15.10
H. B. Rogers	15.10
Hospital, Holy Cross	15.10
E. D. Hoge	15.10
F. E. McGinnis	15.10
Edmund Printing Co.	15.10
C. H. Parsons	15.10
Mason & Co.	15.10
Utah Pacific Coal Co.	15.10
Grocer Printing Co.	15.10
Grocer Printing Co.	15.10
Tribe Publishing Co.	15.10
Tribe Publishing Co.	15.10
Herald Publishing Co.	15.10
Sierra Nevada Lumber	15.10
G. M. Scott	15.10
W. P. Rowe	15.10
Barrett & Bros.	15.10
Goldsmith & Co.	15.10
E. H. Parsons	15.10
Spicer	15.10
T. C. Armstrong	15.10
Tribe Publishing Co.	15.10
Walker Bros. & Fyler Co.	15.10
Wasatch Drug Co.	15.10
L. C. Trent	15.10
Colorado Coal & Iron Co.	15.10
H. C. Christ	15.10
W. A. Waine & Co.	15.10
Utah Mountain Ice & Cold S Co.	15.10
Salt Lake Power, Light and Heating Co.	15.10
McCoy & Kendall	15.10
Utah and Montana Machinery Co.	15.10
Remington, Johnson & Co.	15.10
Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Co.	15.10
A. C. Smith & Co.	15.10
Inter-Mountain Electric Co.	15.10
Bridge, Kirk & Co.	15.10
Rogers & Co.	15.10
Moritz & Greenwood	15.10
G. M. Scott & Co.	15.10
Eagle Foundry and Machine Co.	15.10
H. L. Driver	15.10
T. C. Armstrong	15.10
K. C. Coffin & Co.	15.10
Utah Mountain Ice & Cold S Co.	15.10
A. J. Peniston & Son	15.10
G. F. Palmer & Co.	15.10
G. F. Palmer & Co.	15.10
Kelly & Co.	15.10

G. M. Scott & Co.	44 57
G. M. Scott & Co.	24 67
G. M. Scott & Co.	24 67
D. B. Blackman	219 33

A special session of the City Council was held Friday night, July 22nd, for the purpose of deciding upon the rate of tax for the ensuing year. President Looftbourrow called the members to order at 8:30 o'clock (one hour late). The councilmen in attendance were: Rich, Folland, Hardy, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Ewing, Evans, Simond, Heise, Wantland, Moran.

A FIVE MILLS RATE RECOMMENDED. After the minutes of Tuesday night's session had been read and approved the following report from the committee on ways and means was read by the recorder:

To the City Council:

We your committee on ways and means recommend that the rate of tax for the year 1892 be fixed at 5 mills. We have come to this conclusion from the examination of the annexed schedule submitted by the city auditor.

S. C. EWING,
M. H. BEARDSLEY,
ELI A. FOLLAND.

Accompanying the report was the following financial statement for the six months ending June 30:

RECEIPTS.

Bonds July, 1891	$ 150,000 00
Liquor license	55,700 00
Waterman extension tax	49,286 77
Rating tax	30,098 33
General license	25,991 75
Sewer tax	12,146 32
Sidewalk tax	11,750 35
Fines	7,511 55
Tax sales	8,141 19
Water rates	3,023 14
City engineering department	2,578 70
Carbing and gutting	2,663 92
Interest on bonds	6,854 25
Dog tax	2,100 00
Freight on bonds	1,875 00
Cemetery	1,401 30
Rent	1,130 40
Engineering department	1,278 70
City and county building	623 77
Police tax	539 30
Waterworks	419 71
Suspense	407 35
Interest	289 88
Sewerage	245 75
Street department	289 88
Liberty park	65 60
Sprinkling tax	33 18
Watermaster	29 80
Fire department	17 80
Jordan and Salt Lake canal	9 75

Total $374,060 44

DISBURSEMENTS.

Waterworks	$ 145,471 35
Parley's conduit	61,844 29
Inter. at on bonds	47,000 00
Salary	28,098 33
Police department	28,098 33
City and county building	28,098 33
Street lighting	28,098 33
Watermaster department	28,098 33
Sewerage department	28,098 33
Fire department	28,098 33
Health department	28,098 33
Cemetery department	28,098 33
Street street paving	28,098 33
Bridges	28,098 33
Claims and damages	28,098 33
Assessor and collector's office expense	28,098 33
Street and advertising	28,098 33
General expense	28,098 33
Retaining wall	28,098 33
Jordan and Salt Lake canal	28,098 33
Liberty park	28,098 33
Parley canal	28,098 33
Hospital	28,098 33
Legal expense	28,098 33
Cross walks	28,098 33
Land	28,098 33
Rent	28,098 33
Dog tax	28,098 33
Furniture and fixtures	28,098 33
Donation	28,098 33

Sarpins canal	531 74
License refunded	289 15
Mayor's agent fund	147 15
Water conduit and O. B.	100 00
Fines	80 67
Extray pound	90 65
City tax	44 68
Suspense	30 50
Total	$ 306,396 86

Lawson moved that the recommendations of the committee be adopted and offered a resolution endorsing the five-mill proposition.

Hardy—I think that 4½ mills is quite sufficient considering the hard times and the improvements proposed. I favor retrenchment.

Horn—I agree with Mr. Hardy and am willing that the rate should be fixed at 4½ mills; I would even be satisfied with fixing it at 4 mills if after due consideration that should be thought enough.

Ewing—The committee on ways and means arrived at the conclusion of fixing the rate at 5 mills after a careful estimate of what the city would need for the coming year. Less than the amount of money raised from that rate would not be enough.

Lawson—The five mill rate will give the city about $283,000. We will need every dollar of that amount to carry on contemplated improvements and pay regular expenses.

Wantland—I think that the rate should be fixed at five mills, the same as it was last year. Taxes are lighter in Salt Lake than in any western city.

Hardy—While I do not want to cripple the city government in the slightest degree, I think expenses can be cut down with safety in some of the city departments. For instance, during the last six months $145,000 have been expended in the waterworks department. Parley's conduit has now been completed and there will be no heavy bills to meet from that source. In the health department more than $3,000 were spent during the same time. Why this is I do not know and cannot understand.

Horn—If the gentleman will allow me I will state for his information that the expenses in the health department have been made heavy by the reason of the city being compelled to pay $1000 per month to the Rio Grande Western railway company to convey its garbage from the city.

Wantland—A great deal has been said about real estate men being anxious to make a heavy tax showing. As to that I will say that such a statement is erroneous. It is to nobody's interest to keep down taxes as much as to the real estate dealer.

Rich—We want to show investors that the rate of taxes in this city is low. I move that Mr. Lawson's resolution be amended to read four and a half mills instead of five mills, that will save the people about $20,000.

Folland—The committee having this matter under consideration had a higher and a lower rate than five mills mentioned during their deliberations but it was thought that the rate decided upon was the proper thing. I am in favor of the five mill proposition.

Moran, Lawson and Wantland opposed the amendment.

Lawson's resolution was then adopted on the following vote:

Ayes—Folland, Moran, Horn, Bell, Lawson, Ewing, Evans, Simond, Wantland, Heise, Looftbourrow—12.
Noes—Hardy, Rich—2.

ASSESSOR'S COMPENSATION.

Moran offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That Fred. J. Leonard the city assessor and collector be and he is hereby allowed as compensation for his services for the year 1892 two per cent on all collections made by him.

Folland—I move to amend by making the office of the city assessor and collector a salaried one at $3,500 per year.

Rich—I second the motion.

Lawson—I am in favor of Mr. Moran's resolution. Our assessor and collector is a good one; his services to the city have already been very valuable. He frequently has to work eighteen hours a day and often on Sundays. We should reward him well for his labors.

Hardy—I am opposed to the percentage compensation. The county gives its assessor $7000 per year and he must pay all his office clerks out of that amount. I think our assessor and collector is a good one and should receive a fair compensation and I will move to amend the amendment and make his salary $4000 per year.

Rich—I second the motion.

Folland—I know that Mr. Leonard is a competent man and a jolly good fellow but that should cut no figure. According to two per cent. basis Mr. Leonard will clear at least $3,000. This, I think, an excessive compensation. Mr. Clute made, I am told, about $12,000 per year.

Wantland—in conversation with Ex-Mayor Scott today he intimated that Mr. Clute got less than $5000 per year on the percentage plan.

Folland—I know absolutely from Mr. Clute's own statement that he made considerably more than $8000 per year.

Wantland here made a twenty minutes political stump speech in which he plead for the 2 per cent. proposition.

Bell—I would like to ask the recorder how many months he will be required to work to assess the property and collect the taxes for the present year, twelve or fifteen months?

Mr. Leonard—Fifteen months.

Hardy—Mr. Leonard, the present incumbent, at $3,500 or $4,000 per year will the expenses of his office paid by the city will receive a compensation far in excess of that of any other city officer. It is a good, "fat" office and should, with its perquisites, satisfy the most fastidious.

By way of amendment to the original resolution by the committee, Ewing offered the following:

Resolved, That 2 per cent. be allowed the assessor and collector on the property assessment, all other assessments and collections to be made without remuneration to the assessor and collector. Said special taxes exempt be as follows: Sprinkling, paving, sidewalks, sewerage, waterworks, curbing and all special taxes working through the collector's office.

Evans seconded the resolution.

Wantland—I am unalterably opposed to the resolution. No one knew how much of the tax would go uncollected. It is entirely probable that his salary will fall below $4000, and there are not more than three votes likely to be cast in this Council against paying him a greater salary than that.

When Mr. Leonard received the nomination for the city assessor and collector he was given to understand that the office would be a lucrative one. His election was the first substantial recognition the Colorado contingent or outside element received and to squelch him now is unfair and should not be allowed.

Folland—I am glad the discussion has taken this turn so that I can make myself understood. If a caucus has been held and the number of votes canvassed in favor of the proposition we might as well end the matter here and now. It was time wasted to spend time foolishly on a cut and dried affair. Mr. Wantland's instruction means nothing. Who does he mean will cast the three votes on the proposition referred to? That is difficult to divine. But I want to tell that he never knows beforehand how I will vote. The reflection is unjust and ungentlemanly and I resent it.

Evans—I cannot sit still and say nothing on this matter. I am in favor of giving our assessor and collector a good salary, but I am certainly opposed to this heavy per centage plan. I will oppose anything giving that official more than $5000 per year. We should be moderate.

Wantland—I move that further consideration of this question be postponed until Tuesday evening next.

The motion carried on a vote of eight to three.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION MEETING.

The council then fixed the time of the sittings of the board of equalization on the 15th to 25th of August, inclusive, to hear complaints in regard to assessment.

Adjourned until Tuesday night.

WOOLGROWERS' MEETING.

The meeting of the Salt Lake County Woolgrowers' Association held in the A. O. U. W. hall on West Temple Street Tuesday afternoon and evening were well attended, and full of interest to sheepmen.

OBJECT OF THE ASSOCIATION.

The object of the association as set forth in the preamble is as follows:

"For the purpose of protecting the industry of wool growing in this Territory; for the purpose of protecting the rights of persons engaged in this industry; for the purpose of maintaining the vested rights in the use of the common range which have been acquired by the woolgrowers; for the purpose of protecting ourselves against the enactment of laws which are designed to destroy our rights and crush our business; and for the purpose of preventing the spread of public sentiment hostile to us and our welfare."

Article II still further emphasizes the objects of the association in its relation to the rights of individual members in the following words:

"The objects of this association shall be to carry into effect the purposes above set forth; to secure to the members as far as possible, an equal participation in the benefits, and in the work necessary thereto; to defend the individual members from oppression of any kind, and to make a common cause of any injury or injustice inflicted upon a member; to protect the wool grower in the use of the range, the water courses and springs, and in his right to the use of the public highway; to provide a fund that can be used at any time to defend a member in his rights, or to prosecute to a final determination suits in the courts of law, for any injustice which may be committed on a member of this association."

BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS.

President M. K. Parsons called the afternoon meeting to order and W. H. Haigh, the secretary, read a communication from H. C. Shurtliff of Evanston, Wyo., asking that a committee be appointed to confer with a like committee there in regard to damages done by Utah sheep foraging in that quarter.

John C. Mackay urged that a committee of three be appointed to secure rights for the wool-growers in Western Wyoming.

Mr. Shurtliff said that the sheep-growers of Utah County are the heaviest taxpayers in that county; the sheepmen pay 95 per cent. of their stock, while the cattlemen pay much less. "We want a sheepman in the legislature," he said.

It was brought out the discussion that nearly all the sheep on the ranges in Western Wyoming are owned by men living in Salt Lake County.

Mr. Shurtliff, continuing, said that they could get an association of seventy-five members in Utah County to co-operate with the association here. He said it would be necessary to hire the lawyers here as all the lawyers up there are owned by the "hustlers."

Mr. Mackay moved that an advisory committee be appointed by the executive committee of three Wyoming men and that committee be named in other places as the executive committee see fit. The motion carried unanimously.

President Parsons stated that the bonds of the secretary and the treasurer's bonds of $1000 and $2000 respectively had been filed with him, and he considered them ample.

Mr. Tufts, of the executive committee, reported that they had published a new book of the constitution and by-laws and that all the business firms which they had approached for advertisements, except one, had taken agency.

Mr. Pickard said they had received $80 in advertisements and the cost of 1000 copies was but $40, leaving a balance in the treasury.

GOVERNOR THOMAS THANKED.

W. L. Pickard presented the following resolution, which was adopted:

"The wool growers of Salt Lake County in convention assembled, hereby tender Governor Arthur L. Thomas the thanks not only of the convention, but the thanks of the wool growers at large, for the veto of H. F. No. 65, passed last session by the Legislature of our Territory, and at the same time we heartily denounce the said legislature for their action in seeking the destruction of the most diversified industry in Utah."

ATTORNEY SIDNEY DARKE said that in all the history of the world mankind had banded itself together for self defense and protection. In the course of his remarks he referred to the power of money as the armament that secures the rights of the association. If any member of the association is aggrieved or wronged it is his business to report this injury or oppression to a member of the executive committee, and if he has been injured he has the association back of him to defend his interests. Four members of the executive committee have the power to use the funds of the association to defend him. He had heard that in some of the outer counties the sheep men had been prevented the use of highways. The sheep men have as much right to the highways as any other man. When God Almighty set up these mountains and turned them on edge so that grass could grow on the slopes, He did not go to all this trouble for the sole benefit of the cattle men, but for all alike. The sheep man has as much right to God's grass as any other man. The public range is open to all alike, unless it is fenced up. If John Jones claims to own the land he has a patent for it. Any road open, and in use for seven years, is under the law a public highway, and no man has a right to fence it up. Any sheep man can drive his flock over it, using due diligence to not do any more damage to his neighbor than he can help.

"Whenever a judgment is granted against you by a country justice of the peace, if you are right appeal it to a higher court, or report it to the association and it will carry it up. It is said that justice in some of the country districts has taken the bandage off one of her eyes, and that she looks at the cattlemen with a kindly glance."

The speaker devoted sometime in urging the members to go to work and elect selectmen to the county courts who are friendly to the sheep interest. If they can get two selectmen out of the three they will virtually control the county board.

"Send men," he said earnestly, "to the legislature friendly to the sheep industry. Your industry is the second most important in the territory, second only to mining. The mining industry sends men friendly to its rights, and you should be as diligent of your rights. Send men to the legislature who believe that the sheep have the same right to the grass on the mountain side as the cattle."

PRESIDENT CRANE'S ADDRESS.

Charles Crane, president of the Territorial Association, spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Gentlemen and Fellow Wool-growers:

I am exceedingly pleased to again meet with you, and listen to words of, if not of inspiration, at least of wisdom, from the lips of those who are seeking by all honorable means for the uplifting of the woolgrowers of Utah.

You are gathered here today for the purpose, I believe, of perfecting a more thorough organization of the wool-growers of Salt Lake County. Your county now represents 201,588 head of sheep, and last season sold wool to the valuation of $145,067.81, making your county third on the list as a wool producer, Sanpete and Iron counties only surpassing you. I take it, however, that while you should be proud of this showing, it does not represent all the wealth of the woolmen, residents of this county, for tens of thousands of sheep which are pastured on the mountains in different parts of not only Utah, but the neighboring States and Territories, pay tribute to owners whose residence is in your beautiful city, hence this organization represents nearly if not quite 500,000 sheep, whose owners will sell fully 3,000,000 pounds of wool, valued at $400,000; beside this you will no doubt dispose of mutton to the valuation of at least $100,000, making a grand total of $500,000 which goes into circulation among the people of your country as the result of the wool-growing industry.

Grand as is this showing, gentlemen, you are not satisfied and will not rest until you dispose of $1,000,000 worth of wool annually from Salt Lake county alone, but this cannot be until you are thoroughly organized for protective purposes, for organization means victory, which leads to prosperity, and for that purpose you are here today.

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and you have had an exemplification of that fact a few months since, when our Legislature (which to our eternal disgrace was overwhelmingly Democratic) tried so hard to absolutely and utterly destroy us, and with us (without exception), the most prosperous industry in Utah today.

Thank God, that Legislature will never again meet to mire, resent their constituents, and we should eternally and everlastingly thank God that we had a governor whose heart was white, whose head was level, whose honesty and integrity can never be doubted in the cause of right and justice. Governor Thomas stood between us and destruction, and when delegation after delegation of would-be-law-makers waited upon him and asked him to affix his signature to that monstrous bill, he quietly told them that this bill would destroy and drive beyond our borders every sheep and every wool-grower, and reduce thousands of now prosperous, contented, happy people to penury and want.

Napoleon once said that "Providence was on the side of the heaviest artillery," and you will find that Providence and protection are on the side of those who work constantly and vigilantly for the political party that gives us the protection we have today. There are a few Democratic wool-growers, I am sorry to say, gentlemen, who are absolutely honest in their belief that our prosperity depends upon the success of the Democratic party. Last November, and with all good feeling to them, I will say that the late lamented Democratic Legislature used every endeavor to destroy us. Ex-President Cleveland's free wool message was aimed at our destruction. The Mills bill, another Democratic measure, also aimed at our downfall, and last, but not least, the Springer free wool bill, which has passed the House, and now awaits the action of the Senate, before being presented to the President for his signature. These are all Democratic measures, designed to place us in competition with the pauper labor of Australasia and the Argentine republic, where herders can be had for from $4 to $6 Spanish money per month. Every measure aimed at our destruction comes from Democratic sources, and every measure for the advancement of our industry and the prosperity of our people springs from Republican sources. I know orators from the Democratic party will tell you that with wool on the free list we would receive more for our clips than we do today, and in the same breath tell the tolling millions, their clothing would be 50 per cent. cheaper.

As I speak, the London sales of wool are taking place, and yesterday X wool, shrinking 20 per cent. sold for sixpence three farthings, or less than 14 cents. Now, Mr. Chairman, add one cent for freight to this would make 15 cents, the price which this wool would cost the manufacturers at the seaboard. Is it likely he would purchase our wool shrinking from 60 to 80 per cent. trashy, and broken in staple, fibre short and unskirted tag-locks in it, etc., in preference to this beautiful skirted long-stapled wool? Well hardly, Mr. Chairman. The fact is our American wool is, and always has been about double the price of the London wool, shrinkage taken into consideration. Wools are always sold on their scoured basis, and as our wool shrinks 60 to 80 per cent. and is unskirted, while theirs shrink only 20 per cent. their wool would, even if it were admitted free, be worth double what ours would be; then, with wool on the free list, we would receive today from 6 cents to 8 cents perhaps per pound, and I ask you wool-growers can you exist at that figure, can you pay decent wages to decent men, for shearing, herding, dipping, freight, etc.? In Australia it costs 40½ cents per annum to run each sheep, this includes shearing, herding, clipping, freight, packing and laying the wool on the seaboard.

In Utah it has always cost me 70 cents per head, not including shearing, dipping, etc., to run sheep. In Australia the average weight per fleece is eight pounds, while ours is hardly six. Such being the fact, gentlemen, how can we compete with these men, whose herds number hundreds of thousands, where grass is perennial, and where you can lease for ninety-nine years a hundred leagues for $100; without protection we would be compelled to send our sheep to the shambles, and when our flocks were destroyed, our factories silent and the wheels of industry clogged, up would go the price of wool and clothing, and then, when too late, our Democratic friends would realize they had the wool pulled over their eyes, and their reason stifled by fallacies which had no foundation in facts.

Gentlemen, let me again urge upon you the necessity of taking a more active part in politics, for the success of the Republican party next November means continued protection which means continued prosperity to you all. Let each and every one of you put your shoulder to the Republican banner wagon in national and State politics and at the next Territorial election we will send a delegate to Congress who will be honest, staunch and true to the policy of protection to every American industry.

WOOL SAMPLES FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Mr. Crane, at the request of Prof. Salsborn, who has charge of the Utah exhibit of farm products at the World's Fair, said that while the wool-growers could not exhibit sheep, they, nevertheless, wanted samples of the wool grown here. "I propose to get up a stuffed sheep and a banner of all the classes of wool grown in this Territory, for instance, samples of one month's growth, two months' growth, etc. I would like some fleece in every county in the Territory. It doesn't cost much. I think I have a world-beating fleece, but I may not be in when I get to the World's Fair. These samples will be arranged in glass cases with the names of the grower, the age and breed of the sheep on which it was grown."

Mr. Tufts made a short speech in which he counseled the members to take a more active interest in elections and thought that the association would take a hand in the election of the next Legislature.

Charles Crane, on the suggestion of President Parsons, was made an honorary member of the association.

TIME OF MEETING.

A motion to change the time of holding the annual meeting from July to October was lost.

CHARTER MEMBERS.

Arthur, Edward J., St. John, Tooele county.
Anderson, Enerveld, West Jordan.
Blake, James, Gale.
Beckstead, G. F., Gale.
Blake, Charles, Gale.
Bennion, S. H., Taylorville.
Bennion, Alfred, Taylorville.
Brown, O. C., 27 E. Sixth South.
Beckstead, George W., Gale.
Bowdidge, John S., City.
Butterfield, Samuel, Herriman.
Beckstead, Gordon S., Gale.
Burns, Robert G., 1051 east, Third South (Funkman & Burns).
Covey, Enoch, 569 east, Third South.
Cochran, J. M., Granger.
Canning, George, city.
Cochran, Matthew, city.
Condle, Peter S. & Bros., 554 south Third West, city.
Cepson, Albert, East Mill Creek.
Callister, E. H., Brox, box 605, Duncombe, David, 890 west, Second North, city.
Day, J. E., Draper.
Davis, W. P., city.
Davidson, Walter, 905 east, Second South.
Duncombe, Robert, city.
Dunsie Br. & Herriman.
Day, James H., Draper.
Dunsley, W. J., Gale.
Droubay, Paul, Eriss, Tooele county.
Duncomb, A. J., Evanston, Wy.
Dunsie, C. N., Riverton.
Ennis, W. B., Draper.
Everitt, Wm. R., 478 Third street.
Fitzgerald, J. W. W., Draper.
Gerrard, Wm., Taylorville.
Gerrard, Eph., Taylorville.
Green, A., Draper.
Howard, Samuel H., Gale.
Howard, Samuel L., Gale.
Malt, W. H., Taylorville.
Hill, Alack, North P. O.
Hill, W. P., Mill Creek.
Hall & Bayan, city.
Harker, William, Taylorville.
Hansen & Winder, city.
Hall, Ebenezer, Prior, Emery co.
Jones, T. W., 681 W. South Temple street.
Jones, W. H., 231 S. Third East.
James, James A., city.
Kendrick, T. C., city.
Kingsley, S. S., city.
Kirk, William, Pleasant Grove.
Kerr, J. B., city 445 S. W.
Lawrence, Andrew T., Malad, Ida.
Laird, E., Sugar House ward.
Miller, C. L., Murray.
Mackay, D., Granger.
Mackay, D. O., Taylorville.
Marsh, J. W., Brighton.
Miller, D. L., Murray.
McKean, Theodore, 173 N. Fourth West.
Mackay, Hyrum, Taylorville.

Miller Brothers, Murray.
Nelson, A. J. Draper.
Newton, Hyrum, 320 S. Seventh East.

Norton, William J., Cherry Creek, Nevada.

Oswold, Wm., city.
Peterson, Chas., Gale.
Parker, Wm. E., Taylorsville.
Parker, John, Taylorsville.
Parker, John D., Granger.
Panter, Wm., Vernon.
Pickard, W. L., corner Third South and Third West.

Parker, S. L., Taylorsville.
Pascos, M. K., 445 South Main.
Park, W. G., Murray.
Payne, Henry, Farmers' ward.
Rudy, Frank, North Point.
Reese, I. G., 561 N. First West.
(Reese & Stowell's, city.)

Reese, E. M. & E. L., city. (Reese Bros.)

Rigby, William, 144 West Fourth South.

Russell, John F., St. John, Tooele county.

Rigby, S. T., Farmers ward.
Rigby, W. S., 144 West Fourth South.

Reid, Peter J., Salt Lake county.
Shoenfeldt, Emil, Brighton.
Shoenfeldt, John, Brighton.
Sampeon, James, city.
Smith, Hyrum, 87 South Sixth East.
Stowell, E. W., 230 South Second West. (Reese & Stowell, city.)
Sharp, John A., care of S. P. Teasdale.

Sharp, David, Vernon, Tooele county.
Slimper, Dan, Murray.
Swenson, Andrew, Murray.
Shurtliff, H. C., Evanston, Wyo.
Stocking, John J., Herriman.
Stevens, Andrew, 916 South Ninth East.

Straasburg, Lewis, Centre, Tooele county.

Scribner, N. A., Stockton.
Shafer, Oliver, Riter postoffice, Salt Lake county.

Tufts, Elbridge, 634 East Sixth South.

Terry, William J., Draper.

Terry, F., Draper.

Winder, Richard, Murray.

Watson, James M., 51 South Fifth West.

Whitaker, J. C., city.

Winchester, Benj., Murray.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The city school board met in regular session last night, Vice-President Nelson in the chair. The members in attendance were Pike, Newman, Baldwin, Young, Dooly, Duke and Alf.

FAN SYSTEM.

The following was read and referred to the committee on sites and buildings:

Honorable School Board:

Gentlemen—I will be able tomorrow (Friday) evening to give the information asked for by your committee on sites and buildings as to the cost and charges necessary in your five buildings for the proper installation of the Buffalo fan system of ventilation and heating.

SCHOOL SITE.

F. W. Olmsted offered to sell to the board lot 6, block 13, plat F, 10x20 rods, on the east bench, for $5000. Committee on sites and buildings.

JANITORIAL APPLICATION.

The application of Sylvanus B. Brinton for a janitorial position was referred to the committee on furniture and supplies.

AUTHORITY TO LEASE.

The committee on sites and buildings reported, recommending that the clerk of the board be authorized to execute a lease with Mr. Davis for his building over the river opposite the Twenty-second ward (the same as occupied last year), from July 1st, 1892, to June 30th, 1893, for the sum of $100, payable monthly on and after September 1st, 1892, at $10 per month; also to execute a lease with Mr. Roberts for the Roberts' building (Cone's addition (the same as occupied last year), from July 1st, 1892, to June 30th, 1893, for the sum of $100, payable monthly on and after September 1st, 1892 at $10 per month, and also to execute a lease with Mr. Rowe for a building at Folsom's addition (the same as occupied last year), from July 1st, 1892, to June 30th, 1893, for the sum of $100, payable monthly on and after September 1st, at $10 per month, it being understood that neither of these parties will charge anything from July 1st to August 31st, 1892.

Adopted.

The same committee reported recommending that the president and clerk of the board be authorized to execute a lease with the Eight Ward Ecclesiastical Association from July 1, 1892, to June 30, 1893, for the sum of $250; payable monthly on and after September 1st, 1892, at $25 a month, it being understood that no rent will be paid for the rooms for July and August; also, that a lease be executed with said association for right of way to and from the back part of the property owned by the board, adjoining, from July 1, 1892, to June 30, 1893, for the sum of $5, and that said association be paid $5 for the right of way to said property during the last year on the execution of a properly verified voucher of $10. Adopted.

FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The finance committee reported as follows:

To the President and Members of the Board of Education:
Gentlemen—Your finance committee herewith submits its annual report as required by law.

The receipts from all sources except the sale of bonds, were as follows, for the year ending June 30, 1892:

From Territorial apportionment, balance for 1891.....	$ 4,900 12
From Territorial apportionment, half of sum apportioned, 1892.....	25,500 00
From county school tax on account.....	32,163 80
From city school tax on account.....	24,015 79
Miscellaneous sources.....	502 72
Total.....	$105,644 83

The expenditures for the same period, on all accounts except those which the law contemplates should be charged to the proceeds from the sale of bonds, were as follows:

Paid overdrafts as shown on clerk's report for year ending June 30, 1891.....	$ 23,200 68
General expense account.....	11,661 41
Interest account.....	1,967 06
Teachers' salaries.....	96,543 35
Janitors' salaries.....	10,371 63
Janitors' supplies.....	1,065 40
Fuel.....	2,254 51
Supplies for schools.....	1,791 48
Maintenance school property.....	2,388 15
Rents of school buildings, etc.....	5,841 25
Literature.....	478 75

Total disbursements on this account, $165,310 08

For the detailed expenditures of this amount we refer you to the report of the clerk, filed.

This shows an apparent overdraft of $58,665.23.

The school expense account had advanced to the building account proper the previous year and this year, the sum of $63,664.23. This overdraft has been made good since the bonds were sold, and there is still due to the current school fund the sum of $5958.83. We recommend that these accounts be adjusted on this basis, that this sum be transferred accordingly and that the clerk be instructed to make the proper entries on the books to show this result, and that hereafter the two funds and the accounts for the same be kept separate.

For the coming year the following estimate is submitted:

ESTIMATED REVENUE.
Territorial apportionment, one-half of apportionment for 1891 unpaid.....	$ 25,500 00
Territorial apportionment for 1892.....	50,000 00
From county school tax.....	35,000 00
From city school tax.....	1,000 00
Balance on hand July 1, 1892.....	5,061 84
Total.....	$136,561 84

ESTIMATED EXPENDITURES.
One year's interest on $450,000 bonds at 5 per cent.....	$22,500
Half year's interest on $450,000 bonds at 5 per cent.....	11,250
One year's interest on $150,000 bonds at 5 per cent, not yet sold.....	7,500
Sinking fund, 5 per cent on $450,000, twenty year bonds.....	22,500
Sinking fund, 10 per cent on $150,000, ten year bonds.....	15,000
Total for sinking fund and interest.....	$78,750

Note—The estimate of interest in for three coupons, August 1, 1892, and February and August, 1893, as no further revenue will be received until after the last-named date.

ESTIMATED EXPENDITURES FOR SCHOOLS.

General expenses.....	$ 12,500 00
Teachers' salaries.....	105,000 00
Janitors' salaries.....	12,000 00
Janitors' supplies.....	1,500 00
Fuel and lights.....	4,000 00
Maintenance school property.....	5,000 00
Rents.....	5,000 00
For school supplies (and text books, if purchased by board).....	15,000 00
Total school expense.....	$180,500 00

Total estimated disbursements.....$239,000 00

Leaving a balance on hand at close of the year of.....$ 6,561 84

From this statement the need of keeping within the estimates made is seen to be imperative. These estimates are increased over last year's actual cost under each head (except for rents) to an extent which, as we compute it, be ample for all necessary expenditure. We therefore recommend that each committee be explicitly directed by the board to keep the expenses which it has in charge within the basis estimated.

Filed.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following appropriations were made:

Salt Lake City Gas Co., gas board rooms.....	$ 3 00
Louis Hyams & Co., insurance, Fortieth ward.....	85 90
F. E. Shoppe & Co., repairing roof, Fortieth ward.....	110 00
T. C. Angell, preliminary studies for plan for enlarging Simard school.....	25 00
John Green, scavenger work.....	75 00
Whittemore, Cooke & Co., insurance Eighth ward.....	12 15
Total.....	$279 05

The report of the committee on school work and the question of furnishing text books free were taken up and adopted, only two amendments being made. That was by substituting "national" for "normal" in the music course on a vote of six to three and the addition of Smith's Primer of Physiology to the list.

THE DESERT WEEKLY

PIONEER PUBLICATION ROCKY MOUNTAIN REGION.

ESTABLISHED TRUTH AND LIBERTY JUNE, 1850.

NO. 7. SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH, SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1892. VOL. XLV.

SHRIMAIKRS

Made by President Wilford Woodruff, at the St. George Stake Conference, held at St. George, June 12th and 13th, 1892.

REPORTED BY ARTHUR WINTER

I arise with a heart full of gratitude and thanksgiving to my Heavenly Father for preserving my life until I again have the privilege of visiting St. George and beholding the faces of my brethren and sisters with whom I stand connected in the new and everlasting covenant—a covenant which will last not only in this world, but in the world to come.

I think you are all acquainted with my motto with regard to public speaking. No man, in this generation or in any other, can preach the Gospel or edify the Saints of God unless he is led by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost; and what little I may speak to you this afternoon, I need and desire that Spirit. I hope I may have the faith and prayers of the Saints or God unto this end.

I have some things upon my mind that I would like to speak of this afternoon, if I can get the spirit of them. I will say that some of the most interesting history of my life has been the time that I have spent here in St. George, and in the Temple of God which is built here. There is no eye that has seen, nor ear that has heard, nor has it entered into the heart of man to conceive, the future reward that will be given these people who dwell here and who have labored in the Temple of God. For myself, I can say that I feel under deep obligation to the people who dwell here—an obligation that I feel will last with me throughout all eternity. In my early days there were two things for which I desired to live. One was the redemption of the dead—my father's house, my mother's house, and the progenitors who are in the spirit world, and who never heard the Gospel. I have been preserved in the flesh, as one of their descendants, to hold the keys of their salvation and redemption, the same as you have for your progenitors, whom you are called to redeem and labor for here in the flesh. This has been a work that I have greatly desired to do for years that are past and gone, and through the blessing of the Lord and the assistance of my brethren and sisters who dwell in St. George, I have lived to see it accomplished to a great extent, which I look upon as one of the greatest blessings God ever bestowed upon me. So I look upon it with regard to all of us.

The Lord has had certain purposes in gathering us together, and the redemption of our dead is one of them. And when I reflect upon the work which the Latter-day Saints have been called to perform in these latter days, I rejoice before the Lord that I have lived in this day and generation, and that I have been numbered among the Latter-day Saints who have been called to perform these great and mighty works which are necessary to be performed before the coming of the Son of Man. The building of these Temples in these mountains of Israel is among the marvelous events of the day in which we live. Of course, we built Temples before we came to these valleys; one in Kirtland, and one in Nauvoo. I was not at the dedication of the Temple in Kirtland; but I was present at the dedication of the Temple in Nauvoo. The history of these Temples you have before you. You know the Prophets were slain, and the Lord required the building of that Temple at the hands of the Saints before they were driven into the wilderness. There was a certain revelation given that inspired in a great measure the Elders of the Church of God to perform that work. They labored with all the power they possessed, and they accomplished that work. They went into that Temple and received ordinances and endowments before they led us into the wilderness. These Temples that we have built here stand as a monument before God, angels and men, to the faith and works of the Latter-day Saints.

Brother George Q. Cannon has referred to your labors in settling here. You were called to come here by the servants of God. You left your homes to come here and you have done what was required of you in this matter. You have had power to finish the Temple, and you have had power to go in and redeem your dead. A great many of you have done this, and I hope all of you will continue as long as you have any dead to redeem. Never cease that work while you have the power to enter into the Temple. I have greatly rejoiced in my work in this Temple, and in the blessings that I have received at the hands of the Latter-day Saints here. Gold and silver are no comparison to these things. I have had some thousands redeemed here. I have had baptisms, ordinations, washings and anointings, endowments and sealings for them, the same as if they were standing in the flesh themselves. I shall go and meet them on the other side of the veil. You will go and meet your relatives. You will hold the keys of their salvation to the endless ages of eternity, if you attend to this labor for them.

There is no principle on earth that I rejoice more in than in the power that we hold as Latter-day Saints to build these Temples, to go into them, and to redeem our dead. It will require immortal bodies, immortal spirits, immortal revelations to enable men to comprehend the full extent of this work; they cannot comprehend it in mortality.

Now, I desire to live to see the Salt Lake Temple finished. I want to be with my brethren the Apostles, the High Priests, the Seventies, the Elders and all the authorities of the Church when that Temple is dedicated to God. We have been as long building that Temple as Moses was leading the children of Israel through the wilderness to the land of promise, and I would like to see it finished.

I view our position as Latter-day Saints, and all that is transpiring here, as well as our history before we came here, as in fulfillment of the revelations of God. A great many of our friends felt bad when we had to leave our lovely Nauvoo to go into the wilderness. It was a great trial to them. But had that not taken place, the Bible and the Book of Mormon and many of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants would have fallen to the ground unfulfilled. This is the place pointed out by the finger of God for the people to stand in holy places while the judgments of God go forth in the earth. It is marvelous in my eyes that I have lived to see the Temples that have been built in these mountains of Israel and the mighty work that has been performed in them, considering the condition in which we came here. A little handful of men, in poverty and affliction, came into this barren desert. I brought President Young in my carriage into the valley of Salt Lake. He was sick, and he asked me to turn my carriage so that he could get sight of the valley. I did so. He cast his eyes over the valley and looked for some little time. When he got through he said, "Brother Woodruff, drive on. Here is our home. This is the place God has pointed out for us to plant our feet. I have seen this place before." He began to recover right from that time. Well, we camped there, and we visited around some. President Young said, "Now, brethren, go where you please; go north, go south; go to any part of the country, and when you come back you will say this is the place." Men came from California, among them Brannan, who urged us strongly to go to California, saying that it was such a fine country, and we were there in a barren desert. But President Young said, "This is our home. Here we shall build the Temple of God and the city of our God." I think this has been plainly fulfilled. The inspiration of the Lord was with President Young all through his life, and the result of it is manifest. I traveled with him in the first settling of this country. Where is there a man that has the spirit of inspiration but can see the hand of God in these things? We have had our day of affliction, of persecution and poverty. All earth and hell, if I may be allowed to use such an expression, were combined against the Prophet Joseph Smith, from the time this Church was organized until he was slain in the flesh, and the same spirit continued through the life of Brother Brigham Young. But we came to these valleys of the mountains, and from the day that we planted our tents in Salt Lake City there has been a degree of prosperity resting upon this people, and it has increased year by year until to say. The Lord has been with us. Blessings have been poured out upon the Latter-day Saints, and we have had plenty of food and raiment. But I hope that none of us will get proud and lifted up in our hearts so that we shall forget the hand that has given unto us these things.

This is a dispensation in which the Lord has set His hand to establish His Church, to build up His Zion, to warn the world, to prepare the nations for the judgments of God, and to prepare His people to be united together as the bride, the Lamb's wife. My faith centres in the promises of God. There is no power on the face of this earth that can break this Church. Why? Because God holds it in His hands. He is the Author of it, and He has promised, through the mouths of seers and scores of prophets, that it shall stand. It is in fulfillment of these promises that you are blessed here with a Temple and have power to enter therein to attend to the ordinances of the House of the Lord. And when you reflect upon these matters, and see how far these things have been fulfilled, can you not have faith to believe that the Lord will carry it out to the end? I certainly have. I know it is the work of God. And the Lord has chosen this people, out of the whole human family, to stand in the flesh, keep the commandments of God, and go forth to warn the world by the proclamation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ that they may know and understand the judgments of God which await them. The Latter-day Saints have been working at this for sixty years, and we have not got through with it yet. Behold what is taking place in the earth today! It really seems as if the day had almost dawned upon us when there is no other place of safety for the human family than the land of Zion. Three elements—fire, water and wind—seem to have been chosen to go forth on a mission to visit the nations. Cities are burned up, and floods and whirlwinds sweep away towns and villages and the inhabitants are destroyed. Are not these things all proclaimed by the revelations of God? They are, and they will come to pass.

Brethren and sisters, this is the mission given to us in the last days. And that man is a very foolish man who will divide upon any principle against the Gospel of Jesus Christ. I have had more sorrow over one apostate in this Church than I have in attending the funerals of all the patriarchs and prophets and Latter-day Saints that I ever followed to the grave; because when I see men and women die who have been faithful I know they have gained a victory. That is the way I feel today. We must work together for the welfare of Zion.

I am glad to see you and to spend a few days again in St. George. I want to do what good I can. I expect we shall all meet the other side of the veil with those who have gone before, and have joy and rejoicing in the Gospel of Christ. We should be faithful to the Lord, and we should not forget our prayers. Our sons and daughters should be instructed in these things, and we should labor for their welfare. What joy and consolation it gives a father or a mother to have good boys and girls, who keep the word of wisdom, attend to Sabbath schools, remember their prayers, and follow in the footsteps of their fathers; while it gives us sorrow when we have sons and daughters that turn away from this. But I have hope and faith that the sons of Zion will rise up and magnify their callings. I do not believe that they will disappoint our Heavenly Father.

Seeing a portion of our gallery occupied by quite a number of our Lamanite brethren and sisters, I feel disposed to make a few remarks.

The first time I ever saw Joseph Smith was in April, 1834. I met him in the streets of Kirtland. He invited me to his house. I stopped with him while preparing to go up to Zion in Zion's camp. On Sunday he called a Priesthood meeting. They all gathered in a little cabin. There I first heard Joseph Smith speak publicly, also Hyrum Smith, Oliver Cowdery, Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Parley and Orson Pratt, and William E. McLellin. The Prophet called upon the Elders to bear testimony of the Gospel of Christ, and they arose one after another and bore a short testimony. Then Brother Joseph arose and said: "Brethren, I am very much edified and interested in listening to your testimony. But I want to tell you that you know no more concerning the result of this work and what lies before you as the Elders of Israel and before this people, than a parcel of little children." I expect they were all a little startled by it. He told them this work would fill the whole earth, and that all nations would have to hear the proclamation of the Gospel. He further said: "This work will fill the Rocky Mountains with tens of thousands of Latter-day Saints, and there will be joined with them the Lamanites who dwell in those mountains, who will receive the Gospel of Christ at the mouth of Elders of Israel, and they will be united with the Church and Kingdom of God, and bring forth much good." I little thought, when I listened to those words, that I should ever live to see the fulfillment of these words of the Prophet. I little thought that I should ever visit the Rocky Mountains, or ever see the Lamanites of whom he then was speaking. These men before me today bring to my mind sayings of the Prophet. His mind expanded on that occasion and he had a good deal to say with regard to the progress of this work, what the Elders of Israel would have to pass through, and the work that God would require at their hands in the redemption of the Lamanites and the honest and meek throughout the world, and in the building up of the Zion of God on the earth. But I have lived to see these days. I have lived to see the Lamanites in these mountains. I have visited a great many of them—the Zunis, Lagunas, Mague, Navajoes, Apaches, and a great many of these Indian tribes. I have preached the Gospel to them, in connection with my brethren, through interpreters. I have spent many interesting days with these Lamanites in the mountains of Israel. I spent three days in the wilderness in Arizona with Petone, the great war chief of the nation. I preached the Gospel to him. He called his tribe together, stood upon his feet some two hours or more, and told his tribe all that we had said to him. This tribe was looked upon as a very dangerous one in the midst of the nation, and this Petone had engaged in a great deal of warfare.

I rejoice that I have lived to see this day; that I have lived to see the Rocky Mountains; that I have been gathered with the Latter-day Saints here. A great deal has been done by this people, but much more will have to be done. We tell sometimes about dreams. I had a dream one night about our Temple in Salt Lake. I thought the Temple was dedicated and organized, and was the Elders of Israel were laboring there for the redemption of our dead, and suddenly there was a door opened in the west, and an Indian chief came into the Temple, leading a vast host of his tribe, and took possession of the Temple, and I thought they performed more work in one hour than we could do in a day. This made a strong impression on my mind. I am satisfied that although we have done a little for the Lamanites, we have got to do a great deal more. I believe I sealed the first Lamanite man and woman together that ever were sealed in this dispensation. It was in the Endowment House, and quite a number of brethren and sisters were present. The man's name was Laman. I believe the day will come when these Lamanites, with the dark skin that rests upon them, will enter into these Temples of the Lord in these mountains and do a great deal of work. They will come to an understanding of the redemption of the dead. They will have wisdom given unto them. They will have light and truth given unto them, and the spirit of their forefathers will be manifest unto them. I am thankful that I am able to see these Lamanites here. The Prophet of God saw what would come to pass, and he told the truth. As Elders of Israel we have fulfilled, in a measure, many of the Prophet's sayings in relation to these things. We have traveled to the nations of the earth, as he said we should do, and this Gospel has gone to a great many nations. More doors will be opened in the due time of the Lord. When these judgments of God are manifest in the earth, the honest in heart and meek of the earth will have their eyes opened and they will be very glad to flee to Zion. I look back to the days when we first went to New England to preach the Gospel, and when there were Saints in almost every city there. And when we went to England in 1840 we baptized over seven thousand in one year. So it has been more or less through the world. There have been people prepared to receive this Gospel and to work for the Lord. And we are only in the beginning of this work, as it were. The day will come when many will seek a place of safety, that they may stand in holy places while the judgments of the Lord pass. Our young men will rise up in those days. They will remember their prayers before the Lord. Their minds will be opened to see the work that lies before them. A great deal has yet to be done, although the Lord will make short His work in the earth, lest no flesh be saved. I am thankful that there is as much done as there is; thankful that we have had the privilege of opening our mouths among the nations of the earth and the islands of the sea, and preaching the Gospel. What greater work can any man be engaged in than the saving of the souls of men? No matter how poor we may be, it is a glorious work and a blessing to any man. When I look upon the Apostles and the Elders and bring to my mind the labors they have performed, the miles they have traveled, the souls of men they have brought into the Gospel, I feel that it is a work worthy of all acceptance of angels or men.

I pray the Lord that we may have power to convert these Lamanites to the Gospel of Christ. It is true it has been a hard work up to the present to get their minds open to comprehend these things, though many of them have been baptized; yet a great work is to be done among them. Our brethren should remember this, and treat them kindly. Let us do what we can to make them happy and comfortable while we are with them. It is our duty to do what we can for their benefit, and to give them the Gospel. God bless you and guide you in the ways of life. Amen.

A PARTY WITHOUT PRINCIPLE.

It is said the Presidential campaign of this year is to be one of principles rather than of men. In Utah the national campaign cuts no figure, to use a common phrase. But Utah is to have a campaign in which there is no principle involved and in which there is really but two motives—robbery and self-defense. On the one side is the so-called "Liberal" party that rises like a death's head from its own grave to revive its own corpse for the purpose of getting control of the public offices in the town and county where its hirelings are in the majority.

I say this in no captious spirit. The party is too contemptible to excite anger and too gross to be amenable to reason. Consequently, there is only one course in speaking of it and that is to tell the truth plainly and leave the result with time. I make no mistake in saying that the party motive of the alleged "Liberals" is possession of public offices. The party so declared itself in its recent conference. There is, therefore, no principle in the party. It would, if it could, control all Utah for the spoils of office. It is a menace to property and a danger to good government.

Such being the case there is but one motive before all people who are not controlled by the pseudo "Liberal" party, and that is self-defense. Whether we are Democrats or Republicans, whether we think we believe in free trade or high tariff, there is but one urgent duty before us, and that is to protect ourselves against the unprincipled hirelings and office seekers who make up this un-American thing called "the Liberal" party.

I had intended to quit work in Utah on my old line because I thought that most of the honorable men having left Utah "Liberalism" it was dead, but the men gone out of it, the lower element remains and, uncontrolled, manifests its true character in a more venomous hiss than ever. Hence I return to the field as a laborer and may find it in my way shortly to have a paper of my own in Salt Lake.

The thought which suggests this communication was a statement in last Sunday's Tribune. I have seen it many times in that paper and have intended to call attention to it. It was speaking of "Young Utah." The Tribune always assumes that it owns that contingent and can put words into its mouth and talk for it "with perfect impunity," as Mrs. Partington used to say. On this occasion the Tribune assumes to lay it down for "Young Utah" that it must tell the old folks that it thinks something of their church, but the only thing that it really loves is the country and that it loves our country right or wrong better than all else on earth.

That is a catching phrase, but it is sounding brass and rattling shabaz. No more unpatriotic, unphilosophical, immoral national sentiment was ever uttered than "our country, right or wrong." But it is good theoretic Utah Liberalism. It is precisely the same sentiment that was embodied in the Tribune's expressed wish to see brothels, saloons and gambling houses started in Salt Lake to reduce "Young Utah" from the salutary influence of church and home.

"Our country, right or wrong," means the same thing as "our party, right or wrong," and that has been the shibboleth of Utah Liberalism all its years. The man or men who have no higher conception of right than to formulate that old, brutal and immoral cry are unfit to have anything to do with the government of Territory, State or nation or with the schooling of a people. The daily paper that can disseminate that poison is unfit to circulate in the homes of the people, and the party that has no higher conception of right than to follow the lead of such an organ writes itself down as an immoral element, between which and avowed anarchy there is only the distance between hope and realization. It is this party without principle against which the people of Utah have to defend themselves. Let them do the work so well this time that it will never have to be repeated.

CHARLES ELLIS.

THE UTAH COMMISSION.

The Utah Commission held its first formal meeting yesterday afternoon. The following members were in attendance: General McClelland, (Dem.) and Messrs. Godfrey, Saunders and Robertson (Rep.). A clash occurred between the members as to the political status of the deputy registrars to be appointed, whereupon Gen. McClelland introduced the following preamble and resolution bearing upon the appointment of such officers:

Whereas, The Constitution of the United States declares that "no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States,"

And whereas, Congress has in unison with the fundamental principles thus proclaimed, forbidden the rejection of any person's vote in the Territory of Utah simply on account of his opinion on the subject of bigamy and polygamy;

And whereas, Congress has, in obedience to the premises, hitherto refrained from disqualifying any person to vote or hold office in said Territory simply on account of his membership in any church or political party;

And whereas, the law still further, in order to better assure fairness and impartiality in respect to the elections in said Territory, required that the judges of elections in said Territory shall be chosen from different political parties therein, and has also provided for a board of five persons (the Utah Commission) of different political parties, and required the same to appoint proper persons for the purpose of registering the voters and conducting the elections in said Territory and of canvassing the returns of any election or of issuing partial certificates or other evidence of election to the proper person appearing to be elected.

And whereas, consequently, the exclusion of any person as disqualified to vote or hold office on the ground of his mere opinions, or on the ground of his membership in any church or in any political party, would be a gross usurpation of authority, subversive of the constitution and the law, of a cherished right of the citizen; therefore,

Resolved, That the Utah Commission, in appointing proper persons to execute the laws relating directly or indirectly to elections in said Territory, shall appoint such persons, as near as may be, in fair and equitable numbers, from the different recognized political parties in the Territory, and relatively to the comparative numerical strength of such parties.

Commissioner Robertson offered as a substitute:

Resolved, That in the selection of registration officers this commission will use proper means to secure only men of good character and proper and suitable persons for the duty to be performed, without inquiring as to the religious or sectarian views of such persons, but only as to their qualifications and present political affiliations.

This was adopted by the following vote:

Ayes—Godfrey, Saunders, Robertson—

Nay—McClernand.

Commissioner McClernand moved to amend the substitute as follows:

Provided, That the political affiliation of any person shall not be in itself a cause for excluding him from appointment as a registrar or election officer.

And provided further, That the commission will, in making such appointments, act fairly and equitably in respect to the different political parties in the territory.

Rejected by the following vote, Ayes, McClernand; nays, Godfrey, Saunders and Robertson.

The following deputy registrars have been appointed:

RICH COUNTY.

Woodruff—Thos. Fraser, R.
Randolph—A. B. Nebeker, R.
Laketown—John Nebeker, R.
Meadowville—Geo. T. Judd, R.
Garden City—Edward Calder, R.

BEAVER COUNTY.

Beaver—W. P. Smith, R.
Greenville—Wm. Harris, R.
Adamsville—John J. Jones, R.
Minersville—John Lightner, R.
Star Precinct—W. J. Kennedy, R.
Grampion—David James, R.

UINTAH COUNTY.

Ashley—Richard Veltman, L. D.
Vernal—John Blaukschup, L. R.
Mountain Dell—Peter M. Cole, L. R.

Riverdale—Wm. H. Burtor, L. R.

CACHE COUNTY.

Logan—G. H. Keyser, R.
Logan—L. D. Marila, R.
Provident—Mark Fletcher, R.
Millville—Joseph Hovey, R.
College—C. C. Bendreer, Jr., R.
Hyrum—C. H. Bevens, R.
Paradise—Dan Beckmore, R.
Wellsville—Samuel P. Hall, R.
Meudon—Fred Larsen, R.
Peterboro—Peter Peterson, R.
Henson—Robert Hawthorne, R.
Newton—John A. Christianson, R.
Clarkson—Frank Griffith, R.
Trenton—Cliff C. Goodwin, R.
Coveville—Herschell Bullin, Jr., P.
R. Charles appointed.

Richmond—John Anderson, R.
Smithfield—Newton Woodruff, R.
Lewiston—John W. Knowles, R.
Hyde Park—Steven Thureton, R.
LaPlatte—Joseph Watson, R.

SEVIER COUNTY.

Ballina—Fred. G. Willis, R.
Redmond—Henry McKenna, R.
Gooseberry—J. A. Iru, R.
Millard Bend—J. W. Iru, R.
Vernalion—Michael Kane, R.
Glenwood—William Rhodes, R.
Richfield—August Nelson, R.
Elsinore—R. W. Herring, R.
Central—Andrew Nelson, R.
Monroe—Walter Jones, R.
Joseph—R. A. Bridges, R.
Burrville—W. H. Shuck, R.
Anna Bell—L. Thompson, R.

KANE COUNTY.

Orderville—Richard Norwood.
Mount Carmel—H. S. Jolly.
Johnson—Nephil Johnson, Jr.
Georgetown—Joseph A. Stewart.

SANPETE.

Mt. Pleasant—Jensen, L. R.
Moroni—N. L. Ellison, L. R.
Fairview—Sam Porter, L. R.
Millburn—Orson Kelsey, D.
Thistle—Gunder Peterson, L. R.
Fountain Green—J. A. Holman, R.
Spring City—Jacob Johnson, L. R.
Chester—J. Conrad, D.
Ephraim—Peter Schwall, L. R.
Manti—E. W. Fox, L. R.
Petty—George D. Peacock, Jr.
Gunnison—R. Christensen, L. R.
Fayette—G. M. Clarke, L. R.
Mayfield—Henry Jensen, R.
Wales—H. C. Lamb, D.

TOOELE COUNTY.

Mill—William Glassman, R.
Grantville—William Rydalah, Jr., R.
Balesview—Alfred Warr.
Lakeview—Charles Warr, R.
Tooele—Robert Scott, R.
Stockton—David R. Stover, R.
Ophir—A. H. Lineback, R.
St. John—Edward J. Arthur, R.
Clover—R. N. Bush, D.
Vernon—L. Straubury, R.
Granite—John T. Delare, R.
Deep Creek—Fred Snively, R.

UTAH COUNTY.

Alpine—Lewis Lewis, L. D.
American Fork—A. K. Thornton, L. R.
Benjamin—John Hone, L. R.
Cedar Fork—John McFarland, L. R.

Clinton—H. B. Hicks, D.
Fairfield—William Thomas, L. R.
Lehi—Robert Gilchrist, L. R.
Lakeside—W. G. Williams, L. R.
Lakeshore—H. S. Brooks, L. R.
Pleasant Grove—John Richins, L. R.

Provo Bench—D. C. Daniels, L. D., scratched, and Newell Knight, L. R.
Provo—R. A. Hills, L. R.
Springville—D. C. Huntington, L. R.
Spanish Fork—Theodore Lee, L. R.
Goeben—George White, R.
Salem—W. H. Taylor, L. R.
Santiquito—John C. Johnson, L. R.
Spring Lake—John C. Warfield, L. R.

Thistle—W. H. Rager, Herman Snow, R.
P. V. Junction—P. A. Smith, L. R.
Payson—James T. Stark, L. H.

GRAND COUNTY.

No. 1—Henry Crouse, Moab, L.
No. 2—Charles J. Elliott, L.
No. 3—R. A. Terwilliger, L.
No. 4—H. H. Jacob, L.

MILLARD COUNTY.

Kanosh—E. W. Penny, R.
Meadow—John Stredder.
Holden—Nicholas Paul.
Solpio—Andrew Peterson.
Leamington—Joseph Oversoun.
Oasis—John Styler.
Deseret—James H. Mace.
Oak City—J. A. Lyman.
Hinekey—George A. Black.
Smithville—W. C. Barry.
Burbank—Charles Rowlands.
Killmore—John Kelly.

DAVIS COUNTY.

South Weber—Joseph Earl, L.
Bath Hooper—Adam Smith, L.
Layton—Jos. H. Allen, L.
Kayaville—T. Francis Roushe, R.
Farmington—Dr. D. Wilcox, R.
Centreville—Wm. J. Cheaney, R.
Bountiful—William J. Boulton, L.
" West—Andrew Grant, L.
" South—Luther L. Burnham, L.

WASHINGTON COUNTY.

Silver Reef—Shas W. West, L.
Leeds—David McMillin, R.
Washington—Andrew Showler, D.
St. George—Alex Fullerton, D.
Santa Clara—Rudolph Frei, R.
Bloomington—Geo. M. Fawcett, R.
Gunlock—Franklin O. Holt, R.
Pine Valley—G. E. Burgess, R.
Hebron—Chas. H. Barnum, R.
Hamblin—Morris Causfield, R.
Pinto—Robert Knell, R.
New Harmony—Jas. F. Pace, R.
Toquerville—Martin Slack, R.
Duncan's Retreat—G. W. Wright, D.
Virgin City—John H. Lee, D.
Grafton—Daniel Morris, Jr., R.
Rockville—Frank T. Slaughter, R.
Shonesburg—Oscar DeMill, D.
Springdale—Samuel K. Gifford, D.

BOX ELDER.

Box Elder—James Sheffield, R.
Bear River—George S. Church, R.
Collinston—L. W. Standing, R.
Cala Ford—Israel Hansaker, R.
Deweyville—John Germer, R.
Grouse Creek—B. H. Cooke, D.
Jurcton—John Luedd, D.
Malad—Ed. E. Spencer, R.
Mantua—Hyrum Jensen, R.
Portage—Charles T. Gibbs, R.
Promontory—L. G. Brown, R.
Park Valley—W. H. Meachem, R.
Plymouth—E. Stoddard, R.
Curlew—M. D. Scheltre, R.
Terrace—John E. Henderson, R.
Three Mile Creek—Wm. Housley, R.

Millard—Peter Lowe, R.

JUAB COUNTY.

Nephi—T. A. Foote, R.
Levan—Charles Mangerson, R.
Mona—James H. Mendenhall, R.
Juab—James E. Taylor, D.
Eureka—John Dugan, L.
Mammoth—Pat Condon, L. R.
Fittie—Joseph Biddlemore, R.
Flash Springs—F. C. Morehouse, R.
When the appointment, by the Utah Commission, of deputy registrars for Salt Lake county was reached last evening General McClernand offered the following resolution:

Whereas, There are deputy registrars to be appointed for the precincts in Salt Lake county; and

Whereas, It is but fair and consistent with the law that those appointments should be equitably distributed among the different political parties in the county, therefore be it

Resolved, That such appointments shall be made in harmony with the facts herein stated.

The introduction of the resolution occasioned some little discussion and was defeated on the following vote:

Ayes—McClernand, 1.

Nays—Godfrey, Robertson, 2.

The list compiled and sent in by County "Liberal" Registrar J. F. Allen was then taken up and the appointments therein recommended made without change.

SALT LAKE CITY.

First Precinct—E. W. Loder, L. R.; W. W. Rivers, L. D.
Second Precinct—C. M. Hammond, L. R.; C. S. Kimball, L. R.; Ben Johnson, L. R.
Third Precinct—J. J. Starbuck, L. R.; W. D. Duce, L. R.
Fourth Precinct—John T. Axton, L. R.
Fifth Precinct—L. D. Lee, R.; D. Van Buxkirk, L. R.

SALT LAKE COUNTY.

The appointments for the county are as follows:

Big Cottonwood—James Spilliet, L. R.
Butler—Vincent Shurtiff, Jr., L. R.

AT BEAVER CITY.

Brighton—Jer. C. Spitz, L. R.
Blind Dale—Joseph Nichols, D.
Bingham—George E. Lee, L. R.
Draper—James Jackson, L. R.
East Mill Creek—James Young, L. R.
Farmers—George Belts, L. R.
Granite—James Jackson, L.
Granger—F. L. Kent, L. R.
Hunter—William Burt, L. R.
Little Cottonwood—Fritz Rittich, L. R.
Mill Creek—H. T. Shurtliff, L. R.
Mountain Dell—William M. Reach, L. R.
North Point—Not named.
North Jordan—John A. Rupp, L. R.
Pleasant Green—Frank E. Chambers (politician not given).
Riverton—O. P. Miller, D.
South Cottonwood—John Gordon, L. R.
Silver—James Monk, L. R.
Sugar House—Joseph Muir, L. R.
Sandy—Thomas E. Marriott, L. R.
South Jordan—Peter Johnson, L.
West Jordan—H. J. Crandall, L. R.
Fort Herriman—Henry Craus (politician not given).

UNION—P. J. Stone, L. R.

SEMITT COUNTY.

Park City—Hiram Shields, F. W. Hayt.
Echo—E. C. Morse.
Grass Creek—Gomer Thomas.
Joyceville—George Daniels.
Oakley—William H. Stevens.
Parley—Park—Gideon Snyder.
Poon—F. W. Marchant.
Rockport—William Keynolds.
Upson—W. H. Smith.
Wanship—George Moore.

WASATCH COUNTY.

Midway—M. Bircumshaw, L.
Wadburg—D. C. Way, F.
Woodland—Henry Cox, L. R.
Kirkhorn—James McClure.

PIUTE COUNTY.

Deer Trail—A. J. Sargent.
Bullock—Frank L. Murray.
Koshabam—C. L. La Ford.
Wilmont—Water Gleaves.
Circle Valley—James Wiley.
Junction—T. S. W. Woon.
Kingston—Not named.

SAN JUAN COUNTY.

Monticello—G. E. W. Jun.
Blind—Peter Allan.
McElmo—Herbert Gaultette.

GARFIELD COUNTY.

Panguitch—William O. Orton, L.
Escalante—F. H. Lester, D.
Hillside—H. P. Cleave, D.
Loyote—A. V. Carpenter, D.
Cannonville—William J. Henderson, Jr., D.
Honeyville—William E. Riggs, Jr., D.

MORGAN COUNTY.

Peterson—Martin Gaarder.
Milton—James Johansen.
Canyon—James Peterson.
Morgan—T. R. Webb.
Croyden—Thomas Walker.

EMERY COUNTY.

Blake—J. T. Farrer, L.
Wellington—H. F. Hanson, L.
Price—Solon Olsen, L.
Huntington—Alonso Brinkerhoff, L.
Castle Dale—Casper Anderson, D.
Hampdenville—Frank Ferrell, L.
Ferry—W. Williams, L.
Mo'en—J. C. Cook, R.
Muddy—Rasmus Johnson, L.
Lawrence—H. A. Thomas, L.
Cleveland—Hans Meraig, L.
Castle Gate—Harry J. Schultz, L.
Goodfield—B. J. Hartness, L.
Spring Glen—C. H. Cook.

The following appointments of deputy registrars for Weber County were made by the Utah Commission:

Staterville—Richard Howell, Jr., L.
West Weber—John W. Hatt, L.
Wilson—J. W. Boney, R.
Hooper—J. H. Boney, R.
Utah—Charles De La Bana, L.
Eden—James Chambers, L.
Huntsville—W. G. Smith, L.
Harrisville—M. M. F. Bows, L.
Pleasant View—Wm. Crandall, R.
North Ogden—James Vandenberg, R.
Cannonville—David Feidler, R.
Hwydale—J. C. Child, R.
Plain City—Lynn Skeen, R.
Buck Creek—W. E. Sandberg, R.
Marriotts—John W. Allen, R.
Liberty—Amman Campbell, R.

OGDEN.

First Precinct—O. P. Herriman, R.
Second Precinct—H. M. Derby.
Third Precinct—A. G. Stone, R.
Fourth Precinct—George C. Corey, Jr., L.
Fifth Precinct—Frank L. Chapin, L.

From the Parowan Stake of Zion I traveled to Beaver City on the 4th of May last, when I continued my historical labors.

The Beaver Stake of Zion is one of the smallest Stakes in existence at the present time, but the Saints residing within its borders are, as a rule, wealthy and prosperous. The Stake numbers 1971 members of the Church, or 361 families, distributed in the four wards of which the Stake is composed, as follows: Beaver ward, 1184 souls, or 248 families; Greenville, 179 souls, or 27 families; Adamsville, 230 souls, or 34 families; Minersville, 378 souls, or 52 families.

The Stake presidency consists of Charles Dennis White president, Marcus L. Shepherd first and John P. Tolton second counselor. The boundaries of the Stake are co-extensive with those of Beaver county, Utah.

Beaver City, which comprises the greater half of the "Mormon" population of Beaver county, is beautifully situated in an open, well watered valley, on the north bank of the Beaver river. It was first settled in 1856, and has had a peculiar and interesting history, including fights with hostile Indians, collisions with land-jumpers, ever-zealous federal officials, and trespassing soldiers, and woes caused by devouring grasshoppers and destructive rabbits. But it has survived all these difficulties, and is now one of the most prosperous settlements in the mountains, with a mixed population of "Mormons" and Gentiles. The latter, however, do not now number over one hundred individuals, while they a few years ago were so numerous that they made attempts to carry the county and city elections. Beaver is celebrated for its cleanliness, its pure water, healthy climate, productive soil and splendid grazing facilities.

The Beaver ward includes in its membership several families residing on North Creek, Indian Creek and Pine Creek, three streams rising in the mountain northeast of Beaver; also a few scattered settlers who live on the south side of Beaver river in a neighborhood locally known as Jackson County. George Mumford is the Bishop of the ward. Beaver City has a woolen factory, a grist mill, four saw mills, planing mills, a number of stores and a great many neat brick dwellings. It also supports a weekly newspaper, the Utsonian, and is the main seat of operations for the Second District court of Utah, besides being the county seat of Beaver county.

The altitude of Beaver is 6020 feet above the level of the sea. It is 31½ miles southeast of Milford, the nearest railway station, and 253 miles from Salt Lake City, by way of Milford and Minersville.

Greenville Ward (first settled in 1861) embraces the village of Greenville and the settlers living in a scattered condition in its vicinity. The village is situated on the north or right bank of Beaver River about half a mile below the point where North Creek empties into that stream, and five miles southwest of Beaver City.

Adamsville ward comprises the village of Adamsville and a few scattered farmers residing in its immediate vicinity, and is situated on the lower end of Beaver Valley, near the point where Indian Creek empties into the Beaver from the north. The village is nine miles southwest of Beaver, nine miles northeast of Minersville, and twenty-three miles southeast of Milford. Fred, Thomas Gunn is the Bishop. Adamsville was first settled in 1860.

Minersville is the second place of importance in Beaver county, and is situated at the mouth of a canyon six miles long through which the Beaver river passes beyond that low mountain chain that separates Beaver valley from the desert country lying westward. The town of Minersville, which was first settled in 1859, has a fine location on the south bank of the Beaver, but is rather windy. The facilities of the place are very limited owing to scarcity of water, but what little land has been redeemed from the desert is quite productive. Owing to its lower altitude, and for other causes, spring opens about three weeks earlier here than at Beaver and the seasons throughout are much warmer than in the Beaver valley. Consequently fruit trees do well, and Minersville has a number of fine orchards. Solomon Walker is bishop of the ward, which embraces a few Saints residing in the two railway and mining towns, Milford and Frisco.

From Minersville I returned home by team, arriving in Salt Lake City on the 16th of May. During my absence of more than three months I had traveled 1435 miles by team and visited all the settlements in the Kanab, St. George, Parowan and Beaver Stakes of Zion. On the trip I attended two quarterly conferences, preached 52 times and gathered material for the histories of all the places visited. ANDREW JENSON.

SALT LAKE CITY, July 6, 1892.

WOOL TRADE.

BRADSTREET'S of July 23, has the following in relation to the wool trade:

"There is a good business doing in wool. The mills are busy, and large amounts are going into consumption. The markets are well stocked, and the daily arrivals from the west are heavy. The receipts from Montana are steadily increasing. These wools, and in fact nearly all the western wools, are showing up much better than was expected. Prices are steady, and while the tendency is upward no change in quotations can be made. Manufacturers are giving their attention almost exclusively to domestic wools, a comparatively light trade being reported in foreign grades. Fleece show considerable activity, as in fact all wools from Ohio and Michigan. The heavy rains in Michigan at the time when shearing was going on injured to some extent a large part of these wools. Late sales of Texas wools continue to be reported. Territories are being looked over very carefully, and large amounts have been taken by manufacturers. Pulled wools are rather quiet. It is said that 21,000 bales were taken at the London sales for this country. This amount was much larger than dealers expected. It is much in excess of that taken at the preceding year, and about 6,000 bales will come on the market. The remainder will go direct to manufacturers. Buyers say that the wool was poor in quality, and will be difficult for dealers to sell at a profit. Little has been done in carpet wools."

THE DESERET WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED BY
THE DESERET NEWS COMPANY,
SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES:
Per Year, of Fifty-two Numbers, . . . $2.50
Per Volume, of Twenty-six Numbers, . . . 1.25
IN ADVANCE.

CHARLES W. PHIBBS, EDITOR.

Saturday, . . . August 6, 1892.

THE LATTER-DAY SAINTS' COLLEGE.

We have received the annual circular of the Latter-day Saints' College for the seventh academic year of 1892-93, which will cover a period of forty weeks, exclusive of the winter vacation, divided as follows: The first term will begin Aug. 22d, 1892, and end Dec. 23d; the second term will begin January 9th, 1893, and end June 9th.

The following will constitute the faculty: Willard D.ue, D. B., Principal; theology, theory and practice of teaching, English, Phonography and typewriting. Joseph Nelson, Assistant Treasurer; academic department; Mathematics, and business courses. W. H. Chamberlin, Secretary; intermediate department, first section; physical geography, assistant in mathematics. John T. Woodbury, Librarian; intermediate department, second section; elementary science. Phillip S. Minkook; intermediate department, third section. Zina Bennion; Lady Superintendent; assistant in intermediate department. Dr. Romania B. Pratt; Advisory Physician. Prof. Jos. J. Daynes, Vocal Music.

The people are familiar with the fact that it is the intention of the authorities of the Church to establish a university, which will ultimately possess the necessary buildings and have associated with it all the most advanced facilities to make it a high class institution. It has been decided to form a nucleus for this proposed establishment by commencing work in line with its development forthwith. For this purpose a building is being erected on the college grounds on, First North Street. This new structure will be occupied temporarily by the university and classes will be conducted therein in language and science. It has also been provided that Willard Young, President of the university, shall have the supervisory charge of the college and the grounds connected with it.

These new arrangements will be a decided advantage to the students of the college, who, in addition to their studies in that establishment, will also be enabled, if they so desire, to attend the university science and language classes without additional charge. The rates of tuition are as follows:

	First term (18 weeks)	Second term (22 weeks)
Full term
Half term
Intermediate dept.,	$ 7.50 $4.25	$ 8.50 $4.75
Academic dept.,	11.00 6.00	12.00 7.00
Normal dept.,	11.00 6.00	12.00 7.00

A liberal number of worthy and qualified normal students will be appointed to seats in the department free of charge, as beneficiaries, under an appropriation made for that purpose by the Church. Such students may be called at any time to render assistance, according to their qualifications, in departments and classes of the college. All applications for appointments under this provision must be made in writing to the principal.

"A normal training class for officers of the Mutual Improvement Associations will be organized in connection with the college. Officers of these associations and others interested in this work will be admitted (free of charge) under proper restrictions. The study in this class will be conducted according to the M. I. A. Manual, and will cover a period of five weeks, two sessions of one and one-half hours each, per day."

The Students' Society has always been an attractive feature of the college. Its object is to provide, mental recreation, and to furnish opportunities for gaining general information and practice in public exercises. The meetings of the organization have heretofore attracted large numbers of visitors that have shown their appreciations of the labors of the society. An effort will be made to increase its usefulness in the future.

We are gratified to be able to state that the Latter-day Saints' College has accomplished a great deal of good in the interest of what constitutes true education from the standpoint of the Church. Combined with secular teaching the religious and moral nature of the students is cultivated. It has accomplished much while laboring under difficulties, which proper public support will enable it to overcome. We have no reference now to the attendance, which has been almost uniformly good. Indeed there have been occasions when it has been impossible to admit all applicants, because of insufficient accommodations. The college needs financial assistance from those who have the proper education of the children of the Saints at heart, and we trust it will be duly accorded.

Details connected with the establishment can be had from the circular, which, together with any other information desired, can be obtained on application to Prof. Willard D.ue, whose address is P. O. Box 1706, Salt Lake City.

We wish the institution the abundant success and hearty support of which it is so well deserving.

A MORE EXCELLENT WAY.

This evening the proposition to allow the City Assessor two per cent. on all collections of taxes for the year, will be discussed again by the City Council. It is said that the resolution is in high favor among some real estate men; also that the reason for this is a private understanding that certain suburban property is to be assessed at a low valuation if the per centage system prevails. We do not know how much truth there is in this report, but it is worthy of investigation.

We do not think the per centage principle in the assessing of taxes is a good one. It is a standing temptation to the officer who is to be benefited by it. We all understand how the thing was managed during the previous two years of "Liberal" assessment. We don't want this repeated. Everything that can be said in its favor is equally applicable to the salary system. There is no need to make the compensation of the Assessor contingent upon the amount of money he gets from the taxpayer. The better way is to give him a salary proportionate to the work he is required to perform. Anxiety to retain the per centage speculation is open to grave suspicion.

The services of the Assessor are well understood. The value of them to the city can be easily computed. The full worth ought to be paid. The office is important, the salary should be large. The sum proposed—$3500 or $4000 appears to ample. That is for the Council to determine. But the amount ought to be settled, contingent only upon the faithful performance of duty. There is no more need to pay the City Assessor on a percentage than the County Assessor. The fee-system and the percentage system for payment of public officials are twin relics of a vicious past and both ought to be buried out of sight.

We hope the progressive members of the Council will see to it that bad methods shall not prevail because they are old, and that no private real estate speculations shall be permitted to regulate public affairs. Give the Assessor a good salary, see that he does his duty, and save the taxpayers all that wise economy shall render possible.

WHAT THE HOMESTEAD TROUBLE SUGGESTS.

The attempt to assassinate Manager Frick, of the Carnegie works, at Homestead, is a suggestive incident. We stated on Saturday that we did not believe the murderous act could be connected with the Amalgamated Trades Union Association, and so it transpires. We were also correct in the idea that notwithstanding that no connection of that nature would be established, united labor at Homestead, and perhaps throughout the country, would suffer from the moral effect of the deed.

Unfortunately for organized labor, evidences are being developed that indicate anarchistic tendencies at Homestead. As an instance, it is reported that eight foremen have left the Carnegie works since the attempt on Mr. Frick's life, because they have been threatened that their lives would be taken if they continued to work for the company. The attack upon Mr. Frick impressed them with the idea that the threat was not an idle one and they left the works. Even if there were no intention to carry out these threats, they are of themselves anarchistic, and constitute a moral connection between workmen at Homestead and the arch-enemies of social order who commit deeds of blood.

A recent manifesto issued by the Amalgamated Association also had a decidedly communistic tendency. It claimed that because the workmen at Homestead had, by their labor, contributed to the building up of the Carnegie works they had an actual right of proprietorship therein. The government was called upon to support this view.

No such claim is sustained by existing law. The workmen performed labor for which they were to be paid a stipulated amount. The payment of the wages was the satisfaction of the agreement on the part of the employers. To make claim beyond that of a proprietorship of the plant is out of the question. To enforce it would be anarchy.

Such outbreaks and bloody revolts as those which have occurred at Homestead and Cœur d'Alene suggest the necessity for an adjustment of the labor and capital question, if such a thing be possible. Hope has pointed the finger of expectation toward the principle of profit-sharing between the employers and employed. But we doubt a solution of the problem by this means. There is a primal condition that is indispensable—the willingness of the capitalist, which will not be secured. In the absence of the will to conform, it could not be legally enforced. But even if capitalists should operate on this basis, there would exist another formidable barrier—the fluctuations of trade. In times of stagnation, when establishments could only be run at a loss, the masses would never take quietly to a situation of that character. They would not be willing to share the losses as well as the profits. There doubtless would be business enterprises which could be conducted upon this plan, but these isolated instances would be only drops in the ocean of trade. Indeed the complications would probably be greater than under the present plan of regulating the relations of the two classes on the principle of supply and demand and according to natural agreement.

We have come to the conclusion that the solution of great social problems is a matter of moral status. So long as men are selfish and sordid, peace and good order will always be uncertain and exceedingly limited conditions on our planet. In these lines the race is running backward. Just as sure as this is the case, so sure is there trouble, strife and bloodshed ahead. This may be put down as a fact. Even the situation, as it presents the aspect of incipient civil war.

LABOR IN PURITAN DAYS.

SOME Eastern Journalists have been hunting up old records in relation to labor and capital in the days of the Pilgrim fathers. It was found that at the first session of court held at Charlestown, Mass., Aug. 23, 1630, Governor Winthrop presiding, the following order was made:

"That carpenters, joiners, bricklayers, sawyers and thatchers shall not take above two shillings (about 50 cents of our money) per day, nor any man shall give more under pain of ten shillings to take and give; and that sawyers shall not take above 10 shillings for boards at six score to the hundred."

It appears that the new order did not work well in practice, because at the following session of the same court, held March 22, 1631, another order was made which reads as follows:

"At this session it is ordered (that) whereas the wages of carpenters, joiners and other artificers and workmen were ordered of court restrained and particular sommes; shall now be left free and at liberty as men shall reasonably agree."

It is possible that after all that has been said for and against state supervision of labor and capital, the right of free and unrestrained contract is the best. And there is every reason to believe that the less interference with the internal economy of a country the better it is in the end. In the days of Governor Winthrop the Stuarts controlled labor, regulated prices of wares and merchandise, sold monopolies, and did other things that a too paternal government would be supposed to do. The Puritans of Mass. when they made the first order were patterning themselves on the Stuart model, when they abolished that order, and instituted the right of free contract, they were doing what they were expelled from England for interfering in religion and politics.

ORGANIZED LABOR AND POLITICS.

In the North American Review for July, Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, has an article in relation to trades' unions in the pending political campaign. He sees no reason why organized labor should differ in 1892 from its course in 1876, 1880, 1884 or 1888. It matters not what party gets into power, the condition of the wage worker will be the same. Labor men will vote this year as they have always more or less done in accordance with party predilections.

Mr. Gompers, however, believes that a large number of wage earners and working men are gradually severing themselves from party obligations, and beginning to consider directly measures pertaining to their own interests. They are conceiving the idea that labor is being neglected by legislative bodies while the corporate interests and capital are being too much nurtured and advanced. This is the main reason why labor distrusts both the old parties. It may turn to the new People's party, but it will soon find out that this too is a class organization. Being composed mainly of employing farmers, or as trades union parlance would have it, "master farmers," the new party can have little in common with labor organizations, the object of which is to advance wages and curtail hours of labor.

Mr. Gompers admits that the farming classes are victims of the greed and avarice of corporate bodies, and that all possible encouragement should be given them in the fight. But as to fusion between wageworkers and the People's party, he regards the very idea as absurd. The former can only benefit themselves by exclusive organization embracing field, farm, factory and workshop.

The American Federation of Labor, as an organization, will be entirely inactive in the coming campaign. Its object is mainly economic independence, though Mr. Gompers does not explain what his view of that is. One of the preliminaries to this independence is the gathering of the vast numbers of wealth-producers, agricultural, industrial and commercial, into a grand army of organized labor, and instilling into the minds of its members a keener appreciation of their social position, and of their economic, political and industrial rights as citizens and producers.

Mr. Gompers says:

"More than half the battle of labor has already been won. No really intelligent man today disputes the claims of labor. What is now needed is the means and the power to enforce our claim. To that end we are marshaling our forces, and we will demonstrate to the world that the demands and struggles of the toiling masses, while ostensibly and immediately concerned with their own improvement and emancipation, will develop the possibilities, grandeur, and true nobility of the human family."

This labor leader does not touch on the recent developments at H. meeted on in Idaho. His paper was prepared before these troubles got underway. How is he to deal with the anarchistic element within his own ranks? Labor leaders are not making much effort to shake off this anarchistic incubus.

A POLITICAL EXCRESCENCE.

THE Utah Commissioners have been making up their list of registration officers for the August election. The majority have always been unfair in this work, for which heretofore they have been paid exorbitantly. They have never conformed to the spirit of the law which created their office and defined its duties, but have invariably given the minority the majority of the election offices, and where they could have kept out representatives of the majority altogether. It appears they have acted in a similar manner on the present occasion.

The Democrats were largely in the majority in the Territory at the last election, but the great majority of the registration officers now appointed are said to be either Republicans or "Liberal" Republicans. The preamble and resolution introduced by Gen. McClelland, which will be found in another part of this paper, was voted down, and also an amendment he offered to the proposition of Col. Robertson. The rejection of this amendment is of greater significance than the voting down of his first resolution. Here is what all the Commissioners but the General refused to be governed by:

"Provided, That the political affiliations of any person shall not be in themselves a cause for excluding him from appointment as a registration or election officer; and provided further, that the Commission shall, in making such appointments, act fairly and equitably in respect to the different political parties in the Territory."

That refusal was equivalent to saying that certain political affiliations should be in themselves a cause for excluding a person from an appointment, also that the Commission would not bind itself to act fairly and equitably in respect to the different political parties in the Territory. However, this is nothing new, but it gives additional evidence that this un-American body is worse than users to Utah, and ought to be utterly abolished and cast away as an excrescence upon the body politic.

PARIS, July 31.—A prominent Italian naval engineer has been arrested at Toulon and will be at once expelled from France.

A SALUTARY CHECK.

THE City has had too many "inspectors." Most of them have been appointed for private instead of public benefit. Some of them have been a positive detriment, and something ought to be done to check this disposition to create offices for political pets. The resolution introduced by Councilman Rich on Tuesday evening is a movement in this direction. If it prevails it will form a check on these appointments and will, to some extent at least, aid in securing competent persons where inspectors are really needed in the public service. It is to be hoped that the committee, to whom the matter was referred, will take favorable action upon it. If they do not, and refrain from giving good and substantial reasons for their disapproval, it will be equal to a notice to the public that places will continue to be found as political rewards, without regard to public necessity or the fitness of the persons who are to be thus rewarded at the public expense.

THE PROPOSED CREMATORY.

We suppose it is settled that a crematory shall be established for the consumption of the city's garbage. It is not settled yet where the establishment shall be located. This is a matter of some importance and care ought to be taken to select a place which will be the least offensive to residents of the city.

We understand that many of the City Council are in favor of a spot near the Warm Springs. We hope they will not forget that this is a popular resort likely to become more popular as the city increases in size, also that a hospital is to be erected in the vicinity and probably a large hotel.

The transportation of the garbage is also a serious consideration. The place to which it is taken should be of as easy access as may be, and the route should be one which will create as little opposition as possible from the people who live along its lines.

The whole subject ought to be well canvassed and the whole area of the suburbs be looked over before a decision is reached. No matter where it is located some objection will be found and some protests will be heard, but the public good ought to be paramount while as little injury as possible should be done to private interests and valuable surroundings.

FATAL DEFECTS IN A STORY.

OUR esteemed cotemporary the Herald, in its issue of this morning contains an article under the head of "Contract labor." The story told under this caption is, in a nutshell, about as follows:

"The last legislature passed a law providing for the appointment of a coal mining inspector." A Liberal named Gomer Thomas applied to the Governor for the appointment, the request being backed by the signatures of a number of prominent men of the Territory. In case these endorsements should be deemed insufficient by his Excellency the applicant offered to procure "from Cornwall or Cardiff, Wales," other certificates as to his competency. The Governor appeared to be favorable to granting the request and making Gomer mining inspector, but was surprised, on calling on him, to be greeted as follows:

"Hem! I am sorry, Mr. Thomas," said the executive, "but I am afraid that the position is already filled. In fact there is a man already on the way here, who will fill the position. Good day!"

Here is the closing paragraph of the article:

"This is the story told on the streets by friends of the applicant and they further insist that the man who is to be made mine inspector of the Territory sailed for Utah from Cardiff, Wales, a week ago!"

As a matter of justice to Governor Thomas it ought to be stated that the article referred to—the intention of which appears to be to reflect upon him—embodies some fatal defects. In the first place the last legislature did not pass a law providing for the appointment of a coal mining inspector.

In respect to the last paragraph quoted from our cotemporary it need only be said that the Edmunds-Tucker act requires that every person appointed to office in this Territory shall take oath as to his possession of certain qualifications, among which is citizenship of the United States. The absence of the law providing for the appointment of the officer in question of course kills the whole statement without anything further, but the law against persons holding office who are not citizens is here cited merely to show that even a story told on the streets is not always infallible.

A POPULAR ERROR.

AN exchange contends, as will be seen by the following, that both President and Vice-President may be chosen from the same State:

"It is a time-honored popular impression that the President and Vice-President of the United States can not constitutionally be elected from the same State.

"No party has ever put two citizens of one State on its Presidential ticket. Of course there are obvious political reasons for selecting the candidates from different parts of the country. But many have assumed that there is a constitutional veto upon the selection of a Vice-President from the same State from which the President is taken.

"Hence, when the election of Mr. Cleveland as President, and the choice of Mr. Whitelaw Reid as Vice-President begins to loom up as a political possibility, it is not surprising that the question should be widely asked whether such a combination is not contrary to the spirit if not the letter of the Constitution.

"If the effect of the third party movement should be to throw the election into Congress, as the leaders of that party boast it will be, says the New York Herald, the President would be chosen by the House and the Vice-President by the Senate. The House, being Democratic, would of course elect Mr. Cleveland. The Senate, being Republican, would choose Mr. Reid if constitutionally eligible. Is such a result contrary to the Constitution?

"It will doubtless surprise most readers to learn that the popular impression on this subject is entirely erroneous, and that there is nothing in the constitution to prevent the election of both President and Vice-President from the same State either by the House and Senate or by the members of the electoral college. The constitution says:

"The electors shall meet in their respective States and vote by ballot for President, and Vice-President, one of whom at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves."

"It will be noticed that this does not prohibit the electors in general from voting for the President and Vice-President resident in the same State.

"It simply declares that one of the candidates voted for shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with the voters. That is to say, the citizens of New York may not vote for two citizens of New York for President and Vice-President. But there is nothing in the language used to prohibit the electors of any other State from voting for two residents of New York or of any other State except their own.

"It is obvious, then, that a President and Vice-President may be elected from the same State without violating the letter of the Constitution. It is equally true that such a result would not be contrary to the spirit of the Constitution. The best proof that the framers of the Constitution did not intend to embody in it that spirit is that they used no language capable of such construction.

"Little importance seems to have been given to the clause under consideration in the constitutional convention. It did not figure in the debates and commentators on the Constitution have paid no attention to it. Bancroft gives this account of its origin:

"Williamson proposed that each man should vote for three candidates. Governor Morris accepted the principle, but desired to limit the choice of the voters to two, of whom at least one should not be of his own State. This Madison approved, believing that the citizens would give their second vote with sincerity to the next object of their choice.

"The convention was then discussing the mode of electing the president. No mention had been made of the office of vice-president. The plan was to allow each elector to vote for the two candidates for president, and it was thought that the smaller states would have a better chance of getting a president if the electors in the larger states were prohibited from voting for two of their own citizens. Without any stress being laid upon it the principle was adopted in the original constitution, when the vice-president was not voted for separately and it was retained in the twelfth amendment, which introduced the present system of separate and distinct ballots for vice-president.

"It is not likely that the people will ever have a chance to vote for two citizens of the same State as president and vice-president, though such a contingency may arise in congress. But there is no constitutional bar to it in either case."

THE PERILS OF TRAVEL.

ABOUT eight years ago Robert Bruce left Quebec, Canada, for Melbourne, Australia. In his new home he did not thrive well. Though a marine and locomotive engineer, his success in Australia was very poor. He could not obtain regular employment, and about four months ago he wrote to his wife and children in Canada for means to return. They sent him a ticket good for transportation to San Francisco. A few days ago he arrived by the steamer "Alameda," but as he had no money and looked somewhat weather stained the immigration inspector, McPherson by name, decided that Bruce should be returned to Australia. The man told his story but it was not heeded. Finally a railroad agent telegraphed to Quebec, and got a reply that money for a second clearance from San Francisco to Quebec had been paid to the local agent of a railroad there. The reply came just in time. If it had been a day later Bruce would be on the bosom of the Pacific bound once more for the country which, above all others in the world, he did not want to see.

SIR CHARLES DILKE.

A CURIOUS revolution in the English political wheel has brought into public life once more Sir Charles Wentworth Dilke. He was chosen Member of Parliament in the recent elections by a majority of 2,318 over his Conservative opponent.

Sir Charles was born in Chelsea in 1843. In early life he was a vehement Republican, and advocated the immediate abolition of royalty. Queen Victoria, at this time, is reported as having perpetrated a joke. It appears that the Dilke family were at one time special friends of royalty, and that the Queen patted young Charles while a boy on the head. Subsequently, when he blossomed out as a Republican, her Majesty was reminded that this was the lad whose head she had patted so frequently. She replied that she must have stroked him the wrong way, seeing that he entertained such dislike for all things royal.

He married an Irish woman named Kate Shiel. She was as much a radical as he, and both in their stamping tours struck terror into the hearts of British aristocrats. Later on in life he became acquainted with the Prince of Wales, and gradually subsided into Gladstonian Liberalism.

THE UTAH WORLD'S FAIR BILL.

THE passage by the of House Representatives of the Utah World's Fair Bill, has raised again the question of the right of our local Legislature to name the commissioners who are to spend the money appropriated by that measure. It is claimed anew that on doing this, the Legislature violated the provisions of section seven of the Organic Act "with the direct intention of snubbing the Governor."

The truth of the matter is, the Legislature had no intention to violate the Organic Act, and did not believe that their action would be a snub to its provisions. Therefore the charge of intention to "snub the Governor" is not tenable. It was simply a question of the meaning and the purpose of the section. The Governor took one view of it, the Legislature another.

It is not enough to say that the right of the Governor to appoint all officers of the Territory not otherwise provided for in the Organic Act, has been established by the courts. The Legislature did not dispute that. The position taken by that body was that the commissioners to expend the money appropriated for the World's Fair, were not officers at all, in the meaning of the law, and legal opinions and judicial authorities of the highest character supported that position.

The Governor considered his authority invaded by the act of the Legislature, and refused to sign the bill. If the common right of legislative bodies had existed in Utah, the Governor's veto would have been overridden by a two-thirds vote. And here was one more illustration of the wrong of the one-man-power in any part of this great republic, and a striking argument in favor of its abolition.

Now, we do not charge that the Governor exceeded what he believed was his legitimate authority. We did not do so at the first. If he was convinced that in signing the bill he would have endorsed a violation of the Organic Act, he was justified in refusing. We believed then, and we believe now, that he was mistaken.

On the other hand, it is not fair to charge the Legislature with any impropriety of act or intent, when this very question has passed the ordeal of judicial inquiry, a number of times, and decided in a manner to support the view of the Legislature. We do not care to particularize again. We gave citations from judicial decisions on cases precisely similar to this, reaching as high authority as the Supreme court of the United States, and they were conclusive of the right of a Territorial Legislature to appoint such commissioners, notwithstanding the provisions of an Organic Act conferring power upon the Governor the same as in section seven.

Eminent lawyers in the House of Representatives have examined this question and have perceived the essential differences between the "officers" referred to in the Organic Act and the commissioners named in the Utah World's Fair bill, and therefore they have supported the passage of that measure.

What the Senate will do with it we do not know. But, anyhow, the grand object in view is a proper representation for Utah at the World's Fair, and that will be achieved whether the bill becomes a law or not. But it is as well to have the facts understood, and it is no use for "Liberal" malignants to endeavor to falsify them.

MORE PETTY SPITE.

OUR contemporary the Herald is mistaken in stating that it was "the only paper to point out the glaring and outrageous character of the appointments for registration officers made by the Utah Commission. Reference to the editorial columns of the Deseret News of Wednesday evening will show to the contrary. We suppose most newspaper men delight in this kind of boasting, and though we do not take any stock in it we offer no objection when it is based on facts.

We refer to the matter again to draw attention to the continued unfairness of the Commission, as shown in the appointments for this city and county. We take pleasure in once more commending the course of General McClelland, in his manly and consistent effort to obtain justice, and in again putting the rest of the Commission on record as determined to be unfair and unjust. This was his proposition as voted down, he being the only one of the body who voted in its favor.

"Whereas, There are—deputy registrars to be appointed for the precincts in Salt Lake County; and
"Whereas, It is but fair and consistent with the law that those appointments should be equally distributed among the different political parties in the county; therefore

Resolved, That such appointments shall be made in harmony with the facts herein stated."

No comment is needed on the course of the Commission, which, from the very nature of its constitution, was evidently intended to be non-partisan. It will be seen, from the list we publish today, that the so-called "Liberal" faction have as much influence as ever over the majority of the body designed to promote fairness and equity in the conduct of elections in this Territory. We do not envy any person or class that cherishes such small and malicious feelings as those which prompted the selection of the registration officers for 1892. They will surely bring forth bitter fruit for the lips of those who fostered them.

PROPER MOTIVES.

THERE has been a growing disposition among young men in this community for a considerable time to enter the field of professional callings. This is in itself commendable, especially when the inspiring motive is not engrossingly selfish. The solid inducement consists of a desire for an easy and comparatively rapid means of obtaining money and the hope of satisfying a craving for individual social recognition and general preferment.

The young man who seeks to enter the professional domain on such a small, because centralized, basis is not likely to become distinguished for greatness, unless indeed he should throw aside his initiatory smallness, and operate from a nobler standpoint. Indeed he will not be likely to become, in the true sense, professionally successful.

The reason is plain. When he starts out on the road which leads to the entrance gate of the professional field he takes the shortest cut, having but little regard for his real status when he gets there. To arrive at the goal is his object, so that at the earliest possible moment he may begin to realize the more selfish results of the position. Unfortunately this country affords many easy methods for reaching the domain of professionalism, but they are the "other ways" by which unft persons climb over into vocations for which they are not prepared.

The true incentive for entering upon the road which leads to the adoption of one of the many professions that are open to the intelligent, educated and capable is a desire to obtain knowledge and, after it is acquired, to use it for the benefit of his fellow creatures. This will form the true basis of success, because the thirst for knowledge will quicken the efforts to secure it, and a desire to be a benefit to others will open the way for the satisfaction of this God-given aspiration, and success and unsought recognition will follow as sure as the day follows the night.

It may be said that our view recommends motives that are ideal. But it ought to be the aim of all—especially Latter-day Saints—to reduce, so far as possible, the ideal condition to a reality. Of course it is not expected that many will assume the high, moral position of Agassiz, who, when offered strong financial inducements to deliver lectures involving much consumption of time in travel, refused on the ground that he could not afford to spend his time making money.

Young men ought to have high motives. Then they can aim high and feel confident of success. This may not include wealth, but surely the accumulation of riches is not the main object of existence.

A RIDICULOUS TEST.

PERRHAS Henry Adams, of New Hampshire and James D. Walton, of England, thought they were inspired with a spirit of patriotism when they agreed to settle a dispute as to the courage of the people of their respective countries by an individual contest. The decision was to be given in favor of the nation of the one who first planted his national colors on the edge of a volcanic crater in Mexico. Both the poor fellows lost their lives by being engulfed in a stream of molten lava. Of course the deciding of a national quality by an individual feat is an unqualified absurdity. If the point of dispute had been as to which of the two persons had the smallest amount of common judgment that would have been quite another thing. In that case it would have been a draw, as neither neither seemed to be possessed of any. If the discretion of these two men had been equal to their bravery and energy, they would doubtless both have been living today, with a fair prospect of usefulness ahead of them.

NEARING DESPERATION.

It is asserted to be the intention of union men at Homestead to resort to the most desperate and extreme measures in the event of it being demonstrated that the Carnegie mills can be run without them. It is claimed that in that event recourse will be had to dynamite, and for that purpose emissaries of organized labor are in the works. These agents are under oath to place the dreaded explosive where it will do the most damage.

There seems to be no doubt as to the ability of the Carnegie Company to conduct the works independently of organized labor. Consequently if the dreadful intention in relation to the destroying the mills really exists, the conspiracy will before long begin to operate. If the lock-out workmen so will it, they have the power to do what is claimed. The developments connected with this struggle indicate plainly that there are men among them who are capable of almost any monstrous act in the criminal catalogue, therefore there is no deficiency in the matter of human tools. The matter of reason does not seem to govern in this difficulty, and as a result, desperate means may be resorted to by men who have entered the "school of despair."

Of course many people will treat such threats as those which are said to have been recently made as without foundation, yet they are but a repetition of expressions uttered before any overt act was committed in connection with the Homestead question. It was repeatedly asserted that non-union men would never be allowed to run the mills, and that, if necessary, violent means would be used to prevent such a situation.

The Homestead people must be in a condition approaching desperation. They have been thrown out of remunerative employment, and the majority of them are doubtless without money. They hang about the scene of the trouble, hoping for a change to occur. They do not seek employment elsewhere, and if they did it is doubtful whether they could find it. There is no knowing what men will do under such circumstances. We are not inclined to the belief that the Homestead troubles are near the end yet.

THE ATTEMPT ON MR. FRICK.

The attempted assassination of Manager H. C. Frick, of the Carnegie works, at Homestead, created a great deal of interest throughout the country. As the regular telegrams were somewhat meagre in relation to details of the affair, we make some extracts of an account of the occurrence which appeared in the New York Recorder:

"Mr. Frick sat at his desk in a revolving chair, with his back to the door. Between the desk and the door is a large square table. The rest of the furniture is much as is usually seen in offices of this description.

"After the would-be assassin passed through the main office, he crept silently around the table until he stood directly behind Mr. Frick. Then, without a word, he fired a .38 calibre pistol. Before Mr. Frick could turn around a second shot left the muzzle of the murderer's weapon. Both bullets struck the millionaire in the back of the neck, one on either side of the spinal column. They did not stun him, strange to say, and he sprang to his feet fully prepared to grapple with his assailant.

"The clerks in the outer office rushed to his assistance, headed by Vice-Chairman Leishman. As quick as a flash the murderous crank fired again, this time at Mr. Leishman. As he pulled the trigger Mr. Frick reached his side and struck his pistol hand up. The bullet went wide of the mark, and the wounded man, with extraordinary strength, closed in upon the fiend who was seeking his life.

"A fourth shot was fired during the struggle. This, too, failed in its errand, and one of the clerks struck the struggling murderer a terrible blow over the head with a brick hammer. It felled him to his knees, but he clung to Mr. Frick and saved himself from falling. Before another blow could be struck the desperate assassin drew a knife from his pocket and stabbed Mr. Frick twice in the back, just above the left hip, and by a tremendous effort broke loose from the men who were trying to hold him.

"Putting them aside, he sprang through the still open door out into the main hall and started down the steps leading to the street. As he ran he came plump upon Policemen Crossan and McRobert, who caught him and took him back into Mr. Frick's office.

"As they entered one of the clerks seized a pistol and was about to shoot the prisoner, when Mr. Frick shouted, in commanding tones: 'Let that man alone! I want no harm to come to him except at the hands of the law.'"

"Then he sank back into his chair. The clerks lifted him up and carried him to a sofa. As he lay there the policemen asked him if their prisoner was the man who had shot him.

"He is," was the reply, "and it was utterly without provocation."

Speaking of Berginan, after he was taken to jail, the report says:

"Just then the prisoner's supper was brought. He ate heartily, almost ravenously, and seemed to enjoy it. While thus engaged the reporter had a good chance to study the man's features. He has a long, thin face with high cheek bones and sunken jaws. The chin is sharp, the forehead low and receding and the eyes small and intensely black. The hair, worn pompadour, is thick and almost jet black. A pale, sallow complexion, with pimples and blotches marring it, complements the face. You will see a hundred such in an hour's walk on Stanton, Orchard or Suffolk streets."

Mr. Frick's fortitude and coolness throughout the ordeal were phenomenal. We quote:

"At 5:30 the wounded man's sister came to his office, and was surprised to find her brother sitting up reading the accounts of the shooting in the afternoon newspapers.

"It was six hours to the minute from the time the first shot was heard till Mr. Frick was removed from the blood-stained office to the ambulance in waiting, and all of this time, although suffering intense agony, while the corps of surgeons examined and operated upon his wounds, he maintained his self-possession, and was, in fact, as cool as if nothing had happened.

"The surgeons were anxious that he should be put under the influence of chloroform, but he protested, and while they were probing for the balls he gave many hint- and sugges- ions as to where they would be likely to find them.

"Hundreds of his business and personal friends called at the office while the doctors were at work, and more than a score were admitted by his orders. To one of them, James B. Scott, of Johnstown fame, he said that he did not propose that his wounds should bother him much; that he expected to be at the office on Monday.

"After the ball had been dug out of his shoulder blade he suddenly recollected that he had left several letters on his desk that it was important should go on in the night mail, and, calling a clerk, he instructed that he should bring them in, persuading the doctors to prop him up. Although he accelerated the flow of blood, he attached his signature to the various sheets.

"Then he was placed on a couch and soon fell into a sound sleep. Awakening shortly before 6 o'clock, he summoned all the heads of the various departments and gave them full and explicit instructions regarding matters that should be attended to on Monday. He then expressed a desire to be removed to his home."

A RABBIT PLAGUE.

ABOUT forty years ago a single pair of rabbits was introduced into Australia, and now the various colonial governments are wrestling with the question of rabbit extermination. It is estimated that the progeny of two rabbits in ten years will aggregate 70,000,000. From 1885 to 1890 the Government of New South Wales expended over $4,000,000 endeavoring to exterminate the vermin. In addition to this, private enterprise was also directed to their extermination. Royalty was paid in one year on 25,280,000 rabbitskins.

Charles W. Kent, of London, who is now on his way to the antipodes to obtain special information on the rabbit question, was interviewed recently by a San Francisco Chronicle reporter, and gave some inside history in relation to the little animal which is making so much trouble. The royalty paid by government for killing a rabbit is two cents, the skin sells for six cents, and the meat for four cents. So that an active man can make good wages killing rabbits. In the skittish alone there are ten companies in Australia and four in New Zealand engaged. One-half of these combine with it the industry of packing the meat. They are not anxious to see the rabbits exterminated.

The farmers are doing everything in their power to mitigate the rabbit pest. It was through their agency that Pasteur undertook to exterminate the animal by means of chicken cholera inoculation. He would have done so, but was thwarted by the skin and meat dealers. They are supporting a bill now before the Sydney legislature which it is expected will solve the problem. This bill provides for the building of a brick wall entirely around the agricultural region of New South Wales. The walls will be sunk 24 feet in the ground, because it is said rabbits cannot burrow beneath that depth. Then within the enclosure will commence the exterminating process, and once clear, the district can easily be maintained so. Outside the wall the rabbit cannot well thrive, and its gradual extinction is looked for.

HOT WEATHER IN CHICAGO.

ACCOUNTS from Chicago give a rather dismal picture of the weather in the Wigwam City. During the days of the National Democratic Convention the heat was reported intense, but no casualties were chronicled. The Democrats got away safely. It is different now. People are dying from the heat at the rate of fifty a day. A local paper portrays the condition of the fat man on Sunday last as follows:

"It seemed to him that some one had played a joke on him and lined his clothes with gelatine. He felt as though, if some one would stick a fork in him, it would be found that he was ready for the dressing. He felt as though his tight shoes were made of cast iron fresh from the moulds and, that if he should spill water on them they should sizzle. He had a feeling between the eyes as if some one had hit him with a hammer and started a salty leak from his forehead. His collar seemed to chafe like a noose, and from the dizzy pains that chased one another around his seething intellect, he would have sworn that a steam coil was concealed in his hat band. The eyebrows were afloat and the landscape was all askew. A cold drink gave him but a moment's relief, but the exertion of setting down the glass brought back all the symptoms. His back felt like a laundry smells, and when he dropped into a chair he discovered that he had an alcohol lamp under the seat."

NO SYMPATHY FOR ANARCHISTS.

THERE are three of the notorious Chicago anarchists in the Illinois penitentiary at Joliet. Their names are Neebe, Schual, and Fielden. Great efforts are being made to secure a pardon for them. Advantage is being taken of the heat of political partisanship to push for their release. A short time ago matters seemed favorable to their release. But the development at Homestead caused a change. Even the immediate friends of the men in prison deemed it advisable to postpone the direct movement for a pardon.

The report that Bergman in the assault of Frick, is an agent of the anarchists has hurt the chances of the liberation for the Chicago men, though it has not yet been clearly ascertained whether Bergman is an anarchist or not. Because he is foreign born and happens to be a Jew a great many harsh things are said about him, reflecting on foreign born citizens in general, and on the Hebrew race in particular. As a race the Jews are, perhaps, the freest from disorder and anarchy in the world. And as to enormity in crime, the murders of Garfield and Lincoln were as heinous as ever committed in any country. Both the perpetrators were native products.

If Bergman is a member of a murder society let it be shown conclusively, and then let the law take its full and perfect course. If not, the poor wretch should meet the penalty for his crime individually, and without prejudice as to race or country. Anarchy cannot be put down by anarchy.

THE INCREASE OF CRIME.

A WRITER in the Nineteenth Century gives some facts and statistics on the rapid growth of crime during the last three decades. These have special reference to England and Wales. But the same remarks and conclusions, though the figures may be different, apply equally to affairs in the United States. Notwithstanding the establishment of philanthropic institutions for the benefit of the fallen and the destitute, the prison records show that the number of criminals has rapidly increased, and this out of all proportion to the increase of population.

Reform schools and other places for the correction of juvenile offenders, have taken away from the prison population a considerable number which were formerly included in the regular criminal statistics. If these were added, the figures would be still more formidable. And it appears that the increase of commitments to those reformatories has been in a greater ratio, even, than of those to the regular prisons. Thus crime is making rapid strides in civilized nations, in spite of the march of intelligence and the spread of education.

It is shown also that the augmentation of the police force has been remarkable. It has not been a mere steady growth, but has advanced by leaps and bounds which have been necessitated by the rapid increase of crime. Police statistics are thus shown to be in striking confirmation of prison statistics, and both lead to the conclusion "that crime during the last thirty years, for which we possess official returns, has not decreased in gravity and has been steadily developing in magnitude."

The explanation of this unsatisfactory state of things is scarcely sufficient. It is attributed to the growing tendency to congregate in large cities. The great cities of today are pronounced "the nurseries of modern crime." There is no doubt that "the aggregation of large multitudes within a very limited area," increases the chances of conflict and thus multiplies "occasions for crime." But this, we think, does not reach the root of the evil. That we believe to be the increasing godlessness of the age.

As a clever writer has it: "A man with no God, whether he is a savage or a nineteenth century philosopher, recognizes no obligations except those which will best promote his pleasure or probable well being." It is a fact that the large majority of civilized humanity is practically "without God in the world." Trained in schools from which all religious teaching is excluded, and in which no devotional exercises or feelings are promoted, the youth of the country grow up with perfect indifference as to their responsibility to God and without that moral restraint which religion only can afford. Were it not for the religious influences outside of the public schools, the downward tendency would be far greater and the restraints to crime a great deal less.

Belief in a Supreme Being to whom all mortals are accountable, and who will render unto every man according to his works whether they be good or evil, must of necessity be a powerful incentive to virtue and a great deterrent to evil. By this we mean not a mere theoretic recognition of the existence of Deity, but a real, practical faith in God as the Almighty Ruler and Judge of all. This faith is rare. The tendency of the times is to what is called agnosticism, which means in effect: "I don't know and I don't care." Present enjoyment, present aggrandizement, individual advantage, are the objects in view, and the future may take care of itself. The old-fashioned ideas about human responsibility and divine retribution are treated with indifference if not contempt. The result is recklessness, rebellion and moral ruin.

Where personal ends are the aim of existence and future accountability is ignored, the step is not far to sinfulness when necessity or inclination lead the way; Godlessness and crime are closely related. They increase together. Rejection of divine law prepares the way to defiance or evasion of human law. Teaching that ignores the former is an unconscious aid to the latter. That is not true education which does not include religious training, part of which is the development of sound morality.

Crime will therefore increase as religious institutions decay. And the wise among men who are desirous of the common welfare, will unite their efforts to combine their influence to bring about such a change in the methods of modern schooling that the spiritual and moral as well as the intellectual faculties of the young will be trained and perfected. The heart needs educating as well as the head!

THE SITUATION IN COLORADO.

THE Silver League movement exhibits a good deal of force, but at the same time it manifests much folly. Its refusal to listen to Senator Teller, one of the best friends of silver in the State was indicative of that unreason which will do much to postpone what the movement is desired to effect.

The projected alliance with the People's party in Colorado is not very likely to accomplish the intended purpose. In all probability the Republicans will carry the State with a considerably reduced majority from the last election. It is not believed, by the shrewdest and best posted politicians there that the Silverites and their allies will have sufficient influence to materially change the result. Some Republicans and a few Democrats will vote for Weaver, but when it comes to the issue, most of the members of the old parties will support their party candidates.

There is one thing that the extremists among the silver men seem to forget. That is, the country at large is not yet converted to their ideas. We do not dispute the doctrine of bimetallicism. We believe the demonitization of silver was a great wrong as well as a grave error. We are of the opinion that silver ought to be and will be some time restored. But this change cannot be forced upon the nation. Think what they may, the advocates of silver will have to learn that at present the majority of the people of the United States are opposed to free and unlimited coinage of silver. Granted that their reasons are weak, that their expressed fears are groundless; the opposition remains, and it will take time and good argument to correct the popular sentiment.

Now, suppose either the Republican or the Democratic candidate were to take a stand for free silver on the platform of the League. Would not that be a certain step to defeat? Most assuredly. Let any rational man go East and talk with the people as well as the politicians, and he will find that no extreme silver man could be elected to the Presidency. Should a candidate for the Chief Magistracy study the demands of a section or the wishes of the nation? Must the views of the minority prevail against the known desires of the majority?

The extreme silver men have gone wild over their hobby. They will run it to death if they do not slack up a little. What they are doing will not bring success. But it will disgust men of less rashness who are as good friends of silver as themselves, and thus retard their own movement.

In Colorado the Democrats have, at present, nothing to lose. It is a Republican State. The Republicans appear to be too numerous to be overcome, even by a fusion of the extreme silverites of both parties and the People's party men. The result, after all this agitation will probably be, that Colorado will go for Harrison by a comparatively small majority, and silver will not be helped by the extreme measures of its headstrong advocates.

The government of Mexico will exhibit at the World's Fair a large and valuable collection of Aztec relics.

A PROPER KIND OF PROTECTION.

THE New York Sun holds some peculiar views for a Democratic paper but it generally speaks out plainly in good English and on the labor question strikes justly at the heresies of some journals that ought to know better. In an article on the proper course to be pursued in discussing the tariff it says:

"Throughout the world this Republic has long been conspicuous for the respect in which its citizens hold the law. The conservatism of Americans in obeying laws which are distasteful to a large minority of the citizens, and in enforcing such laws at all hazards, has excited the surprise and admiration of intelligent and able foreign critics for many years. But a lamentable change is coming over our people in this respect. It may judge from the too prevalent readiness to justify the recent lawless outbreak at Homestead on the ground that it is only a natural and excusable retaliation for the harm done to the workingmen by the protective tariff. Can there be anything more monstrous than such teaching? If it is right to take possession of property which does not belong to you, and exclude the true owner as a protest against protective tariff, why would it not be equally right to take possession of the National banks as a protest against some banking law that happened to be unpopular, or to the building and plant of a newspaper because its teachings and doctrines did not happen at that time to accord with certain prevailing popular notions? There is one kind of protection that every honest man in this country is in favor of, and that is the protection of the property owner in the possession of his property. The poor man cannot be secure in his cottage if the rich man is not secure in his mansion or manufactory. If the law will not protect the accumulations of the rich, it cannot protect the savings of the poor."

THE SPIRIT OF APATHY.

THE police of some of the large cities of the Union have been asleep for a year or two. They are now just awakening. Alexander Bergman, who shot Mr. Frick, has aroused them from their prolonged nap. But for his murderous act the conservators of the peace would still have slumbered on. It is now announced, however, that they intend making some investigation with a view to ascertaining the numerical strength of the anarchists and gaining other information regarding those dangerous gentry. Some facts that have been already learned during the last few days in that connection are quite startling. While the police were sleeping they had no idea that the anarchists were increasing in numbers and in consequent power to work evil in the country.

That the police should have been apathetic and consequently ignorant on so grave a subject immediately connected with their duty shows what an aggregation of dummies must be employed throughout the country as peace-conservators. The anarchists are all, theoretically at least, in favor of murder and the destruction of property. Their theory would be reduced to practice should a favorable opportunity occur. That such enemies to law and order should have been outside the surveillance of the police of the populous centres of the country shows a degree of official indifference that swims close to the edge of criminality. Doubtless after the excitement caused by the deed of Alexander Bergman passes off, the festive police officials will relax into their usual peaceful apathy, until aroused by the next act in the anarchistic tragedy.

LAW AND ORDER AGITATION.

THERE is a revival in progress of an agitation upon a question which has existed in a most aggravated form since the spring of 1890. It is this, in a nutshell: Which shall rule this city—law or liquor?

Every intelligent citizen knows that whisky has been king from the time the "Liberals" assumed control of the municipal government. The question now being revived is whether or not this reign shall be longer continued.

We hope that the efforts now being made will turn the tide in favor of the supremacy of law as against a privileged class of law-breakers, but it is natural that some doubts should exist on the subject. Similar attempts were made by lovers of good order and morality in the winter of 1890-91. They signally failed. The same forces that produced this disastrous result then exist now. They may be less potent than formerly, but they are still quite formidable. The saloon men and their host of supporters have voted; the leading spirit in "Liberal" campaign work announced while the former agitation against law-breaking liquor men was in operation, that they had been consulted in regard to their political leaning, and that their wishes after election were entitled to consideration. As they desired to break the law with impunity, and it was deemed politic to permit them to do so, the agitation set afoot by the better classes against the reign of whisky was, as already stated, a pronounced failure.

There is one point of advantage on the side of law and order now which was not apparent in 1890-91: the mayor of the city has announced himself as being on the right side of the question. If he will show the stamina with which he has been generally credited, his attitude will go a long way toward breaking down the supremacy of the whisky men. There is still another fact that is favorable to the law and order side of the question—the person who has figured as the leading "Liberal" political operator and strongest supporter of the rule of liquor is not as influential now as formerly.

One fact ought to be kept clearly in view by those now taking an active interest in favor of law in this city—that the imposition of a nominal fine upon men guilty of breaking the statutes is an obstacle in the way of success in attaining the object of the agitation. We regard such treatment by the police justice as an encouragement for those placed under arrest to continue in their lawless course.

We understand that a citizens' mass meeting on this question is being arranged for and will be held some time next week. Its object will be to protest against the longer continuation of the reign of whiskey and its consequent damaging effects upon the morals of this city.

HENRY CLAY FRICK.

HENRY CLAY FRICK was born on a farm near West Overton, Pa., about 42 years ago. After receiving a common school education he entered a dry goods store as assistant remaining but a short time. He next became book-keeper in a distillery at Bradford. When about 21 years of age he went into the coke business, on a small scale, in company with two others, the firm being known as Frick and Co. The business expanded and became prosperous, and in 1876 Frick became sole owner, having bought out his partners. The following year he entered into partnership with two other men and gave a new impetus to his trade. In 1882 the firm of Frick & Co. owned 3000 acres of coal land and 1,026 coke ovens. It was during this year that Andrew Carnegie became associated with Frick. There was some misunderstanding about coke, and the shrewd Carnegie noting that Frick was the coke king of Pennsylvania, entered into partnership with him in that industry.

In 1890 the Frick and Carnegie corporation owned 35,000 acres of coal lands, over 10,000 coke ovens, and forty-two of the eighty coke plants in the region. It also owned railroads, water pumping works, steam boilers, a vast system of tramways and horses and mules in hundreds. Over 110,000 men were then employed in the coke works.

In 1888, Stewart, the business partner of Andrew Carnegie in the iron trade, died. Then Frick was induced to take his place, and very soon developed into a master mind in iron as he had already done in coke. Both the industries from that time became more or less united, Frick becoming the active manager of all the works. The wealth of Frick and Carnegie combined is variously estimated at from seventy to one hundred millions of dollars.

Fifteen or twenty years ago all the hands with few exceptions employed in coke works were native-born Americans. In time a strong sprinkling of English, Welsh, Scotch and Irish crept in. Frick was always introducing some reform in wages. He kept Pinkerton detectives employed as laborers among the men, consequently he always knew what movements were in progress. In 1886 came the great strike by which the English-speaking laborers were driven out of the region, and thousands of Slavs, Hungs and Bohemians introduced. Matters went on smoothly until last year when the Connellsville coke strike took place, in which were involved 15,000 workers. During that strike over a dozen persons were killed and many times more wounded. By the aid of the Pinkertons the men of 1886 were all ousted and Italians, negroes and others introduced. Mr. Frick is, whether justly or otherwise, one of the most unpopular employers of labor in this country.

THE READING COAL COMBINE.

ABOUT six months ago considerable excitement was occasioned by what was known as the Reading Railroad Coal Combine. This was an association formed of roads interested in the anthracite coal industry. It might more properly be denominated a trust, but the legal advisers of the combination carefully avoided using any term of that character. It was simply referred to as an agreement to cheapen operation, and consequently to give the public better terms. But shortly after the completion of the trust coal went up, and it has been creeping in the same direction ever since. This combination controls the anthracite output of the whole coal mining region, and the scope in the way of distribution extends from Buffalo and New York and from Lake Champlain to the Virginias.

About ten days ago the House of Representatives at Washington passed a resolution authorizing its Interstate Commerce Committee to investigate whether "the alleged combinations of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Company, the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, the Central of New Jersey, and the Port Reading Railroad Company, or any combination between any of these roads and any other roads or canals or producers of coal, for any illegal or improper purpose, exist, and, if so, what is the effect on prices and upon commerce between the States."

The committee is authorized to sit during the recess of Congress at such places as may suit its convenience best. It is also authorized to subpoena witnesses and compel their attendance. In addition to a full report of the facts, the committee is instructed to make suggestions and recommendations, provided it is shown that the trust or combine is an injury to the people.

THE STREET SPRINKLING TAX.

THERE is much dissatisfaction among property owners over the street sprinkling tax. Many of them have been served with a notice that they have been assessed at the rate of seven cents per foot frontage. This counts both ways on corner lots. The service has always been miserable since the "Liberals" let the contract to a non-resident firm and rejected all local bids. But of that we do not wish now to make particular mention. The Council has recently created a new sprinkling district, and placed the tax, if we remember rightly, at only four cents per foot frontage.

In addition to this discrimination between districts, which, however, may be capable of satisfactory explanation, there is also discrimination in the supply. In one portion of District No. 1, the streets are sprinkled or flooded at least four times a day, in other parts of the same district only twice a day. Valuable property in the business locality which is benefited to a far greater degree than that in remote places, pays more than the latter, and vacant or almost vacant lots have to pay very large sums against small and insignificant amounts paid by valuable business houses.

More than that. It is believed that the City Council has no legitimate authority to levy a special street sprinkling tax at all. It is a public service for a public necessity, to come out of the general funds obtained by general taxation. Investigation of the charter, with all its amendments, fails to disclose any definite bestowal of power on the Council to levy such a tax.

The consequence is that a number of aggrieved taxpayers have agreed to unite and resist the collection of this unequal, and as believed, illegal imposition. An injunction will be applied for, and those who unite in the application will be safe in not paying the tax until a judicial decision is reached. If the great body of the property owners take part in the suit, it will cost them but a mere trifle, and great confidence is expressed that the tax will be declared unlawful. In our special notice column will be found something of interest to all who desire to escape this burden, and prompt response to it on their part is necessary.

INTOXICATED CONGRESSMEN.

THE charge made in a campaign pamphlet, by Mr. Watson of Georgia, that some Members of Congress attend to public business and make speeches on important subjects while intoxicated, and that drunken members reel through the aisles of the House, needs the investigation it is to have by a congressional committee. Though made for a partisan purpose we fear there is too much truth at the back of it. No one familiar with affairs at the capital can deny, to himself, that evidences of indulgence in the intoxicating cup are often afforded in the halls of Congress and that such scenes are disgusting to sober citizens.

As to whether this vile habit is characteristic of members of one party only, there may be a difference of opinion. There is nothing, however, in the principles of either party which gives license to such conduct. And we think the anger occasioned by Mr. Watson's philippic is more over the partisan color he has given to his accusation than the disagreeable fact itself.

It is bad enough when men entrusted with the grave duty of legislating for the nation spend their "off" time in carousing and deep potations. But when they come to their posts of duty bleary-eyed and fuddled, thick of speech and thicker of mind, or unduly excited and stimulated by draughts of fiery liquor, the evil is worse in itself and of much graver consequence to the country. A few examples made to correct this evil would be in order. And the people who wield the ballot should see to it that men who are slaves to the habit of drink are not permitted to disgrace them and the country by exposing their folly in the eyes of the world.

A TRICK OF THE TRADE.

A SAMPLE of the methods of the "Liberal" boss was given on Friday in the case of E. H. Parsons against C. C. Gordin and Wm. Nelson for criminal libel. The action was taken before

The world's railways are worth $30,000,000,000.

United States Commissioner Norrell. On behalf of the defendants O. W. Powers, so the Tribune reports, suggested that owing to the personal relations between the Court and one of the defendants it might be rather embarrassing for the Court to hear the case, and he went on to state that he was "perfectly willing to have the case transferred" if he could agree with the attorney for the prosecution. The case was "transferred," Judge Norrell refusing to hear it under the circumstances, and it went before Justice Crozier.

As soon as the case was opened Powers objected to the transfer. He claimed that the Justice had no power over the defendant; that Judge Norrell had no power to make this "arbitrary transfer;" that no cause had been shown why he could not have gone on with the trial, and that the change had only been made at "the suggestion of the Court."

Mr. Critchlow, evidently surprised at such an apparent trick, showed that the objection was on a purely technicality and took the ground that the Justice had full jurisdiction. However, the Court thought it prudent to take time to consider the question and so the case went over until Monday afternoon.

Is not this what in other places is known as pettifoggery? And is it not quite compatible with the usual methods of the political juggler who has obtained so much notoriety of a certain kind in this Territory? And does it look as though the defendants were as anxious as he makes out for a speedy and impartial trial? Powers, Goodwin and Nelson, Goodwin, Nelson and Powers make a very harmonious triad and are fittingly associated in this action.

THE CHURCH UNIVERSITY.

YESTERDAY Dr. James E. Talmage, after an absence of one month, returned from his trip to the east in the interest of the Church University. One of the objects of the journey was to arrange for the purchase of scientific apparatus, in which he was in every way successful. Much of the apparatus to be procured will have to be imported from Europe, and it will therefore be some time before it reaches this city.

Another reason for the trip of Dr. Talmage was to obtain information with regard to the arrangement and conduct of laboratories for scientific work in the most extensive and best conducted educational institutions of the country. Among the high class establishments visited were those of Howard, Yale, Johns Hopkins, and Clark. At each of them the Doctor was treated with marked courtesy and every desired facility was afforded him to secure the information sought.

The new building in which the university will begin a scientific course is being erected, as heretofore stated, on the grounds belonging to the Latter-day Saints' College. It is the intention to push it rapidly to completion.

The Board of Trade of Dubuque, Ia., has appointed a committee to prepare an exhibit for that city to be sent to the World's Fair.

TERRESTRIAL DISTURBANCES.

SANGIR, on which a thousand people were recently destroyed by a volcanic eruption, is an island located in the Malay Archipelago, between Celebes and Mindanao. It is thirty miles long and its average width is ten miles. Its surface is mountainous and the volcano is located near the centre of it.

The situation of the surrounding population is pitiable. In addition to the destruction of so many of the people, who were engulfed in streams of molten lava, an immense number of houses were demolished by rocks thrown over the island from the crater, and the crops are practically annihilated, so that a famine is threatened. Volcanic activity has begun in a number of parts of the earth simultaneously. Etna is on the rampage, terrifying the inhabitants of the surrounding country. Volcanoes are recognized as the safety valves of the globe, enabling it to throw off matter generated under the surface that would otherwise cause tremendous terrestrial convulsions. While the volcanic operations doubtless moderate the earthquake-producing forces, they by no means entirely eliminate them. In fact their operation is an indication of seismic disturbances being most likely to occur then when the volcanoes are silent. Earthquakes are among the peculiar conditions of the times. They were to be precursors of the coming of Christ, and therefore may be expected to take place in these days with more or less frequency. Some of the disturbances of this character of the last few years have been appallingly destructive, one of the most recent being that which engulfed a large number of people in Japan.

REMARKS ABOUT ASIATIC CHOLERA

THE Asiatic cholera always seems to originate in the Orient—particularly in India—and spread over Russia to the Baltic provinces and through Egypt and Turkey to southern Europe. The little animals, which are thought to be the cause of the dread disease, follow in their march of death regular geographical boundaries with but few variations.

The causes of the epidemic are but little understood beyond the fact—which is now generally accepted—that it is owing to the presence of unusually large numbers of bacteria which enter the human body and destroy it. But what are the conditions under which they are generated.

Some investigators claim to have traced them to be filigree rite of the Mohammedan religion. The yearly pilgrimage to Mecca always is brought to a close by the great feast called Kurban hetram, or feast of gifts. On that day thousands of devotees kill one or more animals, in remembrance of the intended sacrifice of Isaac by Abraham, and also in honor of their dead ancestors. Vast herds of sheep and cattle are on that day gathered together in a valley in the vicinity of Mecca. Even the poorest will endeavor to offer a ram, while the wealthier people kill camels. Instances are related of Khalifs who have slain as many as a thousand animals. And it is said that after this feast, carcasses are strewn about on the ground in immense numbers. The whole Mohammedan world celebrates this day in a similar manner. Every city and village has its sacrifices, commencing with sunrise and continuing throughout the day. Along the sea coasts, where the billows wash away blood, entrails, etc., the effects are less noticeable, but near the inland cities, where the effluvia is left on the ground, the stench is simply indescribable. It was seriously questioned, a few years ago, whether the Mohammedan world should be allowed to continue a practice of this kind, which is evidently favorable to the generation of all sorts of epidemics, particularly that of cholera. The Turkish and Egyptian governments have in later years tried, by quarantine rules, to minimize the danger, but the precautions are insufficient.

A striking theory was originated some years ago in France and is beginning to attract attention among scientists. It is to the effect that the bacteria are supposed to be always present in the ground, where they are comparatively harmless. Certain conditions connected with the atmosphere call them forth and develop them ready for their work of destruction. The conditions are supposed to depend, in the main, on such alterations in the rays of light as would be caused by the presence of sun spots in an unusual degree, or by the refraction of the rays of the sun through cometary matter before striking the atmosphere. This theory will no doubt be thoroughly investigated as possible. Should it be found well substantiated, it would seem to prove that the old traditions in which disasters on earth are connected with the luminaries of heaven are not altogether the results of superstition.

THAT TERRIBLE COMMERCE DESTROYER.

THE United States cruiser, launched at Philadelphia on Tuesday last, is said to be a marvel of naval architecture. She was christened "Columbia" by Miss Morton, daughter of the Vice-President. During the period of her construction in the yards she was known as the "Pirate." She is guaranteed by her builders, the Crams, to sail around the world in one hundred days without coaling. Her bunker capacity is 2,000 tons of coal; a supply sufficient to last 109 days, making at the rate of ten knots an hour.

This vessel was built specially for destroying commerce, that of an enemy of course. In appearance she resembles the ordinary merchantman. She in no particular resembles a fighting ship, that is, on the outside. She is capable of a sustained speed of 21 knots an hour. Her indicated horsepower is 20,500, and displacement 7,300 tons. It is confidently asserted that she can outrun the swiftest of the trans-Atlantic greyhounds. In fact, if she cannot do this the government need not accept her. Her contract calls for 22 knots an hour on trial trips. The best hour's work on record is that of the "Teutonic," 21.6 knots, but she could not maintain that for even two hours, while the "Columbia" is guaranteed to make 22 knots an hour during the whole day and night of 24 hours.

The motive power of this extraordinary vessel consists of triple screws. One of the screws is placed amidships, while the two others are fitted in the ordinary way as in the twin screw vessels. Her machinery consists of three sets of triple-expansion engines with vertical inverted cylinders. Each engine is located in a water-tight compartment complete in every respect, so that she may be propelled by running one engine alone.

The "Columbia" will carry no big guns. She will have one eight-inch gun as a "bow chaser." She will have besides four six-inch and eight four-inch, breech loading rifles, twelve six-pounders, six one-pounders, two machine guns, one field gun and six torpedo tubes. Her estimate cost is about $3,200,000.

She will be ready for service October 1st, 1893. The stipulations called for domestic manufacture in all parts of the vessel. Her protection armament is most complete. Much of it is a secret known only to the builders and government authorities.

UTAH JULY WEATHER.

DIRECTOR SALLSBURY of the Utah weather service has issued a report for the week ending July 25, 1892. For the week, reports were received from eighteen localities. The weather has been uniformly hot and dry, no rain, and irrigation had to be resorted to everywhere. There have been heavy drains upon the water supply, but in the majority of cases the supply has been equal to the demand.

Haying and harvesting have been in progress during the week. The hay cut was generally the second or third crop. Grain in the earlier ripening localities has now been nearly all cut; the yield will be excellent.

In the extreme north, wheat cutting has commenced. High winds have interfered somewhat with haying. A severe storm would now do great damage to unsecured crops, laying down a large amount of ripened grain.

In Juab County rye has been cut, and fall wheat harvesting has commenced. The stock ranges in the Southern counties have been greatly injured by drouth during the past two weeks. All reports agree that potatoes are not up to the average this year, neither in quantity nor quality of yield.

A BILL FOR STATEHOOD.

ON Saturday a bill was introduced in the House of Representatives by Hon. John T. Caine, for the admission of Utah as a State in the Union on an equal footing with the existing States. It provides for the calling of an election, by proclamation of the Governor, within fifteen days after the passage of the act, for delegates to a constitutional convention, at which a constitution may be framed which shall be republican in form, and shall be submitted to the people at an election, for the purpose. The returns are to be made to the Secretary of the Territory, who, with the Governor and Chief Justice shall canvass the votes, and if the constitution so framed is found to be ratified by a majority of the votes, they shall certify the result to the President of the United States, with a statement of the returns and a copy of the said constitution, when, if it is found to be in accordance with the provisions of the enabling act, the President is to issue a proclamation and the State is thus to be admitted into the Union.

The usual provisions, with liberal appropriations of land for schools, agricultural college, deaf and dumb asylum, reform and normal school, irrigation, penitentiary, etc., are inserted in the bill, and it is a complete measure for full statehood for Utah. It may be asked, is there not a bill introduced for statehood and why present another? The answer is, the bill introduced in the Senate is in reality a sort of introductory measure, and requires the action of Congress to pass upon what the people of Utah may desire, and it does not contain the common provisions in all enabling acts to perfect the process of transition from the territorial condition to statehood. This bill is full and complete, like any other measure for a similar purpose.

Of course it is not expected that the bill will become a law at the present session of Congress. It will, however, be ready for the next session, and it is thought by many it will receive early attention. When the full text of the measure reaches us we will be better able to comment on its provisions. At present it will only have the effect of preparing the way for future action, and of adding fuel to the fire that the Powers "Liberals" are trying to keep up for the purpose of scorching every effort to bring political liberty to Utah.

WHAT WILL THE COUNTY OFFICIALS DO?

To all appearance, the expected defiance of the Sunday saloon laws did not rear its head yesterday. Everything in the neighborhood of the liquor shops was reported quiet, and the police discovered no sign of either open or secret infraction of the city ordinances. That is, so far, satisfactory.

But the city saloon keepers justly complain that while they are compelled to close up, a roaring trade is carried on outside the city limits. Places within this county, some of them not far from town, regale all comers and the business shut down within town flourishes without, in spite of law and public sentiment.

If this is true, and we are assured that it is, the county authorities are to blame, and the city dealers have reason to say that injustice is done. Why should a saloon be closed inside the city limits, when another just outside, can be run for all it is worth on Sunday the same as any other day?

As for the law, that is not within the limits of Salt Lake County. But saloons there are within the jurisdiction of the Tooele County authorities, and if the reports concerning them are correct, the Tooele people are deserving of much censure. What is the use of the Sunday law if it is allowed to stand as a dead letter? And what is the use of county officers if they will not perform their duty?

The course of the Mayor and Captain of Police is endorsed by the better classes of this city of all creeds and parties. If the county authorities do not endeavor also to enforce the law, there will be a great outcry against them from the best citizens, who desire the general welfare. Come, gentlemen, what are you going to do about it?

STRAIGHT SLANDER.

THE Philadelphia Ledger of July 26 contains an article on "Mormon Women," from the pen of a Salt Lake lay, who has done some smart repertorial work for the Ledger in this city and has written some very bright articles for eastern papers. There is much in the Ledger communication to be commended, but it also contains some things that deserve condemnation. For instance, she says:

"In the outlying districts, where the foreign recruits are placed upon arrival, and parcelled out to men as a drove of cattle, they deserve commiseration principally for their ignorance. Punishment by the execution of the law can alone remedy the evil with them."

This is slander, straight and simple. It is without excuse. Put, as it is, in the present tense, it is contradicted by the well known fact, that no plural marriages have been permitted for years, which the writer declares to be true as to the cities, and she has no right or reason to presume that there is one rule, law, or prohibition for the cities and another for the country districts.

If it is meant to refer to the past it is still nothing but slander—old, stale, stupid falsehood. Nothing of the kind ever prevailed in Utah. Whatever marriages occurred were contracted by the free will and choice of the parties, and nothing short of this was possible under the rules and regulations and ceremonies that then existed. It is shameful that any one acquainted with Utah affairs, especially when appearing to speak in praise of many of the women of the Territory, should remark such miserable stuff and pass it off for genuine.

There never was any "parcelling out" of women to men in Utah. Immigrants went where they desired, or where they had friends to receive them, and such alliances as some of them may have formed were the result of their own choice. "Punishment by the execution of the law" ought to be inflicted on people who thus spread falsehood and scandal. There is no such "evil" as the writer in question calls for the law to "remedy." And we must confess our surprise, which is equal to our indignation, at the gratuitous slur which she has cast upon a people and a Territory which we supposed she took delight in defending. Her sex is a shield against stronger animadversion, but the wrong of the libel is as great if not greater when the libeller is a woman.

The architects of the world are to be invited to a congress at Chicago during the World's Fair to discuss architectural subjects and the interests of the profession.

THE AUSTRALIAN BALLOT.

THOUGH it is only four years since the last presidential election, yet a reform in the method of voting has been introduced in that time, amounting almost to a revolution. In 1888 the Australian ballot did not exist in a single State or Territory of the Union. In 1889 Massachusetts adopted it at her State election, thus putting herself on record as the first pioneer of the secret official ballot system in this country. At present some form of this system prevails in thirty-three States out of the whole 44. Hence the vast majority of votes this year for President will be cast under a form different to the old system.

Observations made on the practical working of this method in Massachusetts go to show that it has been satisfactory. Bribery and intimidation, the two curses of the old system, if not entirely removed are reduced to a minimum under the new. It has been found that in some cases voters are now bribed to remain away from the voting places. That is, in cases where it is morally certain that persons would vote a particular party ticket. As to intimidation it is now practically unknown even in Massachusetts, where the overseers of factories were formerly in the habit of standing at the polls to see that the operatives of mills voted the ticket prepared for them.

A CONTRACTED CALL.

In this issue will be found a call for a meeting to be held this evening in Washburn Hall (formerly known as the Federal court room). The object is stated to be to strengthen the hands of the Mayor and Chief of Police in their laudable efforts to enforce the laws against illegal liquor traffic and gambling.

There are some striking features embraced in this announcement to which the names of several well-known residents of the city are attached. One of these is the exclusiveness exhibited in the invitation, which is confined to one class—"legal voters." Yet while thus strictly confining the call to people who are qualified to vote at elections, those invited are requested to join in a "citizens' meeting," when the invitation only embraces one class of the population.

A person reading the notice might infer that the meeting was called for election purposes and was to be a purely political affair, without special reference to morality. Yet the object is simply to induce the municipal government to enforce the laws, that good order and morality may be increased and maintained. Consequently the sympathy with the subject is not confined to "fellow citizens who are legal voters." It is a matter in which all the good people of this city are interested. They are ready to support every endeavor to rigorously enforce the laws, and those who make an effort to create "a corner" in this direction are not conspicuous for consistency and certainly not for liberality.

The ladies, ever since there was a temperance question in the world, have taken an active part in promoting the cause of sobriety, and the same may be said with regard to the suppression of the vice of gambling. The great majority of them in this city are "fellow citizens," but under the law they are not "legal voters." Do those gentlemen who issued the call not deem it ungentlemanly as well as inconsistent, to entirely exclude them from the invitation to participate in furthering the good cause? The ladies are deeply concerned in the question at issue. They do not wish the existence of illegal allurements liable to induce their husbands, sons and brothers to take the road that leads to ruin. There are also other people who are not "legal voters," say for instance, young men who have not yet reached the age of twenty-one, who are opposed to the lawless conducting of drinking saloons and the operating of gambling dens.

Perhaps some of the gentlemen who signed the call affixed their names to it without critically examining it. Had they closely observed it so as to discover its character, perhaps they would have requested that it be amended before they attached their signatures. The person who formulated the call, however, is doubtless an individual of small caliber, naturally estranged from any sentiment of liberality.

We do not think that law, order and morality movements can be successfully conducted on the basis of monopoly. The invitation embodied in the call is about as novel an exhibition of narrowness as has ever come under our observation.

PAUPERS AND CRIMINALS.

AN International Congress of Charities, Correction and Philanthropy will be held in Chicago during the first week of June, 1893, when the World's Fair will be in the zenith of its glory. Rutherford B. Hayes, ex-President of the United States, will preside. It appears that in addition to his vast industry in the poultry and farming lines, Mr. Hayes is devoting considerable time to the study of sociology. He thinks that paupers and criminals are not getting the attention they deserve from society. He denounces the prevailing system of operating penal institutions, reformatories and refuges on the lines of partisan politics. He contends that the increase of crime is attributable to the apathy or indifference of society. He makes a special appeal to capitalists and to wealthy citizens to concern themselves in matters of this kind. "It should be regarded as a stain on the character of any rich man who does not do all he can do for the welfare of those whose labor has made his wealth."

CHICAGO AS A SEAT OF LEARNING

In the past Chicago has not been famed for its public libraries. In this matter it has been behind many cities of the country with populations less than 100,000. This will not be said of it in the near future. Ground was broken last Wednesday for a public library structure which, in completeness and convenience, will outrival the famous one of Boston. The Chicago building will be of the Roman Classic style of architecture. It will be 335 feet long, 147 feet wide and 90 feet high. The estimated cost is placed at $250,000, but it will probably run into two millions.

There is another public library now in course of construction in that city. One of Chicago's millionaires who died a few years ago bequeathed over two million for books, which will be devoted mainly to books of reference pertaining to America, ancient, mediæval, and modern. The book markets of Europe and of the world are now being explored for books of this class, under the superintendence of Mr. Poole, one of the best known librarians in the United States.

The new Baptist University now being built by the money donated by Mr. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, will also have a magnificent library, which, however, will make theology its main feature, and it will not be confined to any sect. It will embrace the theological literature of the world at large.

There is also the nucleus of a splendid law library laid by the Bar Association. The Carleton Club poses as the patron of the dramatic literature. It gives further than collecting books. It has just offered a prize of $500 cash for the best comedy of three or four acts submitted before December next. The competition is open to the whole world, but the play must be in the English language, and American in tone.

Indication go to show that the Queen City of the lakes will in time become famous for something else than pork, lumber and anarchism. They are even talking now of putting electric fans in the public streets during heated spells. And provisions will be made for future political conventions to be kept cool in this way. Sun, rain, dynamite or anarchy do not frighten these Chicago people.

A NEW SYSTEM OF DUELLING.

AN incident transpired a short time ago which is now tickling the risibles of fun-loving people on two continents. The Marquis de Mores, who killed Captain Mayer in a duel recently, felt aggrieved over some criticism of his conduct which appeared in the editorial columns of the Chicago Tribune. The Marquis wrote to Mr. Joseph Medill, editor of that paper, asking if he was responsible for everything published in it. Mr. Medill replied in the affirmative, and stated that he seemed war in the distance. He was prepared for combat, but being the challenged party, martial etiquette accorded him choice of weapons. He chose gloves, a twenty-four foot ring, and Marquis of Queensbury rules. Mr. Medill is nearly seventy years of age. He is a native of Nova Scotia, but comes of the same stock which furnished John L. Sullivan, Mr. Slavin, Mr. Corbett, Joe Lannan and several others. He is one of the best known characters in Chicago, and his paper bullet duels with Carter Harrison are matters of historic record.

De Mores has not yet been heard from. His forties lie in the pistol and sword. With one he has made a record in America, and with the other in France. With gloves it is supposed that he is familiar. The Chicago Mail anticipating the result gives the following report of the fight:

"The frog-eater jumped into the ring at 10:50. He was in good form, though he showed evidences of overeating and late dinners. At 10:57 1/2 Joe bounded over the ropes and was greeted with a rousing cheer from the spectators, among whom were such well-known sports as Carter Harrison, Billy Nixon, the sporting editor; Lam Tree, Hemp Washburn, Dave Swing, Walt Gresham, Pot Palmer, Ly Gage, Jack R. Walsh, and B-b Patterson. Joe was in the pink of condition, having been under a trainer's care in California for the last six months. He wore black tights and everybody could see the muscles of his calves bulge out like a professor's forehead. Carl Harrison was chosen referee. George di Pullman held the towel for the Frenchman and Lam Tree looked after the Holy Terror.

"First Round—De Mores forced the fighting. His left milt shot out for Joe's beak, but fell short. Joe worked cautiously, evidently getting on to the Frenchman's style.

"Second Round—Joe got a sock-dollager right on the nose from the Frenchman's left. It dazed him; but he returned the compliment, though not so well. Bets of six to four on the Frenchman were not taken, as Joe's nose looked discouraged and his friends were dubious.

"Third Round—The Holy Terror sprang to the center of the ring with his second wind. The Frenchman came up smiling, but he showed the evidence of hard punishment. He pushed his left duke for Joe's eye, but Joe dodged and let fly both his milt at his opponent's mug. It was a corker and the Frenchman went to the floor. Ten seconds having elapsed, time was called, and the Frenchman not responding the fight was given to Joe.

"Much comment was aroused when it was learned that Joe had struck the Frenchman with a piece of Tribune editorial which he had concealed in his right glove. It was a four-ounce milt, but with the piece of editorial it weighed two and three-quarter pounds. The Frenchman wasn't on to Joe's scheme, and nothing was said to him about it."

The names mentioned above, though given in prize ring parlance, belong to historic characters. C. R. Harrison, is Carter H., four times Mayor of Chicago, now editor of the Chicago Times. Billy Nixon is William Penn Nixon, editor of the InterOcean. Lam Tree is Lambert Tree, one of President Cleveland's ex-diplomats. Hemp Washburn is Hemstead Washburn. Dave Swing is the famous Presbyterian preacher, Professor Swing. Walt Gresham is Walter G. Gresham, he who was talked of as the candidate of the People's party for President. Pot Palmer is the famous Potter of boisterous fame, and husband of the President of the World's Fair lady commissioner. Jack Walsh is John R. Walsh of the Chicago Herald and Bob Patterson is Joseph Medill's son-in-law.

Mr. Medill's serio-comic action will have more to do with breaking up that barbarous system of duelling than whole tomes of statute enactments. It will cover that bully and desperado Mores with ridicule both at home and abroad. Even the war-loving Frenchmen cannot fail to see the comedy at the bottom of it.

SUGAR BEET CULTURE.

THE Department of Agriculture at Washington is taking an active interest in the cultivation of the sugar beet. Last year it distributed 5,000 packages of seed to various sections of the country. Accompanying each package was a circular containing information as to planting, harvesting, and so forth. Blankets were also forwarded for the purpose of reporting accurately the results. Reports were received from thirty-six States and Territories, accompanied by samples of the vegetable grown, but the directions were so fully complied with that satisfactory conclusions could hardly be ascertained.

The department maintains an experiment station in Wisconsin, and another in Nebraska. It is doing everything possible to extend beet culture, and to instruct the people as to the best and most effective methods to be adopted. But if people do not follow the directions given, nor comply with the requirements asked for harvesting, reporting, etc., the department cannot be expected to lay before the country at large satisfactory conclusions.

THE MALAD STAKE.

On the 11th of June, last, in company with Apostle John W. Taylor, I left Salt Lake City to visit the Malad Stake of Zion in the interest of Church history. After traveling by rail 79 miles to Collinston station, Box Elder Co., we continued the journey by team to West Portage, 21 miles further, when we put up for the night with President Oliver C. Hoskins.

The following day we traveled 17 miles to Malad City, where we, on that and the next day (Sunday and Monday, June 12th and 13th) attended the quarterly conference of the Malad Stake of Zion, in connection with President Seymour B. Young, of the Seventies, who had preceded us. After the conference Apostle Taylor returned home, and I at once entered upon my historical labors by visiting all the settlements in the Stake and holding meetings with the people. After visiting West Portage, Woodruff, Cherry creek, Malad and St. John, I set out for the distant settlements of Rockland and Neeleyville, accompanied by four members of the High Council (Miles Hall, Jesse R. Dredge, Gervie Mansfield and David Hall) who went as home missionaries, and Sisters Alvirra A. Harrison and Mary E. Bollingbroke, who were out in the interest of the Y. L. M. I. A. and Primary associations. We held three meetings in Neeleyville on the 18th and three in Rockland on the 19th, had a good time and returned to Samaria on the 20th.

The Malad Stake of Zion embraces the northeast part of Box Elder county, Utah, and part of Oneida county, Idaho; it consists of ten wards and one branch, namely, the Portage, Washakie, North Plymouth and South Plymouth wards, in Utah, and the Woodruff, Malad, St. John, Samaria, Rockland and Neeleyville wards and the Cherry Creek branch in Idaho. The Stake contains 357 families, or 2148 members, consisting of 78 Seventies, 65 High Priests, 127 Elders, 12 Priests, 15 Teachers, 135 Deacons 1019 lay members and 790 children under eight years of age. Oliver Cromwell Hoskins, formerly Bishop of Portage, presides over the Stake, and John M. McCrary acts as his first and Wm. H. Gibbs as his second counselor. Wm. Anthony is stake clerk.

All the settlements, excepting Rockland and Neeleyville, lie within easy reach of the headquarters of the Stake, which are at West Portage, a flourishing little town situated in Box Elder county, on the west side of the Malad river, one and a half miles south of the northern boundary of Utah, and twenty-one miles northwest of Collinston, the nearest railway station. West Portage Ward includes a few scattered settlers residing on the east side of the river at what is locally called East Portage, first settled in 1854. The ward comprises 54 families, or 321 souls, under the presidency of Bishop Enoch Harris. West Portage was first settled in 1857.

Three miles southeast of Portage is the Indian town called Washakie, where about 250 Lamanites are engaged in tilling the soil and learning to live as white people do. They have a neat and commodious meeting house also used for school purposes, while most of their dwellings consist of small frame buildings, in the erection of which, as well as in the building of their meeting house, they received considerable assistance from the trustee-in-trust. A number of them also partly live in their wick-o-ups, which they pitch in their door yards. Moroni Ward, presides as Bishop over the Washakie ward, and is doing all in his power to teach the Lamanites the principles of the Gospel, as well as branches of industry; and it may be pleasing for some of the readers of the News to learn that these Indians in their farming operations are fully as successful as most of their white neighbors; they own considerable machinery and have good teams, as a rule, and they are getting more comfortable year after year. There is a good Sunday school taught in the Washakie ward, superintended by Ammon Pugaage, a Lamanite; and also a Y. M. I. A., presided over by Yegah Timbimo, another native; there is also a Relief Society.

The school population of Washakie consists of forty-seven children, namely thirty boys and seventeen girls, mostly Indians, between the ages of six and eighteen. The trustees of the Portage district school, of which Washakie is a part, receive as a special contribution from the government, $10 for every sixty days' attendance at school of each Indian child.

In the evening of June 21st, at Washakie, I had the privilege of speaking to the first Lamanite congregation that I ever addressed, and they listened very attentively when I related to them something about my late visit to the hill Cumorah, and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. My discourse was ably interpreted by an intelligent native known as Jim Brown, who, together with a number of other Lamanites understands English pretty well.

Beyond a low ridge, which separates Malad valley proper from the Bear River Flat lies the little village called Square town, or Plymouth, now the centre of North Plymouth ward recently organized. This place is eleven miles southeast of Portage, and ten miles north-east of Collinston. The North Plymouth ward numbers sixteen families or eighty-four souls, most of whom live in a scattered condition.

South of North Plymouth, embracing a large portion of the scattered settlers residing on this extensive tract of country known as Bear River Flats, is the South Plymouth ward, presided over by Myron J. Richards, a son of Apostle Franklin D. Richards. This ward, which until June 15, 1891, contained all the Saints in the original Plymouth ward, consists now of twenty-one families, or 102 souls; but besides these, there are a great many members of the Church who have a standing in other wards. Nearly all the farming done in this neighborhood is carried on without irrigation. In fact, dry farming has proven so successful during the last few years that even those who own land below the Bothwell canal recently constructed, claim that it don't pay for them to buy water from the company, as they can mature nearly as good a crop without irrigation as with it, and sometimes even better.

Steps are being taken to locate a town-site as a centre for the ward, but at present the meetings are held in a schoolhouse, located about two and a half miles northwest of Hempton's bridge, or four miles from Collinston station.

North of Portage, in Idaho, is the Woodruff ward, recently organized, the centre of which is a little hamlet, situated on Muddy creek on the east side of the Malad river, five miles northeast of West Portage. This ward has twenty-one families or one hundred and thirty-four souls, presided over by Bishop Joseph R. Harris. In this place, and in fact throughout the Malad Valley, dry farming is the rule, and it only requires the freight of an ordinary mortal to predict that in a few years every foot of land in this beautiful valley, clear up to the base of the steeper mountains will be reclaimed.

Two miles north of Muddy Creek is Glenderson creek and two miles still further Cheery creek. The settlers residing in a scattered condition on these two small streams, together with a few others residing opposite, on the west side of the Malad river, compose the Cheery Creek branch, of which John D. Jones has charge as presiding Elder. Ten families, or sixty-one souls constitute the "Mormon" population.

Malad ward embraces Malad City, and the Saints living of Two Mile creek and Four Mile creek, south, and up Deep creek, northeast, etc. Malad city, the county seat of Oneida county, Idaho, is pleasantly situated on Deep creek in the east side of Malad valley, on high rolling ground, overlooking the valley south and west. It is thirty-two miles northwest of Collinston, Utah, and twenty-seven miles southwest of Oneida, in Marsh valley, the two nearest railway stations. The population of Malad is about evenly balanced between "Mormons" and Gentiles, but peace and a wistful good understanding prevails among them, the former spirit of hatred and bitterness having gradually died away. The Saints here are building a fine and commodious meeting house in the west part of town, away from the business part of the place. They have already expended about $8000 in its erection but it will require about $3000 more to finish it. It is, however, so far completed now that meetings are being held in it. The building is a lumber one, eighty feet long from north to south, and forty-five feet wide. The centre tower is eighty-five feet high, besides which there are six other smaller ornamental towers. When finished in its details, it will be one of the finest meeting houses in our northern settlements. Jenkin Jones is the Bishop of the Malad ward, which has a total membership of 398, divided into 76 families; it is the largest ward in the Malad Stake.

Northeast of Malad City, along the main or longest branch of the Malad river, lies an extensive farming district, inhabited by upwards of one hundred families, but most of these are not members of the Church. What few Saints there are, have been organized into a ward under the name of St. John, over which James P. Harrison presides as Bishop; the membership is 170, or 23 families. The school house in which the Saints hold their meetings is situated on Devil creek, about two and half miles northeast of Malad City.

Samarita, the second largest ward in the Stake, is situated on the west side of the Malad Valley, seven and a half miles southwest of Malad City, and twelve miles northwest of Portage. Unlike Scriptural Samarita, which stood on a hill, this modern Samarita lies on a level tract of country, surrounded by good farming land. The majority of the Saints here as well as at Malad City are Welsh or of Welsh descent, and are as a rule very punctual in attending to their duties as Saints and citizens. Forty-six families, or 829 souls, constitute the population of Samarita, and Jonah Evans, presides over them.

The Rockland ward embraces the Saints residing on Rock creek, a tributary of the Snake river. To reach this place from Samarita, a distance of nearly fifty-five miles has to be traveled over mountain and dale in a northwesterly direction, and finally, after crossing the rim of the basin at the extreme upper end of Curlew valley, the head of Rock creek is reached. On this stream, in a scattered condition, live about thirty families of Saints, numbering 223 souls, together with quite a number who are not members of the Church. The low lands along the main stream measure only about half a mile in width on the average, but back of this, on either side of the creek, there is an undulating upland reaching for miles toward the mountains, where dry farming is carried on very successfully, and good grain is raised. Isaac Thorn is Bishop of the Rockland ward. The first settlement of the place dates back to 1878.

A journey of twelve miles in a northerly direction brings the traveler to a little settlement on Warm creek, near the banks of Snake river, called Neeleyville. It consists of 10 families or seventy-six souls, presided over by Bishop Wm. Neeley, who was the first settler here in 1881, and after whom the village has been named. The country around this place is somewhat broken and rolling, but there is room for quite a number of more settlers. Neeleyville is four miles southwest of the American Falls on Snake river, and on the Oregon Short Line, where, as well as in Pocatello, thirty miles distant, the people can readily dispose of their grain and vegetables. Neeleyville is the most distant settlement from the Stake headquarters, being about eighty miles northwest of West Portage.

After completing my labors in the Malad Stake, I returned to this city on the 24th ult. ANDREW JENSON.
July 6, 1892.

TOOLEE STAKE CONFERENCE.

The quarterly conference of the Toolee Stake of Zion convened at Grantsville July 23rd and 24th. Present on the stand: Apostles Lyman and Lund, Elder Karl G. Maeser, Presidency of the Stake and some of the Bishops.

Conference was called to order by President H. S. Gowan.

Bishops J. L. Wrathall, Thomas Atkin, and F. D. St. George reported the ward over which they preside to be in good condition.

President Gowan reported the condition of the Stake. He had visited each ward since last conference and found that the faith of the Saints was increasing.

Apostle Lyman occupied the remainder of the morning giving good instruction.

In the afternoon Apostle Lund spoke in regard to the settling of these valleys forty-five years ago, and said that this was the place where God meant to establish His Zion in the last days. He referred to the persecutions that the Saints had endured and the blessings in store for those who were faithful.

Brother K. G. Maeser occupied the remainder of the time, speaking upon Church schools and the proper education of the children of the Latter-day Saints.

On Sunday morning President G. Q. Cannon and J. F. Smith were present. President Smith occupied the whole of the time. He spoke upon the trials through which the Saints had passed during the last seven or eight years. The Lord was continuing His work and would do so until the final consummation of all things. He spoke upon the subject of education and said one of the most important duties devolving upon the Latter-day Saints was the proper education of their children.

At 1 p. m., after singing and prayer, the Sacrament was administered.

President Gowan presented the general authorities of the Church and Stake, and they were sustained unanimously.

President George Q. Cannon referred to the remarks made by President Joseph F. Smith. He hoped the Saints would carry out in their lives the instructions given, and those who did so would obtain their reward.

Conference adjourned for three months. THOMAS WILLIAMS, Assistant Clerk.

GRANTSVILLE, Toolee County, U. T., July 27th.

CORNER STONE OF ST. MARK'S HOSPITAL LAID.

A large throng of people attended the services connected with the laying of the corner stone of St. Mark's new hospital opposite the Warm Springs, last evening at 7 o'clock. Bishop Leonard conducted the exercises. After the reading the ritual of the church for such occasions, had been observed and the "Christian Soldier" had been sung Rector Norris read the list of articles deposited in the casket in the receptacle in the corner stone. It was as follows:

LIST OF CONTENTS.

History of the Hospital.
Names of all former trustees.
Names of present officers and trustees.
Names of medical staff.
Names of architects, contractors and superintendent and building committee.
Photographs of trustees and staff.
Photographs of deceased members of the board—Captain Lawrence, Dr. Hamilton, Rev. N. F. Putnam.
Photo of Bishop Tuttle, a former president.
Photo of the former and present patron.
Copies of the DESERET NEWS and Salt Lake Times of July 30, 1892.
Copies of the daily Tribune and Herald of July 1, 1892.
Copy of the Bible, Book of Common Prayer and Hymnal.
Order of services used on this occasion.
Copy of the Churchman for July 23rd, Standard, July 23rd, Living Church, July 16, 1892, the Church Notes for July, 1892, and the Fourth Annual Report of the Missionary Bishop of Nevada and Utah.

THE STONE LAID.

The box containing the above articles was then placed in the 104 inch cubical space cut for it, and the 2300 pounds of stone swung into position and dropped down over the box. On the stone is cut "St. Mark's Hospital, 1892."

The Bishop then officially laid the stone.

HISTORY OF THE HOSPITAL.

Ex-Mayor Scott then read the following historical paper:

The history of St. Mark's Hospital is briefly told. Its origin dates back some twenty years. After a dinner party given at the residence of Bishop Tuttle, the importance and necessity of such an institution was discussed by Major E. Wilkes, the Rev. R. M. Kirby and Dr. J. F. Hamilton. At that time, although an important industry, silver mining was in its infancy in this Territory. Major Wilkes was employing quite a large force of men, however, in the Miller mine, and the Emma was a noted mine in the Territory. Major Wilkes had noticed the evil effects of lead upon men while engaged in the production of silver bullion, and was anxious that something should be done for their relief. Accordingly it was resolved to make the beginning of a hospital. A building was rented on Fifth East near Fourth South, and one or two beds were provided, and these were soon increased to twenty.

Among the early friends of the hospital, besides those already mentioned, was Mr. Warren Husey, who was always ready and willing to aid this or other deserving public enterprises with his means and counsel.

As all the gentlemen concerned in the inauguration of the enterprise were connected with St. Mark's Parish, the hospital naturally took the name of St. Mark. The management of the institution was put in the hands of the Rev. R. M. Kirby, and to his interest and effort a very large share of the success of the enterprise must be attributed.

The hospital passed through many vicissitudes during the first seven years of its life; it had a doubtful sort of hold upon life during these years, as is usually the case with such enterprises, but friends were determined that it should succeed and stood by it bravely in all its trials.

The Rev. Mr. Froust and his estimable wife came very early in its history to the internal management of its affairs, and Mrs. Froust remained in charge as matron until the summer of 1891, looking after the comfort of its inmates with a mother's disinterested love.

In 1879 the time seemed favorable for the purchase of a permanent home, and the present location, at the corner of Fifth East and Third South, was secured through the generosity of friends and certain mining companies. On June 14th of this year an incorporation was effected, the first stockholders and trustees being R. M. Kirby, secretary and treasurer; M. E. Holden, president; D. S. Tuttle, R. C. Chambers, W. G. Gallager, George R. Ayers and George A. Lowe. Of this number R. C. Chambers and George A. Lowe have been trustees from the date of incorporation to the present moment, and are still deeply interested in all of its affairs.

Thus organized, the hospital began its work as a corporation.

Dr. J. F. Hamilton, from the time of the inception of the hospital to the day of his death, was the medical director. His interest in it was constant. It seemed like a child to him, and much of his time and thought were given to its care. It was certainly right and proper that the trustees should resolve, at a recent meeting, to make the first general ward which shall be erected here a memorial to him, and it is hoped that his many friends in this Territory will be glad to show their appreciation of him by contributing generously to the erection of the proposed ward.

In all the years of the hospital's life the trustees have been very few. In addition to the names of those already mentioned are found those of Josiah Lawrence, F. W. Billings, C. M. Armstrong, H. C. Hill, H. C. Wallace, R. H. Terhune, Abiel Leonard, N. F. Putnam, F. W. Norris and George M. Scott.

After Mr. Kirby's resignation, which was deeply regretted by the entire board, all of whom felt that he was a man to whom much was due on account of his exceeding wise management, the Rev. C. M. Armstrong was chosen as superintendent and treasurer. Mr. Armstrong continued in this position until 1889, when, by reason of ill health, he was compelled to remove from the Territory.

At the annual meeting held June 8, 1889, the Rev. N. F. Putnam was chosen secretary and treasurer. Mr. Putnam threw his whole energy into the work of the hospital and very speedily brought it to the point of the greatest usefulness and success. His administration of the affairs of the hospital cannot be too warmly commended. At the annual meeting of the stockholders held in 1890 a most excellent financial showing was made, to the great delight of the stockholders, who at once passed a resolution thanking Mr. Putnam in the warmest way possible for his admirable management. Mr. Putnam died in 1891. In his death the hospital sustained a great loss. He had not only given his time and attention to its affairs, but had thought and planned for its enlargement, and the fact that we are engaged in the erection of this building is due in large part to his foresight and excellent financial management. He and Bishop Leonard arranged for the purchase of these lots in this splendid situation in the summer of 1890, but it was not permitted him to see the realization of his desire in the erection of this building.

In June, 1891, the Rev. F. W. Norris was elected secretary and treasurer. His management, also, of the affairs of the hospital has been the most admirable. To him the institution is indebted for continued good management.

In the early part of the present year the matter of the erection of a new building was discussed and plans therefor were prepared by Messrs. Thompson and Weigel, and at a meeting of the board held on June 8, 1892, the bid of T. K. Lloyd and Burton, Gardner & Company for the erection of the building was accepted and work ordered to begin. F. H. Perkins was chosen as superintendent of the work.

The hospital owes a great debt of gratitude to the mining companies of Utah, whose managers have always been staunch friends. Without their aid it would have been impossible to carry on the work. In years to come the trustees hope to be in a position to care for the miners in their new building in a much more acceptable manner than has hitherto been possible.

This account of the origin and progress of the work in St. Mark's Hospital brings us down to this moment, where we are met under the protection of Almighty God to lay the corner-stone of a building which, we trust, may be merely one of a group of buildings, in which men's bodies may be cared for by competent medical skill, and where prayer shall ascend to God for His blessing upon the remedies employed.

We beseech for the institution the interest, the sympathy and the aid of those who shall see these walls rise. As the years go on may the number of those who shall share in its blessings increase, and may such excellent results in the medical treatment be secured, and may there be such a host of friends and such financial aid given that the benefits therein received may be accorded to all who need without money and without price.

R. H. TERHUNE

delivered an appropriate speech, after which a paper from Dr. Standard was read. Rector Norris and Bishop Leonard also spoke and the ceremonies ended.

SIZE AND CAPACITY OF THE STRUCTURE.

The hospital is being erected on a commanding site near the Warm Springs.

The size of the building is 74x91 feet, three stories, pressed brick front with Kyune stone trimmings. It will cost $35,000 and accommodate 200 patients. The institution will be ready in December.

The trustees of the hospital are: The Rt. Rev. Abel Leonard, S. T. D., president; Rev. Frederic W. Norris, secretary and treasurer; R. C. Chambers, George A. Lowe, H. C. Wallace, R. H. Terhune, George M. Scott.

The medical staff is as follows: A. C. Standart, M. D., medical director; A. C. McLean, M. D., T. B. Beatty, M. D., surgeons; F. S. Baascom, M. D., J. C. Elliot, M. D., gynecologists; G. W. Foster, M. D., Lorrin Hall, M. D., general practice; G. B. Ploutz, oculist and aurist.

ANOTHER BEAR ADVENTURE.

Scarcely had the sad news of the death of young Negale in Mexico, by the embraces of a bear, passed from our minds than the information comes of the hairbreadth escape from a similar fate of a son of President Seegmiller of Sevier Stake, Sevier County.

Last Saturday night, the 23rd inst., the young man and some others were at Fish Lake, Sevier County. The father of young Seegmiller had cautioned the boys to see to their animals at night and in the early morning, lest they should lose them in the high mountains. Late in the evening (the others declining to accompany him) young Seegmiller took his departure, passing through the timber to where the horses were ranging. Just about where the horses should be he espied something moving in the dark, close by him.

Supposing it to be one of the horses he punched it with his shotgun. It was a bear which instantly "slapped" him in the face, scratching the flesh, tearing his shirt and other clothing, and wounding his breast. The visitor very quickly jumped behind a tree. The bear faced him, however, with paws extended and a ferocious roar. Young Seegmiller states that the Mexican horror passed like a panorama before him. He realized that something desperate must be done, and that quickly. The only charge he had with him was in his gun, and that was duck shot. He flung right into the bear's mouth. No doubt the powder burned his eyes for a time, for he retreated—and so did the boy with the horses to camp. Mr. Bruhn had started on his track again, but fortunately he had reached camp without further harm. Had he been only one inch nearer when he struck the monster in the face he would doubtless have been in the bear's grasp.

EDWARD STEVENSON.

BIG COTTONWOOD, Salt Lake County, Utah, July 29th.

THE UTAH WORLD'S FAIR BILL.

In the United States House of Representatives, July 28th, Mr. Washington called up for consideration the bill to enable the people of the Territory of Utah to provide for the collection, arrangement and display of the products of said Territory at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893. The bill was read. It recites, in a preamble, the action of the thirtieth session of the Utah Legislature, the veto of the Governor, the absence of power in the Legislature to pass a bill over the Governor's absolute veto, and the fact that the Assembly will not be convened again in time to take further action. The provisions of the bill are the same as those made by the Legislature. Some questions were asked as to the payment of expenses, which Mr. Washington answered by showing that they were all to be paid by the Territory. The following is taken from the Congressional Record of July 27th:

Mr. Washington.—Mr. Speaker, this bill is entirely local to the Territory of Utah and it is only before this House because of the fact that the Territorial legislature of Utah and the governor disagreed in regard to the manner of appointing the commissioners named in the bill to carry out the purpose and object of the legislature of the Territory, which was to make a Territorial exhibit at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago. The governor of the Territory vetoed the bill because he said the bill named, as it does, some six or eight commissioners, and that the naming of commissioners was contrary to the organic act of the Territory; that under the organic act of the Territory the governor was the sole and only power to appoint all Territorial officers. Therefore he vetoed the bill. Under the organic act the veto of the governor of that Territory is absolute. The Legislature can not pass any bill over his veto. The Legislature may be ready to unanimously vote for the passage of a bill which the governor has vetoed, but notwithstanding such a majority the Legislature would be powerless. Hence no course was left to them but to come to Congress and ask us to legalize the act of the Territorial Legislature of Utah appropriating $50,000 out of the Territorial treasury, and appointing a number of commissioners, whom I am informed by the best citizens of the Territory are impartially selected from Republicans and Democrats, from Gentiles and Mormons alike, to carry out the purposes of the act. That is all there is in the bill.

Mr. Wilson, of Washington.—Under the organic act, does the power of appointment lie in the governor of the Territory?

Mr. Washington.—The governor takes that position. He claims that the commissioners could not be created or named by the Legislature. There are a number of decisions of the courts throughout the country to the contrary, interpreting just such provisions as that which is contained in the organic act of the Territory of Utah, but the question is a debatable one. The authorities differ, although we have a greater number of authorities to sustain the position taken by the Territorial Legislature; they could create these commissioners, and name them in the act.

Mr. Wilson of Washington.—What I am endeavoring to find out is whether there is an attempt on the part of the Legislature to take away from the executive the power to make these appointments.

Mr. Washington.—No, I can not say that there was. The Legislature in both branches passed the bill without objection, and named the commissioners, just as in the bills which we are asked to pass here. We frequently pass bills through Congress naming commissioners to carry out the will of Congress.

Mr. Dalsell.—Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. Washington.—Certainly. I will always yield with pleasure to the gentleman from Pennsylvania, who yielded to me so graciously on one occasion when I was invited to defend my State from what I considered an unjust charge made by him.

Mr. Dalsell.—As I understand this matter, the Legislature wanted to appoint commissioners, and the governor wanted to appoint commissioners; neither would yield to the other, and this bill was brought in to solve the difficulty. Now, are the commissioners here named the ones that the governor wanted, or are they the commissioners that the Legislature wanted?

Mr. Washington.—The gentleman's statement of the case is about as far as could be made, down to the point where he asks whether these are the commissioners that the governor wanted. I think that the governor wanted to appoint some of these named in the bill; but I think he wanted also to appoint certain other persons. It was not the persons named in the act, as I understand it, to which the governor objected, so much as to the legality of the act creating and at the same time nominating the commissioners. The governor took the position that the Legislature might create an office, but that the governor alone could nominate the officer and the Legislature could affirm or reject his appointees. Here is what he says in his veto message:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
March 10, 1892.

Sir—I return C. F. No. 29, entitled "An act to provide for the collection, arrangement and display of the products of the Territory of Utah at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, and to make an appropriation therefor, and to provide for an additional levy of Territorial taxes."

The provisions of the act with regard to the appointment of Territorial commissioners seem to me to be in conflict with section 7 of the organic act. If it is amended in this respect I will approve it. I am, very respectfully,

ARTHUR L. THOMAS,
Governor.

Hon. W. H. King, President of the Council, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Section 7 of the organic act, to which the message refers, reads:

Sec. 7. That all township, district and county officers not herein otherwise provided, shall be appointed or elected, as the case may be, in such manner as shall be provided by the governor and legislative assembly of the Territory of Utah. The governor shall nominate and, by and with the advice of the legislative council, appoint all officers not herein otherwise provided for.

Mr. Dalsell.—Well, are the commissioners here named the commissioners that were named by the Legislature?

Mr. Washington.—They are the commissioners named by the Legislature. I think it would have been a little better if the Legislature and the governor could have agreed upon the matter at home, so that their line would not have to be washed here; but they could not agree and they ask us to pass this bill so that the Territory may have an exhibit at the World's Exposition.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—Mr. Speaker, I understand from the reading of the bill that the compensation of the commissioners is limited to their traveling expenses and $4 a day for subsistence, but I did not catch anything in the reading which seemed to set a limit upon the compensation to be paid to the commissioner who is to reside in Chicago, or to the other officers. There does not seem to be any limitation as to the amount which the board may vote them. Am I correct as to that?

Mr. Washington.—I can not state positively until I look at the bill. The bill is before the House just as it was passed by the Territorial Legislature, and we may presume that they guarded the expenditures carefully. My recollection is that the amount to be paid to the commissioner at Chicago is limited in the act.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—I did not hear the limitation. I am quite confident there is no limitation as to the amount that may be paid to the other officers.

Mr. Smith of Arizona.—If my friend from New Jersey will permit a suggestion, may we not assume that the men who are paying these taxes are very likely to guard against any undue expenditure?

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—Oh, but we are called upon to legislate upon this matter now on account of their disagreement at home, and we want to base our judgment upon ascertained facts. Another question. I see that this bill doubles the tax rate, raises it from 2 mills to 4 mills. Is that increase deemed necessary in order to raise this $50,000?

Mr. Washington.—That was considered necessary by the Legislature in order to raise this fund of $50,000.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—It does not interfere with the regular rate, except for the purpose of raising this loan?

Mr. Washington.—Not at all. It does not interfere with any other tax in the Territory, and unless this bill becomes operative the additional tax does not become operative. The object of the provision was to guard against creating a bonded debt upon the Territory. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the previous question on the bill.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—Before I vote for the bill I would like to be better satisfied as to the limitation upon the compensation to be paid to these parties. We are getting very careful in the latter days, since we passed on economical resolutions at the beginning of the session.

Mr. Washington.—If the gentleman will get a copy of the bill he will see that section 4 regulates the salaries.

Mr. Taylor of Illinois.—The World's Fair managers fix the salaries.

Mr. Washington.—Section 4 of the bill provides as follows:

That the board of the World's Fair managers is authorized and directed to appoint an executive commissioner and fix his salary, which shall be payable monthly out of the appropriation hereinafter made; and said executive commissioner shall be authorized and required to assume and exercise, subject to the supervision of said board, all such executive powers and functions as may be necessary to secure a complete and creditable display of the interests of the Territory at the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893; and, as the executive agent of said board, he shall have personal charge of the solicitation, collection, transportation, arrangement, and the exhibition of the objects sent under the authority of the Territory to the World's Columbian Exposition of 1893, and of objects sent by individual citizens of the Territory as may be by them placed in his charge. He shall make a report to the board monthly, and shall hold office at the pleasure of the board.

The bill does not fix this salary, but leaves to the commissioners the power to fix it.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—That settles that office, but how about the others?

Mr. Washington.—There is no other salary to be fixed; there are certain allowances to the commissioners for traveling and other expenses.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—The bill provides that the board shall elect certain officers; and there is a provision that the members of the board who are not officers shall not be entitled to compensation, I believe.

Mr. Washington.—Section 3 provides "that the members of the board appointed under this act who are not officers thereof shall not be entitled to any compensation for their services."

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—What will these other officers get?

Mr. Washington.—The only other officer, as I understand, is the commissioner to reside at Chicago. The provision of section 3 is:

That the members of the board appointed under this act who are not officers thereof shall not be entitled to any compensation for their services out of the Territorial treasury, except their actual expenses for transportation and the sum of $4 per day for subsistence for each day they are necessarily absent from their homes on the business of said board.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—Section 2 provides, after naming the commissioners, that they "shall meet at such time as they may appoint, and organize by the election of a president, a vice-president, a secretary, and a treasurer." Now, there is nothing in this bill, so far as I see, to prevent this board from voting whatever salary they may please to this secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Washington.—I should think we could afford to leave this matter to the control of the people of the Territory. If they care to make an exhibit at Chicago, they, of course, would not be willing that the $50,000 appropriated for the purpose should all be expended by the commission in salaries.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—But if we are to pass this bill it ought to be put in a satisfactory shape.

Mr. Washington.—The authorities of Utah have not asked us to adopt any restriction in this matter. If the gentleman wants to submit any provision of that kind, the bill is open to amendment. I did not suppose any objection of that kind would be raised, because there is no purpose to spend any money needlessly in salaries.

Mr. Buchanan of New Jersey.—I was only trying to understand the effect of the bill.

Mr. Washington.—I ask for a vote.

The question being taken, the bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; and it was accordingly read the third time and passed.

THE HOMESTEAD RIOTS.

HOMESTEAD, July 26.—Hugh O'Donnell will resign the chairmanship of the Advisory Committee because of a disagreement of the committee in refusing to approve almost unconditionally the surrender of the fight on hand. O'Donnell had expressed himself as anxious for a settlement even if it had to be at a sacrifice. He authorized newspaper men to go to Superintendent Potter and ascertain upon what terms the old men could return to work. Potter said he would not take back certain ones of the old men under any circumstance. This rebuff will undoubtedly cause O'Donnell's resignation. Superintendent Potter told the mediators there was no vindictiveness in the company's dealings with the men, but they would not take back certain strikers. The men wouldn't be questioned about their membership in any organization, but would be required to sign an agreement on an individual scale based upon the $23 tariff. The mediators were assured that the places of the old men were being rapidly filled, and Superintendent Potter expressed regret when he heard of O'Donnell's efforts with the committee.

CHICAGO, June 27.—A Homestead special says it is evident that the Carnegie company is able to operate its mills under the protection of militia, but there are other means of fighting, according to a member of the advisory committee, who said:

"We will not, under any circumstances, permit those mills to run, if there is any agency which may be employed to prevent it. We have already selected men who will go into those mills as fast as they can obtain employment, who are instructed and sworn to carry out our orders in consummating the policy which we have agreed upon. What we are sure there is no longer any hope for our representatives in those mills will place explosives where they will do the most harm to the machinery. We have definitely determined that those mills shall not be operated with non-union men, and one of the principal ways to prevent it is to either control or wreck the property. I might say a great deal more, but under the circumstances I have gone as far as I dare."

PITTSBURG, July 27.—It has just been learned that an attempt was made to blow up the Carnegie Union mills of this city. During the absence of the engineer some one turned on unlighted gas in the furnaces. Discovery of the fact was made in time to prevent an explosion. One hundred and fifty men were in the department at the time and many lives would have been lost. Beavers say there are five hundred anarchists in Pittsburgh and one thousand in Western Pennsylvania.

The police are keeping a strict lookout for anarchists, and Inspector McKelvey says Bigman is only a tool of the conspirators; that the anarchists are getting ready to carry out gigantic schemes, and that an attempt would have been made upon the lives of several prominent citizens. This afternoon two anarchists, Charles Fluster and August Tirnowk of Allegheny, called at the station to see Bauer. They were arrested.

Thirty-six informations were made against strikers this afternoon by Secretary Lovejoy for aggravated riot and warrants were issued. Seven arrests were made this evening.

PITTSBURG, July 28.—On the hearing of Sylvester Critchlow, one of the Homestead strikers this morning for release on bail, several witnesses swore they saw Critchlow load and fire a gun at the barges. Judge Mages refused to admit him to bail on the grounds that his acts were too close to murder in the first degree. His attorneys claim that he was not there.

Finley and Pirnock, the suspected Anarchists who were arrested yesterday, were released today, there being no evidence against them. The authorities say the Anarchists are thoroughly frightened. Deputy sheriffs are scouring Homestead to arrest men against whom warrants are out. Most of them have disappeared. Three Anarchists gained admission to the mill some days ago, but were discovered distributing Anarchist literature and driven out. The officers are hunting for them, but they have disappeared. Hugh O'Donnell has gone away, his wife says on private business.

PITTSBURG, July 28.—The Carnegie Company has prepared a scale for the Union mills and Beaver Falls plant which the new men or former men who return will be required to sign. The average will be the same as the Amalgamated, but no association will be recognized. At the Homestead plant the force is steadily increasing.

An Associated Press representative went through this morning and found fully seven hundred men at work. Three heavy plates were rolled before his eyes and seemingly with ease—the work being specially directed toward naval contracts. Superintendent Potter says they have all the laborers and yard men they want, and that it is astonishing how rapidly some new men are learning the work which the strikers asserted could not possibly be done by even skilled workmen, because they had no knowledge of the machinery.

Frick's condition is favorable. Counsel for the strikers started this evening that the proposed suits against Frick, Potter and Lovejoy for conspiracy had not been abandoned, but nothing would be done until Frick recovered. The police do not expect any more arrests of anarchists at present. Inspector McKelvey said the matter had been taken up by the police authorities all over the United States, and anarchists were being watched. The matter aroused the country and the police of each city have decided to find out just how strong the anarchists are. No one here had any idea of the number there were here.

It is reported today that Jones & Laughlin of the American Iron Works have decided to take issue with the Amalgamated association. The works are among the largest in the country and the employ 3500 men. B. F. Jones, the principal owner, ex-chairman of the National Republican Committee.

PITTSBURG, July 29.—The theory of the riot on the train from Cincinnati yesterday, bringing men to Homestead, is the invention of a tramp printer, and wholly untrue. The men on the train are all at work in Homestead.

The great strike has been on a month; it is estimated that the loss of all kinds, so far, is over one million dollars. The strike is seriously affecting business in the town, as many merchants have not capital to grant long credit. One grocery man failed this morning. Non-union men are receiving many threatening letters.

HOMESTEAD, July 30.—Sixty workmen's families occupying company houses, who were served with eviction notices several days ago, moved out today. The Carnegie people claim that they wanted only to damage the houses since ordered out. The houses will at once be put in repair for the non-union men, and additional houses will be built. Meanwhile, arrangements are made to accommodate 2000 men in the works. Eight hundred and seventy-three men are now at work. The advisory committee of the strikers say they will be able to induce half of these to quit next week.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 30.—Gen. Snowden has returned from Homestead and says that few people understand the situation accurately, as there has been practical press censorship and the correspondents have been prevented from describing the situation as it actually exists. He says the trouble is by no means over, the men merely being overtaken by the presence of the military. As long as this state of affairs exists a brigade of troops will remain on the ground. The strikers are full of threats, and declare they will have the lives of the non-union men as soon as the military leave. They believe the works belong to them as much as to the Carnegie company. General Snowden says he ordered Private Tams to be disgraced and drummed out of the camp, but declines to say what his opinion is as to the tying him up by the thumbs, though he intimates the punishment was deserved, as his act was treason in a time of actual revolution.

PITTSBURG, July 30.—Secretary Lovejoy says the company will have fifteen hundred men at the works in the Homestead mill on Monday, and they will be able to start up all the departments, and by the end of the week be running in full. Many skilled men are at work, including fifty old hands. As soon as Homestead is going in full force other mills will be started.

The re-use of Judge Magell to admit Critchlow to bail scared the other rioters for whom warrants are out, and they have nearly all left town.

Frick is now pronounced out of danger.

PITTSBURG, July 31.—Carnegie will make an effort in the morning to resume operation at the Upper Union mills in this city. The company has requested police guard. The strikers say a guard is not necessary, as they do not intend to commit any breach of the peace. It is probable that an attempt will be made to start the Duquesne plant soon.

HOMESTEAD, July 30.—The eviction today and the attendant suffering due to the storms had a depressing effect upon the community. Tonight a number of evicted men were loud in their denunciation of the firm. A large number of evicted families are tonight quartered in other houses by reason of their own bedding being ruined. The relief committee has taken the matter in hand. Company officials assert that over nine hundred men are now in the mill. A riot was narrowly avoided last night at Lawrenceville near Union mills. A crowd of about a non union man from Homestead. The police saved his life with difficulty.

Considerable excitement was created in camp last night by a rumor that an attack would be made from the rear on the camp of Battery B. There is a regular settlement of foreigners in a narrow valley back of Battery B., the headquarters of fully fifty or sixty families. Nearly all of them are anarchistic and pronounced enemies of the guardsmen. The military are exercising great vigilance. It seems to be a general feeling among the townspeople outside of the association that the strike will soon be declared off. The Carnegie company are continually putting in non-union men. Preparations are being made at Duquesne to resume with non-union men on Monday. The strikers, however, are confident that the firm will be unable to get men to start the plant.

The Wayne Iron Company signed the amalgamated scale today. Knold and Bauer, the Allegheny anarchists, had a hearing at Pittsburgh today, at the conclusion of which they were held for trial in $2,000 bonds each. Testimony was given by the police and other witnesses as to the incendiary literature circulated by the men, their communication with Max Bergman, etc. A detective told of finding rifles, revolvers and a large supply of ammunition in Bauer's residence. A translation of one of the circulars was read. It told how to make bombs. More arrests are likely.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 1.—It is announced that those who participated in the brutal attack on the Pinkertons after the surrender July 6th, will be prosecuted for aggravated assault and battery, highway robbery, larceny, pocket-picking and other crimes and misdemeanors. It is stated that several women were particularly active during the time the men ran the gauntlet, and after they were taking their property and hiding it. They also are to be prosecuted.

The Amalgamated association condemned this occurrence and is said to be aiding in gathering evidence against the offenders. The Pinkerton agency will take part in the prosecution by furnishing evidence of the men who were assaulted and robbed.

The hundred deputies on guard at the mills now will be increased to 300 shortly. Superintendent Potter says there are enough arms in the mill to arm all their workers if necessary. The upper Union mills started up with non union men this morning. No trouble occurred.

General Superintendent Potter claims there was a break in the ranks of the strikers in the mechanical department last night, and that twenty-five of the best skilled workmen returned to work this morning. The committee of strikers at the gate when the men went in assert that but eight of 1200 men in the mechanical department have broken away. It is said that there are now several strikers in the mill, influencing the non unionists to quit. This plan was adopted with great success in 1892, when the whole turn of strikers went back to work and soon organized all non-unionists, taking them out in another fight.

It is said that the Pinkertons will also prefer charges against the men engaged in the riot on July 6th. It is claimed that they have the names of three hundred participants and will charge them with aggravated

RIOT AND ASSAULT.

W. J. Brennan, the attorney of the Amalgamated Association, owing to the court not being in session, will not present until tomorrow the petition under the trade tribunal act of 1883, providing for the settlement of wage disputes by arbitration.

HOMESTEAD, Aug. 1.—The company announces that twenty-seven old men applied and have been granted positions to-day; also that over one hundred men came in from the East. The influx of unskilled workmen, Superintendent Potter says, has been so great that he telegraphed to send no more for the present. "We have broken the strike," said he.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 2.—Bauer and Knold made an application for release on bail this morning. Judge Ewing fixed the bail at $5000 and Attorney Friedman expects to secure bondsmen today.

It is rumored that information will be made against H. C. Frick some time today on the charge of conspiracy and that he will be arrested before night. * The information is made by the Amalgamated Association.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Aug. 2.—There is great activity among the leaders today to prevent the weakening of the strikers of the mechanical department and their returning to work, and a meeting has been called for this afternoon. The Amalgamated Association still contends that if the Homestead men stand firm the company can never find men who can operate the machinery. Manager Potter says he has received 22 men from Baltimore, Philadelphia and Cincinnati this morning, many of whom are experienced and skilled workmen. In addition he says seven of the old men have applied and been taken back.

The committee of strikers this morning attempted to persuade the railroad engineers at Munnhall to refuse to haul freight into the yards but failed. The engineer stated that the railroad men were in sympathy with the strikers, but they could not jeopardize their positions by such actions.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 2.—W. J. Brennan, representing the amalgamated association made application before Judge Ewing today for the appointment of voluntary trade tribunal to settle the Homestead trouble. The petition was signed by sixty-seven former employees of the Carnegie company. Judge Ewing made order for a provisional license for the tribunal as provided for in the act where the request is made by employees only. If the Carnegie company does not sign the petition in sixty days it will be dismissed.

Attorney Rex stated this afternoon that it had been decided to bring suits against Frick, Lovejoy and Potter at once for conspiracy. The charges are founded upon the introduction of Pinkertons.

TEMPERANCE.

(Originally printed in a newspaper and reproduced in Carlos Martyn's life of Wendell Phillips.)

One beautiful afternoon in August, there came to me the heart-broken wife of a State prison convict. We tried to plan for his pardon and restoration to home and the world. It was a very sad case. He was the only surviving son of a very noble man—one who lived only to serve the poor, the temple and the criminal.

All he had, all he was, he gave unreservedly to help thieves and drunkards. His house was their home. His name their bail to save them from prison. His reward their reformation. It was a happy hour to hear him tell of the hundreds he had absolved from the contamination and evil example of prison, and of the large proportion he had good reason to believe permanently saved. Out of hundreds, he once told me, only two left him to pay their bail, forfeited by neglect to show themselves in court according to agreement—only two!

Bred under such a roof, the son started in life with a generous heart, noble dreams, and high purpose. Ten years of prosperity, fairly earned by energy, industry and character, ended in bankruptcy, as is so often the case in our risky and changing trade; there came a struggle for business, for brain, temptation, despair, intemperance. He could not safely pass the open doors that tempted him to indulgence, forgetfulness and crime. How hard his wife wrought and struggled to save him from indulgence, and then to shield him from exposure! How long wife, sister and friends labored to avert conviction and the State prison! "I would spare him gladly," wrote the prosecuting attorney, "if he could stop drinking. He shall never go to prison if he will be a sober man. But all this wretchedness a crime comes from rum."

Manfully did the young fellow struggle to resist the appetite. Again and again did he promise, and keep his promise perhaps a month, then fall. He could not walk the streets and earn his bread soberly, while so many open doors—opened by men who sought to coin gold out of their neighbors' vices—lured him to indulgence. So reluctantly, the state pressed on, and he went to prison. An honored name disgraced, a loving home broken up, a wide circle of kindred sorely pained, a worthy, well-meaning man wrecked. "Sorrow and crime—all comes from rum," says the keen-sighted lawyer.

As I started from the sad wife on my doorstep, I looked beyond, and close by the laughing sea stood a handsome cottage. The grounds were laid out expensively and with great taste. Over the broad piazza hung lazily an Eastern hammock, while all around were richly painted chairs and lounges of every easy and tempting form. Overhead were quaint vases of beautiful flowers, and the delicious lawn was bordered with them. On the lawn itself gayly-dressed women laughed merrily over croquet, and noisy children played near. A span of superb horses pawed the earth impatiently at the gate, while gay salutations passed between the croquet players and the fashionable equipages that rolled by. It was a scene of beauty, comfort, taste, luxury and wealth. All came from rum. Silks and diamonds, flowers and equipage, stately roof and costly attendance, all came from rum. The owner was one who, in a great city, coined his gold out of the vices of his fellow men!

To me it was a dissolving view. I lost sight of the gay women, the frolicsome children, the impatient horses and the ocean rolling up to the lawn. I saw instead the pale convict in his cell 12 feet by 9; the sad wife going from judge to attorney, from court to governor's council, begging mercy for her over-tempted husband. I heard above the children's noise, the croquet, laugh and the surf waves, that lawyer's stern reason for exacting the full penalty of the law—all this comes from rum!

MEN AND WOMEN.

(Mrs. M. G. Van Rensselaer, in the Forum for July.)

It is the narrow, superficial education of women which leads them to maintain that there is "no difference" between themselves and men, or that men's normal opportunities are loftier than their own, and which consequently makes them envy men and desire to step into their place. The really educated woman, the one whose mind really knows and thinks, can comprehend better than anyone else the true meaning and glory of womanhood, the true importance of its peculiar responsibilities, the true value and charm of its peculiar privileges; for she alone is able to attest and appraise these things, and, moreover, she has learned that the growth of civilization implies a progressive specialization of capabilities and efforts, and that the advancement of women has meant a steady departure from that primitive, barbaric state where men and women were not more widely differentiated than are male and female animals today. If she claims a share in the man's right to the higher education, it is first of all that she may be fitted to do work which a man cannot possibly do, and may help the world along in a way that is parallel, not identical, with his.

The normal man must have, in some shape, the companionship of woman, and he needs it just because it is never precisely the same in flavor as companionship with other men. It is normal and desirable that even the love of a brother for his sister, of a son for his mother, father for his daughter, of man—young or old—for the woman outside his family who is his sincerest and affectionate friend, should be tinged with a sentiment which does not exist in his feeling for his brother, his father, his son, or his masculine friend. This is normal and desirable, and, fortunately, quite inevitable. And the same things are true in a converse sense; they are true of the feelings which women have toward men.

But there is a vast difference between this kind of sentiment, from which almost everything that has meant progress for the world has sprung, and that stronger kind of sentiment or that more foolish kind of sentimentality wherein dangers great and small reside. And when the minds of women interest and satisfy men as much as their bodies and souls,

I think the fundamental, universal sentiment will persist and even develop, that the stronger kind will be better regulated, and that the more foolish kind will decrease. Married men, I am sure, will be happier with their wives. Unmarried men will choose their wives more wisely; or, if the lightning of love still strikes at random, the bolt will more often be thrown by a sensible as well as a charming young woman.

And when associating with women whom they do not think of marrying, all men will be less apt than they are today to feel that sentimentality is expected of them or is likely to be offered to them. And, once more, as it will be with men, so, conversely, it will be with women. Often today there is small common ground for that intimacy between men and women to which nature prompts except sentimental ground. When the field of companionship and the danger of an undue cultivation of the sentimental tract will be decreased.

When women have taught men that they want and value real friendship, that they can be loyal, interesting and profitable friends in the same sense that men are to one another, yet always with that delicate flavor of difference which will make feminine friendship desirable, no matter how much masculine friendship may be at hand, then men will not be so ready to drop into the attitude of lovers or of make-believe lovers. Yet there will be lovers enough, for this instinct is even more imperious than the instinct toward friendship. And once the lover is transformed into the husband, there will be a better chance of lifelong constancy.

Moreover, in true friendship, based upon mental parity, people are not limited to comrades of their own age, with whom, of course, the dangers of sentimentality are greatest. An intelligent old woman can have true comradeship with intelligent young men outside her family as well as within it. And it is hard to say whether in such relationships the benefit is greater to the woman or the man; to the woman whom they may keep young and fresh and useful; or to the man whom they may train and form, restrain and inspire, and to whom they may give an idea of feminine possibilities which will serve him well when choosing for himself a wife.

TOOLEE STAKE CONFERENCE.

The quarterly conference of the Box Elder Stake of Zion, convened in the Brigham City tabernacle on July 24th. Meetings were not held Saturday and Sunday, as per notice in the News, for the reason that previous to his appearance a notice was published by the local paper that the conference would be held on the regular days, Sunday and Monday, but in pursuance to the News notice, no meeting was held Monday (Pioneer day).

Conference was called to order on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock by President Clawson; singing by the congregation; prayer by Bishop A. A. Jansen. Singing.

Stake President R. Clawson delivered an interesting discourse on the Progress of the Saints and spoke in favor of the Church schools.

President J. Goulden Kimball delivered an instructive discourse, showing how the Lord blessed and stood by the faithful.

Elder Crandal Dunn spoke briefly. Patriarch Daniel Burba:kar referred to the Prophet Joseph and spoke of old times.

Singing, and benediction by C. J. Rohmer.

The afternoon services began by singing; prayer by Bishop Thomas Harper; singing. The sacrament was administered.

Apostle A. H. Cannon delivered a highly instructive address. He referred to the numerous blessings which God is bestowing upon the Saints.

Elder George Reynold advised the Latter-day Saints to be on guard and look to the care and training of their children.

President Lorenzo Snow spoke of the importance of properly educating the young people by sending them to Church schools.

Alphens H. Snow, John D. Peters, Henry L. Steed, and Peter E. Madsen were then appointed missionaries to labor in the interests of the local Church school.

Singing by the choir; benediction by Patriarch Samuel Smith.

Conference adjourned for three months. NILS JENSON, Clerk.

GRANITE WARD CONFERENCE.

On Sunday, July 24, the Presidency of the Salt Lake Stake visited the Granite Ward and held conference there. The existing authorities were sustained by unanimous vote except the Presidency of the Relief Society, which was reorganized in consequence of the resignation of the former president occasioned through sickness. The new meeting house just completed was dedicated and formally opened for public worship. President A. M. Cannon offering the dedicatory prayer.

This house is located midway between Granite and Butler precincts and is designed to accommodate the people residing in both precincts which constitute what is known as the Granite ward. The cost of the building is between two and three thousand dollars and its seating capacity will furnish ample accommodation for all present needs.

The instructions given were varied and suited to the conditions of the people. President A. M. Cannon dwelt at some length upon the practicability of grape culture, especially the hardy kinds, showing how the land in that neighborhood was admirably adapted for this purpose and that grapes could be successfully cultivated without water, in proof of which he often several experiments that had been made in different localities. He made special reference to a ten-acre patch now two years old that had been cultivated successfully on the bench above Centerville in Davis county, and ventured the prediction that "Vineyard" instead of Granite would be the future name appropriate to this locality.

The usual exercises under the leadership of Conductor Phones of Union ward was a marked feature of the conference, every selection being exceedingly well rendered, prominent among which was the "Temple Delication" hymn by H. W. Naisbitt. The building was filled to its utmost capacity and the occasion was one that will be long remembered by the Saints in Granite ward.

DEATHS.

WATSON.—Mable, daughter of J. C. Watson, Jr., and Emma Linnell Watson.

HALL.—In Sugar House Ward, Salt Lake County, the infant child of H. H. and Mary E. Hall.

LANGTON.—In the Sixteenth ward, this city, July 24th, 1892, of tetanus, Leonard P., son of William and Frances A. Langton aged 9 months and 16 days.

WILMOT.—At London, England, June 11th, 1892, Jane Eliza, daughter of Alfred and Jane Louisa Wilmot, aged two years and two months. Millennial Star.

SHEETS.—Elizabeth Leaver Sheets, wife of Bishop E. F. Sheets, of the Eighth ward, died of paralysis at 5 a. m., July 26th, 1892. Born Anson 31st, 1839, in New York city.

DAVEY.—June 18th, 1892, Thomas Davey, born December 2nd, 1847, at Cockfield, Sussex, England; emigrated to Utah in 1868. He was aged 44 years, 6 months and 16 days. He lived and died a faithful Latter-day Saint.

WILDER.—At Wimblesbury, near Hedsorford, Staffordshire, June 18th, 1892, John Wilder; he was born at Londonderry, Staffordshire, March, 1848. He bore a firm testimony to the truth of the Gospel, and endured to be end as a faithful Latter-day Saint. Millennial Star.

SORENSEN.—At Kamas, Utah, on July 1, 1892, Jorgens Sorensen. He was in his 76th year, having been born in Kierup, Holbocks Amt, Sjælland, Denmark, September 11, 1816. He embraced the Gospel in his native land in the year 1865, and worked assiduously with his mouth and pen for the furtherance of the Gospel. He emigrated to Utah in 1872, where he again took up his labors, which he continued until his death. He was highly respected for his kind and considerate way. His last slumber was peaceful, he being fully prepared for the ordeal and convinced of participating in the first resurrection. He leaves a wife and eight children and a number of grand and great grandchildren to mourn his loss.

Scandinavian Star, please copy.

TERRY.—At Rockville, Washington county, Utah, at 10 minutes to 9 o'clock a. m., July 18, 1892, of typhus fever, after an illness of four weeks, Miss Deacy Elizabeth Terry, daughter of James I. and Mary Richards Terry.

Deceased was born in Rockville, on Dec. 5, 1872. She lived the life of an exemplary Latter-day Saint and was loved by all who knew her. Her death will be keenly felt in the ward where she resided, where she had occupied the position of president of the Young Ladies' Association, secretary of the Sabbath school and class teacher in the religion school, which offices she filled with credit to herself and profit to all associated with her. The last labors of this short but useful life were exercised in the St. George Temple, laboring for the redemption of the dead. —[Com.]

WHITAKER.—At Willard, Box Elder County, June 23rd, 1892, James Whitaker; aged eighty-seven years. Deceased was born May 14th, 1805, in Adams county, North Carolina; married Malinda Fishel of the same county in 1824, six children being the issue of the union. In 1834 he moved from North Carolina to Kentucky, where he buried his wife in 1837; he and his wife embraced the gospel in Far West in 1838; became acquainted with and married Nancy Woodland, who has borne him six children. In 1839, under the exterminating order of Gov. Boggs, he moved with the Saints to Illinois, remaining for a time in Adams Co., whence he moved to Nauvoo. Being in the general exodus of 1844, he made a temporary abode at Council Bluffs in Iowa. Again in 1850 he moved west. Arriving in Utah, he settled in Ogden City, and in 1852 removed to Willard, at that time known as North Willow Creek, where he resided until he died at home and remained up to the time of his decease. He leaves a widow, thirteen children, one hundred and twenty-nine grandchildren and one hundred and thirty-one great grandchildren to honor the memory of the departed.

He died in full faith of the Gospel, with a glorious hope in a resurrection unto eternal life. —[Com.]

RELIGIOUS.

Sunday Services.

Religious services were held at the Tabernacle, Salt Lake City, Sunday, July 24th, 1892, commencing at 2 o'clock p.m., Elder H. P. Richards presiding.

The choir and congregation sang the hymn beginning:

Come, Come, ye Saints, no toil nor labor fear,
But with joy wend your way.

Prayer was offered by Elder Wm. B. Barton.

The choir sang the anthem:

Let the mountains shout for joy,

The Sacrament was administered by the Priesthood of the Twenty-second ward.

ELDER GEORGE O. BYWATER was called upon to address the congregation. He earnestly desired, he said, that the invocation already offered up for the blessings of God to rest upon us might be realized, for he knew that the things of God cannot be comprehended, except the Spirit of God makes them clear. This is according to Holy Scriptures. As a congregation of worshippers, our meeting is in vain unless aided by this divine Spirit. The speaker hoped, however, that the Saints would be blessed by the intelligence and truth that come from above, to increase their faith and establish them more fully in the revelations of God to man.

It is no longer questioned among intelligent people that we are independent creatures. Bible believers know that we are the creation of a Supreme Being. We have not made ourselves, but we are the outgrowth of infinite intelligence. All Christians admit this. It forms part of the faith and creed of the Christian world, notwithstanding the contradictions of those creeds in other respects. It is a fundamental doctrine. But to the Latter-day Saints as well as former-day Saints, there are principles connected with this creed, which it becomes their duty to understand. It is not sufficient to believe that there is a God, but it is necessary to seek to comprehend and accept all He has revealed to mankind.

The Christian world admit that He has never revealed anything in vain, and that all His commandments are essential to salvation, but they have interpreted the word of God variously and made it to agree with their own traditions. As Saints, we hold that it is necessary to accept every word spoken from above.

The principles of our faith have been so often explained, that but few do not have an idea of the claim of our Church. It is understood that we believe all that God has revealed through all inspired men in all dispensations, whether in the Old Testament or the New, or in the Book of Mormon, which we also hold to contain the word of God to the inhabitants of the earth.

The Lord has been pleased to open up a number of dispensations, during which men have had an opportunity of becoming acquainted with the designs of the Almighty, through the principles which He has taught them.

The first of these principles is faith in God as the supreme ruler of the universe and the Father of the human family in whose likeness we have been created. Faith is the foundation of all, for without faith it is impossible to please God. Without faith we can not serve Him or honor His word to us. If we have faith in Him and His qualities of mercy, power, wisdom, etc., we are expected to rely upon His word with firm assurance. If we have the faith that inspired Moses, or Joshua, or Abraham, we have the faith that enables us to draw near unto Him and we will be able to gaze upon the matchless richness of eternity. Then we will also discover in the teachings of God, to what extent the whole human family has fallen from the lofty pinnacles of perfection in which man was once created. We will be enabled to discover our sins and transgressions. And if we discover that mankind has departed from rectitude and gone after their own idols, we will perceive the necessity of the second principle of the Gospel—repentance.

That mankind has departed from the ways of the Lord, there can be no doubt, for history proves it. All ages of the world, when the Lord has been pleased to send a messenger to the world, the people to whom they were sent have always failed to recognize these ambassadors, and rejected them. How was it that the ante-diluvians rejected Noah, who preached to them for one hundred and twenty years? The messages of prophets and new revelations from God have never been popular when first introduced.

Popularity, majority and authority are ideas that are often associated together in the minds of men, but it is a great falacy to suppose that the majorities are generally right. They were not in the days of Noah. New truths or, rather, older truths revealed again, have always at first been regarded as heresies and as such rejected by the majority. So it was during the establishment of Christianity. The doctrines of Jesus were not received by the majority. Christ and His apostles were looked upon as prophets and inspired men have always been regarded—as impostors, and their words were rejected as sought. The followers of Jesus were considered a sect, against whom everybody spoke evil. Their teachings were considered a dangerous innovation, something out of harmony with good government. Christ was thought to be a political conspirator, and accusations of that nature were frequently brought against Him no less than impeachments against His moral character.

Christianity was not at first accepted by the religious world or its various sects; it was vigorously opposed and its followers were cruelly persecuted by the legal authorities. The teachings of Jesus that provoked such malice, envy and hatred were certainly not the doctrines which were handed down from the fathers. The Jews claimed to be the custodians of the divine truth, having the right to give the only authoritative exegesis of the Scriptures. But Christ rebuked them for sanctioning the deeds of their fathers in persecuting and killing the prophets and He charged them with ignorance concerning the meaning of the Scriptures they claimed to believe in. Had they understood the principles written by the prophets, they would have seen in Jesus the fulfillment of the predictions, many of which are remarkably clear. But they did not, but stumbled, because they had apostatized from God and become carnally minded, and consequently blind to all spiritual truths. Thus it happened that Christ came to His own, but His own did not recognize Him.

Christ taught all men that God is their Father and that He (Jesus) was the Savior, through which man should be restored again to the fullness of perfection that was once the condition of man. But His message was rejected by the great multitudes as was the message of Noah. For this reason the Jews were rejected and the message carried to the Gentiles. But even among these the majority did not receive it.

The speaker explained that faith and repentance are no new principles, but eternal as all truth, and essential to all dispensations. The same, he said, was true of baptism. Israel was baptized by Moses in the sea, and the cloud of glory, the power of the Holy Ghost, rested upon them after their baptism. Baptism was evidently a part of the new dispensation as it is of the new. The law of eternal commandments was taken away, when the Gospel was given, but faith, repentance and baptism remain. As another proof that baptism was known among the Jews, the speaker referred to the fact that the inhabitants of Judea went out to John to be baptized by him in Jordan, and it is clear that the rite was well known and acknowledged by the people, since no one ever questioned the validity of the ordinance, as a divine institution, although some wanted to know by what authority John the Baptist administered it.

Baptism is the immersion in water for the remission of sins, by one having authority to do so in the name of Jesus. It is to be wondered at, that Christians can not see that they have departed from the doctrines and ordinances of Christ in this matter. There are Christians today—honest no doubt, but like the Jews—denying that baptism is essential to the salvation of man. We find that Christ established this ordinance for the benefit of repentant believers who are willing to become disciples of the Great Master; yet there are numerous ideas in the Christian world both as to the mode and proper subjects of baptism, and no one seems to comprehend what its real nature is. The Jews, as has been remarked, apostatized and rejected Christ and His apostles, making martyrs of His followers. A lady once said to Carlyle, "How cruel it was of those Jews to put Christ to death, a man who had done all to help and bless his fellow men; how different would His reception have been, had He come in our age." To this the great author answered, "Yes, it would have been different, had He come with his pockets full of money, and preached according to the creeds that are now accepted as orthodox. But if He should come again and lift His voice against the crimes of the age, the world would say, Away with Him to Newgate and hang Him. That would be about the only difference."

How sad to contemplate this, but it is true. Were the first Apostles of Christ to come again, unknown, and preach what they taught during their mission on earth, they would be called "Mormons," and as such rejected.

The doctrines of our Church today are not any more popular than were the same doctrines eighteen hundred years ago. The speaker could defy the whole Christian world to show one single doctrine of our Church which is not founded in and stands in perfect harmony with the word of God. Why should we then be looked upon as scarcely deserving the name of Christians? It cannot be accounted for in any other way than by supposing that the same spirit now prompts to the rejection of our doctrines which prompted men in former ages to reject the message sent them from heaven. It is at least unfortunate for the Christian world that they, in this regard, are in analogy with the unbelieving Jews and Gentiles.

We have our mission to perform, and we are endeavoring to do it. We preach that Jesus is the Savior, through whom, if men will believe in Him and obey Him, they shall be made happy and finally obtain eternal exaltation. We expect to meet opposition, for we are told that it shall be in this time as it was in the days of Noah, but we bear animosity towards none on that account.

The speaker closed his remarks by bearing his testimony to the truth of the Gospel of Jesus Christ as preached by Joseph Smith and other inspired servants of God in this age.

The choir sang the anthem:

How beautiful upon the mountains.

Benediction by Elder George G. Goddard.

CORNER STONE OF THE JOINT CITY AND COUNTY BUILDING LAID.

The cornerstone of the Joint City and County Building was laid yesterday under the auspices of the Masons. As announced in Saturday's News extensive preparations had been made for the occasion.

The line of march and the organizations comprising the procession was as heretofore published. The grand master Masons then made their appearance on the platform, after which made the opening address, and among other things said:

MAYOR BASKIN

Nearly three centuries ago there landed at Plymouth Rock the pioneers, a band that was not rich in silver and gold, but they were strong in the right arms and honest will. But the resources of this country, which are greater than any country under the sun, were meager. They began to contend with the savage races and to extend their domain west and south, and until they have extended their vanguard from the Plymouth Rock to the Golden Gate, and from the great lakes to the gulf. The early settler penetrated the great American desert and transferred it from what had been an unproductive country to the gem valley of the United States. Railroads and manufacturing sprang in their track. The same result that has occurred in every pioneer country we see here.

The command of silence was given by the Grand Master, after which Grand Chaplain Lowe offered prayer and a male quartette made up as follows: First tenor, Alfred Nelson; second tenor, W. H. Whitney; first bass, J. W. Squire, second bass, D. J. Henson, sang the Masonic ode in their ritual for corner-stone ceremonies.

THE SCROLL

which was published in Saturday's News was then read by the secretary and the corner stone lowered to its position at 3 o'clock.

CONTENTS OF THE B.J.X.

Following is a list of articles in the box:

- The scroll.
- Proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Utah, 1891 and 1892.
- Constitution and laws of the Grand Lodge of Utah.
- By-laws of Wasatch, Mt. Moriah and Argenta Lodges.
- Annual messages of Hon. George M. Scott, Mayor of Salt Lake City, and reports of city officers, 1890 and 1891.
- Ninth annual report of the Salt Lake City Fire department.
- Laws of the Territory of Utah, 1892.
- Report of His Excellency Governor Arthur L. Thomas, to the Secretary of the Interior.
- Message of the Governor and the accompanying documents to the Thirteenth session of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah, 1892.
- Reports of the Utah Commission to the Secretary of the Interior from 1884 to 1891.
- Complete description of the agricultural, stock raising and mineral resources of Utah, 1891.
- Utah by F. Doran, 1892.
- Utah, her cities, towns and resources, by Manly and Litalien, 1892.
- A glimpse of the Great Salt Lake, 1892.
- Utah sights and scenes, 1892.
- The Mormon metropolis, 1892.
- Plans of the joint city and county building.
- Map of Salt Lake City, by A. F. Doremus, city engineer, 1892.
- Map of Salt Lake City, by Simon F. Mackie, 1891.
- Bourke's guide of Salt Lake City, 1892.
- Proceedings of the Grand Lodge J. O. O. F., 1891.
- Constitution of the Grand Lodge of A. O. U. W., 1891.
- By laws of Salt Lake Valley Lodge No. 12, A. O. U. W., 1890.
- Rocky Mountain Workman, June 1, 1892.
- Specimen copy of $1,000 bond of Salt Lake City.

- DESERET EVENING NEWS of July 23rd, 1892.
- Salt Lake City Tribune of July 24th and 25th, 1892.
- Salt Lake City Herald of July 24th, 1892.
- Salt Lake City Times of July 25 & 26, 1892.
- Utah Free Press of July 21, 1893.
- The Daily Reporter of July 23, 1892.
- The Salt Lake City Journal of Commerce of July 1, 1892.
- The Irrigation Age of July 15, 1892.
- The Mining Age of July 15, 1892.
- The Ogden Standard of July 24, 1892.
- The Ogden Daily Post of July 24, 1892.
- The Ogden Leader of July 24, 1892.
- The Park City Record of July 23, 1892.
- The Wasatch Wagon of July 19, 1892.
- Photographic views of Salt Lake city.
- Four fine Utah grains, presented by E. E. Rich, councilman.
- A shield and button of the Salt Lake City Fire department, presented by W. A. Stanton, clerk.

Names of the county and city officers, selectmen of Salt Lake county, councilmen of Salt Lake city, officers of the grand lodge of Utah, and architects and contractors of the building.

Photographs of the grand master, C. E. Stanton, city recorder, Jacob A. Reiss, Eli A. Folland and F. O. Horn, councilmen, and Messrs. McKee, Bird & Proudfoot, architects of the building.

United States copper and silver coins.

GRAND ORATOR JACK.

delivered an interesting address. Among other things he said:

The corner stone is well laid. The craft have done their duty. The ceremony of laying the corner stone of our joint city and county building is designed to become an epoch in our history. The world has been full of monument makers from the earliest times. There is but one empire—all roads lead to Rome. The churches turn their spires to heaven, for all men are born free and equal. In our free schools is the bulwark of our liberty. In our national, state and county capitals are the marks of progress. A century hence when this stone is removed it shall show the condition of our present prosperity.

JUDGE BARTON

then delivered the following interesting address which was listened to with rapt attention from first to last:

Ladies and gentlemen—It has fallen to my lot through the courtesy of the joint city and county building committee to represent the county on this occasion. We are this day participating in exercises and ceremonies which must be pleasing as well as interesting to every true friend of Salt Lake City and county. The history of this building is already full of interest. About three years ago the authorities, impressed with the future growth of this city and county and with the consequent increase of business and the inadequate facilities to transact it, appointed committees to consider the advisability of erecting a joint city and county building in which should be transacted the public business of the city and county. This project was opposed by some of our leading citizens, but its supporters finally prevailed, and the site selected was on the corner of First East and First South streets, a lot 120 by 165 feet.

Mr. C. E. Apponyi prepared the plans for a five-story building, which were accepted, the basement for the building was excavated and the concrete work begun. The contract price for lowest bid for this building was $279,000. A change in the city administration occurred in February, 1890. The new administration became fearful lest the building would cost more than the stipulated price.

All work was stopped by the mayor, much comment created and delay and criticism followed. Officials began to feel the weight of responsibility. The previous year had worked a mighty change in our midst. Salt Lake had risen from its slumber of years and put on the attire of a growing, booming city. The plans of the building, after being subjected to rigid examination, proved to be unsatisfactory in many important particulars, and were finally rejected, the architect discharged and the facade of the building sealed. There is no reflection here on the gentlemen under whose direction that building was designed, for at that time the greatest enthusiast could not have hoped for the unprecedented growth of this city which was soon realized, and it was this that awakened thought and inquiry as to our wants in the future.

There was a conviction in the minds of some that the lot was too small and the building inadequate for the purpose for which it was intended. You are familiar with the struggles that ensued for a change of location. The county had laid the city $41,250 for a half interest in the lot, and, on the one side, it was argued that the location was central; had been selected in good faith, and considerable money already expended in the basement.

On the other, that the lot was too small, that at best the building, after a large expenditure of money, would present but the appearance of a business block, that a public building should be surrounded by a park, and that the park should be made the most attractive spot in the city, a spot which all the people, rich and poor alike, may enjoy. The latter ideas prevailed. The county offered the city its half interest in the Eighth ward square, the city accepted the offer and the result is the laying of this corner stone today. Upon that stone will be erected a magnificent structure, whose dome towering into the sky in imitation of yonder mountain will delight the people.

The length of it is 272 feet, in width 140, and in height four stories and a basement. The height of the tower from its base is 250 feet, its base being 40 feet square. In height the basement is 14 feet, the first floor 17, the second floor 18, the third floor 16 and the fourth floor 12 feet. The contract price is $377,987. All complete, including surroundings, will cost about $500,000. The city will occupy the north end and the county the south end, each one-half of the building.

In the county's portion the basement will be occupied by the treasurer, sheriff, superintendent of schools, fish commissioner, county surveyor and coroner. Upon the first floor are located the recorder's, collector's and assessor's apartments; upon the second floor the probate court, settlement, county clerk, county attorney, marshal, witness, and jury room; upon the third floor district courts and clerk, and upon the fourth floor jury rooms.

The building will have two elevators add numerous vaults and will be self-sufficient.

The boiler and engine house will be erected on a lot distant about 300 feet and will be connected with this building by means of a tunnel into which all steam and water pipes necessary for heat, etc., will be placed. This will avoid the danger of casualty by fire and steam so common in public buildings. The size of the building was a matter of much discussion and comment. Many thought the one planned by Architect Apponyi large enough. The gravity of the situation at last induced the county court to send a committee to investigate public buildings elsewhere and report their findings. That committee, after carefully inspecting other buildings, among them the county court house in the city of Denver, and, after conferring with the officials occupying them, reports that the great danger in the erection of a public building lay, not in building it too large, but too small, and advised accordingly.

After much trial and difficulty the work was begun. The foundation, the most important part of the whole structure, is complete. The quoksand, of which so much was said and so little found, has been bridged over and ere long the building will stand superb. Its style of architecture is of the Romanesque order, which is among the most elegant productions which the genius of Roman architects has ever devised. It is a combination of Roman and Byzantine art. Graceful, though somewhat intricate, naturally suggestive of permanence and solidity, with excellent facilities for light, it unquestionably excels the architecture of recent times in the material requisite for a public building. Numerous styles of architecture of modern times, though pleasing to the eye, are complete failures for public edifices, and bear no comparison with that of ancient date.

The ruins of Pompeii, the remains of Greece and Rome—when will they cease to be a marvel and a wonder? Being erected in our advanced stage of civilization, of thought and inquiry, I apprehend that this building will be a handsome and stately structure, the admiration of future generations.

A public building represents the progressiveness and character of the people who built it. If grand and stately, it inspires noble thought and action and cultivates the æsthetic nature of the individual. When such a building shall have crumbled back to earth, when decay shall have obliterated the finest products of the sculptor's and painter's art, its ruins, like the ruins of the great temples of antiquity, will stand in bold relief—a mirror which will reflect the history of the populace. No less than its style of architecture, the site of a public building should be selected with great care. If it be located on a business street, in a business way it will excite little favorable comment, no matter how costly or unique the design. The sculptor, from the rough block of marble, carves the most beautiful statue, but if this be placed into some remote nook the world will be no better for his skill. The painter's art produces the finest picture, the charming effect of which is lost by being hung into a room without regard to its form, or dimensions, or to the direction of light. Just so with a public building; it may be a masterpiece of art, but we cannot appreciate or respect it, unless it be surrounded by architectural features artistically arranged. Who can study, on the pages of history, the approaches to the halls of antiquity, to the palaces of Athens or Rome or Corinth, without exciting admiration for the efficacy of arrangement and for the profound knowledge of effect? Who can behold the parks and public edifices of our own beautiful Washington without a feeling of awe, inspired by those venerable productions of art and nature? Who will not say as another has said: "Happy the lives of those who so understood and so exquisitely enjoyed the beautiful alliance of art and nature!" Contrast this with Chicago. Its public buildings, the product of great architectural skill—costly, grand, majestic structures lost in the midst of crowded streets.

This site is in perfect harmony with the natural grandeur which surrounds it, being selected in the heart of a metropolis which itself is unsurpassed anywhere in this broad land for the beauty of its location. The awe-inspiring Wasatch on the east, the Ogquirr on the west, nature has done her part. To complete the stately structure which is slowly but surely building, it needs but the skill of the artist and of the horticulturist, the procuring of which has been entrusted to the joint committee. A confiding public has clothed you with power to erect a magnificent edifice, and upon your wisdom and honor and integrity will depend the faithful execution of the trust. You have a grave and important duty to perform. The city council and county court expect you to be equal to the task. Sixty thousand people have confided in you and look to you for honest returns. May neither the love of fortune, the influence of a friend, nor the power of an adversary swerve a single member from the path of duty and rectitude. Royal palaces may crumble, sculptured columns fall, the pyramids themselves show signs of decay, but our deeds and acts will vibrate into eternity.

This structure will be a living memorial of our progressiveness and enterprise, of our character and history, and this is a most fitting day to lay its corner stone. It is commemorative of the day when, forty-five years ago, the pioneers cast their first hopeful glance over this valley of sagebrush.

It is needless for me to trace the wanderings of that determined band from the time they bade farewell to friend and foe and commenced their perilous journey across the lonely plains and over the rugged mountains, civilization in the rear, unconquered savages in the van. It is needless to refer to the trials, the heart burnings, the tribulations. Most of that fearless and devoted band have gone to sleep, but there are a few among us still who can tell the story.

It is fitting that on this day we should concentrate our thoughts on the scenes enacted during the period of forty-five years which culminated in the laying of the corner-stone of the most magnificent structure, of its kind, that has ever been erected anywhere in this great inter-mountain country. This is a more interesting because of its location.

Standing today where the pioneers stood forty-five years ago, notice the marvelous change—a wilderness then, now a veritable paradise, then the habitation of wild beast and wild men, now the home of thousands of families of our own race; then the land of instant, now of reason, civilization, and refinement, science and art. We may well do honor to those who wrested this lovely valley from the untutored savage, and I predict that when the bitterness of the past shall have been blotted out, when the last ground of groan and discord and dissension shall have been lost in oblivion, when forgive and forget, peace and good will shall have full sway, there will be some inspired hand that will paint the first pitching of tents in this charming vale, and some inspired pen will write, in lofty verse, a truthful history of that eventful period, and me thinks I can see on the pages of that history the names of the pioneers of Utah, and those names will be revered by grateful people who enjoy the blessings resulting from their courage and bravery.

In conclusion and in behalf of Salt Lake county I desire to acknowledge the debt of gratitude which we owe to you, most worshippful grand master, and to your crafts who have performed the ceremonies at the laying of this corner stone. You represent that ancient and most honorable order of Free Masons. Your participation adds great dignity and solemnity to these exercises, and as your order is bound together by the most solemn ties of friendship and brotherly love, may not that same spirit be permitted to pervade this entire Territory and unite with that same bond of affection a people dis-

Grassbecks to lay a sidewalk on Main street, the committee on streets recommended that the matter be referred to the board of public works. So referred.

TO REMOVE POLES.

In the matter of removing the poles belonging to the Great Salt Lake & Hot Springs Railway Company on Third West street the work was ordered done forthwith.

WALDEN'S WAIL.

The committee on streets reported on the following from J. B. Walden:

At this moment there is a hand-organ playing in front of my office, which will drive customers away under all circumstances. The music which it grinds out is as far from melody as Ogden is from heaven.

Will you please see that it is discontinued. If it is not I will be compelled to place the gentleman under salary to keep away.

The committee suggested that Walden make the best terms possible as to paying his musical opponent a salary and report the result of his labors to the Council August 22nd next. Adopted.

A NEW JAIL.

Rich offered the following:

Resolved, That the committee on prisons be instructed to investigate the city jail, its facilities, accommodations, etc., and report to the Council the advisability of building of a new jail.

Adopted.

WILL NOT CONFIRM.

The committee on police reported adversely on the appointment of John J. Gleason as Liberty Park policeman. Adopted.

PLAT MATTERS.

Mr. Rich offered the following, which was adopted.

Resolved, That the book of plats and abstracts of city lands, now the property of Salt Lake City, be placed in the custody of the City Engineer, who shall be held responsible therefor.

THE INSPECTOR NUHANCE.

Mr. Rich then offered the following:

Resolved, That the City Attorney be instructed to draw up an ordinance abolishing section 6 of an ordinance creating the Board of Public Works.

Section 6 reads:

The Board of Public Works shall have authority to employ competent inspectors upon all works under its charge, to supervise the same, and shall keep an accurate account of expenditures incurred in such supervision, and cause the same to be charged to such works and paid out of the levies to be made therefor; Provided, the employment of all inspectors shall be subject to the approval of the City Council.

After some little discussion the matter was referred to the committee on municipal laws.

SUBJECT TO THE COUNCIL.

Rich also offered a resolution providing that inspectors on all public works and improvements requiring mechanical ability shall be employed by the city engineer and be under his direct supervision who shall keep an accurate account of expenditures incurred in such supervision and cause the same to be charged to such work and paid out of the levies made therefor, provided the employment of all inspectors shall be subject to the approval of the city council.

SINKING FUND.

Horn offered the following which was adopted:

Resolved, That the committee on ways and means be and hereby is authorized to acquire fully into the financial condition of the city with a view of instructing the treasurer to establish a sinking fund for the payment at maturity of bonds heretofore issued by the city.

THE ASSESSOR'S COMPENSATION.

The question of fixing the city assessor and collector's compensation then came up.

Rich moved that the office be made a salaried one and that the salary be fixed at $5000 per year.

Beardsley amended by making it $6000.

Moran offered a substitute giving the collector one and a half per cent. of all collections made. It prevailed on the following strict party vote:

Ayes—Heise, Wantland, Beardsley, Simondl, Evans, Ewing, Lawson, Horn, Moran.

Noes—Rich, Hardy, Folland.

DETECTIVE BUREAU.

The city attorney submitted an ordinance creating a city detective bureau.

Wantland—I move that the matter be referred back to the city attorney to see if the ordinance is legal.

Beardsley—It has already been in the hands of the city attorney. I don't think he would submit it if it were illegal.

Lawson—It is easy to understand why Mr. Wantland wants it referred. From his advent into this council he has talked for progress but worked for delay. Delay seems to be his motto.

Horn—I don't see what advantage there can be in referring it. I endorse the views of Mr. Lawson.

Rich—I cannot see why the gentleman is so anxious to have it go back.

Wantland—Because I believe it is an illegal measure, and I intend to oppose it from first to last. It will never get enough supporters to become a law.

The motion was lost and the measure went to its third reading.

STREET SPRINKLING.

The ordinance creating sprinkling District No. 2 came up.

Hardy offered a resolution as a substitute for the ordinance, fixing the rate at 5c. He did this, he said, because he knew there were large numbers of people who were not willing to pay the tax proposed, and intended to fight the case out in the courts.

Ewing—There must be something the matter with people who take such a course.

Hardy—I call the gentleman to order Mr. President, if he insinuates there is anything the matter with me.

The chairman's gavel fell on the table with considerable force and both councilmen subdued.

Hardy's resolution went to the committee on sprinkling.

APPROPRIATIONS.

The following appropriations were made:

S. U. Watson.....	$17 05
Morrison & Merrill and Brown & Carter.....	92 50
Brown & Carter and Salt Lake Mfg. Co.....	80 05
G. M. Scott & Co.....	18 37
Cunningham & Co.....	8 00
Pacific Faving Co.....	118 09
Neder & Cleland.....	2 50
Morrison & Goodwood.....	11 25
J. A. Hamilton.....	15 00

J. A. Benton.....	3 00
C. R. Savage.....	30 63
Utah Paint & Oil Co.....	3 00
T. Hume Job Printing Co.....	42 50
Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Co.....	20 00
Brown & Carter.....	1 70
Esper Foudry & Machine Co.....	150 00
Salt Lake Building & Manufacturing Co.....	29 00
The Grocer Printing Co.....	3 00
Salt Lake Hardware Co.....	4 50
Salt Lake Railway Co.....	5 00
E. G. Coffin Hardware Co.....	6 15
W. S. Simpson.....	20 00
Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone Co.....	20 00
Salt Lake P. L. & H. Co.....	31 91
Herald Publishing Co.....	104 90
Tribune Publishing Co.....	6 75
W. S. McCornick & Co.....	5 00
Nierna Nevada Lumber Co.....	3 00
W. C. Farley & Co.....	19 63
Kahey & Gillespie.....	80 00
W. L. Harlow.....	3 00
Herald Publishing Co.....	8 90
McIntosh & McDonald.....	182 40
P. Kipple.....	7 25
John Smith.....	8 40
H. H. Hall.....	15 50
Pettus & Peterson.....	187 25
Mr. Butcher.....	23 50
Levi Atwell.....	10 00
Ree ch & Ellerbe.....	10 00
C. H. Parsons.....	1 70
Gaynor Electric company.....	3,763 75
Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company.....	55 00
Novelty Manufacturing Co.....	9 00
Neder & Cleland.....	19 25
Phelps & Co.....	18 00
Utah Paint and Oil Co.....	77 85
Mountain Ice and Cold Co.....	4 60
W. L. Rickard.....	10 85
R. Morrison.....	39 42

ADDRESS TO TAYPAYERS.

To the Taxpayers of Salt Lake county:

The County court having decided that it is best, in their opinion, for this county to issue bonds to the amount of $390,000, submits the following statement of facts, together with estimates of certain expenses for permanent improvement which should be made, and ask their careful consideration that intelligent action may be had in the bond election to be held August 15th, 1892.

Steps were first taken in September, 1889, to procure the erection of a joint city and county building.

The amount of cash on hand September 1, 1889, was..... $18,066 37

September 1, 1890..... 45,688 08

September 1, 1891..... 25,925 02

The balance is now practically nothing, or will be when the appropriation for July bills is made.

The expenditure from the lot, plans, and building on the part of the county has been $108,824.08, all of which except the amount on hand September 1st, 1889, has been derived from the taxes of 1889, 1890 and 1891, except the amount received from merchants, licensees, etc.

Of the $108,824.08 expended, $41,250.00 were paid December 27th 1889, for one-half the lot on First East and First South. The lot has been exchanged for one-half interest in the Eight Ward Square, where the building is to be erected. The remainder has been expended on plans, architects' percentages, excavation of the old site, purchase of a lot for the boiler house, and construction of the building on the present site.

The contract calls for the erection of a building at a cost of $377,987, one half of which, amounting to $188,993.50, shall be paid by the county.

Upon laying the foundations it was found that extra work must be done to insure a firm foundation. The extra work and material cost $20,929.27, so that the cost of the building today, stands at $388,916.27; the county's half amounting to $189,458.13. The county has paid on this contract and these extras, $39,771.14, leaving a balance of $189,686.99 to be provided for.

Undoubtedly there will be further extras as the building progresses. An estimate of expenses outside of the contract is given as follows:

Tunneling from boiler house and putting in heat and light, County's half.....	$ 10,000 00
Parking eighth ward square, County's half.....	20,000 01
Sidewalks, County's half.....	6,000 00
Paving street about Court House, County's half.....	30,000 00
Furnishing Court House, County's half.....	20,000 00
Total.....	$ 86,000 00
Yet due on contract.....	$39,771 14
	$245,771 99

Provision must be made for the indigent of the county. The Poorhouse when erected was adequate and well located. The great growth of the city and county have rendered it inadequate and the location poor.

The Court proposes to go into the country where land is comparatively cheap and purchase a farm large enough to meet the wants of the county for all time.

There will be no loss to the county by this change. The present Poor Farm can be sold for more than it cost the county including the buildings thereon.

It is estimated that this change will cost for Farm.....	$10,000 00

Buildings.....	30,000 00
Furnishing.....	5,000 00
	$45,000 00

The support of indigents in this county costs more than it should for the following reasons:

The cramped quarters at the Poor House necessitates the care of many patients by city hospitals, who should be in the infirmary and would be if there were proper accommodations for them there.

Much outside aid is given by the County Court at present, which would be cut off if the room at the Poor House were sufficient to meet the demands of our population.

The Territory makes no provision for the care of imbecile and idiotic persons. There are many such in this county who are a charge upon the public. As we are now situated they must be kept in the same wards with those who are in possession of their faculties. Separate wards ought to be provided for the former classes.

To build upon the present poor farm, consisting of only ten acres, buildings suitable to meet the necessities of the present and future would be in the opinion of the county court be very unwise, and entail great loss upon the county in the near future, when the growth of the city will compel removal from the present site.

The county has expended upon roads during the past three years the following amount of money?

From September 1st, 1890, to September 1st, 1891.....	$ 36,526 24
From September 1st, 1891, to September 1st, 1892.....	24,802 07
From September 1st, 1892, to July 6th, 1892.....	49,641 48
Total.....	$110,971 09

The following has been appropriated during the same period to the pauper and insane account and expended in the care of indigent persons, in the infirmary, hospitals, and for outside relief, and in hearing in insanity cases and conveying those committed to the asylum:

From September 1st, 1890, to September 1st, 1891.....	$ 9,090 85
From September 1st, 1891, to September 1st, 1892.....	14,186 73
From September 1st, 1891, to July 6th, 1892.....	17,943 82
Total.....	$31,221 43

The County court believes that no more has been expended upon roads than must be expended for each year for several years to come. Much of the western and southwestern part of the county needs work upon the highways. All the old wooden bridges should be replaced by iron structures as they wear out. This will be much more costly at first, but will be economy in the end.

The cost of caring for the poor will decrease per capita with the establishment of the new poor house and infirmary, but will probably increase with the population.

The net income of the county from taxes for the past three years has been about $109,000 per year. If the necessary road and bridge building is to be done, the poor and insane cared for, either the valuation and tax levy must be raised or the county must provide for the extraordinary expenses now to be met for permanent improvements by bonding itself.

It certainly seems but fair to those now here that the payment for these improvements should be thus extended over a period of years, and that those who come after us should bear their share of the burden.

The Court is of the opinion that taxes should not be raised and they have taken the way provided by law to ascertain whether the people take the same view.

The present poor farm and buildings should be sold, if bonds are voted, whenever the market will justify and the proceeds should be used to meet a portion of the debt, or for permanent improvements as shall be best.

G. W. BARTCH

Chairman County Court.

HARVEY HARDY,

JOHN BUTTER,

[ATTY.] JOHN P. CATOON, *

C. E. ALLEN, Selectmen.

County Clerk,

By CAUSTEN BROWNE, JR., Deputy.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The City School Board met in regular session last night. Vice-President Nelson announced that his term of office had expired. He was unanimously re-elected to serve for the ensuing year.

J. B. Moreton was unanimously re-elected.

The resignation of assistant clerk, H. W. R., was received on account of ill health.

M. E. Steel offered the board the following: A lot on the corner of Douglas avenue and Fourth South Street, 180x140 feet, with alley running north and south, for $25 per wet front foot, or 155x140 on corner for $4,000. Douglas avenue is between Twelfth and Thirteenth East streets. The offer was referred to the committee on sites and buildings.

James W. Sanders sent in an application for the position of janitor of the Lincoln school now in course of erection. Referred to the committee on furniture and supplies.

Joseph L. Green sent in an application for the position of assistant superintendent of buildings. Referred to the committee on school work.

H. E. Llewellyn sent in an application for janitorship.

The President's Report.

The following report from the President was read, received and filed: To the Board of Education:

Gentlemen:—This the second annual report of your president, is much more satisfactory than it was possible to make the first. The schools have prospered, regular instruction has been given and good progress has been made. The financial situation is also much more satisfactory.

The annual report of the several committees and of the clerk and superintendent will show in detail the work of the year.

Last year closed with the current school fund in debt to the amount of $26,300.06. This liability was incurred in necessary advances to the building fund; indeed, but for these necessary advances there would have been a handsome surplus. These two funds have now been adjusted, on a basis fully explained in the report of the finance committee, and there remains to the credit of the current expense account at the close of the year, the sum of $5093.84.

During the year, bonds to the face value of $450,000 have been sold, netting $438,041.65. Of these bonds, one-third was sold to repay, under authority granted by the legislature, the advance of taxes on school levies of 1890, in order to equalize the school burdens, as declared by this board from the first to be desirable. This refunding to the taxpayers has faithfully been incurred, until now but a small remainder of the $55,226.82 received from the county collector on account of such taxes remains undistributed. There have been some injustices connected with this matter, not, however, on the part of the board or any one connected with it, which I understand it is the design of the finance committee to bring to your attention in a special report.

The proceeds of bond sales, available for refunding, for building purposes and purchase of sites, amounted, net, to $439,041.65, as above stated. Of this sum there has been expended to June 30, 1892, the sum of $221,168.89, leaving a balance of $217,872.76 available on this account June 30, 1892. Payments since June 30th, on contracts entered into for the purchase of sites and the erection of buildings, and further payments called for by such contracts, amount to $203,734.72, leaving a balance for further building operations and site buying of but $14,138.03. There are yet available in addition $150,000 in bonds that the Board has ordered sold in the discretion of the Finance Committee.

The building operations contemplated by the Board when it laid out its work under this head included an eight-room building in the old First district; more basement room than necessary and to the loss at least of one play room.

Tenth—That this plan is wholly experimental; that it contemplates the stopping of air flues in the attic floor

